"I am convinced that a serial of the quality and interest of 'The Secret Kingdom' will not only make business but will have a tendency to hold it. That is why I have booked it."

Lipp & Cross,
Garden Theatre, Battle Creek, Michigan:

"We consider 'The Secret Kingdom' one of the best, if not the best serial we have had the pleasure of seeing, and are glad to state that we have booked same for our houses.

Frank M. Teter,
Buckingham and Julian Theatres, Chicago, Illinois:

"I enjoyed 'The Secret Kingdom' very much and thought it one of the highest class serial pictures I ever saw."

B. Munk,
Park Theatre, Rochester, New York:

"The episodes of 'The Secret Kingdom' shown indicate that you have the cleanest, strongest and most appealing serial that I have ever seen.'

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

JANUARY 6, 1917

CHARLIE CHAPLIN IN GREATER MUTUAL SPECIALS IN 1917

WHEN Charlie Chaplin signed the famous $670,000 contract with the Mutual Film Corporation, he was generally conceded to be the world's greatest comedian. In the months that have passed since that time, he has not only preserved that reputation, but has added to it. He starts the New Year with the greatest popularity he ever enjoyed. And in accordance with the 1917 Mutual policy of "Only Big Stars," Chaplin will again be presented in Mutual-Chaplin Specials, as the world's greatest comedian.

Still Without a Rival.

When Chaplin became a Mutual star he had many imitators. Other comedians, anxious to gain a little popularity, were satisfied to bask in the reflected glory of Chaplin. Today Chaplin stands alone in his particular style of fun-making. Exhibitors found by actual experience that there is but one Charlie Chaplin. Entering 1917, Chaplin finds himself without rival. He stands alone —supreme—in the comedy field.

Pursuing its policy of "Only Big Stars for Mutual," the Mutual Film Corporation announces that during the coming year Charlie Chaplin will appear in even greater Mutual attractions—"the world's greatest comedian in the world's greatest comedies." The Mutual-Chaplin Specials already released have all established new records. They have all made big profits for the theatres which ran them. Exhibitors know that such comedies as "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "One A. M.," "The Count," "The Pawnshop," "Behind the Screen," and now his newest—"The Rink"—are unequaled as box-office attractions. These productions are all available now at any of the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges. New ones will soon be offered. Exhibitors should make booking arrangements now at the nearest Mutual Exchange.

Nance O'Neil in "Mrs. Balfame"

Gertrude Atherton's famous novel, "Mrs. Balfame," is now in production at the studios of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation. This is the first of a series of Mutual Star Productions in which Nance O'Neil is to be starred. It will be released through the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges. Bookings can be arranged now at Mutual Exchanges.

"THE GIRL REPORTERS"

Mutual's Big Serial of Newspaper Life

PROVING A NOVELTY

There is something new in motion pictures—something really "different." After seeing the first few chapters of the new Mutual serial, "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters," exhibitors are admitting that fact. Here are stories of newspaper life, told from the "inside." Here are stories altogether new—altogether different. Theatre patrons the country over—ever searching for novelties in the way of photoplays—are packing houses to see "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters." This new serial is in fifteen chapters. A new chapter is released each week. First chapter released December 28. Each chapter is complete in itself. Each tells a fascinating story of real newspaper life. Earl Metcalfe, Helen Greene and Zena Keefe are the featured stars. George Terwilliger is the director. The serial was filmed at the Niagara Film Studios. Bookings can be made now at any of the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges in America.

Marjorie Rambeau in "The Greater Woman"

Studio work is progressing rapidly on "The Greater Woman." This is the first of the Marjorie Rambeau Mutual Star Productions. It is being made at the studios of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation. It features Miss Rambeau, supported by an all-star cast. Bookings can be made now at any of the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges.

RICHARD BENNETT SCORES A TRIUMPH IN "THE GILDED YOUTH"

THE Mutual Star Production for release the week of January 1 is entitled "The Gilded Youth." It features Richard Bennett. It is the fourth of the Richard Bennett Series of Mutual Star Productions. The others are "Philip Holden, Waster," "—And the Law Says" and "The Valley of Decision." All of them are now available at the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges. All of them feature Richard Bennett, the famous star of "Damaged Goods." Today Richard Bennett is conceded to be one of the greatest drawing cards ever presented.

A Quaint Little Story.

"The Gilded Youth" is a quaint little story. It has for its theme the love of John Slocum, a happy-go-lucky sort of chap, for Mary, a waitress in a New York boarding house. John and Mary declare their love and decide to marry. Each contributes a weekly mite toward a fund for their establishmen in a little home of their own. One day the finding of a raffle ticket leads to a complete change in all their plans. John finds himself in possession of a wonderful sable coat. In order to wear the coat he finds it necessary to replenish his entire wardrobe. Heavy withdrawals are made from the fund. Mary discovers one day that the fund is completely exhausted. She fears John has been unfair to her. And then—but to tell you more would spoil your enjoyment of the story. Needless to say, however, John, the gilded youth, proves to be pure gold and not mere gilt.

Released Week of January 1.

"The Gilded Youth" is released by all Mutual Exchanges the week of January 1. That week is sure to mean capacity business for the theatres showing this Bennett Mutual Star Production. Bookings can be made now.

Lumberlands Serial Crammed With Action

"It's the best serial I ever ran," writes an exhibitor of Van Wert, Ohio, after running a few chapters of the new Mutual serial, "A Lass of the Lumberlands." Thousands of other exhibitors agree with him. Men who didn't think it possible to improve on previous Helen Holmes-Mutual serials, are astonished to discover that "A Lass of the Lumberlands" is really the best Helen Holmes serial yet released. Bookings are being made now at the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges. This epic of the big north woods is packing theatres all over the United States.

FEATURING BEN TURPIN

Supported by Gypsy Abbott

This Vogue comedy is laid "down on the farm." Ben, a hay-baler, is the hero. Gypsy, the beautiful daughter of a hard-hearted father, is the heroine. Paddy, a rough and ready cowboy, is the villain of the piece. Paddy's jealousy makes Ben's love making a rather strenuous pastime. He not only suffers "jolts," as the title indicates—but also bumps—lots of them. At length, however, a rubber diver's suit and a "Free Air" hose at a nearby garage enable Ben to foil Paddy's most villainous plot. Laughter reigns supreme throughout. Directed by Robin Williamson. THE FINAL JUDGMENT

The final judgment as to the worth of a motion picture play really lies with the Exhibitor. If the production is mediocre, Mr. Exhibitor is first to learn of that fact, for his patrons have no hesitancy in telling him; also the box office receipts slump. When a play pleases and the till is filled to overflowing with the clinking shekels, the Exhibitor is first to take his pen in hand and to write congratulations to the Producer.

The Crown Theatre, Cleveland, Ohio, says: "'The Country That God Forgot' is an excellent production, the star was well liked and the play is worth repeating." The Garden Theatre, of Canton, Ill., writes: "I beg to advise that 'The Country That God Forgot' is one of the most unusual pictures I have ever played. Santschi was fine. My patrons, which consist of the best class of people, applauded frequently, which is also very unusual."

These are just a few of hundreds of unsolicited letters we have received praising the Selig Red Seal Play "The Country That God Forgot."

Do you want to cash in with a Red Seal Play De Luxe? Then book "The Country That God Forgot."

When Henry Walthall said that his role of Dr. John Lancaster in "The Truant Soul" was his best effort we who remembered "The Avenging Conscience" and "The Birth of a Nation" smiled dubiously and thought it was one of those little remarks that the press agent sometimes demands from even the most truthful star. But Mr. Walthall was too modest. For straight dramatic value we cannot expect better on the stage or the screen. That sounds like a strong statemen, but when an audience large enough to fill the Studebaker Theater sits tense and still for two hour and the voice of a little child in the balcony tells all of us to "look at the little mouse," we know that we have seen a masterpiece. Photoplays there have been with more beauty of pageantry, with more cleverness of dialog expressed in the subtitles, but for emotional acting there has not been anything seen lately that can compare with "The Truant Soul."

KALEM KONQUESTS

in the realm of SERIES Pictures

THE prestige of this pioneer organization as a producer of successful SERIES pictures in one and two reel lengths remains unquestioned in the face of the keenest competition.

Never spectacular in our methods, we have pursued the even tenor of our way, always giving of our best to the Exhibitors of the world.

To be able to anticipate, to be able to supply, the exact type of pictures that the Masses want is no small task for any Producer. Yet that is exactly what the Kalem Company has done, is doing and will continue to do. We cite the unprecedented success of "The GIRL from 'FRISCO" series of two reel Westerns as evidence of this fact. They are not the usual clap-trap, "sheriff-on-the-run" style of Western films; they are red-blooded, wholesome stories of the Far West as it is today, written by authors who have lived the dramas Kalem is recreating upon the screen. Featuring MARIN SAIS and TRUE BOARDMAN.

Robert Welles Ritchie and Frederick R. Bechdolt are the authors referred to. Ritchie has written the first twenty-five episodes and Bechdolt will continue the Series indefinitely.

Look over the entire field of motion pictures and you will not find a single failure chalked up against the record of the Kalem Company. Its conquests in the realm of SERIES pictures are many; and the reason therefor is this: Vigorous stories written by celebrated authors.

Announcing a NEW Series of

adventures, written by E. W. HORNUNG, internationally famous as the author of "Raffles." The NEW Series, for which we have Mr. Hornung's manuscripts, will feature the Kalem favorite—who created the title role in the original series.

Owing to the unusual number of requests received from Exhibitors for the release date of the first episode, we can announce that production will begin at once. Each episode will tell a complete story.

KALEM

235 West 23rd

"GRANT, POLICE REPORTER"

By Robert Welles Ritchie

This Super Series of single reel adventures is without a doubt the most popular Series the Kalem organization has ever fostered.

It has a punch that compels admiration. It has plot and plausibility, being written around a Man. It has thrills. It has action and it has that peculiar something that holds the interest of the Public just as we predicted it would when the first episode was released months ago.

And now that the author, Robert Welles Ritchie, is going to give his entire time and attention to the Series it is going to reach the highest pinnacle of Success. OLLIE KIRKBY and GEORGE LARKIN, co-stars in this series of newspaper stories, need no introduction from us. Their splendid work speaks for itself. Larkin has proved himself to be the greatest daredevil in picturedom; Miss Kirkby is always admirably cast.

We want every Exhibitor to see some of these exciting episodes screened. There is no better way than to arrange with the nearest General Film Exchange for a showing. Do it today!

—not forgetting those clever, mirth-provoking

HAM COMEDIES

To see them is to book them, for they are so genuinely funny, so full of the snap and zest of life, they never fail to get under the skin of the most confirmed pessimists. HAM and BUD are comedians from the soles of their funny feet to the crowns of their funny sky pieces. And as for petite ETHEL TEARE and comical HENRY MURDOCH—their pantomime is irresistible.

"The HAZARDS OF HELEN"

—the Railroad Series that has made History. Now in its THIRD YEAR of record-breaking success. If there can be devised a stunt too dangerous for to perform, the Kalem Company has never heard of it. "The Hazards of Helen" carry more thrills, more action and more story to the reel than pictures of five times its length. In hundreds of theatres "The Hazards of Helen" are making money for Exhibitors.

COMPANY

St., New York City

General Film Service

Like a blazing Sun, the KALEM trade mark illuminates the pathway of bewildered Exhibitors who have wandered off the beaten trail of SUCCESS chasing phantom profits.

KALEM'S Formula for Producing SERIES Features of One and Two Reels That are Good Enough to be Released Indefinitely

First, the IDEA is worked out from the Exhibitor's viewpoint. Next, the STORY. And it must be a whale of a story to pass inspection. Then the AUTHOR is selected. He must write from Experience: must have lived most of the situations he sets down for the camera. Finally, the story is ideally cast. Stars? Yes; but the story is not sacrificed for the sake of high salaried stars. And there you have it—the secret of KALEM'S unprecedented success as a producer of SERIES pictures.

The KALEM KALENDAR

Tuesday, January 2nd

"That Terrible Tenderfoot"

A side-splitting burlesque on the Wild and Woolly West as it is generally thought to be.

Wednesday, January 3rd

"The False Prophet"

A bully episode of "The Girl from Frisco," featuring MARIN SAIS and TRUE BOARDMAN. The Girl exposes a religious fakir who was reaping a golden harvest by predicting the end of the world. Real, dramatic thrills are crowded into these two reels.

Friday, January 5th

"The House of Secrets"

A timely episode of "Grant, Police Reporter," dealing with a secret submarine base on the American Coast, featuring GEORGE LARKIN and OLLIE KIRKBY. Never was another thrill just like this one. Trapped by the landing crew of the enemy submarine, Grant hangs from the cross arm of the wireless, cuts it loose from its support and swings down through space, describing a huge half circle, until he is able to catch his legs over the limb of a tree on the opposite side of the yard.

"After sitting through the first three episodes of the audience would willingly have sat through the whole fifteen!"

Cleveland Plain Dealer, Dec 2nd

Read what they say about it. It's good!

"Every once in awhile some chronic kicker comes along, and, in wearied tones, complains against that twenty-minute entertainment he frequently encounters on a moving picture program that ends with a 'continued next week.'

"It seems to injure his feelings to be invited to come again on the same day next week and watch an impossible but thrilling and mysterious plot slowly unfold.

"But in spite of chronic kickers, producers, particularly Pathé, continue to produce moving picture serials, and exhibitors continue to book them to boost their business on the poorest night in the week. And if the public didn't prove that they liked this melodramatic form of entertainment would Mr. Exhibitor and Mr. Producer continue spending their good coin?

" 'Pearl of the Army' starring Pearl White and featuring Ralph Kellard is the newest serial from the house of Pathé, and if the first three episodes may be considered as a criterion, it should prove as popular as 'The Shielding Shadow' which is rapidly drawing to a satisfactory close.

"When it comes to injecting real mystery in serials Pathé walks away with the blue ribbon every time. Mystery and thrills in 'Pearl of the Army'? Whew!

"After sitting through the first three episodes the audience would have willingly sat through the whole fifteen, so mysterious is the action of not only one person, but two. Even the operator, who had seen the first six reels several times, would have gladly cranked the remaining footage of the entire serial. He admitted it himself.

Praise like this should make you want to show "Pearl of the Army", Mr. Exhibitor.

The Shielding Shadow

HUGHES' "SHIELDING SHADOW"

In one of the most popular moving picture serials now running, there is a mysterious something or somebody that steps in just at the critical moment when the heroine or hero is endangered and saves the prospective victim from an awful fate.

This mysterious something is a shadowy shape, vague as to general outline but working with a very real and vigorous pair of hands. At the end of every week's episode there flashes out on the screen "WHO IS THE SHIELDING SHADOW?"

The incongruity between the dim, indefinite figure and the muscular efficiency of its hands is one of the things that makes the film go. It is great.

No better portrayal of the national political situation could be given. Always hovering about the path of Judge Hughes there is a dim, shadowy form, vague almost to invisibility but with big, strong, gripping hands. When dangers threaten, when there are obstacles in the way, then these hands get busy.

"WHO IS THE SHIELDING SHADOW?"

It is not difficult to guess. Guggenheim, Perkins, Morgan, Rockefeller, Whitney, Archbold, [illegible] are some of the [illegible] people [illegible] busy handing out money, pulling the wires and in general supporting every device to put President Wilson out and Judge Hughes in.

Take any [illegible] legs, exploiters [illegible] regulation of labor and it will surely not be found in the list of those who are supporting Woodrow Wilson. The men who hear these names hate him. If for no other reason than the character of the enemies he has made, Mr. Wilson will receive the undivided support of the great mass of the American people.

Take this idea of Hughes' shielding shadow to the polls with you next Tuesday. Those gripping hands had their hold on you and your government at one time. Are you will again to offer them your throat?

The Lewiston Maine Journal says:

"'THE SHIELDING SHADOW' is fraught with thrilling suspense."

The Bridgeport, Connecticut, Telegram says: "'THE SHIELDING SHADOW' Pathe's Wonder Serial is the greatest of all serials."

The Omaha Sunday Bee of October 1st says:

"'THE SHIELDING SHADOW' is one of the cleverest mystery serials that has yet been released, as it deals with a scientific research that develops a result long sought by the scientists."

The Baltimore American of Sept. 25th says:

"A PICTURE WORTH SEEING.

"THE SHIELDING SHADOW" which is in fifteen episodes of two reels each is a wonderful portrayal of motion picture art. For the lover of mystery there is plenty in the picture. There are many thrilling climaxes to each episode. The production is a most elaborate one and shows that no expense was spared in making the film."

We have not entered the motion picture industry to pick up some quick and easy money. But—

We have entered this field to build an organization that will endure—one that will see its twenty-fifth anniversary and its fiftieth anniversary, and since we are backed by big capital, and big calibre men, we can look thus far ahead. We are not forced to stultify ourselves by devising schemes for bringing in speedy or immediate returns, to keep our backers smiling and confident.

During 1916 our business advanced in leaps and bounds. We are producing pictures the public wants and getting them to the exhibitor through the independent Exchanges, the most economical channels.

POSTERS RED AND STORIES GRAY

IT will be news to many that, in Minneapolis, a big exchange centre and a leading picture theatre city, exhibitor conditions are distinctly bad.

The ten cent vaudeville houses have got the business—business the picture houses, some of the very finest in this country, used to have.

In a letter, perhaps the most illuminating we have received in the "Keep the Ball Rolling" series, the writer lays the larger blame to the pictures.

The pictures are not holding the people; and he tells why.

Whether the shoe fits or not, there's solid food here for every producer's thought.

Dear Mr. Johnston:

For the first time since I became a NEWS correspondent, the business outlook in Minneapolis is bad. I believe you should know what the industry is facing in eight or nine northwestern states. From theatre owners and patrons I have tried to get at the source of the trouble and I find that complaints, desires and accomplishments are about the same throughout the territory.

WE have come to the turn of the tune in the Northwest and the poor fiddlers must step out. For a few years we have had a gusher and now we are settling down steadily to a pumping basis.

There is a gradual turning toward the vaudeville and the legitimate theatre. The four 10-cent vaudeville houses in Minneapolis are so packed nightly that managers have been threatened with arrest unless they refuse to admit standing room patrons.

No such threats have come to the managers of picture houses.

THE downtown theatres are just getting along while the neighborhood houses in many cases are slipping on the grade. There is no question but that the industry has been over built and that the public is over filmed. Added to this is the undercurrent of dissatisfaction among patrons.

I find that as to the causes of this, patron and exhibitor agree to a large extent. These are some of the causes named.

Scenarios are becoming weaker. There is too much of a sameness.

THE film is getting into the very rut that caused the decline of the regular drama. The stories deal too much with problems and not enough with plain wholesome stories. Too much of the filming is done in studios. The open air, the bigness of the film that took the patron away from heavy upholstery and heavy dialogue is disappearing.

ONE exhibitor said his hardest task in going to market was to find a film with a worth while star that didn't deal with a designing district attorney or the domestic problems of the rich.

An advertising man who handled the publicity for "Birth of a Nation," "Civilization," and "Ramona" and who is now delivering the goods on stock musical comedy and light opera, declares that the public wants in its pictures more girls, more out of doors, more rest.

EXHIBITORS generally deplore the organization of new producing companies each headed by a star. It makes buying more complex and adds to the general monotony of the subject matter. They believe that fewer producing companies and more concentration on fewer films would better the market. They complain of the descriptive matter and advertising put out by the producers, saying that the mediocre film receives about the same attention as does the artistic production that will guarantee the receipts.

THE advance of 50 per cent. in admission, to go into effect among picture theatres on Jan. 1, is deemed merely a temporary measure to bolster up the business. The exhibitors realize they must give more for the money and they want to know where they are going to get it.

The live exhibitor in the Northwest has never intimated that his clientele doesn't know what it wants though this may in a large measure be true. Exhibitors are asking patrons to write suggestions telling what will bring back their interest.

SOME have said "more dance films," others "more comedies without the slapstick." Still others have asked merely to be entertained with good story telling so they will not have to think too much. Here they get back to the musical comedy principal. It seems that a new kind of film, the substitute or the successor in films to the light opera of the stage is to work part of the revival.

ONE thing is certain, the development of the scenario has not kept pace with the development in film making, theatre building and film advertising. There is too much red on the paper and there is too much gray in the story. A policy of discouragement to free-lance scenario writing, and hired staffs of writers too closely in touch with the directors, have distorted the viewpoint.

NOW as to the effort of the NEWS to prevent a striking similarity between the film market and the egg market, you are up against a hard game. The exhibitors who can't see ahead don't take a trade paper.

THE MAIN POINTS OF THIS REMARKABLE LETTER:

- ¶ Is production in a rut?
- ¶ A revival is indicated.
- ¶ Better stories!
- ¶ Less problem pictures.
- ¶ More outdoor pictures wanted.
- ¶ Encourage free-lance writers.
- ¶ Distinctive posters and progressive exhibitors demanded.

VOL. XV January 6, 1917 No. 1

The Death of Edgar Mock

IN the death of Edgar Judson Mock the motion picture industry loses not only a stanch friend and able defender, but an editor of rare talent. Mr. Mock's death came as a shock to all of us. He was widely known and widely liked.

It is significant of his personal bravery and business methods that he put his affairs in complete order as soon as the seriousness of his illness became aware to him.

Mr. Mock was one of the pioneers in the trade journal field. He served his apprenticeship in journalism on Nebraska newspapers. Later, he bought Sound Waves, and, following its disposal, organized the Electricity Publishing Corporation, and brought out The Telephone Engineer, Electric Vehicles and Motography.

Wasting Words

THERE are words and phrases which pour into the vocabulary of the motion picture industry, and pour out again, after the fashion of handfuls of sand thrown into a funnel.

For instance, "running the gamut of human emotions" gained such thorough popularity that after awhile it dropped out of print from sheer exhaustion.

Frequently an alert press agent will unearth a ponderous adjective, and the industry will clutch the word to its capacious breast, grow tired of it, and throw it back into the dictionary.

We wonder how much more life will be granted to the word Feature. Can some one enlighten us upon the precise meaning of the word, as it is applied to film products?

There are more than fifty five-reel "features" produced in America every thirty days, not to mention several score of two, three and four reel "features."

Occasionally an exceptionally good picture is made, greater in length and strength than the usual five-reel photodrama. There is no appropriate name for it.

The word feature was introduced to meet only a temporary need. A five-reeler was out of the ordinary in those days. Conditions have changed—reversed. Isn't it about time to discard this meaningless word?

Advice to Press Agents

THE photoplay editor of the Philadelphia Evening Ledger has issued to press representatives of picture companies a letter worthy of their serious attention.

In concise form, here are some of his suggestions:

Standardize your product; keep to a certain definite output of sheets, mimeographs, magazines, mailed at definite times—and dated.

Short, snappy news.

Longer stories only based on "big" news.

Send all news quickly.

No stills; give us studio pictures of stars and directors at work or play—news pictures of photoplay making.

Keep in personal touch with the editor on "special."

The Ledger plainly states a condition which exists in every dramatic department of a metropolitan newspaper—a willingness to use material if it comes in such shape that it can be used without a day's labor on the part of the staff to put it into shape, or find out what it is all about.

Have You These Pamphlets?

THE National Committee of Films for Young People, 70 Fifth avenue, New York City (which is affiliated with the National Board of Review) has just issued for free distribution a pamphlet entitled "Better Film Entertainments."

In large degree it is a manual for those outside the trade who are interested in better entertainments generally and also specifically in children's programs. Nevertheless, there is much of considerable interest and value to the exhibitors and it will well be worth their while to drop a line as above and ask for a copy of it.

In connection with the Juvenile Motion Picture News, which was published by the Motion Picture News in June for free distribution, the field for juvenile programs is pretty well covered insofar as developed up to this time, and every up-to-date exhibitor should have a copy of both of these pamphlets.

THESE exhibitors depend on posters that would have shamed the Blaneys of melodramatic fame, for their knowledge of the films and trust the posters too to get the patrons. It gets the patrons all right but not into the theatres. These exhibitors, many of them belong in the "barkers'" row at the county fairs.

The live exhibitors read the News and they are trying to help it "keep the ball rolling."

THEY depend on your film reviews to direct them in their buying. They are spending their money to the limit, always with the future and better times in view.

Dramatic critics and patrons agree that if the market is furnished by the producer the exhibitor will meet every demand of the patrons. I am referring, of course, to the live exhibitor.

SO the blame is not altogether the producer's. Scarcely. What may we expect from an exhibitor who selects his pictures only by the posters, especially posters that send people past his theatre instead of into it?

How will such an exhibitor ever be able to give his patrons the kind of entertainment he ought to know they want? How will he ever secure the right kind of posters?

WHAT possible advance can pictures make—along truly permanent lines—if some exhibitors of them are same type of fakirs who flourish for a day only at country fairs?

Picture Films May Now Be Shipped by Parcel Post

Post Office Department Order, Effective January 1, Allows Shipments at Regular Rates —Activity of National Association Responsible for Move That Is Boon to Industry

ANOTHER victory has been chalked up for the National Association of the motion picture industry by the announcement from Washington that motion picture films will be admitted to the mails on and after January 1. The order, issued on Saturday by the Post Office Department, declares that the films will be carried through the mails at regular parcel post rates. Other than the usual stringent regulations covering the transportation of combustibles there are no special rulings contained in the order.

The action of the Post Office officials, completely reversing the order laid down at the establishment of the parcel post system, comes after a month of conferences between representatives of the National Association and Government officials. There remains to be worked out only the question of timing the deliveries and the adoption of a standard method of encasing the films for the new system to come into wide use. Its immediate effect will probably be most greatly felt in the shipment of commercial reels to small towns distant from exchange points. Film executives interviewed by the MOTION PICTURE NEWS also feel that the parcel post system will strongly supplement the express service by offering a more accurate method of timing deliveries.

When asked for a statement regarding the new order, Frederick H. Elliott, executive secretary of the National Association, declared: "Coming as it did on the eve of Christmas, the order will most certainly be received by readers of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS as a most acceptable holiday present. It is as fine a Christmas present as Uncle Sam could have made both to those actively concerned in the industry and to the millions who attend the motion picture theatres.

"Your readers will know how much of the time of every meeting of distributors and exhibitors has been devoted to the consideration of the transportation problem and the various efforts that have been made to secure more efficient co-operation from the express companies. The inability of the express companies to adjust their organizations to the work of transporting films on time has caused serious losses. It was for this reason that the National Association a month ago took up the problem with the Post Office Department, and its members certainly have reason for congratulation on the action that has been secured.

"It is not our desire to give the impression that we are antagonistic to the express companies, but we feel that they have not grasped the importance of transportation to the industry. The use of the parcel post will be merely a larger development of the opportunities of the industry, and we hope it will result not only in a larger distribution of films to small towns, but will supplement the express companies, on which we must, of course, still depend for the greater part of our deliveries.

"I doubt that the public realizes the tremendous machinery of film distribution which has made the low-priced theatre possible, a system which, with the aid of the parcel post, will be able to cut the cost of distribution with inevitable results in still better pictures and better theatres."

The complete regulations concerning the encasing of films for transportation through parcel post will be announced by the Department within a few days. They will be published in full, together with other information for the guidance of those desiring to use the new system in next week's MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

YOU DON'T GET THE NEWS UNLESS YOU READ THE NEWS

The admission of films to the mails, the Hodkinson-Edison alliance, the definite announcement that Benjamin B. Hampton will retain the General Film presidency, the fact that a quiet movement is on foot to bring up new censorship legislation in New York, a complete explanation of the manner in which Keystones may be booked in the future, the important news to Paramount exhibitors that all legal matters concerning the ownership of stock in that corporation have been brought to a close—these are but a few of the more important happenings of the week in Filmdom that are told for the first time in this issue of the News. This is real news service, the News sort of service—the proof that "you don't get the news unless you read the News."

Campbell Gollan Dies in New York

Those in the production end of the business were shocked to learn that Campbell Gollan, director for George Kleine, died at his home in New York City on Wednesday, December 13. His death was sudden, coming after a very short illness.

Campbell Gollan was born fifty years ago in Scotland. He entered stage work while at the age of sixteen. Perhaps his most notable part on the boards was as Jean Du Barry in "Du Barry," in which Mrs. Leslie Carter starred. Later he was a member of George Kleine's company when this production was screened. He also directed "Wild Oats," "The Scarlet Road," and assisted in the production of the serial "Gloria's Romance."

General Nearly Ready to Release War Film

Preparations are well under way for the release of the British official war pictures by the General Film Company. These pictures are to be offered in seven instalments of two reels each,

Paramount Injunction Has Been Withdrawn

Case Was Cleared, According to Collins and Hodkinson, Nearly a Month Ago— Famous Players-Lasky Control Was Effected at Approximately the Same Time

FREDERICK L. COLLINS, president of McClure Pictures and editor of McClure's Magazine, stated in an exclusive interview for the MOTION PICTURE NEWS that his injunction on the Paramount Pictures Corporation, which he entered shortly after W. W. Hodkinson's retirement from the presidency, has been withdrawn.

Mr. Collins stated that he had secured an option on Paramount more than one year ago, and that after Mr. Hodkinson's retirement, he had entered suit to enforce this option.

Shortly afterwards, the matter was silenced again. That the issue had been definitely decided was not known by anyone but the interests involved until last week, when Mr. Collins was requested by the MOTION PICTURE NEWS to discuss the outcome of the case.

Mr. Collins complied by telling the MOTION PICTURE NEWS' representative that the injunction proceedings had been called off, and that he had reached an amicable agreement with the Paramount officials nearly a month ago.

He was asked if the withdrawal of the injunction had anything to do with the absorbing of Paramount by Famous Players-Lasky Co., which took place at about the same time.

He replied: "That is a matter you can guess about among yourselves. Personally, I am not interested in the case any longer."

Mr. Hodkinson, when questioned upon the injunction proceedings, said: "Arrangements were under way some time ago to withdraw the request for an injunction, and whether or not they have been completed I do not know. See Mr. Collins. He knows all about it."

Mr. Zukor, when approached for news of the injunction's withdrawal, said: "The suit for an injunction was withdrawn previous to the absorption of Paramount by the Famous Players-Lasky Company. I do not care to go into details concerning our arrangements, or agreement, with Mr. Collins." From an authoritative source the statement comes that Mr. Collins owns a large block of Paramount stock. The amount is not stated.

Sam Trigger Becomes President of New York Local No. 1

Other Results of an Exciting Election Are Ike Hartsell, First Vice-President; Mr. Martineau, Second Vice-President; Tom Howard, Secretary; Morris Needles, Treasurer—Lee Ochs Presides

AT the liveliest meeting ever held by Local No. 1 of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, the following officers were elected for the year 1917:

President, Sam Trigger.
First vice-president, Ike Hartsell.
Second vice-president, C. R. Martineau.
Secretary, Tom Howard.
Treasurer—Morris Needles.
Chairman finance committee, Wm. Hilkemeier.

Finance committee, Messrs. Rhonheimer, Lederer, Bimberger, Brecker and Klein.

Sergeant-at-arms, Gus Koenigswald.

The meeting hall of Local No. 1 was blue with tobacco smoke and vibrating with conversation when Lee A. Ochs, president for the year 1916, arose and called for order. It required several minutes for order to be established. Then everybody waited patiently while the minutes of the previous meeting were read.

Nominations were called for, and the names of Samuel Trigger and Charles Steiner, for the presidency, were offered. When the applause subsided Ike Hartsell and M. Ostreicher were nominated for first vice-president, and C. R. Martineau for second vice-president. Tom Howard and Sidney Ascher were entered in the race for secretary. Charles Haring and Morris Needles were pitted against each other for the desirable position of treasurer. William Hilkemeier alone was nominated for chairman of the finance committee, while Gus Koenigswald waged a battle by himself for the stake of sergeant-at-arms. For the committee of finance, which comprises five members, six candidates were nominated. These were Messrs. Rhonheimer, Lederer, Bimberger, Brecker, Klein and Glynn.

The sixty members of the league who were present were instructed to cast secret ballots. Before the voting got under way, Lee Ochs took the floor and spoke feelingly upon the regime of the outgoing officers, the conditions under which they worked, and their achievements.

He called particular attention to the treasury, which had grown from the time they had taken office from $42 to $6,500. He declared himself in favor of no candidate, and pledged his support to the 1917 officers. He said he would cast his vote only in case of a tie between the nominees.

An uproar arose when the ballots were cast, and following vociferous applause when the winning candidates were announced, the fact became known that there was a tie vote between Messrs. Klein and Glynn for finance committee membership.

Mr. Ochs, to decide the issue, flipped a coin. Those standing in the back of the room thought that the coin was a five-dollar goldpiece, but that statement was ridiculed by those who sat closer, who declared that it was a new Lincoln penny. At all events, the coin won for Joseph Klein, and he was welcomed to the finance committee with shouts of acclaim.

Before the election took place, Charles Steiner stated that he wished to announce his platform for the benefit of those who may have been in ignorance concerning his exact stand. Mr. Ochs refused to grant his wish.

The new officers were introduced amid loud cheering and wreaths of cigar and cigarette smoke. Mr. Trigger stated his policies for the coming year clearly and convincingly. He urged the members to give him their undivided support, for without unity, he said, nothing could be accomplished.

"Take my telephone number," urged Mr. Trigger, "and call me any time of day or night and I will be at your service."

A little later he said that he would insist upon a general meeting once a month.

"I am going to appoint a board of directors of twenty-five or thirty members to meet every week," said Mr. Trigger. "They will discuss and consider questions of immediate concern and devise ways and means to handle them."

THE RESULTS OF LAST WEDNESDAY'S ELECTION

Elected	Office	Defeated
Trigger	President	Steiner
Hartsell	Vice-Pres.	Ostriecher
Martineau	2d Vice-Pres.
Howard	Secretary	Ascher
Needles	Treasurer	Haring
Hilkemeier	Chairman Finance Com.
Koenigswald	Sergeant-at-Arms

After Lee Ochs relinquished the gavel to Sam Trigger, a motion was made and carried that a banquet should be given to the outgoing officers. An amendment that the new officers contribute the money for the banquet was rejected.

A motion was made and carried to inaugurate at once a concerted appeal to the public for obtaining a petition against Sunday closing. Slides and petitions are to be passed among all audiences at every performance throughout the state. These petitions will be presented at the next session of the legislature.

A rising vote of thanks was given the outgoing officers for their services during the 1917 regime. Thus terminated one of the most thrilling and enthusiastic meetings ever held by New York Exhibitors' Local No. 1.

Mr. Trigger appointed the following members to serve on his board of directors during his year of tenure:

Chairman of Board of Directors, Sidney Ascher, Wonderland theatre, 2952 Third avenue.

Co-operative Plan of Commonwealth Brings Many Inquiries

Since the first announcement of its unique co-operative plan, the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation of Chicago has been flooded with inquiries concerning the details of the scheme. The Commonwealth Corporation has issued an attractive booklet that sets forth the plan in its entirety.

After detailing the varied experience of H. A. Spanuth, the president, in the film field, the booklet takes up the method of stock distribution, the character and distributing plans of the films to be produced, and estimates the profits that may be made in the enterprise.

Hodkinson to Handle Edison Five-Reel Matinee Program

Triangle Distributing Corporation's President Confirms Announcement Made Exclusively in Last Issue of Motion Picture News That He Would Handle an Entirely New Type of Program

W. W. HODKINSON stated for exclusive publication in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS a confirmation of the NEWS' announcement of last week that the special program of matinee features to be produced by the Edison Company will be handled by him. Whether the program will be released through the Triangle Distributing Corporation or by some special arrangement Mr. Hodkinson is not yet ready to announce.

The subjects which will be contained in the program are unique. They will comprise single reels and split reels covering a diversified field. While the program is intended for matinee purposes, Mr. Hodkinson desires exhibitors and the trade generally to understand that the pictures will not be "for children only." Above all they will be clean and wholesome, and there will be no attempt at education by force.

It is Mr. Edison's contention, as was stated in his interview for the NEWS last week, that the ideal picture is one with an "educational tone." But the educational feature is entirely incidental, and it will not be considered for the present.

"There will be short dramas," said Mr. Hodkinson, "perhaps a half-reel of good comedy, a travel subject, another split-reel of a popular scientific nature—altogether a well balanced program of five reels which will be issued once a week."

In his interview for the NEWS last week, Mr. Hodkinson made this statement:

FEATURES OF THE EDISON-HODKINSON FIVE-REEL MATINEE PROGRAM:

- Split reels and single reels covering a wide range of subjects.
- The program will include dramas, comedies, travelogues and popular sicence subjects.
- "I consider the Edison program an entering wedge for penetrating the hard shell of precedent."
- The pictures will not be "for children only."

"I have always had an ideal, well defined in my mind, regarding programs and program service. The substance of that ideal is service. But it is a glorified service compared with what most program distributors are giving now. Superpictures are part of that program, yet they are only a step."

It is evident that the acquisition of the Edison five-reel matinee program is a second step of equally great importance and significance.

"I consider the Edison program plan an entering wedge," said Mr. Hodkinson. He illustrated his point with a pencil diagram, showing a broad path, which indicated programs as they exist today, and then sketched a wedge, with which he intended to penetrate "the hard shell of precedent."

The point of this wedge is the Edison matinee program. If the Edison-Hodkinson plan is successful, the scope of the program as it is generally understood will be broadened remarkably.

The eventual plan of the new arrangement is to engage experts to conduct or supervise the various departments of the Edison program. Mr. Hodkinson will have important announcements to make in the near future concerning the methods which will be used in marketing the new Edison program. These announcements will be made through the MOTION PICTURE NEWS when they are ready.

Ditmar Science Pictures by Educational Films

In an announcement from the Educational Films Corporation of America is the statement that this company has entered upon a contract with Raymond L. Ditmars, curator of the New York Zoological Park, to market all his future films. Mr. Ditmars' work is already slightly known to the trade, and the heads of Educational believe that his pictures will prove a valuable acquisition.

In speaking of these pictures E. W. Hammons, vice-president of Educational said to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS: "Beginning the fifth of February we will supply our exchanges with a five hundred foot subject each week. Our contract with Mr. Ditmars calls for the distribution of twenty prints of each subject, these to be handled through the various exchanges that market our other pictures to the exhibitors.

"Mr. Ditmars is perhaps the best known zoologist in the country. His experiments have gained him widespread recognition. In his laboratories he maintains a complete photographic equipment while his facilities for lighting are entirely satisfactory.

"The Educational Films Corporation was formed to make specialties of subjects of educational and scenic value. We believe we have taken a big stride in securing Mr. Ditmars' valuable pictures, and we will make a specialty of them, and not merely a secondary consideration."

Pickford and Cohan Films Exclusively at Strand

The management of the Strand theatre, New York City, has signed a contract with the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, whereby all Mary Pickford and George M. Cohan features will be shown at the Strand theatre exclusively in New York City.

Willis to Manage Bioscope

Chicago.

On January 1, John E. Willis will leave his present position as manager of the Unicorn Film Service, to devote his entire time to the management of the American Bioscope Company. Mr. Willis is well-known in Western film circles.

"Garden of Allah" Rights Bought by Sherman

Price Paid Is Said to Be Five Hundred Thousand Dollars—Selig Considers Picture His Best

HARRY A. SHERMAN has purchased the rights for the entire world of William N. Selig's "The Garden of Allah" in ten reels. The price paid is said to be around half a million dollars.

Harry A. Sherman has within the last six months invested over a million and a half dollars in state rights features, it is reported. A little over two months ago he bought the rights for the United States and Canada for "The Crisis," and in five weeks successfully exploited all the rights.

William N. Selig in an interview declares: "'The Garden of Allah' is the most elaborate picture I have completed, and the only one in which I have ever taken such a personal interest." The Selig Company has a remarkable record in the feature picture field, never having produced a picture that was a failure.

Colin Campbell, who directed the picture under Mr. Selig's supervision says that "It is the most wonderful film I have directed." "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er-do-Well" and "The Crisis" were all under Mr. Campbell's direction.

"I am satisfied that the feature, 'The Garden of Allah' is a marvelous piece of work, founded as it is on the famous novel by Robert Hichens; already in print in some twenty-eight languages, the book has a wide circulation. Not only that but the picturization of the play follows the book closely. Not a character or scene in the book, but what you find it in the screen version. The acting and the photography are marvelous. In securing the rights for 'The Garden of Allah,' I have the greatest feature in the motion picture industry to-day, and expect to dispose of it in even less time than 'The Crisis.'" declared Mr. Sherman.

Triangle to Book Keystone Comedies Openly

Misunderstanding Caused by an Advertisement in Last Week's Trade Papers Is Corrected—Comedies Not to Be Booked in Open Market

AGITATION was aroused among exhibitors last week when this advertisement of the Keystone comedies appeared in the trade papers:

"Mr. Exhibitor: Beginning in January, Mack Sennett Keystone Comedies—for the first time anyone can have them—regardless of your program—One every week."

Following this announcement a statement was sent out from the Keystone offices which contained the following:

"All strings will be taken off the Keystone comedies at the first of the year. Beginning in January, Mack Sennett will put his comedies in the open market. Any exhibitor will be able to get them without taking any other film service in connection therewith."

W. W. Hodkinson, when the Keystone advertisement was called to his attention, said: "Perhaps the statement is incomplete. We will handle Keystone pictures, although we will handle them a little differently. Through a new arrangement, any exhibitor may book Keystone comedies."

Keystone comedies will not be removed from the Triangle program, although they will be different from the comedies which are released to the independent exhibitor. Just what the difference is, Mr. Hodkinson prefers not to state for the present.

The following statement has been sent out by the Triangle Film Corporation:

"Because of a mistaken impression created by an advertisement in the trade papers of last week as concerning Keystone comedies, Mr. Charles Kessel, speaking for Messrs. Kessel and Baumann, said:

"'Since the advertisement of last week concerning the new open booking policy for Keystone comedies has seemingly caused the belief that Keystone comedies would be released independently of the Triangle program, I wish to state that there is no ground whatever for this impression. As heretofore Keystone comedies may be had only through the Triangle exchanges, and by arrangement with the Triangle Film Corporation or its associated organizations.

"'The new releasing plan is created in deference to the demand on the part of exhibitors who may have contractual arrangements with other programs. Under the new plan, as stated in the advertisement referred to, these comedies may be had quite independently of any program arrangement that may exist or that may have existed.

"'If an exhibitor wishes to arrange for Keystones it will be his privilege to do so, but the arrangements must be made through the Triangle exchanges, for our product will only reach the exhibitor through those channels.

"'We believe that the new arrangement is a distinct step in advance, and one that will work for the advantage of the exhibitor throughout the country. All inquiries for bookings for the Keystone comedies should be addressed to the Triangle branch offices.'" Further plans will be announced soon.

First 1917 Pathe Serial is "Double Cross"

"The Neglected Wife" Will Probably Follow, with Ruth Roland as Star—Picture Scenarioized by Ritchey

PATHE'S first serial for 1917 will be "The Double Cross," based on Gilson Willets' novel of the same name. The Astral Film Corporation will make the picture.

"The Double Cross" is among the first of four serials completed for release during the first six months of the new year. Announcements for the serial program for 1917 show that J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., has planned far ahead to maintain Pathe's reputation in the serial field.

"Many far-seeing exhibitors," said Mr. Berst, "have contracted for our complete serial program for 1917. Our new serials will be shown in better theatres for longer runs than have any of the serials of the past. Serials of the Pathe kind represent a tremendous investment and that is why we strive always for the best."

Pearl White is featured in one of the new serials, work on which was started immediately upon completion of "Pearl of the Army." Ruth Roland, the heroine of "Who Pays?" and "The Red Circle" is the star in another new serial.

The Pathe program for the new year will have a wide variety of stories. One is a heart drama based on a successful serial story. Another is a mystery story that has enthralled hundreds of thousands as a novel.

Mollie King is the featured player in "The Double Cross." Playing opposite her is Leon Bary, who played the part of Sebastian in "The Shielding Shadow" serial. William Park is the director.

The serial to follow "The Double Cross" will probably be "The Neglected Wife," based on the story by Mabel Herbert Urner, which has been published in the best newspapers in every important city of the United States.

The star of "The Neglected Wife" is Ruth Roland. Featured with her is Roland Bottomley, an actor with a long list of successes to his credit. "The Neglected Wife" has been produced by Balboa. The story has been scenarioized by Will M. Ritchey.

Pearl White, the star of "Pearl of the Army," has started work in a new serial by Fred Jackson, the well-known magazine author, and George B. Seitz, author of some of Pathe's greatest serial successes.

Fourth on the serial list for Nineteen Seventeen is another original story by H. M. Horkheimer and Calder Johnstone, the working title of which is "The Twisted Thread."

Censorship Bobbing Up Again in New York State

Reports from Albany early this week indicate that legislation is being drafted for presentation at the coming session of the Legislature providing for what is termed by the politicians a "nominal censorship" of motion pictures. Under the guise of aiding the motion picture in its fight against the recent Appellate Division decision barring Sunday shows, the backers of the proposed legislation seek a censorship that will determine what pictures may be shown on Sundays.

Under such regulation it would be possible for picture theatre proprietors to give Sunday performances after they had been properly censored. Prominent film men who were informed of the move Monday by a MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative declared that they saw in it the entering wedge for a State wide censorship of motion pictures such as was decreed by the last legislature and vetoed by Governor Whitman.

It is understood that the bill will be presented by members of the Republican majority though no sponsors have yet been named for it in either the Assembly or Senate. This bill is entirely distinct from the one permitting Sunday shows which will be presented by Assemblyman Charles E. Welsh, of Albany. This latter legislation will empower the governing bodies of cities to determine whether or not Sunday performances shall be allowed. A similar bill introduced last year was defeated.

Fisher Gets Rights to Three Musketeers

After twenty-one months of litigation Mr. Fisher of the Liberty Film Company has secured the American rights to "The Three Musketeers," based on the Dumas masterpiece.

Previous to the law suit, the film was shown for two weeks at the New York theatre where it played to packed houses.

The production is in seven reels, and Mr. Fisher intends billing it as a feature attraction. He is also selling state rights.

Dustin Farnum Is with Fox

Dustin Farnum and William Desmond Taylor, who has been directing the former's photoplays for many months, have just been added to the William Fox forces.

In acquiring Mr. Farnum and Mr. Taylor, William Fox takes his first step toward carrying out one important phase of his announced policy of making 1917 an epochal year for Fox Film Corporation productions.

Within the near future Mr. Fox will add several more well-known names to the long list of photoplayers and directors now on the Fox roster.

Mabel Normand in "Mickey"

Mabel Normand is coming back very soon in a feature called "Mickey." This is not the slapstick comedy of Miss Normand's old Keystone days but a simple and homely comedy-drama. Mack Sennett is the supervising director of the Mabel Normand Feature Film Company.

Hampton to Retain Presidency of General Film Co.

Certain Arrangements Have Been Effected to His Satisfaction, and the Plan of Operation He Formulated Will Be Used in Entirety—"Features" Will Be Put on "Footage-by-Merit" Basis

BENJAMIN B. HAMPTON, temporary president of the General Film Company, has announced definitely that his concern will deal in the future with films greater in length than those heretofore handled.

This announcement follows immediately the previous decision of the General Film Company to distribute the British war films.

It is of vital importance in connection with Mr. Hampton's announcement of General Film's new plans that he has decided to accept the presidency of General Film, because certain arrangements that he has been desirous of affecting, have gone through satisfactorily.

It is quite probable that Mr. Hampton will accept the presidency of General Film when the election of officers takes place in February. His decision is partly due to the fact that the plans he formulated will be put into effect.

One of these new plans is to establish a definite basis of releasing long pictures on a footage basis. Pictures of 5,000 foot length will be cut down to 3,000 or even less if it is evident that they deserve no more than that.

A signed statement given out by Mr. Hampton follows in part:

"From the day of its start—as the pioneer distributing medium of motion pictures—until now, the General Film Company has conducted its business on the basis of footage. That is, the company has leased, or purchased, film from the manufacturers enjoying the privilege of distributing through its exchanges. This film has been paid for at a certain price per foot. The exchanges, or branch offices, have dealt with the exhibitor on practically the same basis, charging the exhibitor a specified sum for a 'program' of so many reels a week.

"In the early days of the industry this was an excellent system. In fact, it was practically the only method by which the exhibitor could be assured of a steady program of consistent quality.

"The demand of the present seems to call for a different method of handling the business. While in the great majority of theatres the demand is still for the reliable 'program' of General Film, there are many exhibitors who want to use some of the longer subjects, usually known as 'features' with the shorter 'program' items.

"To meet this condition the manufacturers who constitute the board of directors of General Film Company have voted unanimously to do away with the footage system and to place the entire business on a percentage basis. This change takes place January 1, 1917. Likely this is the most radical change ever made in the industry, and I feel that its effects will be of untold value to exhibitors and theatregoers everywhere.

"General Film programs have justly earned the reputation of regularly carrying the highest grade short-length product in the world. This revolutionary change means that they will be even better. In fact, I think I am within the facts when I predict that within a few months theatregoers will see short features of a quality heretofore believed impossible. This prophesy is based on the sound reason that now the best producers can afford to spend more money than was possible under the old system. With each picture renting solely on its own merits, the good short picture will have an opportunity to earn to its fullest capacity. For the first time in the history of the industry the manufacturer is justified in making masterpieces of his 1, 2 and 3-reel subjects—because now he knows he can get the money out of them.

"Every picture produced under this new system will be a 'feature' no matter what its length may be.

"In addition to the shorter subjects, General Film will soon announce a definite plan of releasing longer pictures. 'Footage' will not be first in these photoplays. They will be boiled down to whatever length is right. A 5,000 foot 'feature' that needs to be cut to 4,000 feet will be cut and dramas that would move quickly through 3,200 feet will not be padded out to 'five reelers.'

"In addition to the pictures now known to the trade as 'features' General Film will distribute special plays of five to ten reels in length.

"In short, we plan to develop our distribution to handle everything needed by everyone—from the greatest to the humblest."

BENJ. B. HAMPTON.

SERVICE
BY ONE WHO KNOWS VERSUS
THE SERVICE THAT IS A POSE

There is a difference between the service that is no more than a catchy head-line and the service that is founded on experience and impelled by sincerity. The News seeks to live up to its record as the real service paper of the industry by giving you service that is felt in your box-office. Our "With the Exhibitor" and "Live Wire Exhibitor" departments are just two examples of this "service by one who knows." Both are conducted by an experienced, successful exhibitor. Your problems are his problems; he is here to serve with full and frank discussion of your complaints and intelligent co-operation. Mr. Kashin's display articles are another example of real service, by one whose displays have brought real money into the box-office—by "one who knows."

Season Greetings from World

The World Film Corporation has issued a folder which when opened measures two by three feet, containing messages of Christmas and New Year's greeting for the exhibitor. Emphasis is made of the point that each picture released during the coming year will be supervised by William A. Brady himself. The inside of the sheet contains messages of greeting from every official and department of the World organization.

"Specials" Added to Metro Roster in 1917

Ethel Barrymore First of Stars Announced for Special Productions in Addition to Releases Already Named for Metro Program

AN expansion of policy to include the production of a number of special releases in addition to the features already announced for regular release on the Metro program is the first important announcement of the year from the organization headed by Richard A. Rowland. These special de luxe productions will feature stars already favorite with Metro patrons. It is announced that while the addition of these special productions to the regular program will greatly strengthen the Metro service, this will be accomplished at a price entirely within the reach of exhibitors.

Preparation for the production on the first of these specials has already begun. This will be a seven-reel feature production starring Ethel Barrymore, who recently announced her intention to appear hereafter only in Metro plays, and the special release chosen as Miss Barrymore's next vehicle will be a picturization of "Egypt," a drama by the celebrated playwright, Edward Sheldon, which was produced on the speaking stage by Margaret Anglin. It is of interest to note that Miss Barrymore has also translated in terms of the screen another of Miss Anglin's successes, "The Awakening of Helena Ritchie."

The photodramas chosen as "special releases" will be given adequate presentation as to star, settings, scenery and cast of characters. The stories of the best writers will be interpreted, whether the interpretation requires five, six, seven or more reels. This policy gives directors and stars a free hand, and puts them on their mettle to produce magnificent productions for Metro. Simpler stories of the heart, not requiring so many acts or such expensive settings will furnish a contrast to the de luxe productions. These will be announced at a later date.

President Wilson Sees "A Daughter of the Gods"

President and Mrs. Wilson Attend Premiere Showing of the Fox-Kellermann Picture in Washington, D. C.—This Is His First Appearance at a Public Film Show

PRESIDENT and Mrs. Wilson saw their first motion picture in a theatre last Monday night. They attended the opening performance of the William Fox picture, "A Daughter of the Gods," starring Annette Kellermann, at the Belasco theatre, Washington.

Both the President and Mrs. Wilson have seen motion pictures before, but never at a theatre. Hitherto they have seen photoplays either at the White House or at private entertainments. They selected "A Daughter of the Gods" as their entertainment for their first wedding anniversary which occurred Monday.

The President was greatly pleased with the picture. He thanked Manager Taylor, of the Belasco, personally and said that "A Daughter of the Gods" was a wonderful and unusually beautiful film.

Many difficulties are added to a theatre manager's work when the President is in the house. The theatre is forbidden to announce in advance that the President will be there. This is a "safety first" measure.

The President specifies where he wishes to sit. Just before his arrival two or three Secret Service men inspect the theatre. They tell the house manager the exact time when the President and his party will come and by which door they will enter.

This done, the house manager has a strip of carpet laid through the lobby to the President's box. About two minutes before the performance begins the President's automobile drives up to the door and his party enters. The Secret Service men follow.

The President acknowledges the doffing of hats by raising his own. As he enters the box the orchestra plays sixteen or twenty bars from the "Star Spangled Banner." The entire audience rises and remains standing until the anthem is finished. Then all sit down and the regular overture is played.

At the conclusion of the performance the audience remains seated until the President and his party leave. Usually the arrival and departure are from a side door, if the theatre has one.

President Wilson has been a constant theatregoer since his marriage, but has confined his visits to theatres playing the legitimate drama. The exception that Washington knows is his attendance at the opening of "A Daughter of the Gods."

Lichtman Talks on Artcraft Distribution

Exhibitors Who Feared Increase of Price Now Sell 25-Cent Seats Faster Than 5-Cent Seats

IN an interview with Al. Lichtman, general manager of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been given an outline of just what Artcraft means to the exhibitor and the producer as well as what its distribution means to the film industry in the future.

"The advent of any new force in the motion picture industry is often looked upon with fear by exhibitors, particularly when it calls for a longer run of the attraction, a higher charge of admission and an increase in the cost of rentals," said Mr. Lichtman. "At the same time, many exhibitors realize that it was due to the entrance of just such forces into the business several years ago that resulted in the great improvement evidenced during the past few years. Exhibitors who at that time feared to raise their admission price from five to ten cents are today selling their twenty-five cent seats faster than their ten cent seats.

"Thus when Artcraft entered the field several months ago and offered new ideas and policies to the exhibitor, many managers did not realize that this was merely another step toward their own advancement as well as that of the industry in general. Artcraft is primarily intended for the improvement of conditions effecting the exhibitor, not the manager of the opera house, the town hall or the theatre which usually shows a legitimate attraction, but the fifty-two-weeks-a-year exhibitor whose theatre is a regular motion picture house, whether it is a palatial institution or a small town odeon.

"In the past this exhibitor has shown pictures of ordinary merit year in and year out and when a big production came to his town it was given to the opera house or the regular dramatic theatre, whilst he was forced to offer as opposition his mediocre pictures. This is the situation in which Artcraft protects the exhibitor. In other words, to use the vernacular of the day, Artcraft gives the exhibitor a chance at the big attractions which in the past was given to the owner of 'legit' theatres.

"The many palatial motion picture houses throughout the country are operating under as large an expense as the finest playhouses. These theatres must have extraordinary productions and it is the aim of Artcraft to supply them with the biggest subjects in points of stars, art and general merit. In place of running the mediocre film three days and a week, Artcraft supplies these houses with productions that will not only stand an increase in admission price but a longer run.

"As to the smaller exhibitor, Artcraft offers to him the very thing for which every live-wire showman is ever on the lookout, namely a 'special attraction' for his business. To the small exhibitor who is showing the usual film, Artcraft is as important as it is to the owner of the immense motion picture palace. Where heretofore it has been impossible for him to secure the big production until long after its initial appearance, Artcraft now makes it possible for him to show the so-called 'big stuff' occasionally, thus not only increasing the prestige of his house but actually injecting new blood into the box-office veins of his business."

Moss Sells Pictures to Greene

An announcement of interest to the exhibitors and others connected with the distribution of films in the New York territory, is the sale of the New York Exchange of the B. S. Moss Motion Picture Corporation to the Modern Feature Photoplay Company, of which Mr. Walter Greene is the treasurer.

The pictures handled by the Moss Exchange namely, "Boots and Saddles," "The Power of Evil," "One Day," "The Salamander," "Three Weeks," "The Birth of Character," "The Heart of New York," "The Birth of Man" and the new propaganda picture, "The Girl Who Doesn't Know," will be distributed in the New York territory by the Modern Feature Photoplay Company on and after Monday, December 25.

Mr. Greene, who takes over the Moss Exchange and who will release Moss pictures is the president of the newly formed Artcraft Company.

Chaplin Rights Sold for Scandinavia

A sale has just been closed between the Lone Star Film Corporation and John Carlson for the rights to the Chaplin-Mutual Series for Scandinavia. The sale was negotiated by Chester Beecroft, who is now operating as an independent exporter of films. This is the third Chaplin deal that Mr. Beecroft has closed.

The most conspicuous of Mr. Beecroft's Chaplin sales was the deal by which he obtained nearly a half million dollars, one-third cash in advance plus the cost of prints, for the United Kingdom. It has been announced from his office at 71 West Twenty-third street, that he has opened negotiations with film men in all other parts of the world for the Chaplin pictures, and that announcement of the closing of contracts for three other foreign territories will be made within the next few days.

Mr. Carlson controls all of the Chaplin pictures made previous to the Chaplin-Mutual Series in Scandinavia, and is said to have paid $18,500 on account of a total which will be far in excess of the advance payment for the twelve Chaplin-Mutual subjects.

Garfield in New York to Market "Ignorance"

Herman J. Garfield has arrived in New York to market the six-reel feature "Ignorance," produced in Cleveland by the Private Feature Film Company in association with the Young Women's Protective League. The producers have based the drama to a certain extent upon exposes of white slave traffic in various cities in the United States. The trade showing will be given some time during the present week.

The cast is headed by Earl Metcalfe, who is supported by Eleanor Black, Arthur Matthews, Ethel Tully and other well-known players. Mr. Garfield, general manager of the Private Feature Film Company, who has handled several film successes, is enthusiastic over the money making possibilities of "Ignorance."

Three-Cents-A-Seat Tax in New York for Sunday Fight

$10,000 Towards $40,000 Necessary to Be Contributed by New York—Bender Solicited Money from Exhibitors, Lived in Good Hotels and Won't Let League Attorneys Take Case

AT a mass meeting of New York exhibitors held in Wurlitzer hall last Friday afternoon the question of Sunday closing was hotly discussed, and a motion was made and carried unanimously to tax all of the theatres in Greater New York three cents a seat to carry on the campaign in the courts and in the legislature.

Lee Ochs presided, and many prominent men were present.

Mr. Ochs made the statement that the Bender case was disreputable. Bender, he said, had solicited money from exhibitors supposedly to carry on his case, while, in reality, he was "living in good hotels, at the exhibitors' expense." Bender, he said, had collected money from the exhibitors in Schenectady, Troy and other cities.

Ochs declared that Bender's attorneys refuse to allow the league to provide its own lawyers to carry on the case. He had done everything in his power, he said, to persuade Bender and his attorneys to allow the league to conduct the case at the league's expense. Both Bender and the attorneys persistently refused "to allow interference."

A vote of thanks was carried to thank Mayor Mitchel for his attitude towards the Sunday question, but when a motion was made to vote similar thanks to the Democratic County Committee, it was tabled. The point was brought out that such a vote would lead to political entanglements, and it was desired that the issue be kept away from politics entirely.

A letter, read by Commissioner Adamson, from the Mayor follows:

"I am in favor of the Sunday exhibition of clean, instructive motion pictures, since Sunday is the one day of the week when the great majority of the people of this city are able to enjoy relaxation and diversion. Occasionally I enjoy this sort of entertainment myself, and certainly see no harm in it. As to pictures devoted to educational subjects, certainly there is as much reason for permitting their exhibition on Sunday as there is for permitting lectures on Sunday.

"If the Court of Appeals should rule against this view, the question will become one of public policy for the Legislature to deal with. If it should do so by the enactment of appropriate legislation along the lines I have indicated, I would give my approval to such legislation."

H. Salman Miller, chairman of the Committee of Foreign Born Citizens, said his committee voted Thursday to assist in the fight for Sunday pictures, and to send a delegation to Albany, if necessary.

The most important feature of the meeting was the decision to tax all theatres in Greater New York three cents a seat, regardless of capacity. That is to say, a 300-seat house will contribute $6 towards the fund. A thousand-seat house will contribute $20, etc.

Lee Ochs spoke with emphasis on the need for ample money to carry on the fight. He said: "I am informed that the Court of Appeals will very likely sustain the finding of the Appellate Division, and hold that Sunday picture shows are illegal under the present law. We must fight hard, because a new law cannot be made in less than two or three months."

Adolf Zukor was appointed treasurer of the fund. It is expected that from New York City alone $10,000 will be forthcoming, if the three-cents-a-seat tax plan works out successfully. The entire state will contribute $40,000, that being the amount stipulated for retainer by John B. Stanchfield, William Seabury and Samuel Seabury, the attorneys who will fight the case for the exhibitors.

Joseph R. Callahan, Democratic leader in the state assembly, made a speech in which he declared that the exhibitors could rest assured that the Democrats would vote for Sunday opening.

He warned his audience that opposition to a bill for Sunday opening would probably be made by up-state legislative members who were inclined to be religious and a little behind the times. He guaranteed forty-two votes as his contribution to the cause.

Among those present at the mass meeting who spoke in favor of Sunday opening were Samuel Trigger, newly elected president of the State League; State Senator John J. Boylan, Assemblyman Joseph M. Callahan, Dr. Lewis B. Krauss, president of the Bureau of Moral and Hygienic Education, and I. Miller, representing the League of Foreign Born Citizens.

Village President A. W. Twigger, of Ossining, has been reproved by Supreme Court Justice William P. Platt for punishing Louis Rosenburg for keeping open his Alhambra on Sunday.

Judge Platt rendered a decision on Sunday opening, in which he made the important statement that the only law applicable is Section 265 of the Penal Code, and that that section does not apply to moving pictures.

Two Live Stunts of the Week

Harry Reichenbach, publicity director for "Enlighten Thy Daughter," succeeded in making nearly every film office in New York work for him last week.

He had posters printed announcing "Enlighten Thy Daughter," but the picture's name did not appear. The poster simply said: Enlightenment Day in the moving picture industry is Thursday, December 21. It is your duty to be present. Broadway theatre, 2:30 P.M.

The innocent looking poster found its way into nearly all New York's film offices where it was given generous wall space.

Another specimen of clever press agentry was the postcard campaign of "Ruby" Rubenstein. He sent out postcards, bearing no signature and simply stating: "That was page 4153 of the Motion Picture News; not 6164."

The second card said: "You were right."

Holiday Cover Brings Praise

The beautiful three-colored cover of last week's Holiday Number of the Motion Picture News was the recipient of fulsome praise throughout film circles last week. The cover, which was originated for The News by The Chronicle Press, of Orange, New Jersey, was declared the most elaborate bit of color work ever presented by a publication in any trade field.

Max Linder's First Essanay Comedy is Claimed to be a Riot

WITH THE EXHIBITOR

Put On the Gloves Again—We Like Your Style

An Interesting Contribution from a Pennsylvania Exhibitor Who Doesn't Mince Words, But "Speaks Right Out in Meetin'"

The following letter came to our office addressed personally to one of us, and we intend to quote as fully as fairness and respect for the writer's wish to keep his identity inviolate will permit. He takes exception to an editorial appearing in our issue of December 23, 1916, in which we said: "There is a city in Pennsylvania which does a lot of photoplay exhibition. Eighty per cent. of the theatres are conducted along lines drawn in one man's office. That man only owns five or six per cent. of the houses involved. He has come to control the others through his able conduct of a film booking office and his own willingness to take charge of any man's theatre and make it a paying proposition." He disputes the facts we had based our statement upon, of the success of the eighty per cent., and the weaker position of the other twenty. What he says will cover in general the text of our editorial further. Here it is:

"I can show you where exhibitors in this wonderful company are fighting tooth and nail to kill the other fellow. . . . Do you mean to tell me he will take over a theatre and make it a paying proposition? I know and lots of others know where he has shoved the film rental so high it was suicide almost. . . . Any man that says the other twenty percent. are losing propositions . . . can't prove it. I'll admit that a number of them are losing money, but so are a number of the others losing money, even though they do book through the wonderful combine. . . . WHY do some of these fellows who are making money in this company advise others, and show them facts to prove it, that it would not be to their interests to join?"

The letter then states that our whole object, if any, seems in his opinion to be to "pick on" the Exhibitors' League and show by indirection that it has no standing in this town. It is stated that unfair competition of the rankest kind can be proved of this organization which we praised. He then says he himself admires this man for being able to "lick the gang and collect the ten per cent." Continuing he says:

"If your paper is looking to help the exhibitor why don't you try to remedy the fact that many picture houses are showing too many films, the inadequate admission price, the deposit system, the poster end, and numerous other things, that should be looked into. If an exhibitor has no credit standing sell him for cash only, but don't make the other poor devils suffer on account of a few."

This straight-from-the-shoulder letter to us, from an exhibitor who is our friend or he would not take the trouble to ask us to correct what he believes is an error by us, offers much food for thought. Were we misled by appearances of prosperity and the fact that the man we were speaking of has the public recognition of all his associates and of many others as all he could be if he would? We hope not. We hope we were right in our editorial in selecting this example as worthy of emulation. If not, we can only say there should be an organization like the one we pictured, and if it does not now exist, we were led into error because the apparent facts agree so closely with what would be facts if the right man honestly administered a trust of this sort. We cannot open our columns to a judicial enquiry as to whether in crediting this organization with having done something bright and fair in this industry, we erred on the safe side of assuming honor and truth in those we knew had brains and capability. We have begged and implored exhibitors anywhere and everywhere to give us all the ideas they could on the points we are criticized for not pressing more diligently.

We can only say our editorial as a whole we believe timely and right. That we had in mind any inference by indirection as to the weakness or strength of the Exhibitors' League or any other organization except the one we mentioned, we specifically deny. We don't affirm or deny the particular facts cited by this man as making our praise of this certain organization improper. We are neither judge nor jury.

We do ask this exhibitor to let us hear from him direct and give us for publication his frank opinions and suggestions, one at a time, on the evils he does name and which we are trying to help remedy. We know he knows his business, and we want the kind of straight talk he has given us when he thinks we are wrong, directed at other exhibitors about things he feels are a still greater wrong. He "speaks right out in meetin'" and we give him our right hand in fellowship, if he wants to accept it, to come up on our platform, which is business progressiveness with honor and the truth at all times.

Put on the gloves again, partner, we like your style.

HAVE YOU A PROBLEM?

We know that your time is taken up with managing your theatre properly. And we know that you are confronted with problems that ought to be solved. We are here every week to solve your problems for you. And we don't charge a cent for our service. An experienced exhibitor on our editorial staff wants to tackle those problems of yours.

Plan Reorganization of Maryland Branch

A number of Baltimore exhibitors interested in the formation of an exhibitors' organization met Thursday, December 21, at the New theatre. The plans of those at the head of the meeting is to reorganize the Maryland Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America. The meeting Thursday was the second which has been held recently.

It was reported that about sixty per cent of the exhibitors of Baltimore were in sympathy with the movement and had signified their intentions of joining the organization. A number of matters of vital importance to the exhibitors of that section of the country were discussed, but it was considered advisable to withhold publication of just what steps would be taken until after a permanent organization has been formed.

Another meeting has been called for Sunday, January 7. This meeting will also be held at the New theatre, when it is proposed to adopt a constitution and by-laws and select permanent officers. The temporary officers are Louis Schlichter, chairman; Frank A. Hornig, treasurer, and Thomas Goldberg, secretary.

Raise Admission to Six Cents

The Woodward Theatre Co., Detroit, controlling the Comique, La Salle and Rosebud theatres in that city, has advanced the price of admission from five to six cents. This is the first time in the history of the city that Detroit has had six cents as an admission price. "It's working out fine," said Bert Williams, general manager. "No trouble to get the extra cent, whereas it makes a big difference in the net receipts. We did not feel that we could go to ten cents just yet, and still we felt that five cents was too little. We are well satisfied."

Ritter to Open Theatre in Detroit

J. C. Ritter, president and general manager of the Rialto theatre, Gratiot and Mt. Elliott avenue, Detroit, announces the opening date of his new theatre on December 20. The Rialto is amphitheatre in style, and will seat 1,600. A Greater Vitagraph feature will be the opening attraction.

Organization Based on Right Principle Succeeds

The Central New York State League of Exhibitors, Local No. 10, is a thriving organization. This local includes the theatres in the "up state" towns and cities of Fort Plain, St. Johnsville, Little Falls, Herkimer, Frankfort, Ilion, Mohawk, Utica, Rome, Lowville and Carthage.

The officers elected a few weeks ago are: President, W. H. Linton, owner of the Hippodrome theatres in Utica and Little Falls, as well as the Richmond theatre in Herkimer; Secretary, William T. Donlon of Utica; Treasurer, Harry Lux of Utica; Vice-President, Mr. Wolff of Lowville.

The Central New York League is an organization of exhibitors founded on business lines. It is the first object of the association to do away with cut-throat competition. It is understood that no exhibitor is to take away a service from another. The Secretary has on file a list of all exhibitors together with their services. Whenever a proposition is made to an exhibitor member to book a new service, he first calls up the Secretary and ascertains if he can secure the service without hurting another member. The League does not concern itself at all with service prices but simply aims to protect its members' services.

The next important work to be taken up by the Central League will be the abolition of advance deposits.

This Is Not the First Good Kleine Idea

Honorable business methods have always been evidenced in the dealings of George Kleine with the exhibitors. One of his recent plans will be remembered to have been the unit booking system for K-E-S-E by which the exhibitor is allowed to book his choice of pictures, in blocks of ten, at dates convenient to filling in the weak points in his schedule. And within the past few days Mr. Kleine has voluntarily issued checks to exhibitors representing accumulated interest on advance deposits. Why exchanges and producers should keep tens of thousands of dollars of exhibitors' money to do business on, without interest, is a phase of the deposit system that cannot be defended on business principles, no matter how necessary the deposit itself may be considered by the exchange. Mr. Kleine's voluntary recognition of this fact deserves this mention, we think, in the exhibitors' forum of this paper. We are looking for all the silver lining we can discover in the clouded outlook for exhibitors on the present stormy sea of conditions.

The Usher Question

A disgusted exhibitor who had exhausted every effort trying to employ a couple of ushers for his theatre was about to give up when he met a couple of young men who were considering buying a theatre and going into the business. They said they would like to learn the business first and were willing to pay for an opportunity. Mr. Manager agreed to employ them as ushers and teach them, and they each agreed to pay him twenty-five dollars a month for the tuition—and it was worth it.

Montana Motion Picture Men in Convention

Discussion of conditions affecting the moving picture business in the State of Montana from the viewpoint of the exhibitor was the principal business of the closing session of the third annual convention of the Montana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, which convened at the Leggat Hotel, Butte, Mont., Dec. 12-14.

There was one principal complaint of the exhibitors and it had to do with the recently adopted policy of some of the larger film producers in taking the more popular stars from the regular releases and offering them as features at extra price. The exhibitors held that this was manifestly unfair and worked a hardship on the exhibitor, inasmuch as it compelled him either to pay the extra price for the feature as well as pay the price for the regular release program or else allow a competitor to grab the feature. It is understood that strong representations will be made to the film companies by the convention in this matter.

On the closing day, Thursday, the exhibitors were guests of the Broadway management at the presentation of "Experience," and later at a luncheon, as the guests of President Levy, at the Silver Bow Club. The convention was very successful in every way, and the visiting exhibitors are more than appreciative of their kindly welcome to Butte.

Wednesday night the present officers were re-elected, the members being well pleased with the men who had guided the destinies of the association for the past three years, since its organization. Excessive express rates in Montana and excessive charges made by exchanges and producers for feature films were discussed. A committee, consisting of George Hirschberg, of Havre; W. J. Hartwig, of Helena, and Mr. Mitschke, of Helena, was named by President Levy to take up the matter of high express rates with the Montana railroads. It was stated at the meeting that the expressage from Butte to Miles City was as high as from Chicago to Butte.

The officers who have been re-elected are: Philip Levy, Ansonia Amusement Company, Butte, president; A. Heinecke, Judith theatre, Lewistown, vice-president; C. W. Eckhart, Princess theatre, Butte, secretary-treasurer.

New Clark and Rowland House

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The Clark and Rowland interests are to take over the Liberty theatre at Penn and Shady avenues, East Liberty. It is one of the finests motion picture theatres in this section of the country and was erected by Nicola Brothers less than a year ago. It is located but two squares distant from the Regent theatre, and adds another house to their already long chain.

The new owners of the theatre will be in charge soon, and it is safe to say that the high policy of the theatre will be maintained if not increased under the Clark and Rowland interests.

Brotherly Love Among Exhibitors!

IT was 11 o'clock, maybe a little after, and the last patron was leaving the motion picture theatre. Samuel S. Smith, the exhibitor, had gone home. Up in the little room he called his own, Joe Jones, the operator, was just taking off the last reel. He had worked steadily through the shows, keeping up the theatre's gilded reputation for steady, clear and constantly recurring pictures.

Now Joe had only to finish up his work, go home and go to bed, for a nice, long, refreshing sleep. Joe was not sleepy. He was not hungry. He had no particular reason for being in a hurry.

But Joe was in a hurry. Judging from his actions, he was in a terrible hurry. Down out of the projection room he rushed and began a concentrated attack on the posters in the lobby that would have made a German drive look like a Sunday school parade.

"Ri-i-i-ip!" one poster torn. Jerk! Jerk! Jerk! Down came other posters. They were folded up in a nervous hurry, the folds being where there were never folds before. "Squash!" and they were crammed down in the film box! Not in a separate package, as demanded by the state law and tearfully desired by the exchange manager, but crammed down in until, when taken out, they would look like dishrags. Hurriedly, still more hurriedly, Joe rushed them to the depot, the posters in the bottom of the box, the film on top, and the whole strapped together.

The boy had gone with them to the depot when he remembered there was a face picture in the box office window he had forgotten to return. "And that slide we used!" he exclaimed. But it was too late. The boy had gone. Thus he reasoned. The next day the slide and the face picture found a quiet, dark shelf, there to stay while the dust accumulated over them. Joe, his work done, sauntered home, leisurely went to bed, and to sleep.

Brotherly love among exhibitors!

Down in a town beyond, Henry Hill was waiting for this film. He had run a big advertisement in the local paper. He had scattered heralds hither and yon. He had even hired a band and put on a parade, as it was a big feature. He had the lobby display all figured out and, better than ever, he had a dandy, attractive little place for a face card!

The film and the posters arrived. Alas! The posters were ruined. The face card was missing. The film was there (thank goodness for that), but the display was impossible.

Hill was mad. He raved about the exchange. He raved about the loss of money. He couldn't eat. He couldn't think straight, he was so angry. It he could just get his hands on the man who had ruined 'em!

The great majority of exhibitors are conscientious about returning films, also posters. But exchange managers in Omaha declare face cards seldom are returned. Every exchange, of course, has a checking department, and, after several warnings, they charge the careless exhibitor. But this is a lot of work, and it arouses considerable unfriendliness. The worst feature still being that it is the other exhibitor who suffers in a case like the above.

Omaha exchange managers buy for a three-reel subject twenty-five one-sheets, fifteen three-sheets, and ten six-sheets, costing 6 cents a sheet; seven sets of photographs, costing $6.30; and ten slides, costing 15 cents a piece. What an amazingly short time this stock will last!

Slides, posters and the generally forgotten face cards are worth absolutely nothing to the exhibitor, but mean millions to the manufacturers of the United States in the course of a year. It is carelessness—just plain carelessness, and every exhibitor will admit that it is. Many exhibitors have refused to pay rental because they came without posters. They cannot be blamed.

One day last week two Omaha exchange managers were struggling with the problem. One sent out a letter to his trade. He said, in part: "Your prompt return simply means a better service to you, and will be more than appreciated by us, as well as every exhibitor who uses the advertising matter after you." The letter urged the exhibitor to reform, to gather up the old matter and return it.

Cincinnati Men Vote Red and Blue Tickets

The recently organized Exhibitors' League affiliated directly with the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce will be watched with great interest by exhibitors all over the country. This idea of combining all the civic interests under the wing of the local civic promotion body is not new, as applied to other business, but as offering a get-together bond of great strength to exhibitors now so badly disorganized in many cities, the idea is a very big one. If the exhibitors come under the protection of and are unified with the interests of other businesses, there is sure to be a mutual advantage all around, and what is of special importance, an inducement to join in general good company and be a citizen in recognized good standing of the community at large. It will greatly strengthen the position of film men in the particular locality.

On Tuesday, December 26, an election of officers will be held, and postcards have been mailed to every exhibitor by the "Blues" and the Reds," the "Blues" claiming they are "live wires," the "Reds" asking you to vote the straight ticket which "means prosperity to the exhibitor." To the Fray, Reds and Blues!

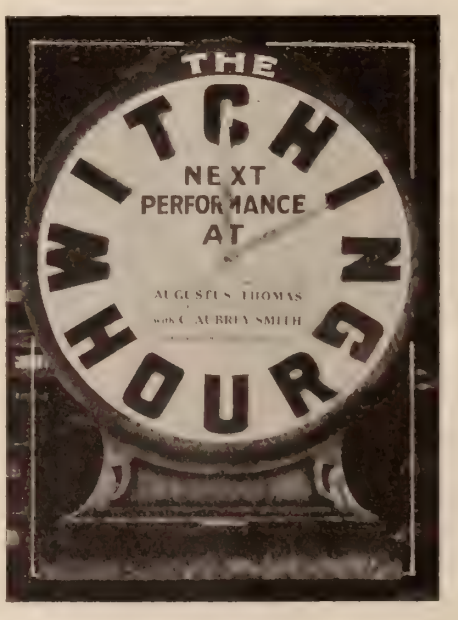
New Jersey Exhibitors Start State Wide Campaign

Dr. H. Chas. Hoppe, president of the New Jersey State Branch, M. P. L. E., under date of December 20, sends out a letter of general interest to all exhibitors, asking the New Jersey exhibitors to line up behind the Sunday pictures movement and get the benefit of the New York agitation. Incidentally he calls attention to the first annual movie ball, which the Jerseyites are looking forward to as a "big event." He says in part:

"A State wide campaign will be inaugurated for the modification of the Blue Laws of the State of New Jersey. Every exibitor in the state, every landlord of every moving picture theatre, and hundreds of owners of candy, cigar and drug stores, baseball parks, etc., will be interested.

"The Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of the State of New Jersey proposes to enter this campaign and not let up until its efforts are successful.

"The exhibitors of New York State at the present time, contemplate legislative enactment that will assure them the protection of the Sunday show for all time. It will be of material benefit to the exhibitors of New Jersey, to have a Bill for Sunday Movies before their legislature at the same time.



"The president of the State League has every assurance that the common people of this state, not only have no opposition to the Sunday shows, but have a strong desire for them.

"At the last legislative session, a Sunday Bill was introduced and at its hearing, fifty ministers of the state opposed it and one-half dozen of exhibitors were for it. Had we the same number of exhibitors and showed the same co-operation as our opponents, we would by this time have been well on the road for Sunday shows.

An exhibitors' meeting is held every Friday morning at our headquarters in Newark in connection with the ball committee, who are working hard on the details of the affair.

"On February the first, 1917, the ball will be given in Newark. Every exhibitor in the state should use all of the resources at his command to make this ball a financial success. Its social success is already assured."

Sunday performances in New Jersey are permitted only by local authorities and when "for charity."

A Practical "Exhibitor Help," Showing Time of Performance of "The Witching Hour"

EXHIBITOR PERSONALS

PENNSYLVANIA.—Wilkes-Barre, Pa.: John Mannix, for many years manager of the Sun and Bijou theatres of this city, has been transferred to the Dreamland by the Treon Company.

The Treon firm operates the Sun, Bijou, Savoy, Star and Alhambra. There are only two theatres, the Orpheum and Family, in the central city that are not owned by the Treon syndicate.

MISSOURI.—Bowling Green: W. E. Kliptisch, formerly manager of the G. O. E. Amusement Company at Fort Madison, Iowa, recently resigned to take charge of the Sanitarium at Bowling Green, Mo.

Kansas City: "Pep" Balsly, publicity manager of the Kansas City Feature Company, reports that the company has been receiving a good many calls for suitable pictures to be shown at Christmas time. Among the productions which he has been recommending to the inquirers, is the "Eternal City," "Christmas Carol," "Prince and Pauper," "An Alien" and others, but the one which he thinks fills the bill the best is Margaret Clark in "Snow White."

J. F. Mullin, of the Electric theatre at Fall City, Nebraska, has recently remodeled his theatre, and has added seventy-five seats to the seating capacity, and has added a new picture machine. Mr. Mullin, beside being a first class exhibitor, is the city engineer.

Miss Willie Jackson of Salesbury, Mo., has purchased the Lyric theatre of Mrs. Hammond. Mrs. Hammond sold her business to go into another line at Mexico, Mo.

E. O. Swan, Princess theatre, Scandia, Kansas, recently spent several days in Kansas City on business.

F. F. Barrett, of Granby, Mo., recently built a new building for his theatre, which will be called the "New Cosy." The building has a seating capacity of seven hundred.

Thompson & Son, proprietors of the Photoplay theatre at Carthage, Mo., report that they are remodeling the theatre and the name will be changed to the "Colonial."

George Hall, manager of the Dreamland theatre at Neosho, Mo., which was recently burned, is now showing in the building occupied by the Grand theatre which has been closed for some time.

J. W. Williams, proprietor of the Delphus theatre at Carthage, Mo., which was recently burned, is now exhibiting in the Armoury at that city.

A Mr. Miller, of the Baptist church at Leavenworth, Kans., was in Kansas City recently engaging religious plays for showing at the church around Christmas time.

TEXAS.—Cleburne: Excavation for the new theatre at Cleburne, Texas, was commenced December 8. The contract for the new building was let to J. A. Thomas, the theatre will be modern and up-to-date, and will be ready for the opening early in the new year.

OKLAHOMA.—Muskogee: The Strand theatre has been opened for business at Muskogee, Okla., and to pleased capacity business. The Strand seats about 600, and is modern and up-to-date in every particular. Dan Myers is manager and owner, and will spare no expense in making the Strand an up-to-date picture house.

Henryetta: The Henryetta, Okla., city commissioners has established a censorship over motion pictures to be shown in that city, and has appointed a censor board consisting of three men.

INDIANA.—Lafayette: James L. Sheetz has purchased the Orpheum theatre, Lafayette, Indiana, from Charles Reichard and John Chamberlin. Mr. Sheetz will make extensive changes in the interior of the building. The seats will be rearranged, a new booth placed in the front of the house and a new lobby installed.

ILLINOIS.—Peoria: The remodeled Majestic theatre has been opened under the direction of Manager Charles Nathan. Speaking of the house Mr. Nathan said to the Motion Picture News correspondent:

"One of the features of the building is the concrete flue over the stage, which practically removes all danger of fire. This flue is provided with a draft, which sucks the air upward, and would draw the fire, if there should be one, upward, and control it on the stage instead of allowing it to spread out over the audience."

The interior decoration of the house is novel, as the lower floor is closed entirely with a white Colonial frame and glass wall, separating it from the foyer and protecting the audiences from drafts. The interior is old rose and white is attractive.

"Experience" was the first film shown in the remodeled house.

Springfield: The Grand theatre on East Washington street has been closed again. The latest proprietor, D. M. Prim, has abandoned the project and has resumed his work in the field, taking industrial and local comedy films for commercial associations over the state. The Grand theatre has been a losing proposition since it opened and several men have been proprietors in turn.

Mrs. Lucy Marshall has sold the Empress theatre on South Eleventh street to Dick Diamond, late of Havanna, Ill. Mrs. Marshall has left for Corpus Christi, Tex., to spend the winter. She was advised by physicians to seek the warmer climate. The new proprietor of the Empress, Dick Diamond, sold out the Castle theatre at Havanna, to The Lawford theatre, before coming to Springfield. The sale of the Castle ends a long war between the two theatres in Havanna.

Almost a wagon load of potatoes were distributed among the poor families of the city Christmas day by W. W. Watts, manager of the Gaiety theatre and head of the local motion picture men. The potatoes were collected by Mr. Watts on Saturday, December 23, when a special program of motion pictures for school children was given in the morning. Each child brought a potato to the theatre as the price of admission, but the potato had to be a fair sized one to get the bearer through the doors

Well Directed Publicity Draws this Mob at the Opening of New T. & D. Theatre, Oakland

What Live Publicity Will Do for an Opening

Accompanying this story is a picture of the crowd trying to get into the New T. and D. theatre at Oakland, Cal., furnished us through the courtesy of William H. Jobelmann, the Turner and Dahnken publicity manager for the new house. There is no fake about this crowd. It surges and waves for a half a block in a solid mass, and if estimated on the scale usually claimed by picture directors for crowds in mob scenes, we would judge the whole population from both sides of the Bay were there.

In any event this shows what the putting over of an opening in a big way, with pages of announcement, columns of write-up about every detail of the house from the Pompeiian Rest Room to the Operating Booth, will do for business. Real live stars both in and out of the pictures also helped. Dustin Farnum and Marguerite Clark performed on the screen, while Myrtle Stedman, Sessue Hayakawa, Anita King and Tsuri Aoki appeared in the flesh on the enormous stage.

The opening attendance was undreamed of, even by the owners, according to William H. Jobelman, publicity director of the new house. The success of the opening was no doubt largely due to the indefatigable energy displayed by Claude Langley and George Thornton in giving personal attention to every minutest detail of construction and planning. Mr. Jobelman, describing the loyalty of these gentlemen to the cause says:

"During the course of construction, Claude L. Langley, the managing director of the T. & D. Circuit was in constant supervision, and the remarkable rapidity of erection and promptness in opening was entirely due to his indomitable and indefatigable spirit. When one considers that in addition to his attention to the numerous details incident to the preparation of a house of this size, he also conducted his regular duties as managing head of this circuit, consisting of ten theatres, a realization can be obtained of his accomplishment, and the task he so fittingly and ably concluded.

"George E. Thornton, resident manager, worked side by side with Mr. Langley during these preliminary stages of this tremendous undertaking and during the last few days practically lived in the theatre working night and day. To him is coming the credit for untiring perseverance and the honor of managing the largest photoplay house in America. Mr. Thornton started from the lowest rung in the motion picture industry, rising step by step, each upward step founded on knowledge gained and experience acquired. He is a director of the local Motion Picture Exhibitors' League and a consistent student of the Motion Picture News, and a firm believer in its policy.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

Lobby Stunts Show New Spirit of Hustle

Examples from All the Country Give Pointers to the Exhibitor Seeking to Make His Lobby Sell the Picture

The "live wire" exhibitor is giving more and more attention to the outside of his house, and incidentally is finding out that the safe and sane "middle of the road" applies to this business as well as to all others. We do not commend the "fake flash" that used to get business in the days of the single reeler, nor do we commend the high-brow dignity of front for the average downtown exhibitor who has real competition. It may be that in some communities all signs of life that indicate that one may see inside anything but scenics, educational and pretty dramatic reels, but we have a theory that "to him who hath shall be given" applies only to the live wire who stays connected with the battery.

From Salt Lake, Utah, to Montreal, Canada, Bright Lobbies Bring Business

The pictures accompanying this story are from far different localities. The Paramount exhibitor who decorates his lobby like the Canadian Northwest for Pauline Frederick in "Nanette of the Wilds," is our old friend Frank Dowler, Jr., who has one of these awful "monopolies" picturewise in Chattanooga, Tenn. He did not build the Alcazar, but inherited a house with a lobby as small as any you will find anywhere, but that does not discourage him as you will see.

The idea of making his house "headquarters" for "Miss George Washington" fits in very nicely with the political prominence of her namesake? His house is already widely known throughout the South as headquarters for discriminating picture fans.

The Chaplin picture shows how they put Chaplin over in Salt Lake. Nobody got by this theatre, you may be sure, without stopping to "rubber" at this extraordinary display. If you will examine the front carefully you will see that the Rex is no cheap "joint," either. It is not like a theatre we knew of once where the manager used to distribute waste paper, shavings, etc., in his lobby to make it seem homelike to his class of patronage. No, the Rex appeals to the best people of that city, and the psychology of this lobby display is that it appeals to the best people (not the high-brows of course who turn up their noses at Chaplin, but there are people just as good as they are that like him). Thinking, bright-minded people always stop to look at a clever imitation of anything, and this is really well done.

From Montreal, Canada, comes a lobby display from the brain of M. Kashin, in which "The Battle Cry of Peace" is given a most dignified and appropriate handling in the lobby, the eye of the theatre. As appropriate to arousing Canadian sympathy, the legends "The God of War and His Works—What Happened to Belgium Could Happen to Canada," and "Sisters United—Belgium and Canada" give a local drawing power to that massive production. Startling pictures in the small lobby frames, which can not be distinguished in the reduced photograph, are titled "The Martyrs of Belgium," "Curses of a Father," "Bomb-wrecking a Peaceful Home," "German Kultur," "Admitted at Death Bed." The crowd did not have to be convinced further that a "social attraction" was showing.

We want to show exhibitors throughout the country what other exhibitors are doing and will greatly appreciate photographs of your stunt. What you do will help others, and what they do will afterwards help you.

Paramount Gets Live Lobby Display at Chattanooga, Tenn.

A Stunt You Might Copy in Your Town

The practical joker has sprung up in the motion picture ranks—as a booster for mystery serials. Here is how he does it. He fakes up a nifty looking picture camera with necessary cranks, lenses and brass knobs, and stopping where passers by are thickest decides to take a "picture." The crowd naturally gets curious, and watches closely every motion. The crank starts to turn when lo and behold, instead of the usual silent click, a series of sounds in imitation of the Battle of the Somme arise and the whole front of the machine drops down to disclose a large placard—"Watch for the Purple Mask—Universal's New Serial at the Blank theatre"—then a second catch unlooses and pictures of Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, on each side of a center design of the Purple Mask appear, and the "camaraman" folds his tripod and looks for new fields of surprise.

Any theatre in any town can pull this unique stunt.

Free Posters and Souvenirs Help "The Secret Kingdom"

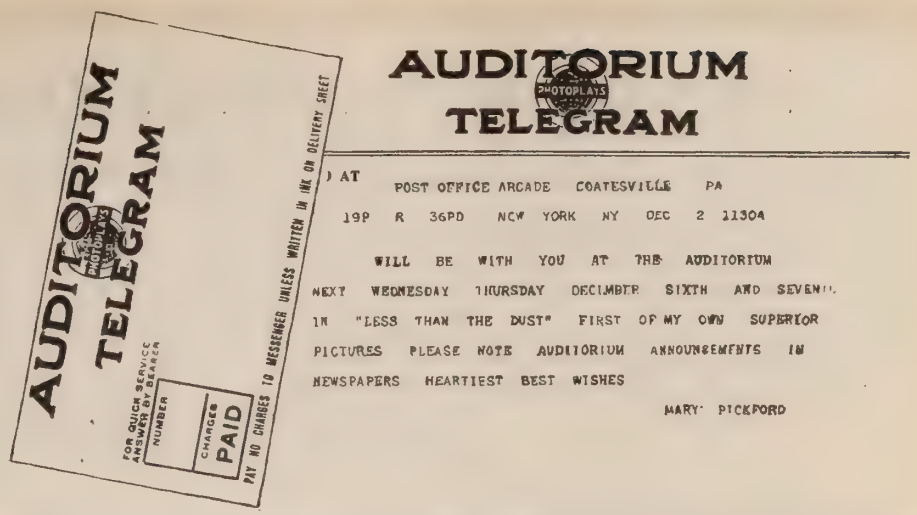
WALTER W. IRWIN, general manager of Vitagraph V-L-S-E, has prepared a pleasant surprise for exhibitors of "The Secret Kingdom," the new 15-episode Vitagraph serial which is released on December 25, in the form of free advance one-sheet posters and free special souvenirs touching on a vital phase of the plot.

The free posters on "The Secret Kingdom" are five-color one-sheets showing Charles Richman, who is co-starred in this production with Dorothy Kelly, and Arline Pretty in the romantic land of "The Secret Kingdom." It is the first time that free distribution of paper has been made in this way. To back up the advance sheets there are one-sheets, threes and sixes illustrative of each episode.

The free souvenir of "The Secret Kingdom," illustrating in shape, the sealed packet, consists of rotagravure portraits in sepia of the principals in the plot.

Pittmon Uses the Children

Manager Pittmon of the Rosebud theatre, Portland, Ore., recently employed two good "stunts." He advertised big for the children of the city to watch one Saturday which way the wind blew. Then he sent up a score of balloons, each with a ticket attached. Of course dozens of children followed them to earth. Again he advertised that children under 15 years of age would be admitted if they whispered to him the password. The password, and the advertisement left this easy enough to understand, was "The Shielding Shadow." This was, of course, the first episode. After that the "password" would be the real cash, and it can be easily figured out the first free admission paid in the long run.



Joan of Arc Rides Down Fifth Avenue

The many readers of this department who know by personal observation the congestion of traffic on Fifth avenue, New York, will appreciate the conspicuousness of a white horse, ridden by a fair lady in a silver suit of armor, in midday, down this thoroughfare. That people stop and wonder at the gayly bedizened rider with silk and gold trappings, is a matter of course. The fact is the young woman is Marie Ward, rider of many winning mounts in the Saddle Classes of the National and other Horse Shows, and who represents the Forty-fourth street theatre, which is now showing "Joan the Woman."

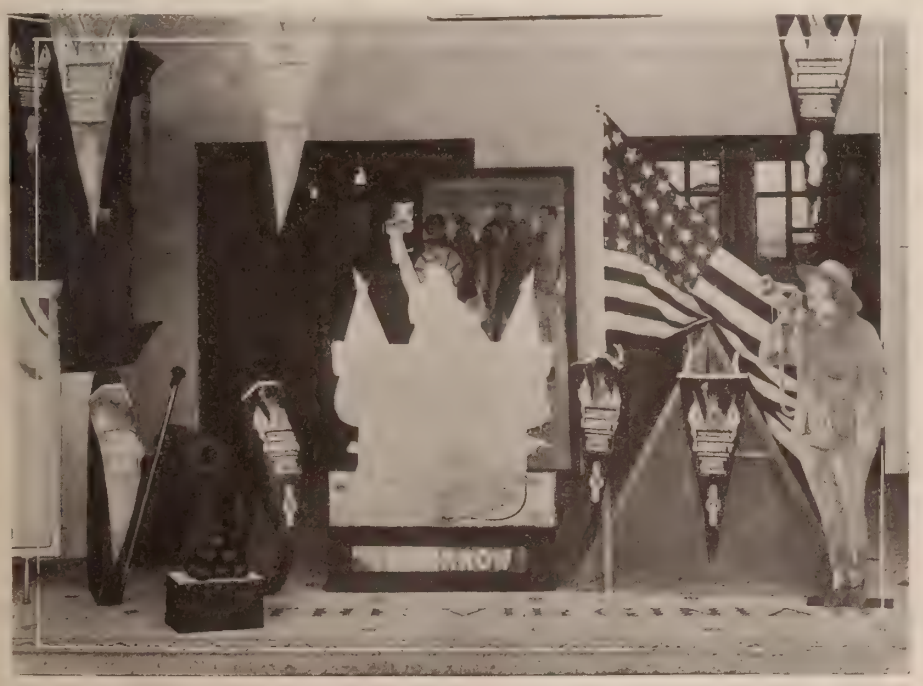
Have You a Deer to Give Away?

We supposed everything conceivable had been given away as premium or to the lucky winner, but here is a new one. A citizen of Harlan, Ky., captured a real live deer in Florida, when it was little bigger than a good sized kitten. Now, three years having passed as the title announces, there is a two hundred pound animal to care for, and no wonder the manager of the Cumberland theatre chose the lucky number method of giving away this novel premium. In these days of high cost of living such a premium should be worth having.

Special Children's Matinee Every Saturday



The Walbrook theatre, Baltimore, one of the largest and most attractive motion picture houses in Northwest Baltimore, has inaugurated among its special features a children's matinee. These will be given every Saturday, consisting of two performances an afternoon.

Glass Street Car Sign for "Shadow" Publicity

A striking method of advertising the Pathe serial, "The Shielding Shadow," was recently hit upon by Manager Milligan of the Pantages theatre in Calgary, Alberta, and the working of the stunt created an unusual amount of comment.

The advertising was carried on the glass enclosing the vestibules of the street cars of the city, and was painted in such a way that in the daytime the words and picture appeared in white against a background of black, while at night the design was transparent, and received the benefit of the lights on the interior of the vestibule.

During the first week the advertisements were carried, nothing was shown except the design embodying the eyes, hand and dagger, and after the curiosity aroused by this strange design had caused a great deal of talk, the name of the picture was added. The name of the theatre was not used at all, however, as the Pantages is the only house in Calgary using this serial, and it was decided that the omission of the name would cause even more discussion, as many people would be continually asking their neighbors what it all meant.

Florida Oranges in Unique Lobby Display—They are the Cannon Balls

Florida Oranges as Cannonballs

G. C. Koons, manager of The Virginian theatre at Sarasota, Florida, originated a clever advertising stunt recently. In the lobby of the theatre was a large cannon, a tent and a life-size figure of a girl just in the act of blowing a bugle.

There is nothing so original in the way that the different pieces are placed, but when one learns that the cannon is made of paper and cardboard, as are the wheels, and that the cannon balls are oranges, that is where the originality comes in. Mr. Koons has the "cannon" and the "cannon balls" painted black and arranged in a very advantageous and striking manner. It is one of the best advertising stunts ever "pulled off" in Sarasota. Mr. Koons was a printer before taking to the movie business, and that may have something to do with some of the advertising stunts that he is responsible for since locating in Sarasota.

IN AND OUT OF WEST COAST STUDIOS

By J. C. Jessen

REORGANIZATION of the coast producing staff of the Fox Film Corporation by General Representative A. Carlos and Jack Glavey, manager of the comedy department of production, has increased the number of producing companies from nine to twelve, making this the second largest organization of the colony.

The changes were made in the comedy section principally. Tom Mix, for more than three years director-actor with the Selig forces, has been contracted, and is to make western comedies only. He completed his work at the Selig studios a week ago, and will begin producing within a few days. Victoria Ford, perhaps best known for her work as eccentric comedienne in Nestor comedies made by Al Christie, and who has since played in a large number of Selig westerns, will play opposite Mix.

A LARGE tract of land, appropriate for western sites, has been leased by Mr. Carlos and here a permanent village which will serve for most of the settings for the Mix comedies has been erected. There are fully forty houses of the frontier town type, making this the largest western set built by a company in the Los Angeles district. Three names have been suggested for the town—Mixup, Foxem, and Gallup—but no selection has been made.

Hank Mann, featured comedian of the first Fox comedy company organized, is to be his own director in future productions, in which he will be aided by Eddie Nolan, as co-director. The supporting cast for Mann is now being selected. Charles Parrott, who up to this time has directed Hank Mann, will have an entirely new company. Frances Burnham, who appeared as ingenue in several dramatic subjects, will be the featured actress. Others playing for Parrott are Bob Sandberg, Gorden D. Mullen and John Lancaster.

FOX studio rebuilding plans made known last week provide for the enlargement of the glass inclosed stage to twice the size of the one partially damaged by fire at the Hollywood plant, the erection of an inclosed artificially lighted studio, 100 by 350, the building of another open-air stage, 60 by 125, and the erection of a large carpenter and wood-working shop. Already twenty new dressing-rooms have been added and fully as many more will be needed to meet the needs of the expanding organization. The laboratories will be rebuilt the same size of the former ones, and the office building will occupy the same ground.

A tower twenty feet square has been built twenty-five feet above the French Bastile set to be used shortly for the Frank Lloyd-William Farnum production of "The Tale of Two Cities." The setting is 125 feet in length and sixty-five in height, thus bringing the big cube containing on each of its sides an advertisement for Fox films, more than one hundred feet from the ground. At night the cube is illuminated, and can be seen from almost any part of Hollywood or the western section of Los Angeles. The Bastile set is spoken of as the largest single one ever built for a five or six reel subject.

THE permanent title given the Kay-Bee subject filmed by Reginald Barker at the Ince studios, and forwarded last week to New York is "The Ice Bullet," which has been characterized as a serio-comic unweaving an intensely dramatic plot, based on a murder mystery. The story is by C. Gardner Sullivan, and opens with the action bordering on slapstick, when an actor's ambition caused him to break into a studio in his efforts to get the manager to present a scenario. Finally reaching the executive's office, his story is picturized on the screen, as he goes over it. A man is killed, and when local detectives fail to apprehend the murderer city sleuths are employed. They discover that the shot came from a gun, the discharge of which was caused by water placed in a bucket freezing, the expansion of which pulled a string attached to the gun. William Desmond appears as the actor, and other lead-

The New Year and the rainy season are almost upon us. With one comes the water wagon and with the other skidding, both of which increase traffic and make travel most dangerous. Automobiles in this age of cinema production are a necessary evil and so some safety-first plan should be adopted. Drivers advise us that running slowly is injurious to the mechanisms of the cars so there can be but one remedy, and that is a preparation with which to powder or bathe the highways. This condition demands immediate attention so the water wagon will not disrupt travel. Film companies have found liberal offers for scenario suggestions brought results and it behooves our city fathers to follow some such plan to induce the inventive geniuses of filmdom to give the matter the attention it deserves.

One of the members of Bill Hart's horse opera troupe tried to use his spurs on the western actor's new twin-six foot throttle, and the handsome new car kept on going through two brick walls. The damage to the Inceville garage will amount to forty dollars and the cost of repairing the spur amounted to four bits. Hart is waiting for the bill with check book in hand.

The Consolidated Tonsorial Emporium and Crepe Hair Corporation's investigation of the market conditions has brought out that a great shortage of the make-up material commonly used for beards has existed since the filming of "Macbeth," and "Intolerance," months ago. Harry Caulfield was the only clipper patron this week and so the supply of raw hair is insufficient to keep the factory working. Conscription may be resorted to by the city council to get Jack Dean and Charley Chaplin under the shears. Ken McGaffey has a bad cold as the result of his loss of hair.

FAMILY COW TEMPERAMENTAL

Attempts of Frank Reicker to get dramatic expression from a family cow last week nearly resulted in Marie Doro, well-known Lasky star, being attacked by Bossy. Escape was conveniently made, on the part of the actress, by appropriate use of a nearby shade tree. The film buckled, too. Life in pictures is just one thrill after another.

AUTO BANDITS ROB DIRECTOR

Lloyd Ingraham will now be able to put on realistic hold-up scenes for he was a Sunday night victim of highwaymen, who stopped him by the persuasion of a few shots, and took all his money. They liked Lloyd's seven-passenger better than their wheezy Ford and negotiated a trade then and there.

The Hookum office has been furnished with a beautiful photograph of Dustin Farnum's automobile covered with ducks and geese he and Ed Salisbury, the wild animal photographer, brought down up north early last week. In all they killed 111. We like the photograph very much.

Now that gasoline has jumped up a few cents more per gallon because of the big shipments to the war zone, it is argued, Tom Ince foresaw the rise and made "Civilization," to help bring about peace. Tom still has his town, country, studio, ranch, and runabout cars.

There is an epidemic of auto thefts. Ed Lyons missed his and later found it pressed into jitney service. Al Christie had to walk to the studio three days straight and then found his Winton in a back yard. Horace Davey is sleuthing for his Buick. Such are the troubles of the aristocrats.

MADGE Kirby, Ray Griffith, Porter Strong, Violet Eddy and Al Edmundson make up the newly organized company playing under the direction of Harry Edwards.

Spectacular night fire scenes, the last for the dramatic production, entitled "Tabor," were made last week at a specially constructed mining village on a plateau north of Edendale, a suburb of Los Angeles, and so big was the fire that three companies of the city fire department answered calls sent in by people residing in the vicinity. Members of the producing company were so busy with the work of securing the scenes desired, they did not notice the arrival of the fire trucks and a stream of water was playing on the blaze before the firemen could be stopped. The interruption did not prevent the making of the scenes needed.

RICHARD STANTON is directing the filming of "Tabor," and in the fire scenes he used more than two thousand people. Great charges of dynamite were used to blow up a mine, and the explosion shook buildings in the business district four miles away. Stanton has as his principles Willard Lewis, Gladys Brockwell, Jack Standing and Carry Clark Ward.

Dal Clawson, who has been with the Fox organization as cameraman since September, has photographed the last two pictures made by R. A. Walsh, and in order to secure the effects desired by the director worked out a new device which makes possible instantaneous changes in the foreground without interruption of the action. The device of a telephoto character, will serve to save much time as heretofore it has been necessary to make close-up and general view scenes separate.

"HELL, a Poppin' Valentine" is the name given the Fox production now nearing completion under the direction of Otis Turner. It is the tale of friends of a young spendthrift depriving him of his money and forcing him to work for a livelihood, so that he will appreciate the value of his wealth. He sinks to the depths of taking part in a city bread line after many adventures in town and country club life. George Walsh and Anna Luther have the principal roles.

VELMA WHITMAN, known for her work as lead in scores of Lubin subjects, who has been playing at the eastern Fox studios, has been transferred to the coast and began work in the subject being filmed by Director Turner.

WILLIAM GARWOOD, playing opposite Enid Bennett in an Ince production being made by Charles Miller, received the worst of a fight scene filmed last week, and consequently will be absent from the studio several days more. He has a sprained ankle, two dislocated toes, and many bruises and scratches.

Raymond B. West, upon his return from San Francisco, where he went with an Ince company to secure harbor scenes, was shocked to learn of the death of his mother, who was taken seriously ill a few hours prior to Mr. West's arrival, and died almost instantly. The mother has been in failing health for some time. The funeral services held at the West home were attended by many of the professional friends of the popular director.

LYDIA KNOTT arrived in Los Angeles last week from New York to become a member of the Thomas H. Ince Players. Previous to this engagement she had many years' experience on the legitimate stage, and has appeared in a number of Pathe and World Film releases.

Just when Business Manager E. H. Allen thought he had the Ince studios at Culver City completed in every detail, he found the need of still another building, for the present paint shop was determined inadequate. This structure is now being built, and in a few weeks will be ready for occupancy. When completed it will increase the number of buildings on the grounds to twenty-eight.

INCE director, Walter Edwards and company of fifteen, spent the past week in the vicinity of Monterey, Cal., where they made scenes for a Kay-Bee play written by J. G. Hawks. Another play by this author will be put in production this week under the direction of Raymond B. West.

C. Gardner Sullivan, head of the Ince studio scenario staff, arrived home this week from a trip made to New York City, to secure data for the next Thomas H. Ince feature. Mr. Sullivan will begin at once to prepare the working script for this production, and work of filming will be commenced within a few weeks.

THE Fine Art production original known as "The Pet of Patagonia" was finished last week so far as scene making is concerned, and has been titled "The Americano." The production required three trips to San Diego, where the company headed by Douglas Fairbanks and Alma Reubens worked under the direction of John Emerson. The exposition buildings and grounds served for South American settings. The story was adapted from the Eugene P. Lyle, Jr., story, "Blaze Derringer," and concerns a revolution started and successfully conducted by an American youth, who wins a bride for his trouble. Upon the completion of this film, Mr. Fairbanks departed for New York, where he will work in additional subjects.

THE most recent thriller filmed for the Fine Art subject made under the co-direction of Tod Browning and Wilfred Lucas, "Jim Bludso," was the destruction of a specially built town by a flood. The city was laid out along the water front of a river and by artificial means business blocks, residences, and all other improvements were swept away. Recently the producing company spent three weeks at Rio Vista, on the Sacramento River, staging scenes, including a Mississippi steamer race, and the destruction of a large river boat by fire, while the principals of the play fought hand-to-hand until the ship burned to the water's edge and sunk.

MANAGER of Production Frank E. Woods and Director Chester Withey have jointly written "The Bad Boy," now in production under the direction of Withey, with Robert Harron in the featured name part. Harron appears in the role of leader of "The Slouchy Seven," and because of his pranks played on the village notables is locked up by his father for punishment, which causes him to break out and run away. His later experiences with a gang of hobos, bank wreckers and general highwaymen, give added action to the play. Throughout there is a love interest, in which Pauline Starke, but fifteen years of age, plays an important part. James Harrison appears in the comedy role of a sissy, who proves himself a regular fellow. Josephine Crowell, Elmo Lincoln, William H. Brown, Harry Fisher, and Richard Cummings appear in important roles, and Carmel Meyer, daughter of Rabbi Isador Meyer, of Los Angeles, believed by D. W. Griffith to be the most beautiful young woman appearing in pictures, is assigned to an important part.

PAUL POWELL, director; Constance Talmadge, as star; A. D. Sears, Clyde Hopkins, Wilbur Highby, and other Fine Art Players are spending a week at Santa Cruz for exterior scenes for the semi-Western play, "The Girl Homesteader." This was written by Mary H. O'Connor, editor of the scenario department.

Here is an itemized account of cost of gowns worn by Lillian Gish in Fine Art's drama, "The House Built Upon Sand":

Reception, afternoon and evening gowns trimmed with ermine, at $600	$1,800.00
Gown of Gobelin shade of blue trimmed with kolinsky	1,000.00
Gown of purple silk faille, with cape and trimming of kolinsky	1,000.00
White broadcloth, black kitten's ear cloth and ermine gown	500.00
Panne velvet frock trimmed with Russian sable	1,600.00

CHESTER CONKLIN'S troubles as a twin have been ended with the completion of "Double Trouble" at the Keystone laugh foundry, made by Director Harry Williams. With his wife, Dora Rogers, he conducts a millinery store, until he is railroaded to prison, when it becomes known his wife's clandestine lover is thought killed. Escaping, he finds his twin conducting the store, and the lover there in disguise. This time the twin is arrested, but before his execution the wife starts a chase to save his life. Guy Woodward appears as the heavy, the lover, and Dale Fuller is wife of the twin brother.

Grace de Garro, member of the De Garro Troupe of Acrobats, and Harry Bayfield, head clown of Sells-Floto Circus, have been added to the Keystone organization by Mack Sennett.

J. E. RICKARDS has disposed of his interests in the circuit of seven theatres in and near Phoenix, Ariz., to his partner George A. Mauk. The deal is one of the largest made during the past several years in this territory. The houses now under the management of Mr. Mauk are The Columbia, Elks and Amusu at Phoenix; Iris at Ray; Iris at Florence; National at Hoyden, and Juarez at Senora. Mr. Rickards has purchased the Lyon theatres of W. B. Leecraft at Phoenix.

Douglas Jarmuth, formerly exhibitor in the middle west, leased the Strand, at 54th street and Vermont avenue, Los Angeles, and when completely remodeled and refurnished at a cost of several thousands of dollars, it will be reopened.

THE R-B-H Film Company is to make a series of comedies at the old Metropolitan studio on Allesandro street, which will feature Lind Cortney, a female impersonator, in dual roles. The first picture to be made will be titled "Percy, the Princess," which was written by and will be made under the direction of Jack Byrne, Goldia Caldwell and Marshall Mackay are other players engaged. S. N. Reiss, W. C. Ball, and George O. Hall, all of Los Angeles, are the organizers and they have Harry Jacobs as general manager. The company plans to make three single reel and one two-reel light comedies each month.

Incorporation papers were filed in Los Angeles last week for a firm to be known as Wilbert Melville, Inc., which will engage in the manufacture of motion pictures, motion picture films, tools and machinery. The directors are Wilbert Melville, J. M. Foote and Julius V. Patrosso. Capitalization, $100,000; subscribed, $3,000.

JAMES CLEMMER, owner and manager of the 1,200-seat business district theatre at Seattle which bears his name, is spending a few days in Los Angeles.

Eugene Roth of the Portola theatre, and M. T. Blum and Mr. Lurey of the Rialto theatre, San Francisco and Mr. Midgley of Franklin theatre, Oakland, spent several days of the past week in Los Angeles, investigating the field for a theatre with three thousand or larger seating capacity.

Charles Grogg of Grogg theatre, Bakersfield, spent the week in Los Angeles, arranging future bookings.

Griffith Not to Direct Mae Marsh

The following letter has been received from D. W. Griffith:

"I see a story in some publication to the effect that I am to direct Mae Marsh in her new picture. I cannot understand why such a statement should be published, as there is no truth in it. Miss Marsh, as I understand, signed a contract with a company in which I have no interest.

"While I wish her all the success in the world, I am directing solely and only Griffith productions, and they have no connections in any manner or form with any other company. It requires all of my time on my own productions without fostering those of others.

"(Signed) D. W. GRIFFITH."

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

WILLIAM HARTMAN, formerly stage manager with Augustus Thomas and later attached to the acting forces of Popular Plays and Players, has been engaged by Apollo Pictures, Inc., as assistant to General Director Richard Ridgely.

EDMUND NORTH, the five-and-a-half-year-old son of Robert North, general manager of the Popular Plays and Players studios, recently was passing down Fifth avenue, when he saw a church, and asked, "Whose house is that?"

"That is the Lord's house," replied Mr. North.

A few days later they were in another part of the city, when the youngster again put the same query. Again he was told that it was the Lord's house.

"When did the Lord move?" asked the lad, and thereupon he received a lecture on religion.

CHARACTERISTIC of the almost excessively polite Frenchman, Max Linder's first accomplishments in the English language were, "I beg your pardon" and "Excuse Me." He learned those coming over on the boat, and since has picked up several more words. It is interesting to note what words he found most useful at the start. "Understand?" used as a question, and "Here" were his first accomplishments in the Essanay studio. In all he perhaps gathered fifty words in the first week.

MURIS, after several seasons as leading man with Gertrude Hoffman, Mae Murray, Irene Weston and Jeanne Ott, has been engaged by Edwin Thanhouser to take the part of a "silly ass" society man in support of Florence La Badie.

There will be an echo of the European war near New Rochelle in the near future when Frederic Sullivan, Thanhouser director, will blow up a 200 foot trench with 100 pounds of dynamite. Mr. Sullivan is going to take both close-ups and distant shoots of the explosion, and the heavy charge of dynamite is to insure a big show for the distant cameraman. Nothing has been done to make things more pleasant and comfortable for Charles W. Hoffman, the cameraman who will make the close-ups, and Mr. Hoffman is studying all the literature he can find on bomb-proof shelters.

"YOU won't be able to get 'Vincy' to do any rough stuff," said Charlotte Walker, Thanhouser star, to Mrs. Edwin Thanhouser when same of the many mussy experiences that Vincent Serrano as "A Modern Monte Cristo" has to undergo were being described to her some time ago. Lloyd Lonergan, responsible for the story, was sure that the disagreeable work could not be cut out.

At any rate, it was with a triumphant flourish that Mrs. Thanhouser invited Miss Walker into the projection room of the Thanhouser Film Corporation recently to see parts of "A Modern Monte Cristo" run off.

Miss Walker saw Mr. Serrano dive from a ship in a storm, grovel in a muck of sea weeds for pearl oysters, don the uncouth non-attire of a survivor of a wreck washed up on a beach by friendly waves, like the primitive life of the marooned on a deserted island, and finally go down and come up in a diving suit, the most effective sort of a costume to discount good looks.

ROBERT RENDEL has been engaged to play an important part in Mabel Taliaferro's support in her forthcoming Metro-Rolfe feature screen play, "The Key to Possession," being directed by Edwin Carewe. Mr. Rendel has the part of Gerald Hastings, a broker, who comes as near being a villain as "The Key to Possession" boasts.

MABEL TALIAFERRO has begun work on a new feature photodrama from the pen of Hamilton Smith, called "The Key to Possession." Edwin Carewe is directing this Metro play, having fully recovered from his recent operation. Clifford Bruce, well known to Metro patrons as a star in his own right, has been engaged as leading support.

ELEVEN motion pictures in eleven months is the record of Carlyle Blackwell, the principal male star of the World Film Corporation, and by a curious coincidence the eleventh play on the list carries the title, "The Eleventh Hour." Mr. Blackwell has started upon another photoplay with the purpose of making the count an even dozen for 1916.

THE BLUEBIRD STUDIO at Leonia, N. J., is now under the management of Edwin Stevens, who is devoting its facilities to producing pictures in which Violet Mersereau will appear on Bluebird's program. The first picture Mr. Stevens made presented Miss Mersereau in "The Honor of Mary Blake," and in February another feature, written by John C. Brownell, under the title of "The Boy Girl," will be released. Kate Jordan has furnished a third feature, "Susan's Gentleman," in which Mr. Stevens will direct Miss Mersereau for Bluebird. Beside furnishing some of the scenario, John C. Brownell is assistant to Mr. Stevens at Leonia.

Mary V. McAlister, seven years old, who has made quite a success in Essanay pictures, will shortly be seen in "Whomsoever Shall Offend." She has just completed her part in "Little Shoes," the next Henry B. Walthall feature.

The Hotel Sherman, in Chicago, was transformed into a photoplay studio for the filming of several scenes in Henry B. Walthall's next Essanay feature, "Little Shoes." By arrangement with Joseph Beifeld, proprietor, three truckloads of arcs and scenery were moved into the lobby of the hotel at 3 A. M. for the purpose. It had been expected that all the guests would have retired by then and the lobby would be free for the work; however, the word got around that Mr. Walthall was at work in the lobby, and soon many guests came down to "see the fun."

ADVANCE OFFERINGS OF THE PROGRAMS

Red Feather Heads "U" New Year Program

"Polly Put the Kettle On" Features Douglas Gerrard—Variety in Coming Short Subjects

THE Universal Film Company has arranged for the week of January 1, a program headed by a five act Red Feather, "Polly Put The Kettle On," with Douglas Gerrard in the leading role. The story is by Grace Helen Bailey and was suggested by that well known song, "Polly Put The Kettle On, We'll All Have Tea." Elizabeth Chandler Hendrix wrote the scenario from which Douglas Gerrard produced the play. The cast includes Zoe Rae, Lena Baskette, Thomas Jefferson and Ruth Clifford. "Polly Put The Kettle On" will be released on Monday, January 1, the same day that Eddie Lyons and Edith Roberts appear in "Practice What You Preach," a one reel comedy under the Nestor brand. This is from the pen of T. Shelley Sutton and produced by L. W. Chaudet.

On Tuesday, the 2nd, William V. Mong and Nellie Allen are featured in a three reel drama to be released as a Gold Seal, under the title of "An Old Soldier's Romance." Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude wrote the story from which Mr. Mong wrote the scenario and then produced the play. Also on that day a Victor comedy, "Bombs and Banknotes," and with Wallace Beery will be released.

Phil Dunham appears in a two-reel L-Ko comedy that will be released on Wednesday, January 3. This is called "On The Trail of the Lonesome Pill" and portrays the ludicrous experience of Phil. Supporting Mr. Dunham are Lucille Hutton and Vin Moore. The fifty-third edition of the Universal Animated Weekly is released the same day. "Alone in the World," featuring the Smalleys and Antrim Short is also on the program for the same day. This is a drama produced under the Laemmle brand.

"The Red Stain," a two reel society melodrama featuring Molly Malone and Jack Nelson, will be the main release on Thursday, January 4. This is a Rex photoplay and was produced by George Cochrane from the scenario of Harvey Gates and taken from the story by L. V. Jefferson. Burton Law, Fred Montague and Annette DeFoe support the leads. Appearing the same day is a Big U Indian drama entitled "The Uprising" with Mona Darkfeather.

Friday, January 5, the Imp two reel drama of modern life, "The Moral Right" with Douglas Gerrard in the lead, will be released. The story is from the pen of Harry Mann, scenarioized by Fred Myton and produced by Douglas Gerrard. Francelia Billington and A. W. Wertz give excellent performances in the support of Mr. Gerrard. "How to be Happy, Though Married," a Victor comedy featuring Agnes Vernon is also scheduled for release the same day. F. A. Kelsey produced this scream from the story by Harvey Gates. Issue No. 4 of the Universal Screen Magazine is released this day.

Harry Carey and Louise Lovely are featured in "Blood Money," a two reel western drama released under the Bison brand on Saturday, Jan. 6. F. A. Kelsey produced the picture from the story by the leading man. Jack Richardson, William Gettinger and Vester Pegg do some clever acting in the support. "Love in Suspense," a Joker comedy with Gale Henry and William Franey is another release for this day. The production was directed by William Beaudine from the story by Karl Coolidge. "The Wall of Money," a one reel Rex drama featuring Pauline Bush and Wallace Reid is on the program for the same day.

Five Comedies in January from Metro

Metro Pictures Corporation will issue five one-act comedies during the month of January, owing to the fact that the month contains five Mondays. Three Metro-Drew comedies will be released, and two Ralph Herz comedies.

These are, in rotation, "The Matinee Idol," (Ralph Herz) January 1; "Cave Man's Buff (Mr. and Mrs. Drew) January 8; "His Perfect Day," (Mr. and Mrs. Drew) January 15; "Married but Single," (Ralph Herz) January 22; and "The Pest," (Mr. and Mrs. Drew) January 29.

A Keenan and Dorothy Gish on January 14

Frank Keenan and Margery Wilson and Dorothy Gish are the stars of the Triangle feature releases for January 14. Keenan and Miss Wilson appear in a Kay-Bee production of life in Louisiana before the war, when yellow fever was a constant menace and slavery a commonplace. The title of this feature is "The Bride of Hate," and it was written by John Lynch and directed by Walter Edwards. Dorothy Gish is starred in a Fine Arts play of Civil War times entitled "The Little Yank," written by Roy Somerville and directed by George Siegmann.

Alice Brady on Regular Program

There is no foundation for the rumor that Alice Brady is to appear in a special feature photoplay to be issued separately from the World-Brady program. Miss Brady has just completed "The Snowbird," the story of a Russian premiere de ballet, to be released in the usual World course, and there are no plans for any change in her occupation as the star of regular program productions by this corporation.

Stage Stars in Cast of "Envy"

McClure Pictures announce this week, for the first time, the details of "Envy," the initial release of "The Seven Deadly Sins," the series of five-reel features to be released by Superpictures, Inc., through the Triangle exchanges beginning in January.

Ann Murdock, the star of "Envy," will be supported by Shirley Mason and George Le Guere. Miss Mason, talented sister of Viola Dana, has played many leading parts in Edison pictures and was a hit on tour in the leading role of "The Poor Little Rich Girl." Mr. Le Guere, widely known juvenile, has supported such stage stars as David Warfield, Walker Whiteside, Dorothy Donnelly and Gertrude Elliott. He has played leading parts in such film productions on "The Blindness of Virtue," "The Turmoil," "The Upstart" and "The Evil Thereof."

Others in the cast are Lumsden Hare, Jessie Stevens, William Wadsworth and Robert Cain. Mr. Hare has appeared under the management of Charles Frohman, supporting Ethel Barrymore, Maude Adams, John Drew, Billie Burke and many other stars. In motion pictures he will be remembered for his work in "Friday, the Thirteenth," "Arms and the Woman," "Love's Crucible and "The Test."

Mr. Wadsworth has been on the stage twenty-three years, supporting among others, James K. Hackett, Madame Modjeska, Annie Russell, Otis Skinner and Blanche Walsh. He will be remembered for his work in Edison's "Wood B. Wed" comedies.

"Envy" was directed by Richard Ridgely and photographed by George Lane. The opening play of the group, of "The Seven Deadly Sins," introduce Eve Leslie (Miss Mason, and Adam Moore, Mr. Le Guere), whose love story is carried through the entire series. Holbrook Blinn is the star of "Pride," second in the series.

Emmy Wehlen Again

"Vanity," a five-part Metro, starring the dainty actress, Emmy Wehlen, has been produced by the Popular Plays and Players company and will be released on the Metro program Jan. 1. The story was written by Aaron Hoffman, and Wallace Clifton made the scenario.

"Gilded Youth" Heads Mutuals for New Year

"Pangs of Jealousy," with Ethel Grandin, Is Set for Release on January 1, and a Meredith on the 6th

RICHARD BENNETT, in a five-reel Mutual Star production, entitled "The Gilded Youth," heads the Mutual releases for the week beginning Monday, January 1. This is the fourth of the series of Mutual Star productions in which he has starred.

Mr. Bennett's impersonation of a young scion of a wealthy family, who is reduced to poverty and want through gambling and drink is most convincing.

The story of "The Gilded Youth" is interesting and deals with the re-establishing of a lost fortune by means of a coat won in a raffle.

Supporting Richard Bennett in "The Gilded Youth" are Rhea Mitchell, as a little boarding house slavey; Adrienne Morrison, who takes the part of the wealthy girl favored as a wife for the youth; George Periolat, cast as the man to whom the rich uncle sends his nephew to secure work and later makes advances to the little boarding house slavey, and Alfred Hollingsworth, as the uncle whose love for his nephew and his overindulgence result in the downfall of the young man.

On Monday, January 1, Ethel Grandin in a two-reel drama, entitled "Pangs of Jealousy," will be released from Mutual offices.

"Tours Around the World," in one reel and picturing Rio de Janeiro (capital of Brazil), and a ramble around Luchen will be offered on Tuesday, January 2.

"Mutual Weekly" No. 105, presenting the world's interesting happenings, together with "See America First," a one-reel scenic, showing the beautiful scenery around Passadena, California, "The City of Roses," on the same reel with "Miss Catnip Goes to the Movies," "Kartoon Komics," by Harry Palmer, will be released on Wednesday, January 3. On Thursday, January 4, a one-reel comedy will be offered. J. Warren Kerrigan in a one-reel American drama will be shown on Friday, January 5.

Lois Meredith in "The Girl Who Can Cook," another of the one-reel Mutual Star comedies, will appear on Saturday, January 6.

"Reel Life," the film magazine from the Gaumont studios, and "The Land of Nowhere," a two-reel Vogue comedy featuring Rube Miller, will be released on Sunday, January 7. "The Land of Nowhere" is a typical Vogue comedy and deals with the mishaps Rube has in a Bowery dance hall.

"Master Passion," K-E-S-E, on January 8

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay make the announcement that "The Master Passion," an Edison production, featuring Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness, in five acts, will be released January 8 instead of "Little Shoes," a Selig production, as was first planned.

In "The Master Passion" appear aside from Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness, Helen Strickland, Richard Tucker, Raymond McKee, Olive Wright, Bigelow Cooper and A. Lincoln. The story deals with the rise of an ambitious woman to become the idol of the Paris Opera after having deserted her husband and child. Finally, with the world at her feet, she tastes life's biter dregs. Disillusionment brings regeneration and the triumph of mother love. Finally, through sacrifice to save her daughter from a scoundrel, the woman's debt is paid and destiny leads her once more to the family hearthstone, there to find eternal peace of soul.

"Dangerous Ground" for Safe Booking

Carlyle Blackwell, who usually has Ethel Clayton as vis-a-vis in World-Brady picture plays, will be seen opposite Gail Kane in "On Dangerous Ground," the next release of this company. The scene of this drama is laid in Cologne and on the Belgian frontier at the outbreak of the war, and concerns the efforts of a French spy (Miss Kane) to escape with valuable military secrets to her native country.

She is aided by a young American surgeon, personated by Mr. Blackwell.

Third Screen Appearance of Sothern for "V"

"The Man of Mystery," Adapted from a Gunter Novel, Is Vehicle for Famous Actor

E. H. SOTHERN will make his third screen appearance, on January 8, in "The Man of Mystery," a new Vitagraph-V-L-S-E Blue Ribbon feature adapted from the book by Archibald Clavering Gunter. "The Man of Mystery" is different from either "The Chattel" or "An Enemy to the King," Mr. Sothern's two previous photoplays.

Charlotte Ives, a stage beauty, plays opposite Mr. Sothern. Miss Ives' personal appearance is used to the full, but even greater dependence has been placed on her acting abilities.

"The Man of Mystery" is a story which shows that, sometimes, eavesdroppers do hear good of themselves. Mr. Sothern plays the part of a cold, vindictive character, dwarflike in appearance, that has forfeited his wife's love. Mr. Sothern, as the husband, is forced to visit the neighborhood of the famous volcano of Italy. A treacherous servant, seeking to rob him, takes him too near the mountain and lava of Vesuvius pours down on the party.

His life is saved. But more than that, the intense heat through which he has passed has effected a cure of his twisted muscles. A physician, continuing the treatment, makes of Mr. Sothern's dramatic personality a new man, stalwart, erect, handsome, vigorous, and kindly, the exact opposite of the cruel man he was earlier in the picture.

In this guise—his death having been generally accepted as true, and his wife, apparently, having become an attractive widow whose wealth and appearance have attracted endless suitors—Mr. Sothern returns to his home. The effects of the Valley of the Shadow remain with him, and he devotes himself, first, to saving his wife from a scoundrelly scheme fostered by her own mother, and then to establishing a sound financial system for all Italy.

In the end he finds that the wife he really loved has now come to love him, and the changes effected make this "Count de Vesuvius," as he has called himself, a national hero as well as a welcome husband.

Unity Will Release "Glory" as a Special

AS a special feature to inaugurate its new policy of offering to its exchanges at least one special feature picture a month, Unity will release during the early part of the year a drama, under the title of "Glory," starring Juanita Hansen and Kolb and Dill. The scenario of "Glory" was written by Aaron Hoffman and produced by Burton King and Francis Grandon.

Miss Hansen plays the role of a young girl who has the entire Western village of Glory as her parents. She was adopted by the inhabitants of the little town after her mother, seemingly in disgrace, had left her as a baby in the village hotel, presided over by Kolb and Dill. She is given the name of "Glory" and grows up as the idol of the town. Kolb and Dill, as leading citizens, constitute themselves her chief parents. They send "Glory" East to be educated and she returns, a charming young girl. Meantime, oil is discovered and a fight for ownership in Glory's oil rights ensues.

The picture was made in Southern California, under the auspices of Maud Lillian Berri, formerly a star in comic opera, associated with Kolb and Dill in many stage successes.

"Haunting Shadow" from World

Kitty Gordon begins work at once upon the first of the three plays positively contracted for by World-Brady pictures. The tentative name of the drama is "The Haunting Shadow," but this is almost certain to be changed before release.

Montagu Love and Alex Francis are to have the two principal male roles. "The Haunting Shadow" is a play of the type most often described as "emotional," meaning that it carries a heart story of moving and sometimes lachrymal quality.

Ethel Barrymore in "The White Raven," Metro, January 15

"The White Raven," the second photodrama starring Ethel Barrymore since the announcement that the star has forsaken the speaking stage to act in Metro plays, has been completed, and will be released on the Metro program, January 15. George D. Baker has directed this five-part feature photoplay, adapting it from the original story by Charles A. Logue, and Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., is the producing company.

In "The White Raven" Miss Barrymore has the part of "Nightingale Nan." In the frozen fields of Alaska, she is known simply as Nan Baldwin, a singer in a dance-hall who keeps herself unsullied, regardless of the rough life around her. After her fortunes take her to New York, and she becomes the reigning queen of song at the Metropolitan opera house, she becomes Mlle. Nanon Boldini.

In "The White Raven" Miss Barrymore is supported by a notable cast, including William B. Davidson, who plays The Stranger, Walter Hitchcock (John Blaisdell), Ethel Dayton, Viola Fortescue, George A. Wright, H. H. Pattee, Mario Majeroni, Phil Sandford and Ned Finlay. For vigor, for sheer imaginative power that grips the spectator, "The White Raven" is unparalleled, furnishing a remarkably strong vehicle for this most magnificent of stars.

A Carey Cowboy Film from "U"

The Universal Film Company will release in January, "Cheyenne Harry's Pal," a five-part feature starring Harry Carey. This is a story of cowboy life and is replete with feats of horsemanship. Many of the scenes were taken at the annual rodeo at Cheyenne, Wyoming. Supporting Mr. Carey and his company of cowboys are many of the prize winners of the rodeo, who perform some hair-raising stunts before the camera. Around all this display of skill is woven a clever plot which will hold the interest every moment.

Jane Grey Completes "Ship"

Jane Grey has completed "When My Ship Comes In" for the A. H. Jacobs Corporation. It is to be an International release.

Gaumont for January 7 Brings Novelties

The week of January 7 brings from the Gaumont studio through Mutual the customary four single-reels and the eighth installment of "The Vampires." The first to reach the screen is "Reel Life," the Mutual Magazine in Film, No. 36, released on January 7. It shows making "Turpentine from Waste Timber," "An Argosy from the Arctic," growing "English Walnuts in the United States," and how to "Design Your Own Gown."

Two days later "Tours Around the World," No. 10, is released. It contains wonderful pictures of "The Foothills of the Pyrenees," characteristic scenes of "Life in Egypt," and views of Budapest.

The third single-reel of the week is the split-reel, "See America First," No. 70; "In the Heart of the Blue Ridge," and a Gaumont Kartoon Komic, "The Gourmand." The scenic views are of great historical interest, showing Lexington, Va., where are located the Washington and Lee University, the Virginia Military Institute, the home of "Stonewall" Jackson, and the grave of Robert E. Lee. Another interesting view is of the celebrated Natural Bridge.

The fourth single-reel of the week is the Mutual Weekly. No announcement of its contents can be made in advance of its release as it is only made up the day it is shipped.

"The Poison Man" is the name of the eighth episode of "The Vampires." It is released January 11. All the leading characters who remain alive after seven chapters of highly sensational activities have prominent parts in this duel between Philip Guard, the brave reporter, and the arch criminals of Paris. Juliet Musidora, who has established herself as a favorite, has many exciting moments in her role as the queen of the Vampires.

"Final Stand" Is Concluding "Yellow Menace"

The sixteenth and last episode of "The Yellow Menace" is released this week by Unity under the title "The Final Stand." In this concluding chapter Ali Singh is defeated in all his nefarious schemes and recalled in disgrace by the mysterious Council of Ten whose destinies he has been supposed to govern. Determined, however, not to be caught, he prepares to escape and dresses a substitute in his own clothing, sending this man with Katisha, his faithful slave, in a car. They are pursued by soldiers and the spurious Ali Singh is shot.

The real Ali Singh makes a dash for the open sea in a fast motor boat but Captain Kemp is not deceived by the ruse and in a most exciting chase finally comes near enough to sink Ali Singh's flying vessel and all on board are drowned. The final scene of "The Yellow Menace" shows the clawlike hand of Ali Singh sinking beneath the waves.

"Wife by Proxy" Is a Metro for January

"A Wife by Proxy" is the title of the Metro play with charming Mabel Taliaferro as star which will be released on January 8. In this new five-act production Miss Taliaferro will have the part of Jerry McNairn, a lovable girl from the Emerald Isle, who wins happiness and fortune in a thoroughly unusual way. The picture was directed by John H. Collins for Columbia Pictures Corporation, and will be released on the Metro program. It is the joint product of John B. Clymer and Charles A. Logue, and was adapted for the screen by Mr. Collins. A. A. Cadwell is responsible for the photography.

Miss Taliaferro has the part of the winsome Jerry. In her support is Robert Walker, who plays Burbeck. Mr. Walker has been seen in many of the Metro productions of Viola Dana. Sally Crute has the role of the adventuress, Beatrice Gaden. Yale Benner, who has the part of Curtis, Ricca Allen, Ed. Mack, George Melville, Fred Jones and Jerome N. Wilson are other players in the cast.

"Price of Silence," with Farnum, from Fox on the 7th

TO inaugurate the Fox Film Corporation's recently declared policy for 1917, William Fox will present in January "The Price of Silence," William Farnum's first de luxe release and "The Darling of Paris," with Theda Bara.

For a few scenes in Miss Bara's film alone nineteen hundred extras were employed.

The initial production will be Mr. Farnum's, scheduled for release on January 7. A story of love and sacrifice for a friend's honor has been conjoined with a plea for the child slave of the factory.

While acting in "The Price of Silence," Mr. Farnum spoke frequently of how completely the character of Senator Deering, whom he portrays, had mastered him completely—far more than any one of his previous screen impersonations had done.

The production of the subjects by Miss Bara and Mr. Farnum will in no way interfere with William Fox's established weekly release system. On many weeks throughout the year there will be, therefore, two Fox pictures.

This will be the order of releases for the first three weeks in January:

January 1—George Walsh in "The Island of Destiny," a film of romantic adventure in the South Sea Islands. Mr. Walsh is supported by Anna Luther and Margaret Gibson. Willard Louis, Hector V. Sarno, William Clifford, William Burress, and Herschel Mayall, Sam Searles and Marie McKeen are also among the players. Otis Turner directed staging of the production.

William Fox's weekly release for this date will be "A Modern Cinderella," a new June Caprice subject, most of the exteriors for which were snapped outside a beautiful winter resort in Florida. In the cast are Frank Morgan, Betty Prendergast, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Grace Stevens, and Tom Brooke.

On January 15 Virginia Pearson will be seen in "Bitter Truth," the drama of a woman's soul. Jack Hopkins plays opposite the beautiful star of the Southland. The production was directed by Kenean Buel.

First Erbograph for Art Drama on January 11th

ON January 11 the Erbograph Company will release its first Art Drama, starring Anna Q. Nillson and Eugene Strong. The picture will be called "Infidelity." It treats of the dangers to our social system of the complacent acceptance of marital infidelity, which, according to the sociologists, is rapidly becoming a menace to this country.

The leading players in "Infidelity" have starred in a number of features, but this picture will mark the first time that they have been co-starred together. Mr. Strong and Miss Nillson were stage stars before joining screen ranks.

Ashley Miller, who wrote the story of "Infidelity," is the director of the picture. He both wrote and directed features for the Edison Company. Some of his best known Edison pictures are "Out of the Ruins," "The Working of a Miracle," and "King of the Wire." Mr. Miller was also the producer of the Pathe Arnold Daly pictures, as well as the Ashley Mill platiques.

He is the author of "The Seventh Cord," a musical comedy that was very successful on Broadway, and has appeared in a number of stage productions. Mr. Miller also directed features for the Famous Players-Lasky Company, which have been released on the Paramount program.

HOW PICTURES ARE BOOKING

Managers Praise "Lass of Lumberlands"

Exhibitors' Letters Show Good Record for Mutual Series Featuring the Daring Helen Holmes—Whole Country Represented

THE popularity of the fifteen-chapter drama serial, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," being produced by the Helen Holmes' Signal Company under the direction of J. P. McGowan for distribution by the Mutual Film Corporation, is being attested by theatre managers throughout the country. Subjoined are extracts from some of the many letters of approval received by the serial department of Mutual:

"I think Helen Holmes in 'A Lass of the Lumberlands' is one of the best 'movie' serial features ever produced.

"D. HINES,
"Manager Auditorium Theatre,
"South Bend, Indiana.

"After showing the fourth chapter of 'A Lass of the Lumberlands,' the Helen Holmes serial, we are enclosing our check in full payment of the fifteen chapters comprising the serial.

"EDWARD G. SOUBIER AMUSEMENT ENTERPRISES,
"H. A. Klene, Manager (Indianapolis)."

"'A Lass of the Lumberlands' is a great serial and is packing our house afternoon and evening. Had to close the ticket-window several times, as we have no standing-room to sell; but they go away saying: 'We will come a little later'—and they always come back, too! We thought 'The Girl and the Game' a great money-getter, but this one is much better.

"LAURA J. HATTAWAY,
"Theatorium, Richmond, Ind."

"I cannot speak too highly of this wonderful photoplay, 'A Lass of the Lumberlands," starring Miss Helen Holmes, in respect to plot, characters and photography. I thank you personally for booking me this serial. "R. W. WILLIAMS,
"Woodward Theatre Company, Detroit, Mich."

"Contrary to all expectations, which led me to believe that every serial starts out bigger as to attendance than it continues, I notice that my receipts are increasing weekly as I go on showing 'A Lass of the Lumberlands.' Of course the story is very interesting and many of my patrons seem to enjoy to learn all about how lumber is handled. Helen Holmes is popular, but the steady increase in attendance has me guessing, although I have been at this game a good many years.

"F. R. TROTHMAN,
"Mgr. Greenfield and Gem Theatres,
"Milwaukee, Wis."

"'A Lass of the Lumberlands' bids fair to outdo 'The Girl and the Game,' which was one of the best money-getting serials we ever had in the history of the Gem Theatre.

"J. CARLIN, Manager,
"Cincinnati, O."

"Permit me to congratulate you upon your wonderful serial 'A Lass of the Lumberlands.' Our usual time for opening is 7 o'clock, but were compelled to open at 6:30. The house was packed at 7:10, and as many outside blocking the sidewalk and waiting in a heavy rain to get in. All previous records for box-office receipts shattered. I have never started a serial that went as strong.

"W. HIDER,
"The Hider Theater, Binghamton, N. Y."

"The scenery in 'A Lass of the Lumberlands' is the best I ever saw in any picture. The cast of players is great, especially J. P. McGowan and Helen Holmes. The detail of the picture is fine. The story will hold any audience. Photography is good. Miss Holmes is certainly a box-office attraction for me.

"D. H. THOMPSON,
"The Muse-Us Theatre, Dayton, O."

"I wish to congratulate you on this serial, 'A Lass of the Lumberlands.' It met with the approval of all of our patrons and is a splendid box-office attraction.

"EARL HOFFMAN,
"The Fairview Amusement Co.,
"Cincinnati, O."

Sanford Re-Books Five Paramounts

Manager C. I. Sanford, of the Crescent theatre, Newark, N. Y., has rebooked five Paramount pictures and to celebrate the taking on of the Paramount program will hold an all-Paramount week with these features as the piece de resistance of the bill. Mr. Sanford expects to continue the policy of rebooking Paramounts during the coming season.

Has "God's Country" at Theatre —and the Woman, Too

The Vitagraph feature, "God's Country and the Woman," played to such good business at the Orpheum theatre, Cleveland, during its first run, when the picture was just released, that it was rebooked by Manager F. P. Woda for another week, and Nell Shipman, its star, was engaged to appear at the theatre each night.

The Cleveland press proclaimed "God's Country and the Woman" a success on its first showing in the city. Manager Woda declares it played to capacity and, during its second run, he goes on to say, that it broke records despite inclement weather. Miss Shipman spoke to Orpheum patrons regarding the production of the film, and of the difficulties that the director labored under in securing many of the scenes. She took all Cleveland by storm, according to Vitagraph's reports.

Kipling's "Light" Does Not Fail, in Tacoma

"The Light That Failed," the Pathe Gold Rooster Play adapted from Rudyard Kipling's famous book of the name, had the honor of being the feature to open the Regent theatre at Tacoma, Wash., one of the finest houses of the Northwest. The theatre advertised the picture with half page advertisements in the Tacoma newspapers.

The opening feature at Turner and Dahnken's new Oakland theatre, Oakland, California, which was described in detail in last week's NEWS was the "Light That Failed," the Pathe Gold Rooster play produced from Kipling's masterpiece.

All New York See Pathe News

The Pathe News is now being shown in every picture theatre of New York's theatrical district.

Paramounts Shown Successfully in Small Towns

The Famous Players Exchange of Washington, D. C., distributors of Paramount Pictures in that vicinity, have proven conclusively recently that the small town can be quite as successful in running Paramount Pictures as the larger community, and one salesman within a period of less than three weeks landed contracts in thirteen small communities, the largest of which had a population of 1,733, and the smallest of which had a population of 200.

George M. Mann, manager of Paramount's Washington Exchange, said in a recent communication that "the exhibitor who thinks his town too small for Paramount Pictures, deserves to have his town stay in the small town class. Every man, woman and child likes to see the best. A small town is no excuse for not showing at least two Paramount Pictures each week.

"Recently Paramount analyzed this proposition and began to fit the Paramount service to small town needs, and succeeded, because the Paramount scheme of doing business is built for every exhibitor in the United States, and the size of the town doesn't count. Recently E. R. Carr called on a number of progressive exhibitors in towns of less than 2,000 population, and convinced them, bringing back with him contracts for the Paramount Program from the leading theatres in the following communities:"

Honaker, Va., population 869; University, Va., 200; Buchanan, Va., 792; Remington, Va., 251; Gate City, Va., 299; Gordonsville, Va., 564; Christianburg, Va., 1,568; Richlands, Va., 743; Pennington Gap, Va., 792; Pardee, Va., 250; Altavista, Va., 600; Lawrenceville, Va., 1,733, and Rising Sun, Md., 416.

Rogers Reports Large Bookings

Louis T. Rogers, president of the Rogson Film Company, Inc., who controls "The Masque of Life," announces that this production has surpassed, as far as box office receipts are concerned, all records in the theatres that it has played.

Marcus Loew, who has booked this production in all of his houses says: "This production has made a new box office record in every theatre of mine in which it has played, and I am going to play return engagements in every house."

In the last five days, over sixty greater New York theatres have booked this novelty film, and reports from the salesman in the Buffalo branch office indicate a phenomenal run for this film. And they also report an excellent business for the Selznick pictures.

"War Brides," for instance, is being booked at a large price up-State and the Proctor circuit has booked "War Brides" for all its theatres for a week's run and return dates.

"Witching Hour" for Seven Days

Herman Jans of the New Jersey Metro Exchange has booked "The Witching Hour" at the Goodwin theatre, Newark, for seven days, beginning Sunday, December 24th.

Davis Reports Popularity of "West" Comedies

MANAGER H. M. DAVIS of the New York branch of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation reports strong business with the "Billy West Comedies," which are being produced by the Unicorn concern.

The "Billy West Comedies" already released are "His Married Life," "Boarders and Bombs" and "His Waiting Career." Director Fritz Wintermeier is busily engaged on the production of a series to follow the "Billy West Comedies," the titles of which will be announced shortly.

Among the theatres of the New York territory which have booked the "Billy West Comedies" are more than one hundred of the most pretentious picture palaces.

Among the theatres which Mr. Davis reports to have booked the "Billy West Comedies" are:

In Manhattan and the Bronx: The B. F. Keith houses, The Riverview, Burlands, Bronx Strand, The Regun, 116th street and Lenox avenue; The Webster theatre 167th street and Webster avenue; The Myron, Schneider houses, Lee Och's Concourse theatre, the Bryant theatre on West Forty-second street, and several other equally prominent houses.

In New Jersey, among the larger theatres booking the "Billy West Comedies" are The Strand in Paterson, the Colonial in Paterson, the Washington in Paterson, the Eureka in Hoboken, the Star in Newark, the Franklin in Union Hill, the Bijou Royal in New Brunswick and Elizabeth, and the Pleasant Hour in Passaic.

Book Paramounts

The Grand and Nemo theatres of Johnstown, Pa., have recently contracted for the Paramount service in that community.

The Strand theatre of Knoxville, Pa., has contracted for the Paramount program. This is a new theatre in this community and was recently completed.

"Civilization" Goes Well in New York

Reports from the Civilization Feature Company, which controls the rights for "Civilization" for New York state, are indicative of a warm reception for this picture. Nathan Hirsh, president of the company, declares that the records made with "Civilization" in New York City, where it played the Fox, Proctor, Keeney and Moss circuits, has caused it to be booked by the bigger houses up-state. The Regent will show it in Rochester, N. Y.; the Family will show it in Buffalo, N. Y.; the Strand in Syracuse has booked it for a week, and Max Spiegel's New Palace in Schenectady, N. Y., has it for the same length of time. Proctor's in Troy, N. Y., and the Lyceum in Ithaca, N. Y., have booked it also. In all, fifteen prints are being shown.

California Likes Mutuals

Four of the eight theatres in principal centers in Los Angeles are given over to Mutual Star productions with Mary Miles Minter at Tally's Broadway, "The Pearl of Paradise" at The Superba, Charlie Chaplin in "The Rink" at the Garrick and "A Lass of the Lumberlands," at Pantages.

"Peck o' Pickles," featuring Kolb and Dill, opened at Clune's Broadway on December 3 and drew large crowds.

IN THE STATE RIGHTS FIELD

Frohman to Follow "Witching Hour's" Success

Plans Announced by Sherrill Call for More Special Productions—"State Right Buyers Ready for Costly Attractions"

THE offers from state right buyers on the Frohman Amusement Corporation's special release, "The Witching Hour," is the deciding factor in the final formulation of the plans of that company to hereafter produce photodramas of a special character.

"I was dubious," said William L. Sherrill, president of that company, "in the first instance, concerning the popularity of the one-hundred-dollar-a-day feature. I was not convinced that the state right buyer would pay a sum commensurate with the outlay, and endeavors put into an extraordinary attraction but I have been agreeably surprised with the attitude of the state right buyers.

"Even in territory considered rather a meagre field for state right exploitation, I received offers on 'The Witching Hour,' that substantiated the judgment I have now formed that in every state there is a healthy and consistent demand for productions of unusual merit.

"I feel that I have the proper appreciation of what the public wants and I am hewing away from the ultrasensational and the appeal to passing fancy to produce the substantial.

"Furthermore, and I think this is altogether important, I will steadfastly refuse to produce attractions with the drawing power centered in a sensational title. It is not altogether strange that the public has justly awakened to the fact that a sensational title means nothing in a show that runs anywhere from an hour and a quarter to two hours. The trade may confidently look forward to some unusual examples of the progress of the art of cinematography, from the Frohman Amusement Corporation."

Lectures for Advance "Crisis" Publicity

Max E. Mazur, manager of the New York office of Sherman-Elliott, announces a novel plan of exploiting "The Crisis."

"We all know that when a well-known story by a famous author is put on the stage, those who read the book see it with an added interest. 'The Crisis,' from an educational point of view, may be looked at in various ways for the student, as portraying events in American history, especially that period between 1861-1865; Lincoln's rise to the highest executive office in the land; and the political affairs of those days, which are almost paralleled in modern times by the crisis in England today.

"We are arranging for a number of lecturers and readers to appear in various educational institutions and before historical societies on 'The Crisis.'"

Loew's First State Rights Venture a Success

Marcus Loew, whose first state rights venture is represented in "The Masque of Life," a European picture which he is marketing in New York state, has so far gotten enormous business on it. While shown in the Loew houses it drew unusually large crowds, and in some instances broke records for weekday business in New York, despite the fact that it was but a short time before Christmas.

Mr. Loew runs it for two days in houses where he usually books pictures for only one day, while in the vaudeville theatres it is holding the screen for three and four days at a time. "The Masque of Life" is within the reach of all other New York State exhibitors through the Loew booking office.

Max Cohen Secures Seven-Reel "Three Musketeers" for Liberty Film Company

Max Cohen, formerly connected with Apex, has just returned from a trip with "It May Be Your Daughter," which he successfully placed over the country for the Moral Uplift Society. He announces that he has secured for the Liberty Film Company, which is located at 145 West Forty-fifth street, rights for the entire United States of the original seven-reel production of Alexandre Dumas' greatest work, "The Three Musketeers." The feature will be marketed on the state rights basis by the Liberty Film Company.

A. H. Blank

Jans Obtains Jersey Rights of "Witching Hour" for Metro

The New Jersey Metro Film Service, 71 West Twenty-third street, through its president, Herman F. Jans, announces the purchase of the New Jersey rights to "The Witching Hour," a Frohman picture production. Accompanying this is a statement from Mr. Jans, in which he announces an arrangement with the Frohman Amusement Company whereby the New Jersey Metro will handle all the Frohman picture productions for New Jersey.

This is in keeping with the recent announcement of an enlarged quarters in the Mecca Temple Building, Sixth avenue and Twenty-third street, to facilitate the operations of the New Jersey Metro, and President Jans has increased his staff in the offices and the field, because of the business growth of his concern.

"No picture is too big for us," says Mr. Jans. "We worked under difficulties in our other quarters, but here, we will have a greater opportunity for an improved service—if improvement be possible. I am after that other five per cent of the New Jersey houses, having ninety-five per cent of them now receiving our service. And I am confident of getting them, through the pictures that Metro is producing."

Blank Buys Selznick Pictures

A. H. Blank, of Des Moines, Iowa, was little known to the film trade until a few weeks ago when he made his debut in the Eastern film market.

His first picture deal was the purchase of the Selznick releases for the States of Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska. Upon completion of this deal he returned to Des Moines and hardly alighted from the train when he received a wire recalling him to New York to engineer another and larger deal than the first, the deal in question being the purchase of the Triangle releases and exchanges for the States of Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska. He succeeded in getting and carrying with him a signed contract for the same.

Not only does Mr. Blank own and control the Selznick and Triangle exchanges for Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska, but he also operates a chain of theatres throughout these four states, having three theatres in Davenport, namely, the Family, Garden and Strand, one theatre in Des Moines, the Garden, and one theatre in Omaha, Nebraska, the Garden.

Mr. Blank has now in the course of construction three theatres seating respectively 1,000, 1,200 and 1,450.

Mr. Blank is also the president of the Exhibitors League of the State of Iowa. He is a wide-awake exhibitor and exchange man and is always looking forward to the betterment of the film industry.

D. J. Grauman Will Handle Features in California

D. J. Grauman, theatrical magnate of San Francisco and the first man to open a theatre in 'Frisco after the earthquake and fire, has decided to enter the picture business and will begin by opening an exchange in San Francisco for the handling of feature films, under the name of the D. J. Grauman Feature Film Company, for the States of California, Arizona and Nevada. In addition to other features which Mr. Grauman will buy in the open market for his territory, he has closed a contract with the Unity Sales Corporation, through Andrew J. Cobe, Vice-President and General Manager, whereby Mr. Grauman's Exchange becomes the regular Unity exchange for the three states named and all pictures distributed by Unity will be handled by the new exchange in future.

The amusement business the country over hardly possesses a more interesting and picturesque character than Mr. Grauman. Together with his son Sid, he owns and operates some sixteen theatres at the present time in California. Mr. Grauman has for very marked traits, uniform kindliness and generosity and there is perhaps no man of wealth in his state so universally popular. And though this is his first film venture, he is sure to become a commanding figure in film circles within a very short time. It is safe to predict, also, that he will broaden activities before very long and enter the distributing field on a very large scale.

With Mr. Cobe, Mr. Grauman has already contracted to handle a series of special features which Unity will distribute during the coming year, under a new policy which has been adopted to give independent exchanges, through Unity, the very best independent productions that can be bought. Both Mr. Gorman and the Unity officials are gratified over the new arrangement and are looking forward to a very prosperous period as the result of negotiations.

Advance Publicity Film for "Crisis"

A motion picture film has been produced, which may be used in connection with Selig-Sherman-Elliotts' "The Crisis" by the Historical Industrial Motion Picture Company of St. Louis, showing among other things the original "Jenny Carvel," as she appears today and her home at Glencoe, Mo.; the historic old Court House, built in 1839; the Carvel mansion and Winston Churchill, the author. This film is used for advance publicity.

Langan Pushes "Civilization" in South

A. C. Langan, general manager of the Mignon Feature Film Corporation, is exploiting the Thos. H. Ince $1,000,000 Cinema spectacle in Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, and Missouri. Though comparatively young, Mr. Langan is one of the ablest and most experienced men in the motion picture business, with which he has long been identified in Great Britain, and the United States. The first presentation of "Civilization" was made in St. Louis, Mo., on December 16th.

Michael Resnick (Dispatch Film Company)

Listen to Resnick

Mr. Michael Resnick of the Dispatch Film Company wishes to attest to the circulation of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS in his own original way. He says the story printed in the NEWS last week set his telephone bell ringing with calls from exhibitor friends who wanted to make sure that it was really their favorite "Mike" whom the story was about. He says that he cannot figure out yet whether some were joshing him when they offered to give him odds that another Resnick was meant. It is therefore necessary that Mike be protected against these insinuations by the publication of his photograph. Here it is.

Federal Opens Offices in Atlanta

The Federal Film Company has opened offices in Atlanta in the Moore Building. This company is to handle nothing but special features and state-right pictures.

Paul Engler formerly traveling representative for the Vitagraph Company and recently manager of the Fox Film Company, Atlanta, has taken over the management of the E. & H. Film Distributing Company which has opened offices at 65 Walton street, Atlanta, Ga.

This company is to handle the southern territory for "The Crimson Stain," which was produced by the Consolidated Film Corporation.

Dispatch Announces Campaign for "The Crisis"

Only a few months ago the Dispatch Film Exchange was an unknown quantity in the film business. The offices are at 145 West 45th street, New York. Walter Scheuer is general manager and Michael Resnick, sales manager. Mr. Scheuer announces that he will bring "The Crisis" to the Strand in the middle of January, and "Are Passions Inherited?" goes into the Proctor houses. The Dispatch Exchange further announces that the campaign on "The Crisis" will include fence and railroad advertising throughout the territory.

Biggest War Spectacle of Filmdom Sells Well

"Civilization" territories have now all been sold with the single exception of the South, for which negotiations are in progress. It is an unprecedented result in the history of State rights in the motion picture business. The spectacle was produced in New York City in June last, and in the short space of four months ten separate companies are handling it in various parts of the United States. The picture is being readily disposed of in the South American Republics, and from London the rest of the world will be supplied. Altogether at the present time there are no less than three hundred prints of "Civilization" constantly working. The credit for this result in so short a space of time is due to Mr. J. Parker Read, Jr., general manager of the Harper Film Corporation.

"The Libertine" Goes Over

Since the New York reception tendered John Mason in "The Libertine" at the Park theatre, many applications for time have been received at the offices in the Godfrey Building

It was produced by Julius Steger, under the direction of Joseph A. Golden. F. E. Parker, president of the Mammoth Film Corporation, who has secured the rights to "The Libertine" for this territory, has also recommendations from clergy and press testifying to the merit of the production.

Alma Hanlon supports John Mason, and they are surrounded by a capable cast which revels in settings superb.

Fontenelle Company Growing

The Fontenelle Feature Film Company, just organized, has established an office at 22 Arlington block, Omaha, Neb. Paul La Marquard, head of the Empress theatre of Omaha, is president and manager. The company now owns State rights on "War's Women," "Diana, the Huntress," "The Unwritten Law."

It reports a splendid business. Mr. La Marquard for a time managed the business from his office in the Empress, but found it had grown beyond the proportions of a "side line." GUY LEAVITT.

Champion Will Handle "Civilization" in the South

Territory which has not been invaded by the Thomas H. Ince spectacle "Civilization," is the South. The film is making its way all over the rest of the world, but it has been reserved for the southern states of the U. S. A. to be the last to grasp the opportunity.

E. R. Champion, who is in charge of the picture for the South, has gone to Florida, in which state it will have its first showing. St. Augustine, Miami, Jacksonville, Ormand and Daytona are among the cities where the film will be shown.

Change Title of "Sex Lure"

In order to placate the authorities of New York City, The Ivan Film Company has changed the title of the "Sex Lure" to "The Girl Who Did Not Care."

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Much Activity Among Atlanta Exchange Men

Lynch Enterprises Give Up Contract in Atlanta—Allison Once More Holds Reins at Pathe Office

GEORGE R. ALLISON, one of the best known motion picture distributors in the Southern States, announces his withdrawal from the managership of the Atlanta branch of the International Film Service, to assume a similar position with Pathe.

He is one of the pioneer film men in the exchanges of the city. Going South in 1913 he opened the first exclusive service branch for the General Film Company at that time. The next year he went with Pathe, establishing the Atlanta branch of that concern. In February of the present year he opened the International branch office in that city, and has been Southern manager ever since. His new move takes him back to his old quarters with Pathe.

The S. A. Lynch Enterprises have given up their contract whereby the World Film Corporation, of New York, has assumed control of the World's business in Atlanta, Ga., which office distributes the World-Brady-Made picture in the Southern States.

Sam Dembo, who has been in the employ of the World for several years, and who at one time was manager of the Atlanta branch for this corporation before his transfer to Detroit, has again been placed in charge of the Atlanta branch to succeed J. L. Marentette.

J. L. Marentette, one of the most popular moving picture branch managers in the South and treasurer of the Atlanta Screen Club, has accepted the management of the Atlanta branch for the Triangle.

Mr. Marentette has been in the picture business ever since pictures were first placed on the market, being at one time in the employ of the General, Universal and the World in the capacity of manager.

His friends number many among the exhibitors, and they will, no doubt, be glad to hear of his change.

A. C. Bromberg, pioneer moving picture man, has taken charge of the Atlanta branch of the International Film Service, succeeding George Allison.

Mr. Bromberg will occupy the present offices of the International on the second floor of the Hirsch Building. The first big release of the International through his management will be "Patria," in which Mrs. Vernon Castle stars.

Mr. Bromberg started in the moving picture business even before there were any American productions. On his entrance there were only the old French pictures, for which the people used to pay their nickels to see several subjects on one split-reel. He was with the Mutual for a number of years, and has been with the Triangle since its organization. He has been in the distribution end at Atlanta for the last six years.

John L. Day, Jr., who has been in the employ of the Fox Film Corporation in the capacity of manager at the Buenos Aires, S. A., office, has been transferred to the Atlanta branch of the same corporation in the capacity of special salesman, traveling the East and West coasts of Florida assisting in the booking of the New Fox comedies and special releases.

George R. Allison, The Exhibitor's Friend, Pathe Atlanta Manager

James Wilbanks, formerly in the employ of the International Film Service, has accepted a position as an assistant to Mr. George Allison, manager of the Pathe office.

Mr. Wilbanks has been in the picture business for several years, once working for Pathe in the capacity of assistant manager, to which position he has returned.

R. W. Coulter, salesman for the Fox Film Company, Atlanta branch, has been transferred to the New Orleans office in the same capacity for the corporation.

J. R. MacEachron, Jr.

New Manager for K.-E.-S.-E. Branch

B. M. Moran, who has been traveling through the West and Northwest as a special representative of George Kleine, has been assigned as Manager to the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay New Orleans Branch, where, until Monday, Dec. 18th, J. C. Ragland was in charge.

Mr. Moran is expected to stimulate greatly the business at the New Orleans Branch.

Mutual Closes Exchange in Harrisburg

Hunter Bennett, sales manager of the Mutual Film Corporation of Philadelphia, visited Harrisburg, Pa., recently to superintend the removal of that company's branch exchange, located at Fifth and Strawberry Streets, back to Philadelphia. There will be no branch exchange in that city hereafter.

Charles Campbell, who was in charge of the Harrisburg exchange of the Mutual, has been transferred to the Philadelphia office and will work out from there over the Central Pennsylvania territory. The reason given for the abandonment of the Harrisburg exchange is that with the Mutual devoting its energies more extensively to the distribution of features, the work can be carried on to better advantage from the Philadelphia office. While here Mr. Bennett was the guest of honor at a small dinner given by Peter Magaro, manager of the Regent theatre.

Tinsley Leaves Artcraft in Kansas City

G. W. Tinsley has resigned his position as salesman for the Artcraft Film branch at Kansas City to go to South America. Mr. Tinsley is an engineer by profession, and he goes to South America for the International Portland Cement Co., with whom he was connected before entering the film business.

H. H. Young, who handles Star productions and Charles Chaplin productions in Kansas and Missouri for the Mutual Film service at Kansas City, has just completed a tour of the territory and reports excellent conditions.

Traynham with Artcraft in Atlanta

F. A. Traynham, formerly booking clerk for the Paramount Company, has joined the force of the Arcraft Pictures Corporation in the same capacity, at Atlanta.

R. H. Logan, special representative of the Metro Company, New York, was in Atlanta last week, visiting C. E. Buchanan, the manager for the company.

Kress in Northwest for Mutual

Tom Kress, formerly special representative of the Kriterion Film Service and the World Film corporations in Chicago and Kansas City, has been appointed road representative of the Mutual Film corporation in the Northwest, with headquarters in Minneapolis.

Smith Stops in Cleveland

M. E. Smith, advertising manager and special representative of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Company, stopped off in Cleveland recently to look over the situation in that city.

Minneapolis Exchange Bought by Paramount

Paramount Pictures Corporation purchased during the past week, from Bert Barnett, the Famous Players Star Feature Film Service, distributors of Paramount Pictures in Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, which exchange in the future will be operated by Paramount in connection with the other Middle West Exchanges, of which James Steele, treasurer of Paramount, is president.

Prior to the purchase of the Minneapolis Exchange by Paramount, it has been operated for many years privately by Mr. Barnett. In that territory Paramount is exhibited each week in hundreds of theatres and some of their livest exhibitors are in that section. With the acquisition of this Exchange by Paramount, a campaign of advertising and publicity will immediately be inaugurated in the territory, to better acquaint the public of that section with Paramount pictures.

De Luxe Will Open Branch in Los Angeles

The DeLuxe Film-Lasky Corporation which has its main office at San Francisco for the handling of Art Drama features in California, Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico, is to have a Los Angeles branch, Mark M. Leichter, general manager, having spent a portion of the past week in Los Angeles selecting suitable offices. The company has booked the Frohman production "The Conquest of Canaan," to be shown this month at Superba theatre, Los Angeles.

Gilman Is in Charge of Paramount Exchange

F. H. Gilman, who has been connected for a number of years with the Twenty-third Street, New York, office of the Famous Players exchange, distributors of Paramount Pictures in New Jersey, Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia, has been promoted to the position of manager, succeeding W. F. Seymour, who recently resigned. Mr. Gilman is well known among the exhibitors in this district.

The Twenty-third Street, New York, exchange recently established a publicity department, which will now be in charge of C. J. Haggerty.

Novel Advertising by Unicorn Manager

C. M. Christenson, the Cleveland manager of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, has evolved a novel method of advertising the "Jimmie Dale Serial." He writes that he is sending out postal cards to Cleveland exhibitors written in longhand, and reminding them of something that happened long ago, and signing the postal card "Jimmie Dale." One exhibitor, for instance, received a card stating that he owed another exhibitor five dollars and asking him to pay it, that Jimmie Dale would pay it back on December 11.

This novel way of advertising created a great deal of comment among the exhibitors, and has resulted in a tidal wave of business for the Cleveland branch.

Growth of Business Keeps Coast Exchangemen Hustling

ALTHOUGH the Warner Film Attractions has not definitely concluded arrangements for presenting "The Crisis" in any downtown theatre in San Francisco, it is anticipated that it will be shown about the first of the year. A billboard campaign has already been started, and this has aroused the interest of theatre owners and the public alike. A branch exchange will be opened at an early date at Los Angeles, and this will be in charge of S. L. Warner, a brother of Jack Warner, whose arrival is expected at any time.

H. L. Knappen, manager of the San Francisco branch of the International Film Service, is very proud of the record of this office, which hangs tenaciously to fourth place among the chain of exchanges maintained throughout the country. He has gathered about him a force of traveling men that he believes to be second to none and these men are getting business where others declare the field to be overcrowded with film men.

R. E. Stebbins, formerly with the Mutual office in this city, but who for the past year has been connected with the producing end of the business at Santa Barbara, spent several days last week in San Francisco, and announced his intention of looking over the film exchange field in New Mexico for an opening.

Sol L. Lesser is rapidly completing plans for releasing "War Brides" and "Civilization" in this territory and has brought J. E. McCormick from Denver to act in the capacity of assistant at the home office. A large line of advertising matter on both of these productions has been prepared.

Manager William J. Citron, of the local branch of the William Fox Film Corporation was visited this week by Carey Wilson, a representative of this concern who has just returned from a trip to Australia. Mr. Wilson advises that he opened four exchanges while away and that there is already a heavy demand for Fox productions in the Antipodes.

A large export business is being done by the Nat A. Magner Company, Pacific Building, San Francisco, the quantities of film being sent to the Orient being larger than is generally supposed. Mr. Magner recently disposed of his rights in this territory to "Neptune's Daughter" to Sol L. Lesser.

Following the return of C. M. Simmons, manager of the San Francisco office of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, District Manager Arthur Kane has left on a trip that will include a visit to each of the branches in the territory West of Denver. He will be absent for several weeks and will return by the way of Seattle.

The California, Arizona and Nevada rights to "It May Be Your Daughter" have been purchased by Charles Klopot, 120 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco.

H. E. Lotz, the newly appointed manager of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., returned a short time ago from a business trip down the San Joaquin Valley to acquaint himself with business conditions in that field and to meet the customers of the firm.

The General Film Exchange now has company in its block on Film Row, as the lower part of Golden Gate avenue is so aptly termed. The Western Poster Company has moved into a building adjoining it on the East and a fine building to be occupied by the Fox Film Corporation is rising nearby.

Rapid progress is being made on the erection of the building in which the Mutual Film Corporation is to have quarters, workmen now being engaged in pouring the concrete for the walls, the steel frame being in place. Manager Stout expresses the belief that it will be possible to be in the new home by the first of March if weather conditions remain favorable.

McClure Engages Partridge to Manage "Sin's" Campaign

McCLURE PICTURES has engaged Joseph Partridge, former special representative for the V-L-S-E New York office, and C. B. Price, formerly general manager in Canada for Mutual, to take charge of the selling campaign for "The Seven Deadly Sins," the series of seven five-reel features that is to be released by Superpictures, Inc., through the Triangle exchanges in January.

Mr. Partridge, with headquarters in New York, will be eastern district manager, in charge of the special salesmen who will work out of the Triangle offices in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Pittsburgh, Detroit, Atlanta, New Orleans and Dallas.

Mr. Price's salesmen will work out of the Triangle offices in Chicago, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Denver, Minneapolis, Seattle, Kansas City, St. Louis and Salt Lake City. Mr. Price's headquarters will be in Chicago.

Ever since the organization of V-L-S-E Mr. Partridge has been with the organization, first as manager of the New York branch and later as special representative. Before joining V-L-S-E, he was for three years with the General Film Company, in charge of Canada and the Pacific Coast. Mr. Price's film experience includes engagements with the General Film and with V-L-S-E.

Both Mr. Partridge and Mr. Price are known to motion picture exhibitors everywhere and they will personally direct the big selling organization that will be behind "The Seven Deadly Sins."

Edgar Moss Made Omaha Exchange Manager

Edgar Moss has been appointed manager of the International's branch in Omaha, which has just been opened.

Mr. Moss has for some time past been connected with the Chicago office of the International as salesman, devoting his time principally to the territory in and about Omaha. His success as a salesman for the International was so pronounced that he was promoted to his present position.

JUST FOR FUN

By Longacre

WE dropped in on Anita Stewart the other day and came away with an ear full of ideas about the star system, good directors, stories and big salaries that made us feel rather condescending toward our pet dime. "Every player," said the fair Anita, as she cracked open a Chinese nut and munched thereupon, "wants to form his or her own company these days. I'll admit the women are hit harder in this way than the men. Every extra's ambition is to head a company bearing his own name. And, well you know, there are only five players big enough to form their own companies." Figure out the other four for yourself.

"THE coming year," she continued, consuming more of the heathen brain food, "you'll see me in some great pictures. Better stories of course. I always want better ones, even though those I've had are better than those I've had before. 'The Girl Phillipa' is really good and I'm glad it's going to be shown at the Rialto, because everything that goes in there is good. Me form my own company? Why should I? It's getting too conventional these days. Almost anyone can do it now. Why not stick to a program and be original."

AH! but an innocent plebian like ourselves can make some terrible breaks. "The subway was crowded coming up," we remarked. "It's quite aggravating to be mashed like potatoes, isn't it?" And then we noticed a look of amazement spread over Anita's countenance. "You know it runs under the ground," we explained, and then trying to get out we got in deeper, "It's worse than riding in a sight-seeing car or on the top of a Fifth Avenue bus on a rainy night, or——" "But, wait," she interrupted, "I've never ridden in any of those things, you know, but I can imagine." For this we have limousines we said to ourselves as the subway guard yelled "Lively there" and a lady jabbed us in the ear.

MARJORIE RAMBEAU, says Terry Ramsaye, doesn't care for grapefruit, or English hot-house grapes, or cherries, nor any such luxuries for breakfast. She just prefers old fashioned prunes. They, we vouch, are a bit better than old-fashioned eggs.

IN view of the controversy regarding the spelling of Nance O'Neil(l)'s last name, we have with considerable effort composed the following verse:

Ramsaye spells it Nance O'Neil,
McClure declares it's Nance O'Neill,
Though sometimes writes it Nance O'Neil.
Tell us, will you, Miss O'Neill,
Tell us how to type O'Neil.

THEDA BARA, the trade will be interested to know, has renewed her contract with William Fox for a period of three years. This may sound awfully nice to the actresses of lesser note but give eye to the stipulations attached to said contract. Miss Bara must not marry within a period of three years, is not to appear in public unless heavily veiled, must not ride in a street car, in the subway, or on the elevated, must not go shopping unless heavily veiled, must not go to her costumer unless her features are entirely covered, must not appear in any theatre for three years, must not take her constitutional by day but by night, must have curtains on her limousine, must not attend Turkish baths (although she can have a private one installed), must not permit any snapshots to be taken of herself, must turn over all photographic negatives of herself to Mr. Fox.

THINK of her hardships. To forego the pleasure of the effete trolley, the luxurious subway, the rythmic elevator, to abandon her favorite Turkish bath for one in her own home. In consideration for her willingness to sacrifice herself thusly. Mr. Fox will send Miss Bara to Egypt in the coming spring where she will work before the camera. Here she will be able to cavort about on the sands and renew her acquaintance with the Sphinx and the Pyramids, her childhood playmates.

SAM SPEDON, known throughout the trade for his many years of association with the Vitagraph company in the capacity of publicity and advertising director, has accepted the position of special representative of the Moving Picture World and commenced activities there this week. The exhibitors of the entire country are well acquainted with Sam, as during the latter part of his period of service with the Vitagraph company he attended their meetings to become thoroughly acquainted with their problems, both national and local.

SECRETARY of War Baker after having seen "Eagle's Wings" described it as being "intensely interesting," "strikingly forceful," "a wonderful picture." At which we announce with considerable pride that the Secretary has instituted something "startlingly original" in descriptive phraseology.

LOUIS J. BECK in announcing the fact that he is doing publicity for Harry T. Morey, adds that he was formerly representative for Marguerite Bertsch, author and director of the great film, "Within the Law." Doubtless Miss Bertsch will be glad to give Bayard Veiller a few hints on play writing.

SPEAKING of recalling bitter memories, Universal has issued a story telling of the goat that devoured the "Robinson Crusoe" script. Desiring to confirm such a valuable report as this we sought the goat for corroboration. He died several seasons since.

What is the matter with the still cameraman? He, collectively speaking, seems to have fallen down on his work recently. Stills are sent in that appear as if they were made from the reel film. A still is all-important for advertising purposes and very often after the persepctive spectator has noticed the posters he will attempt to discover more about the detail of his entertainment and give the stills the celebrated once over. The photographs of this sort that are coming from some of our very best companies these days are poor—even bad. In the first place the printing or the photography is rank, and in the second the scenes selected as subjects for the stills are some of the weakest in the picture. Why not get a big scene and why not get a good one?

LIVE NEWS FROM THE PRODUCERS

Nell Shipman Writes Script for Russell

William Russell's next Mutual-American drama will be a play of Southern life during the reconstruction period, and it is from the pen of Nell Shipman, the well known motion picture actress. The title of the picture is "A Son of Battle," and in it are pictured the hostilities of two families, formerly warmest friends, after the war with the North, in which the menfolk of the households had fought in opposing armies.

"A Son of Battle" will introduce Francelia Billington to Mutual Star Productions. It will be her first drama in support of William Russell since her recent contract with the American.

Hank Mann Directs Also for Fox

Hank Mann, noted motion picture comedian, who has been starring in Foxfilm comedies under the direction of Charles Parrott, will begin a new picture for the Fox forces Christmas week under his own direction.

This adds another comedy company to William Fox's already big organization. At present six companies are at work on Foxfilm comedies.

Mr. Mann is rapidly organizing his new company, although no word as to its personnel has as yet been given out. Four of the Foxfilm comedies have featured the Mann mustache, eyes and feet. These are "Chased Into Love," "The Cloud Puncher," "There's Many a Fool," and one not yet named.

Hank Mann has been featured by several prominent producing companies.

Elaine Ivans Supports McDermott

March MacDermott and Miriam Nesbitt are the featured players in Edison's "The Last Sentence," which will be the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service offering January 1. Prominent in their support is Elaine Ivans. Other well-known players in the cast are Grace Williams, Florence Stover and Raymond McKee.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

William Wright, of Kalem, left for the Pacific Coast last week on a visit to the Los Angeles studios of the company.

Herman J. Garfield, general manager of the Private Feature Film Company, of Cleveland, arrived in town late last week to attend to the marketing of the six-reel feature, "Ignorance."

Douglas Fairbanks, Fine Arts-Triangle star, arrived from Los Angeles last Sunday to take up production in the East. Bennie Zeidman accompanied him, and will in future attend to his publicity.

Mme. Petrova Joins Lasky Players

Emotional Actress, Known on Two Continents for Her Versatility, Will Appear in Picture Released in April

THE Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company has signed Mme. Olga Petrova for a long-term contract. In order to give ample time for the preparation of her first photoplay for the Paramount Program, the release date of her initial appearance under the new management has been set for April.

The staff of the Lasky scenario department, under Hector Turnbull, is already at work on the examination of material for Mme. Petrova, and the announcement of the selection of a number of big theatrical successes and notable literary masterpieces will shortly be made by the concern.

Mme. Petrova will spend one half of each year at the Lasky studio in Hollywood, Cal., and the other half of the year in New York.

The fact that Mme. Petrova and Jesse L. Lasky are now allied on the Paramount Program recalls the fact that it was Mr. Lasky who first introduced the great actress to America. A few years ago, while Mr. Lasky was making his customary trip to Europe in search of new talent for his "Folies Bergeres," he heard of a young girl at the Tivoli in London who had created a sensation by her singing. He attended the performance, was greatly impressed, and proceeded to negotiate with her to make her American debut under his management.

Mme. Petrova proved to be a success at the "Folies," and later supplemented her success there by touring the country under Mr. Lasky's management as a popular headliner.

In serious drama later, Mme. Petrova scored a triumph as Panthea and in "The Revolt," and was one of the most prominent emotional stars on the stage when she decided that even greater opportunities awaited her on the motion picture screen, whither she accordingly drifted.

So the passing of Mme. Petrova under the management of Mr. Lasky is really in the nature of a reunion.

"It is very gratifying to me to again assume managerial responsibility for Mme. Petrova," declared Mr. Lasky in commenting on the fact of her engagement. "Particularly is that true because the singer whom I had the great pleasure of introducing to this country has since developed into a great actress.

"The fact that Mme. Petrova is already under contract with us and that we are not planning to issue her first production on the Paramount Program until April is indicative of the great care and unlimited study which will go into the preparation of her subjects. There is no hurry; we are simply going to apply our resources and the experienced minds of our scenario department to the devising and procuring of the best possible subjects to suit Mme. Petrova's personality and her great dramatic talents.

"There is no doubt that the engagement of Mme. Petrova will meet with the hearty approval of Paramount exhibitors and exchange men all over the country, as their own recommendations also played their part in the transaction. It has been the custom of the Famous Players, Lasky, Morosco and Pallas companies to ask various exhibitors from time to time for suggestions as to their respective productions. It is a noteworthy fact that whenever they were requested to name a star that they would like to see added to the roster, the name of Mme. Petrova was invariably mentioned. It was this corroboration of my own estimate of her wonderful ability that finally led to the opening of negotiations which have led to such a happy conclusion."

Ovey Again in Cubs for Mutual

George Ovey in Cub comedies will reappear among Mutual short feature releases. President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation and David Horsley, manufacturer of Cub brand comedies, closed a contract at a conference held at the Mutual's Chicago offices last week.

Ovey is making a series of one-reel comedies of the type in which he gained his popularity with the Mutual. The first to be released is entitled "Jerry's Double Header," which will be offered to exhibitors on January 4.

Novel Laugh-making Effects in Fox Comedies

"IN the Foxfilm comedies, brand new methods of laugh production have been resorted to," says an official of the company. "Camera tricks, mechanical effects and disregard for life and limb on an unusual scale characterize every one of the forthcoming fifty-two releases.

"Here are a few examples of screen comedy of the modern school selected at random. Thousands of gallons of water are released from a broken gravity tank on the roof of a hotel and sweep like a young Niagara down through the building and out into the street. There is no question as to the volume of water or power of current. Every piece of furniture and every human being in the six sets that are wrecked is swept along in the rush of water. The carrying away of a huge banquet table at which are seated fifty guests in evening clothes, comes as the startling climax. Property destroyed in obtaining this one effect represents thousands of dollars.

"In another picture an entire village is submerged by a cloudburst. A hundred or more dwelling houses and business places are inundated, the water in the streets extending to the roofs of the structures. It is no miniature set. The main village street with all its activities is shown close-up. Then the cloudburst begins. Water accumulates in the gutters, backs up over the sidewalks and gradually rises to the roofs as the villagers climb higher and higher for safety. The cost of this effect in dollars and cents is equal to an amount large enough to produce an ordinary two-reel comedy.

"Another early release features a unique race effect. The leading comedian in the guise of a Marathon runner is shown passing a bird in full flight and an automobile traveling at a high rate of speed.

"In a big chase a gang of crooks on a handcar is pursued by officers on a locomotive, motorcycle, automobile and police launch. All are shown in action at once. The climax comes when the crooks, deserting the handcar, board an electric engine which tears its way through a courthouse wall and into a courtroom. Several retakes were necessary for this scene. Once the engine got beyond control of the motorman and wrecked three other sets in which players were at work.

"These are just a few of the remarkable effects shown in Foxfilm comedies and Mr. Fox intends that all future comedy releases will contain features equally distinctive."

Russian Atmosphere in Selznick Release

In the first release of the Selznick Company of a Norma Talmadge production the Russian atmosphere abounds. Allen Dwan, who directed the Fine Arts-Triangle at the same time Miss Talmadge starred there, produced the latest, which is named for the principal character, Panthea.

Irene Howley in a Metro

Irene Howley will appear as co-star with Lionel Barrymore in his forthcoming Metro-Rolfe production, "Making Good," from the pen of Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf.

"Pictograph" Future Promising—Past Performances Please

ELABORATE plans are being devised by the Paramount Pictures Corporation to cover a much wider field with Pictographs than heretofore, so popular has proven this magazine-on-the-screen. Many subjects to gauge the public demand for variety, amusement and originality have been treated and the most popular are to be retained and vastly augmented.

Foremost among the subjects found in the early releases and which was indicative of the scope and value of the "magazine" were films showing the inadequacy of all branches of the United States Army and Navy, particularly as they came at the time when the great war in Europe was being waged.

Another distinct innovation was the presenting of psychological facts in a visualized form, proving that no man need necessarily be a square peg in a round hole. Professor Hugo Munsterberg of Harvard University, after years of research was the originator of this series which proved immensely popular.

Scientific subjects, too, have been treated in so simple a manner, as to eliminate the otherwise abstruse features and presented the subjects so clearly that all may understand.

Each of the releases have been gently sprinkled with the oil of humor, contributed by such cartoonists as Fontaine Fox, C. S. Briggs and J. R. Bray, under the screen title of "Men Who Make Us Laugh."

Another interesting feature was shown under the title of "Remarkable Hands," when there were pictured the hands and samples of the work of nationally famous painters, ivory carvers, diamond cutters, pianists, violinists, sculptors, magicians and many others whose skill lies mainly in the delicacy of their "touch."

A nation-wide campaign was conducted also along the lines of "Better Babies," in which the Paramount Corporation cooperated with the Woman's Home Companion, women's clubs, civic and government organizations and were invaluable from the viewpoint of eugenics.

Industry, art, national history, sports and microscopic photography, too, have been given attention. So diversified has been their program, but from present indications all past achievements are to be totally eclipsed during the forthcoming year.

Tribune Invites 2,000 Kiddies to See "Snow White"

The New York Tribune has chosen the Famous Players adaptation of "Snow White," in which Marguerite Clark is the star, as the special photoplay attraction which it will invite 2,000 orphans to witness, as its guests, at the Strand theatre on Friday, December 29.

The decision of The Tribune to choose "Snow White" as the feature of its entertainment for the kiddies is due to the fact that the screen version of the Grimm fairy tale is ideally suited to the task of bringing infinite delight to the hearts of these homeless little folk, as indeed it has charmed people of every age and station in life.

It was in recognition of the fact that Christmas week is children's week the world over that the Famous Players designated Christmas Day as the date on which "Snow White" should be released on the Paramount Program. The Tribune, responding to the spirit which prompted the producers in their selection of the date, seized the opportunity thus afforded by the appearance of the picture at the Strand theatre, to give this holiday treat to the orphans of New York City.

Brenon a Vaudeville Producer

Herbert Brenon has set out to capture a wreath in another field. With his "War Brides" still running at the Broadway theatre, he is taking time to produce what promises to be one of the big vaudeville novelties of the year, reintroducing the popular dancer Mlle. Dazie, who has not been seen on Broadway for many—too many—months.

Rehearsals already have begun on this new act, which is entitled "The Garden of Punchinello." It is a story told in pantomime and dance, with the aid of music, after the fashion of the popular "Pierrot the Prodigal." It is by no means an imitation of that successful show, however, for its authors, Kendall Banning, who wrote the libretto, and Harvey W. Loomis, who composed the music, completed it a considerable time ago.

Kalem Will Erect Enclosed Studio

William Wright Leaves for California with Plans for Structure—More "Frisco" Releases Next Year

SAFELY packed away in the suitcase carried by William Wright, of the Kalem Company, when he left last week for California, were the plans for a new indoor studio to be erected immediately in Glendale.

It will be equipped with the very latest illuminating devices and will provide room for several companies to work at the same time. The new glass-topped studio will triple Kalem's producing capacity and it will also guard against any delays that might be caused by California's freakish weather; the outdoor studios will also be used but they are only practicable when the sun shines.

Immediately upon his arrival, Mr. Wright will call a conference of the Coast staff to determine upon the number of new companies and their personnel that are to be set to work upon one and two-reel dramas, comedies and series pictures. Kalem's experience with one and two-part series pictures indicates that more and more attention will be paid to releases of this kind.

It is certain that "The Girl from 'Frisco" series will be continued indefinitely. Frederick R. Bechdolt, famous author, has been engaged specially to prepare an indefinite number of additional episodes. Bechdolt has made his reputation as a short-story writer by his contributions to the Saturday Evening Post, Collier's, the Red Book, and many others.

Kalem's 1917 policy, as announced, calls for nothing over two reels in length. Its determination to stick to the short-length pictures that are the logical kind for the smaller theatres to exhibit, is also based upon carefully tabulated statistics which prove, to Kalem's satisfaction, that one and two reel features are as necessary to the industry as films of greater length.

Another important bit of Kalem news is its decision to proceed at once with a new "Stingaree" series, written by E. W. Hornung, that will feature the popular True Boardman, who portrayed the Australian bushranger in the original series. This calls for a new leading man to play opposite Marin Sais in "The Girl from 'Frisco" releases. That he will be a screen player of prominence is promised, but his name is temporarily withheld.

Mr. Hornung's further adventures of "Stingaree" are now in the hands of Phil Lang, Kalem's scenario chief, who is now making his headquarters in Glendale. Lang is most enthusiastic over them, and says that their freshness and novelty will win new friends for the author, star, director and company.

During this year the Kalem Company will continue its policy of gradual expansion as conditions warrant increases in its producing units. Under the new plan adopted by the General Film Company, that of putting the manufacturers whose releases make up its program upon a percentage basis, an unusual incentive is offered to create a country-wide demand for Kalem subjects.

In this connection, Kalem will enlarge its advertising appropriation for a direct-by-mail campaign to reach exhibitors, and the public.

Warde at Work in "Vicar of Wakefield"

Frederick Warde, Thanhouser star, is now in the first scenes of a modern photodrama, following the completion of "The Vicar of Wakefield," a version of Goldsmith's classic novel which is to be released through Pathe exchanges in March. The new play is by Lloyd Lonergan.

"The part in the modern story is so big, and so timely, and furnishes so adequate an opportunity for Mr. Warde's gifts, that it was decided to interrupt his classic series," said Edwin Thanhouser, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation.

Mr. Warde's Thanhouser series has included "Silas Marner," "King Lear," and "The Vicar of Wakefield."

Pathe Buys Rights to the "Double Cross"

Willets Novel Is First Purchased for Use as a Serial—Sufficient Action for Thirty Reels

TO Gilson Willets goes the distinction of being the author of the first novel that has ever been purchased for the purpose of being made into a motion picture serial. Pathe has bought the rights to his "The Double Cross," which is the only novel that up to this time has been deemed by a producer to contain sufficient action to make thirty or forty reels.

After its first appearance in book form "The Double Cross" was purchased by the Hearst organization for serial newspaper publication and was published in all the Hearst newspapers throughout the Union. Later another syndicate of first-class newspapers also published it.

Edwin Markham, the author of "The Man With the Hoe" and "The Literary Critic" for the New York American, reviewed "The Double Cross" as "by far the greatest American mystery story ever written." The Seattle Times offered a prize of $2,000 for the best analysis of the reasoning upon which the mystery in the story rested. This prize was won by a professor in one of the Northwestern universities.

Besides "The Double Cross," Mr. Willets is the author of twenty other books. His latest novel, "The First Law," a story of London society, was recently adapted for a stage drama by Charles Carver. At its "tryout" at New Haven, Conn., it was viewed with favor and will be produced in New York in 1917. Among his other books are: "His Neighbor's Wife," "Anita, the Cuban Spy," "The Workers of a Nation" (two volumes), "The Rulers of the World," "The Inside History of the White House," and others. "Anita, the Cuban Spy," reached a sale of 250,000 copies. In addition to his books, Mr. Willets was for years a prolific magazine writer and is the author of fully one thousand magazine articles.

In the photoplay world Mr. Willets is well known, as he wrote the first motion picture serial, "The Adventures of Kathlyn." Other special features include "The Thundering Herd," "The Lily of the Valley," "I Am Glad My Boy Grew Up to be a Soldier," "I Hear Her Calling Me," and others equally well known.

His literary life began when he was only nineteen and at twenty-one he published his first book. He then became editor of Current Literature. For twenty years he traveled in all parts of the world in search of literary material.

Apollo Takes Old Solax Studio

Apollo Pictures, Inc., has taken over the U. S. Amusement Corporation studio at Fort Lee, N. J. The property was formerly known as the Solax Studio. It has been enlarged by the addition of a new glass structure, 100 by 250 feet. Harry R. Raver, president of Apollo Pictures, Inc., completed the arrangements for the use of the studio and all its facilities with Herbert Blache, head of the U. S. Amusement Corporation, the term of the lease being five years with renewal privileges. This gives Apollo Pictures ample equipment for staging productions.

International Starts Third Year with Bright Promise

THE current month marks the entrance of the International upon its third year of active participation in the moving picture industry. It was incorporated on December 3, 1914, following the success attending the production of "The Perils of Pauline." Its growth has been phenomenal, and it stands today at the beginning of its third year in the front rank of producing and distributing companies. The International quickly outgrew the original offices on Fifty-ninth street and now occupies two entire floors at the top of the new Godfrey Building, at Seventh avenue and Forty-ninth street. It has fifteen branches in the United States, besides a number of agencies through which the work of distribution is done effectively and expeditiously.

The list of achievements by this company in the two years of its existence is a notable one. Besides the "Perils of Pauline," it sponsored "The Exploits of Elaine," "The Goddess" and the "Adventures of Wallingford." Early in the present year, it went more extensively into the business of producing and distributing with the serials, "The Mysteries of Myra" and "Beatrice Fairfax." In addition to these, it has ready for release on January 1, the spectacular patriotic photoplay "Patria" by Louis Joseph Vance, with the world-renowned Mrs. Vernon Castle in the title role.

The International has also recently released three Golden Eagle Features, "Jaffery," "The Flower of Faith" and "The Ocean Waif," all of which are playing.

Officials of the company state that they also purpose to release at stated intervals a series of "adventure" photoplays, the first of which was "The Jockey of Death."

The news-reels formerly released by Hearst Selig, now appear under the name of the "Hearst International News Pictorial," and are released twice each week.

In addition to all this the International releases each week what it calls a split-reel, containing a scenic or an educational feature and a cartoon by one of a staff of artists. Some of these, whose work in animated form is controlled exclusively by the International, are Tom Powers, F. Opper, George McManus, James Swinnerton, George Herriman and Walt Hoban.

Showing of Arctic Pictures Set for December 29 or Earlier

A private showing of Christian Leden's arctic pictures was given on Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, December 26. Mr. Leden, who has only recently returned from the northern regions with his pictures and lecturing data, was present and spoke on the Eskimo and his art, religion, hunting, and marriage ceremonies. The pictures will be shown at Carnegie Hall, New York, subsequent to December 29 in behalf of the Permanent Blind Relief War Fund.

Burns Helps in Detective Work for "Argyle Case"

After several successful seasons of the stage with Robert Hilliard starring, "The Argyle Case" has come to Robert Warwick for screen glory. Under the direction of Ralph Ince, the Selznick studio in New York is in the throes of detective work supervised by William J. Burns himself.

Mr. Burns collaborated with Harvey J. O'Higgins and Harriet Ford in the original construction of the drama. In aiding the Selznick people to film it now, he does much to explain the dictograph, finger print system, and other aids to crime suppression with which neither Warwick nor his fellow actors were familiar.

Elaine Hammerstein (granddaughter of the famous Oscar) plays the leading feminine role, and is supported by H. Cooper Cliffe, Charles Hines, Frank McGlynn, Arthur Albertson, Gazelle Marche, Frank Evans, John Fleming, Mary Alden and Robert Vivian.

Special Music for "Pride of the Clan"

Care is being devoted to the musical settings of the new Mary Pickford production, "The Pride of the Clan," to be released by Artcraft on January 8. For this work the Artcraft Pictures Corporation has secured the services of William C. Stickles of the firm of George W. Boynon, Inc. Mr. Stickles and his associates are pioneers in preparation of musical scores for motion pictures and have turned out eighty-five orchestra scores for screen productions during the past year.

One of the features of the musical accompaniment for "The Pride of the Clan" will be displayed in the fact that the entire score can be presented as a piano solo.

Frank Jonasson Marries a Portland, Oregon, Beauty

Frank Jonasson, of Kalem's Glendale Players, has forsaken his bachelor ways for the life of a mere married man. Jonasson, who portrays Ace Brent, the father of the Girl from Frisco in Kalem's series of that name, was quietly wed on December 9 to Miss Jessie Alice Nash of Portland, Ore.

Mr. Savage Speaks Sanely of Sanity on the Screen

"AMONG the bewares that I would compile for motion picture producers," said Henry W. Savage, whose five-part photoplay, "Robinson Crusoe," is now released, "is beware of the backups.

"By these I mean the long, tedious flashbacks, which not only hinder the action of the picture, but seem to me to be an insult to the intelligence of the audience. For instance, we progress to the exciting point at which the heroine is in the power of the villain. The hero, who up to this time has been busily engaged watching the stock market, is warned by some unseen power that his sweetheart is in danger. We see him close his desk, shut the office door, descend in the elevator, go through the revolving door, board a taxi or a street car, according to the condition of the stock market and the strength of his belief in the imminence of Mary's danger, ride from Wall street to a hundred and sixteenth, walk to Mary's apartment house, ride up in the elevator or ascend flight after flight of stairs, according to Mary's station in life, ring the bell, etc.

"All this time Mary's throat has been at the tender mercy of the villain's thumbs. It is all very well to aim at realism, but not to the point of tediousness. No one cares how the hero arrives as long as his entrance is timed for the proper moment. If the writer of fiction or plays were as particular as some motion picture directors in telling the reader or the audience just how each character is conveyed from place to place, for all of us but Methuselah life would be but one grand sweet story or place, as the case may be.

"The same thing holds true of the indiscriminate use of visions. Every time the heroine looks sad she is thinking of some painful event of her childhood—but why inflict this pain upon the audience by flashing that distressing scene again and again? Jane registers sadness and after the first time we can account for that sadness. Therefore let the picture precede.

"A third instance of this is the photoplay told as a story by one of the principal characters. As soon as the story reaches a certain point of interest it is interrupted by a flash of the narrator in exactly the same position he was in at the beginning of the picture, as if the director is trying his best to impress upon us that it is not really a piece of life after all but just a picture story.

"But, of course, Robinson Crusoe was not troubled by taxis or trolley cars, and I took particular pains to see that he was not visionary."

Billie Ritchie Is with Foxfilm Comedy Company

BILLIE RITCHIE is now working with the Henry Lehrman company, which is producing Foxfilm Comedies in Los Angeles.

Ritchie was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1877, and has been on the stage and in pictures the greater part of his life. His stage career covers vaudeville and musical comedies. His debut in England was in 1887, wearing a replica of his present attire.

His three sisters appeared with him. He also played the same character in the English pantomime, "Cinderella," with Fred H. Graham, "In an English Music Hall," "A Night on Broadway," "Vanity Fair," "Around the Clock." These acts toured the United States over the Orpheum Circuit. In the character of the young Londoner, Mr. Ritchie created a new style of comedy. It was a combination of unusual facial expression and acrobatic ability, and it had not been seen in the United States up to that time.

In this picture career he follows the same style. Practically all his motion picture work has been done with the L-Ko-Universal Companies for which he appeared in one, two and three-reel farce comedies.

"Enlighten Thy Daughter" in Broadway

The next big feature film to grace a Broadway theatre will be "Enlighten Thy Daughter," an eight-act problem play written and produced by Ivan Abramson. It will open at a Shubert theatre shortly after the new year.

Vitagraph Announces Releases for 6 Months

"Indiscretion" Will Appear on January 1, "Man of Mystery" on the 8th, and "Glory of Yolande" on 15th

VITAGRAPH releases from January 8 to June 18, inclusive, have been announced at Vitagraph-V-L-S-E headquarters, following the new plan for the appearance of stars in rotation formed by Walter Irwin. Commencing in January, Anita Stewart; Earle Williams; Edith Storey, Antonio Moreno and William Duncan; Alice Joyce and Harry Morey; Peggy Hyland and Marc MacDermott; and Lillian Walker and Walter McGrail will appear every sixth week.

This is calculated to be of great value to exhibitors as they then may determine on just what days stars will appear six weeks in advance and can advertise Anita Stewart days, Alice Joyce days, etc. In addition to these there will be three special features, "The Girl Philippa," "The Battle Cry of War" and "Within the Law." Mr. Irwin believes that never before has a company been able to go before exhibitors with such an assured profit-making program. Besides preparing these subjects, reissues have been prepared on "My Official Wife," "A Million Bid" and "The Christian."

The advance schedule of new releases follows:

January 1—"Indiscretion," by William Addison Lathrop, featuring Lillian Walker in a story dedicated to youth and showing the tragedy that lies beyond the wall of convention.

January 8—"The Man of Mystery," by Archibald Clavering Gunter, featuring E. H. Sothern, supported by the popular stage favorite, Charlotte Ives. "The Man of Mystery" is the story of a man who returned from the Valley to live again among those who thought him dead.

January 15—"The Glory of Yolande," by Maybelle Heikes Justice, featuring Anita Stewart in a drama of a girl who chose Siberia and the man she loved to luxury and pretense.

January 22—"Blind Justice," written and produced by and featuring Benjamin Christie.

January 29—"Her Right to Live," written by Paul West, featuring Peggy Hyland and Antonio Moreno, is the story of a child-waif whom Fate has made mother-bird to the fledglings in the family nest.

February 5—"Money Magic" features Edith Storey, Antoio Moreno and William Duncan in the story of a woman's sacrifice on the altar of duty and a man's payment of life itself.

February 12—"Who Shall Cast the First Stone?" by Milton Nobles, featuring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey in a story concerning the mistaken love of a noble woman for a man who leaves her heart an empty shell.

February 19—"Kitty Mackay," the big Broadway stage hit of last year, by Catherine Chisolm Cushing, featuring Lillian Walker in a story that is a "glad" play.

February 26—"The More Excellent Way," from the book of the same title, by Cyrus Townsend Brady, featuring Anita Stewart in a story that deals with a man's duplicity and his escape by the aid of the one he holds most dear.

March 5—"Arsene Lupin," the famous detective play of the same name, by Paul Potter, featuring Earle Williams: the story of a master criminal's regeneration through a woman of his own class.

March 12—"The Grand Duke," by Mabelle Heikes Justice, featuring Peggy Hyland, Marc MacDermott and Bobby Connelly in a story illustrating the resourcefulness of a woman contesting with unscrupulous diplomatic agents of a foreign principality.

March 19—"Aladdin from Broadway," from the book and play of the same name, by Frederick Isham, featuring Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno. It deals with the adventures of a good fellow who wins love and fortune.

March 26—"The Countess," by Adrian Gil Spear, featuring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey, is a story showing the strength of the weak in crises that call for the supreme heights of self-denial.

April 2—"Sally in a Hurry," by A. Van Buren Powell, featuring Lillian Walker in a drama of a lowly girl.

April 9—"Happiness," by Marguerite Bertsch, featuring Anita Stewart, written especially for Miss Stewart.

April 16.—"The Hawk," the famous stage play produced by William Faversham, featuring Earle Williams—the heart tragedy of a man who buries his better self and is redeemed through a woman's love.

April 23—"The Green God," from the book of the same title by Frederick Arnold Kummer, featuring Peggy Hyland and Marc MacDermott; mystery story revolving about the loss of a sacred relic and the murder of the man who stole it.

April 30—"The Captain of the Gray Horse Troop," from Hamlin Garland's famous book of the same name, featuring Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno—the battle of a man for a down-trodden people, aided by a big woman.

May 7—"Northward Ho!" by Harry James Smith, featuring Alice Joyce and Harry Morey—a drama of a man and a woman in the Arctic.

May 14—"Princess of Park Row," by Paul West, featuring Lillian Walker in a romance of a little princess who flees a royal match and is won by a prince of good fellows.

May 21—"Babbette," from the book of the same name, by Berkley Smith, featuring Anita Stewart—the influence of an innocent girl, who saves a criminal from a terrible vengeance.

May 28—"Apartment No. 29," by E. J. Montagne, featuring Earle Williams in a story that proves truth stranger than fiction.

June 4—"The Agony Column," from The Saturday Evening Post serial story by Earl Derr Biggers, featuring Peggy Hyland and Marc MacDermott, in the quest of a wife for a man through a number of astounding mysteries.

June 11—"The Magnificent Meddler," by Lawrence McCloskey, featuring Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno—the struggles of a young man who set honor above love.

Henry Lehrman—Foxfilm Comedies

Lehrman Comedy Soon Ready for Fox

Within a few weeks Henry Lehrman's first comedy for William Fox's Foxfilm brand will be released. Henry Lehrman began work in motion pictures while they were still in their infancy. He himself was not far out of his. He started with the Pathe Company as an extra. Quickly rising to the fore as a comedy actor, he soon proved his value by making suggestions.

His value meanwhile had been recognized by other companies and he soon joined with Mack Sennett in forming the Keystone Company. This partnership lasted about three years. Then Lehrman withdrew and took charge of the Ford Sterling Company which released through Universal. A short time later he formed the L-Ko Company, continuing to release on the Universal program. With this company he remained until his recent arrangement with William Fox.

He has been instrumental in developing some of the greatest comedians on the screen and made famous the Lehrman policemen.

During a brief illness a few months ago, Mr. Lehrman had a projection machine erected above his bed, and every night the work his directors had done that day would be shown him. He would not let a day go by without keeping up with everything which was being done at his studios.

The first comedy which Mr. Lehrman is making for William Fox has a cast headed by himself, Billie Ritchie, Gertrude Selby and Dot Farley. "Montana Kid," the famous comedy dog, is also down among the principals.

Turkeys for "V" Workers

Following its usual custom, the Vitagraph Company presented all its studio employees, from factory workers to stars, with a turkey on the Saturday before Christmas. All the studio force was gathered on one of the stages when the time came for the birds to be handed around. Even Bobby Connelly got a fifteen-pounder.

Series Backed by Big Magazine Publicity

McClure Pictures, Inc., announces this week the details of the campaign of magazine advertising that will be one of the many publicity aids for the exhibitor who books the Seven Deadly Sins, the McClure series of seven five-reel features that is to be released by Superpictures, Inc., through the Triangle exchanges.

The fiction story is now running in The Ladies' World, which has a sworn circulation of more than a million copies each month. Twenty-four other magazines will carry large displays heralding the Seven Deadly Sins. The total sworn circulation of the twenty-five used is 11,421,100 copies.

The magazine advertising campaign will extend over January, February, March and April.

The weeklies in which this series will be advertised are Collier's, Leslie's and Judge.

The monthly periodicals on the list include The Ladies' World, McClure's, Pictorial Review, People's Home Journal, Today's, Metropolitan, Motion Picture Magazine, Motion Picture Classic, Photoplay, Pictureplay, Film Fun, Modern Priscilla, McCall's, Munsey's, Mother's Magazine, Sunset, Argosy, Ainslee's, Popular, Smith's, Vogue and Vanity Fair.

Besides the magazine campaign thousands of lines of advertising will be carried in the daily newspapers throughout the country.

Five Releases from L-Ko

The L-Ko Comedy Company announces as some of its current and coming releases, "On the Trail of the Lonesome Pill," with Phil Dunham; "A Limburger Cyclone," with Dunham and Lucille Hutton; "Heartsick at Sea," with Dan Russell; and "Faking Fakirs," with Dunham and Miss Hutton. A forthcoming Alice Howell feature entitled "Balloonatics" is said to eclipse anything she has done heretofore.

Phil Dunham is a comparatively new comedian; a recent acquisition to the ranks of L-Ko stars. He has a store of original tricks and a tramp makeup that gets him a laugh the minute of introduction. Judging from the way his past performances have been received there is small doubt that within a short time he will be one of the best money-makers of the L-Ko.

Nelson Has New Plans for Canadian Production

A BIG motion picture producing organization, controlled by a man of broad experience in every branch of the production field, and having the most comprehensive plans ever formulated by a Canadian company of this description, is about to be established in Victoria, British Columbia.

The new company is to be called the Dominion Film Corporation, Limited, and succeeds the old Dominion Educational Films, Ltd., whose business it purchased about three months ago. The company has been entirely reorganized, and has been incorporated with a capital stock of $1,000,000. The business will be conducted under a Dominion charter, application for which has just been made. At the head of the Dominion company as president and general manager is J. Arthur Nelson, formerly occupying the same position with the United States Film Corporation, San Diego.

According to a statement just given out in Vancouver by Mr. Nelson, the Dominion Film Corporation will start active production work in Victoria about the first of March, by which time it is expected that a spacious administration building and film laboratory, as well as outdoor stages, will have been completed on the fifteen-acre tract which the company has just acquired in Victoria. A proposition was recently made by Mr. Nelson, backed by many prominent organizations of Victoria, to the Hudson's Bay Company, owners of the land, by the terms of which the picture company undertook to spend ten thousand dollars immediately in clearing and improving the property, and at least one hundred thousand dollars in production work within the next three years, provided that at the end of the time the property should be deeded to the film company without any charges. The proposal has been accepted by the local officials of the Hudson's Bay Company, and it is expected that the erection of the required buildings will be undertaken without delay. The outdoor studio will be used for interiors during the summer months, while a new glass studio will be completed before the bad weather starts in.

The company plans to maintain its own exchanges throughout Canada, and it is understood that the American market has already been contracted for. The films will be released as "Dominion" pictures, and the program will consist of a five-reel feature and a single-reel comedy each week. The producing units will be headed by American stars, with whom Mr. Nelson is at present conducting negotiations; and a force of directors, cameramen and laboratory experts will also be brought from the United States. All assistants in all branches, however, will be engaged in Victoria, and it is expected that a large number of local residents, aside from the "extras" which will be continually required, will thus be given permanent employment.

Mr. Nelson has the citizens of Victoria solidly behind him in the enterprise, and those on the local committee which has been assisting him include representatives of the Board of Trade, Rotary Club, the B. C. Electric Railway, the Automobile Club, the Victoria and Island Development Association, and many of the leading business houses.

Another big proposition to be carried out by the company will consist of an educational and industrial serial covering the whole of Canada. Approval of the plan has been received from a large number of cities throughout the Dominion, and the company will also receive assistance from the various provincial governments.

The offices of the company have recently been moved to the Orpheum Theatre Building in Vancouver.

To the Pure, "Purity" Is Pure

The Masterpiece Film Corporation, handling "Purity" in Pennsylvania, is in receipt of a letter from a minister at Beaver Falls, Pa., complimenting them on the merit of the production. The rector of the Episcopal Church there, Amos Barmister, says in his letter that the picture is "a charming visualization of mythology's expression of the ideal."

"Purity" encountered the usual stumbling block in Pennsylvania in the shape of the State Board, and this unsolicited testimony from a minister is regarded as a distinct tribute to the picture and a direct thrust at the judgment of this body of censors.

Mary Mac Laren is Back with the Bluebirds

Star of "Shoes" Will Appear with Harrison Ford in "The Mysterious Mrs. Musselwhite"

MARY MAC LAREN is coming back to the Bluebird program, after an absence of twenty weeks, to share with Harrison Ford the featured billing in "The Mysterious Mrs. Musselwhite," a production made by Lois Weber. To exhibitors who showed the earlier Bluebirds in which Miss Mac Laren appeared—"Shoes," "Wanted—A Home" and "Saving the Family Name"—the release date, February 5, will be important.

Thomas Edgelow wrote the unusual story from which Lois Weber has made one of her unusual photoplays. Harrison Ford assumed the role originally intended to be played by another actor after much of the production had been made, the change in leading men requiring that the work already finished should be done over again with Mr. Ford in the scenes. Evelyn Selbie will play the title role, impersonating a fortune teller who fixes the plot through her prognostications; Willis Marks, Frank Brownlee, Bertram Grassby and Charles Mailes completing the cast.

The Bluebird for January 29 will be "The Devil's Pay Day" with Franklyn Farnum playing the star part. Leah Baird will make her first and only Bluebird appearance as Mr. Farnum's leading lady in this feature. George Hivley's story was used as the basis of Fred Mynton's scenario and William Worthington directed the company which, besides Mr. Farnum and Miss Baird, includes Charles Lerley, Seymour Hastings, Gertrude Aster and Countess Du Cello.

On January 15 Ella Hall will be featured as the first attraction for Bluebird's second year as a distributing corporation. "Her Soul's Inspiration," based on Harris Anson's story, "Mary, Keep Your Feet Still," will be the title and Richard Ryan, Edward Hearn, Marc Robbins, Marcia Moore and Margaret Whistler will assist Miss Hall in its presentation.

February and March will provide several unusually attractive features on the Bluebird program. Cleo Madison will appear in "The Reward of the Faithless," a Rex Ingram production; Ruth Stonehouse will be the star of "Constantinople by the Sixth," directed by Raymond Wells; Dorothy Phillips will make her regular appearance, featured in "The Wrong Side of Paradise."

Difficulties Encountered in Getting Alaska Pictures

Los Angeles newspaper writers have found Al I. Smith and W. H. Hillis veritable fountains of information concerning Alaska, and have devoted columns of space during the past two weeks to telling of the interesting travels of these two men and their assistant in the making of "Alaska Wonders in Motion," which have been shown for the first time as a series of travelogues at Tally's Broadway theatre, Los Angeles.

Both of these men have experienced the unusual with respect to film producers, for the newspapers have sought them instead of any publicity representatives seeking the newspapers.

The 10,000 feet of film secured in the far north has been cut to five reels, which may be used as four separate travelogues or educational subjects, or the entire film may be shown as a feature which has perfect continuity.

The most recent portion of the film to be assembled is that of the Kodiak bear hunt on Kodiak Islands. The trip to this unfrequented section, where the largest bear in the world is found, was made on the boat Dora, which for thirty-eight years has plied between Seward and Nome. Arriving on the islands, the party spent three days in reaching the bear country, and then thirty days more of intense hardships to obtain the pictures desired.

Time after time scenes of bears were made, but until the elapse of twenty-seven days it was not possible to kill one of the ferocious animals in comparatively close-up range of the camera. The final picture secured shows the bear shot down within a few feet of the lens after a charge of more than a hundred feet straight towards the camera. W. H. Hillis, who has won medals in almost every state in the union, pumped five loads from his thousand dollar rifle into the bear before it rolled over dead a short distance from the camera.

The hide measures twelve feet in length and the track it made in the sand was sixteen inches long. Some years ago a bear measuring fourteen feet was killed, but with the exception of this one instance the one brought down before the Smith camera is believed to be the largest.

Smith Films Company has opened its office at 303 S. Hill street, Los Angeles, from which place they will dispose of rights for the film. J. C. JESSEN.

Trick Photography Honors Claimed for "Faust"

The California Motion Picture Corporation is making claims of world championship honors in the matter of trick photography, basing its title thereto on its latest production, in which Beatriz Michelena is starred as Marguerite in an adaptation from "Faust." The scene which the producers wish to set up as a challenge to all "trick photography" endeavors, was one week in the making. The negative was run seven times through the camera, and there were two fade-ins and fade-outs, as well as a like number of dissolve-ins and dissolve-outs.

Robert Carson, Frank Padilla and John Pender are the camera and laboratory force responsible for "Faust."

Films from N. A. M. P. I.

Films are already coming in for the first issue of the "Annual Review" of the year's great pictures, to be distributed by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry shortly after the first of the year. The first two reels, "Greatest Love Scenes" and "Greatest Fights of the Films" will be assembled at the same time, and will be released through the exchanges of one of the members of the National Association.

Special posters will be prepared, publicity sent out, and the merchandizing of the reels handled in the usual manner. While the "Review" will go out one reel at a time, it will be booked as a "Feature," as the interest already created, and the publicity given it in the daily newspapers of the country, indicate that the "Review" will appeal to the public and to the exhibitors wherever it is spoken of.

"Patria" Makes Hit in Chicago and Pittsburgh

Following the reception given to the International's "Patria," at the Ritz-Carlton, by New York society, Chicago's social set had its opportunity to see the patriotic photoplay at a private showing at the Congress Hotel in the Western city last week. The reception given the drama in Chicago was no less spontaneous than in New York.

More than a thousand persons composed the invited audience. It included consular representatives, prominent members of the bench and bar, bankers, merchants, artists, writers, Army and Navy officers, and the most distinguished leaders of society.

Similar private showings of "Patria" were also given in Pittsburgh last week. One was at the residence of Hay Walkers in Sewickley, the millionaire's suburb of the great industrial city. There were seven guests for dinner, and to view the photoplay afterwards, and all of them were unanimous in their praise of the picture. A trade showing was also given at Pittsburgh at the Moose Temple at which exhibitors from all over the district were present. Members of the National Security League of Pittsburgh, who saw it pronounced "Patria" to be the finest screen drama from a preparedness standpoint ever produced.

Other private showings of "Patria" will be given in Boston on the 18th, and later on in Philadelphia and Washington.

Sloman Is Regular Director for Russell

Edward Sloman, who has directed several of the William Russell Mutual-American pictures and who has just completed production of the sequel to "The Diamond from the Sky," has been appointed Russell's regular director and will hereafter take charge of all this star's pictures. Mr. Sloman is considered one of the best directors in the employ of the Mutual company. He demonstrates his ability in the long heralded closing chapter of the "Diamond from the Sky."

His ability to handle photoplays of sustaining dramatic character, his art of sup- his appreciation of contrasts are in evidence in every scene of this picture. His cast for this episode of the serial included William Russell, Charlotte Burton, Ward McAllister, William Tedmarsh, Orral Humphrey, Rhea Mitchell, Tom Chatterton and little Dodo Newton, who has been the recipient of unqualified praise from Mr. Sloman.

Heaney Is Believer in States Right

John W. Heaney, representing throughout the country the S. A. Lynch Enterprises of the South, is a firm believer in the marketing of feature pictures along states right lines.

"States right is in its own and will hold its own," according to Mr. Heaney, "because there is a better understanding between the independent exchanges and the exhibitor than between exchange men representing a big company and the exhibitor." Mr. Heaney is handling "Tempest and Sunshine" and "Just a Song at Twilight."

Bray Cartoons Have Had Unusual Success

The importance of the animated cartoon as a branch of the moving picture industry can be illustrated by the strides that have been made in recent months of the Bray Studios, Inc., the largest producers of this kind of picture.

Six short years ago this business was started by J. R. Bray in a tiny studio, rigged up in an attic room in a farm house, in Ulster County. With infinite patience and untiring perseverance Mr. Bray managed to produce a series of fairly well animated drawings. The drawback however, from the business standpoint, lay in the fact that the time required was too great to allow of a selling price that would compensate him for his efforts.

N. H. Friend, Bray Studios

Mr. Bray, sure that the idea was a good one, determined to find a way to short-cut the process, and finally evolved a means which brought about the desired result. His process was patented and it is only by the application of these processes that the animated cartoons produced by the Bray Studios have been of such merit.

From the attic room in a farm house, the little business was moved to a studio in New York city. Nearly half of one entire floor in the Neptune Building at 23 E. 26th street, is leased and a score of artists and assistants are engaged now.

With this expansion the Bray Studios found need for some one to take over the business end, in order to make it possible for Mr. Bray to devote his entire time to production. Nathan H. Friend, a brother of Arthur S. Friend, treasurer of the Famous Players Lasky Company, was brought in and installed as business and publicity manager.

Mr. Friend, up to the time of his association with the Bray Studios, was advertising and sales manager of one of the large manufacturing concerns in the East and will, without doubt, be a factor in the moving picture world. He has concluded plans for the further popularization of the Bray Studios' products which he promises will bring dollars to every live exhibitor.

"It is our opinion," said Mr. Friend, "that the public is just as much antagonized by being forced to sit through a half hour or more of poor short reel pictures in order to see the feature, as they are by seeing a poor feature, and the sooner the exhibitor realizes that he can get a steadier custom, through making his whole program uniformly good, the quicker is he going to get a full share of the possible business.

"It is our purpose to cooperate with the theatres in familiarizing the public with the Bray name and quality, and while I am not at this moment privileged to give out details of our plans, yet I can assure you that they are sufficiently startling to make even the often startled moving picture world sit up and take notice."

Edith Ellis Is Latest Goldwyn Playwright

EDITH ELLIS, author of "Mary Jane's Pa" and half a dozen other successful plays produced here and abroad, is the latest celebrity to be announced as one of the literary factors in the new Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, the alliance formed by Samuel Goldfish, Edgar and Archibald Selwyn and Arthur Hopkins.

Miss Ellis is to be the literary adviser and judge of all manuscripts and stories submitted to the producers of Goldwyn Pictures. Working in co-operation with Margaret Mayo and Edgar Selwyn, these three playwrights will insure the quality of Goldwyn pictures.

Edith Ellis made her first ambitious dramatic effort with the three-act farce, "Mrs. B. O'Shaughnessy, Wash Lady," in which George Munroe starred for several seasons. "Mary Jane's Pa" was produced in 1908 with Henry E. Dixey in the role of Hiram Perkins. Later, for two years the role was played by Max Figman.

Among Miss Ellis' activities in the dramatic field in recent years are a dramatization of Tolstoi's "Anna Karenina," an adaptation of Ferencz Herczegh's "Seven Sisters," the production of a musical comedy, "The Charity Game," and the libretto of an operetta, "The Love Wager," in which Fritzi Scheff was starred; the dramatization of E. P. Roe's "He Fell in Love With His Wife," and a three-act light operetta, "The Amethyst Ring."

A chronological list of Miss Ellis' plays follows: "A Batch of Blunders," 1897; "Mrs. B. O'Shaughnessy, Wash Lady," 1900; "Because I Love You," 1903; "The Point of View," 1904; "The Wrong Man," 1905; "Contrary Mary," 1905; "Ben Of Broken Bow," 1905; "Mary Jane's Pa," 1906, but produced in 1908; "He Fell in Love With His Wife," 1910, and "The Man Higher Up," 1912.

Picture Company's Chattels Go

Wednesday last, J. Burton Mustin, as receiver, sold at public auction the negatives, prints, typewriters and other items of assets, the property of the Liberty Motion Picture Company, a Pennsylvania corporation.

Reel Fellows Elect Proctor President

School Inaugurates Film Theatre—F. W. McQuigg Starts "Go-to-the-Movie" Week

THE Reel Fellows' Club, of Chicago, held its first meeting in its new club rooms at 127 West Madison street, last week. At this meeting the annual election of officers took place, and after a very strenuous fight the Progressive ticket won out over the other two. The following officers were elected:

President, Ralph O. Proctor; vice-presidents, Richard C. Travers and M. G. Watkins; secretary, Eugene A. Hamburg; assistant secretary, A. E. Curtis; treasurer, Harry C. Miller; Board of Governors, R. R. Nehls, William J. Sweeney, Don. J. Bell, Fred W. Wild, Jr., and David Russakov.

This was one of the best attended meetings in the history of the club, and much enthusiasm was shown by the members for "Days of '49 Stag," which will be held Saturday night. Under the direction of E. B. Lockwood, the plans to make this affair a landmark in Chicago film circles, are materializing successfully.

Film Theatre in School

Chicago may now boast of the most capacious and best equipped school film theatre in the country.

It is enclosed in the rebuilt Lake View High School, Ashland avenue and Irving Park Boulevard.

One of the features of this school theatre is that it may be shut off, by means of folding doors, from the class rooms.

The first floor of the big assembly room is ninety feet long and seventy wide. There is a gentle decline to a point beyond the center, then a slight rise to the stage. There are one thousand seats on this first floor, and on the one great balcony there are eight hundred more. On the balcony floor is a well-equipped moving picture operating room.

The stage is forty feet wide and twenty deep. At one side is a well-equipped dressing-room, at the other a reception room and entrance to the balcony. Modern fireproof and other curtains have been provided.

"Go-to-Movie" Week in Chicago

Chicago gets the prize Christmas present of the film world. It was presented to that city by the motion picture editor of the Chicago Evening American. It came in the form of "Go-to-Movie Week" from Christmas to New Year's. The following reprint from Rob Reel (Frederick W. McQuigg) explains the gift. This from the Evening American of Dec. 8:

Readers of this column and the general public have made the motion picture industry the fifth largest work in the world. Millions of dollars are spent annually to furnish amusement to the millions of fans. By virtue of the fact that you movie fans are interested in pictures the Chicago Evening American devotes this column daily to news and reviews of the film world.

At this time of year, when the holiday spirit begins to pervade the air, the makers of films are straining every effort to create even better and more instructive dramas and comedies for the public. During Christmas week the industry naturally reaches the topmost peak of artistic production. Leading up to the big holiday week has been a steady move in Chicago toward bigger and better motion picture houses.

What are you motion picture fans going to do to show your appreciation of this wave of bigger and better pictures and theatres? In turn, you ask: "What is the Chicago Evening American going to do?" Or you may even center your query on the writer of this column, and ask: "What are you, Rob Reel, going to do?"

Here is a suggestion for the big newspaper and the whole army of fans. Why not declare for a "GO-TO-MOVIE WEEK?"

Let everybody in Chicago combine to make the week between Christmas and New Year's the biggest motion picture week in the history of the country.

Here is an opportunity to build for the reputation of Chicago.

"GO-TO-MOVIE WEEK" should make this city the most important center of the fifth largest industry of the world. Already the big producers admit Chicago is the logical distribution point.

Let the movie fans decide to attend their favorite motion picture houses as often as possible during "GO-TO-MOVIE WEEK."

Zambreno Comes in Limelight

Chicago has unearthed another business man who has had his fingers in the film business for more than a year, most of the time more or less "under cover." Now that he has come out in the open at the head of a distributing company of his own, a theatre under contract for first showings and a producing organization behind him for the making of his features, he has made himself felt in the trade, and it is likely that soon he will be one of the big men of the industry.

About a year ago, Frank Zambreno became interested, through the offices of William J. Dunn, in the production of motion pictures, most of which were comedies.

A studio was put into operation in Jacksonville, Florida, and Fernandez Perez was brought from Europe to make "Tweedledum Comedies." But when these films were completed one by one the producing company found itself hampered by the lack of a distributing organization.

With his brothers and Mr. Dunn, Frank Zambreno formed the Unity Photoplays Company, opening offices at 207 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, to handle "The Unborn" in Illinois and Wisconsin, and the "Tweedledum Comedies" in the Central West, with M. J. Mintz as manager.

Censorship in New Britain Simmers Down

The question of motion picture regulation has been simmering in Bridgeport and New Britain, Conn., for some time. In Bridgeport there are twenty-seven theatres. One or two films of an unsatisfactory character gave rise to complaints to the city officials. In at least one case the advertising was the cause.

New Britain has an abnormally large alien population. In that city the School Board had complained, declaring the children were attending motion picture shows when they should be in school. Some form of censorship had been proposed.

H. F. Sherwood, assistant secretary of the National Board of Review, visited both cities a few days ago and met the officials. In New Britain he was invited to address an informal meeting of the City Council, which he did.

In Bridgeport it has been decided that the weekly bulletin of the National Board will be utilized by the police department as an impartial basis of action, which will satisfy all interested parties.

In New Britain there was every indication, following Mr. Sherwood's talk, that the same plan would be followed. There will be no legalized censorship in New Britain.

Samuel Roskam Dead

Samuel Roskam, father of Edward M. Roskam, died at his home Wednesday evening, December 13, from a sudden attack of heart disease.

Scenes from "Ignorance," Private Feature Film Company's New Production

Cleveland Becomes Producing Center

It certainly begins to look as though Cleveland will eventually find herself on the film production map. Already two pictures, "Snow White" and "Ignorance," have been filmed in Cleveland, and placed on the market. Now comes "Puss in Boots," made in four reels by the Private Feature and Film Manufacturing Company, producers of "Ignorance," the morality play, starring Earl Metcalfe and Eleanor Black.

"Puss in Boots" has been quietly in the making for many weeks. The picture is now practically completed, and will be released on December 24. All the parts in "Puss in Boots," with the exception of the giant, are played by children, members of M. F. Trostler's dancing classes.

Little Edith Mae Wells is the "Puss in Boots." Vroman Du Fair is the Marquis of Carrabas, Harold Droida the King, and Josephine Ferguson the Queen. Cameraman Frank Jaffe announced that the only scenes remaining to be taken are the animal scenes necessary to transform the wicked giant into his many magical shapes.

Exhibitors of Connecticut to Fight Sunday Laws

Connecticut is in the midst of a fierce campaign to combat the Sunday closing laws, and the exhibitors of the state are back of a big movement to do away with the old "blue" laws, prohibiting the operation of picture theatres on this day. Only a small minority of picture theatres in a few of the large cities of Connecticut are allowed to operate on Sunday, those exhibitors in the smaller towns being constantly menaced by the shadow of the law always brought up by the stand-pats of the towns.

For the purpose of furthering the exhibitors' fight against the law, the Connecticut Liberal Sunday Laws State Journal has been formed, which will contain news of the exhibitors' fight from the time it opens on January 3, 1917, until victory or defeat greets the showmen. A committee appointed to further exhibitors' interests in the State Congress headed by Senator Michael J. Quinn will commence activities when the session is opened on the third of the month.

Censor Fees Still Burden Pennsylvania

Amount Exacted from Film Men Is in Excess of Funds Needed to Maintain Board

FILM producers and manufacturers are still paying into the Treasury of Pennsylvania more than it costs the State to carry on the work of censoring their films. In other words, the amount of money exacted, under the law, from persons submitting films for approval of the censors, is still in excess of the aggregate cost of maintaining the Censorship Board, including the high-priced salaries of censors and their assistants.

This fact is established by analysis of the recent statement issued by the State Board of Censors of the fees collected for the year ended Dec. 1 last. These fees aggregated $45,429, which, together with $5,385 collected from exhibitors in fines for violation of the censorship law, make a total of more than $50,000 collected by the board from the motion picture trade in the year, as compared with $40,000, the State's appropriation to run the board for the same period. The picture trade, in other words, paid $10,000 more than it costs to run the Censorship Bureau for the "privilege" of being compelled to comply with this objectionable act.

This is particularly interesting information for the trade in view of the fact that the 1915 session of the Legislature, when it passed a new censorship law, made provision for a reduction of the fee for examining 1,000 linear feet of film, from the $2.50 exorbitant rate that prevailed under the old law, to one dollar a thousand feet. This concession to the picture industry was obtained from the lawmakers after it was made clear to them that at the old or $2.50 rate, the fees for examining films were running far and away ahead of the actual cost of the work.

It was understood to be the sense of the Legislature that this was an injustice to the trade, and it was for that reason that the fee was reduced. Since it has been demonstrated, however, that even at the lower figure the film men are more than paying the cost of censorship, it is not at all out of the realm of probability that an effort will be made in the session of the Legislature that will start early in the new year, to obtain a further reduction in the fee.

Samuel S. Hutchinson, President of American Film Company, Paying Mrs. Helen O'Keefe, Chicago, Ten Thousand Dollars Prize Money for Best Sequel to "Diamond from the Sky"

Pleading guilty to a charge of violating a borough ordinance when they caused a panic by shouting "fire" in Peter Magaro's Orpheum theatre, nine students, members of the freshman class of Dickinson College, were recently fined twenty-five dollars each. The occurrence had taken place during a freshmen celebration of release from the "8 o'clock law" enforced by the sophomores, under the terms of which freshmen in the early part of the college term must be off the streets at that hour.

So much interest was aroused by the case that President Morgan and Dean Filler, of Dickinson College, appeared personally at the hearing, and pleaded with the Burgess to be lenient with the youths. The magistrate, however, declined to let the accused go under suspended sentence, but imposed the stiff fines mentioned above. At the same time he gave the boys and the whole class a severe reprimand for jeopardizing the lives of the theatre patrons by their reckless actions that night.

Toronto Film Men May Form New Association

Several Prominent Exchangemen and Exhibitors Confer on the Plan—Price Resigns from Mutual

AN exhibitors' and exchange association may be formed in Ontario very shortly. Several prominent exchangemen are said to be interested in the new association, which would tend to increase the usefulness and value of the present existing separate associations of exhibitors and exchangemen. More information is likely to be available very shortly.

Another hotel in Ontario is being changed into a moving picture theatre as a direct result of Prohibition, which came into force lately. This is the old and well-known Commercial Hotel, of Guelph, which is owned by Mr. Reinhardt. The house will be complete in every respect both from projection viewpoint and comfort for the patrons.

The Exchangemen's Association, of Ontario, held a very stormy meeting during the last week, during which many matters of importance to the exchanges were brought up. Censorship fees was one subject which received attention, and although no statement was given out as to what decision was made, it is believed that strong action will be taken henceforth to see that the exchanges receive proper treatment in this respect.

The Exchange Association of Ontario has grown to be remarkably strong, and is already making its strength felt in all film circles.

The Honorable Mr. McGarry refused the plea of a delegation of the Ontario clergy, to have the Mutual picture, "Damaged Goods," shown to the soldiers at Exhibition Camp. This picture has been condemned by the Censor Board and Appeal Board, and Mr. McGarry did not see why it should be shown to any audience whatsoever in the Province.

C. B. Price has resigned from the general managership of the Canadian Mutual Film Company at Toronto, and has taken over the managership of the Super Pictures in the Canadian West. No successor for Mr. Price has been announced as yet, but Mr. Barrett, the local manager, is discharging his duties.

The Regal Films, Limited, the new distributors in Canada for World Pictures, Brady-Made, has announced its offices as at 37 Yonge street, and E. L. Ruddy, who also controls the Regent theatre, Toronto, is the president. The vice-president is J. B. Bickel, while the managing director is N. L. Nathanson. It has been announced that one picture a week will be released, and that exchanges are to be established in St. John, Montreal, Winnipeg, Vancouver and possibly a few other cities.

The Canadian National Features, Limited, headquarters in Toronto, is now in a position to ask for scenarios from Canadian writers for their forthcoming productions and five-reel dramatic subjects, also one-reel comedies. This concern has an authorized capital of $500,000, and is building a studio at Trenton, Ont., which will be completed on February 1. The president is Jerry Shea, while George Brownridge has been made general manager.

The Garden theatre on College street, Toronto, has been sold to the Playhouse and Theatres, Limited, and it is announced that a new house will be built to seat 1,000 persons. Adjoining ground has already been purchased, and the new house will be commenced in the spring. Mr. Taylor, president of the company, which has just bought out this new house, operates the College Playhouse and the Dundas Playhouse.

The universal Film, "Where Are My Children?" has been sent to Halifax for appeal, and Mr. Margetts, the manager in Toronto, says that after showing the film to Government officials, doctors and ministers, it is quite certain that a favorable decision will be gained. Rev. Canon Vernon has expressed himself very favorably in regard to the picture, and states that a stronger sermon could not be preached from the pulpit than this story conveys to the peoples' minds, and he has so expressed himself to the Government officials who reviewed the picture at the appeal.

Les Kauffman, Western representative for the Regal Film Company, Winnipeg, distributor of the Brady-Made pictures, has arrived in the city of Winnipeg, and has opened an office in the Aikins Building. He will begin activities immediately.

Buffalo Ball on 29th

On Monday evening, January 29, the Buffalo, N. Y., Screen Club will hold its second annual ball at the Elmwood Music Hall.

Refreshments: Board of Governors and the president, G. H. Christoffers.

Arrangements are being made to introduce several novel entertainment features during the evening, which will be presented on the stage and in the center of the dance hall.

Bible Film Begins Work in New Mexico

The Bible Film Company, a picture concern recently formed with the purpose of producing a religious spectacle, has entered upon its producing activities at Las Vegas, New Mexico. The company has purchased outright the magnificent Montezuma Hot Springs, of nearly a thousand acres, including the Montezuma Hotel and many smaller buildings, and will use this as its studio site.

The Bible Film Company is the outgrowth of the National Bible Play Society, started in Las Vegas almost a year ago It is dominated by a board composed of clergymen and laymen of various churches. Plans are formed to start work on the pageant during the summer of 1917, while from time to time biblical plays of less pretentiousness will be offered.

The officers of the Bible Film Company are: Dr. A. L. Andrews, a prominent churchman of Fort Worth, Texas; Harry C. Grigsby, vice-president and general manager. Roger Topp, also a prominent business man of Los Angeles, is secretary and treasurer, while Phil H. LeNoir, formerly secretary of the Las Vegas and Albuquerque Chamber of Commerce and later secretary of the New Mexico State Fair, author of a number of photoplays, has the double post of director of publicity and scenario editor.

Picture Inspector Speaks on Censor Hindrances

Corporal Peshon, for many years the representative of the Police Department of San Francisco on the Board of Censorship, and now inspector of moving pictures for that department, recently appeared before the Recreation League of San Francisco and gave a talk on his work. This talk probably differed from what was expected, for the point that he dwelt upon most fully was the fact that the work of judging moving pictures was interfered with, rather than assisted, by the attendance of outsiders at reviews.

He called attention to the prevailing practice of film exchange managers of inviting members of various leagues and improvement clubs, ministers, doctors and other leading citizens to witness reviews of pictures and stated that almost invariably discussions concerning the merits of these commenced in the reviewing room as soon as the end of the picture was reached. Those who were invited to see pictures in advance of the general public naturally felt under some obligation to those who invited them, or were flattered with the honor, with the result that most of them gave more favorable opinions than they would otherwise have expressed. In this way the work of the inspector was declared to be made very difficult and frequently his findings were at variance with those of some of the distinguished invited guests.

Butte Editor Alleges Plagiarism

Charles C. Cohan, associate editor of the Butte, Montana, Miner, recently brought suit against the Pacific Mutual Film Exchange of that city, alleging an infringement of copyright on his musical comedy, "The Runaway Princess," which is also the title of a three-reel Thanhouser picture now being handled by the Pacific Exchange. Cohan's attorney has produced alleged evidence to the effect that the plot of the picture was lifted from the manuscript of his play.

The defense in a court hearing brought in Lewis J. Duncan, writer, to testify to play construction, originality of theme and plot and the like. Federal Judge George M. Bourquin reserved decision.

Cleveland to Judge Two "Snow Whites"

New Mall Theatre Will Be a Double Decker—Sam Bullock Offers to Show "Nation"

Cleveland, O.

THE Motion Picture Operators' Union is to celebrate the New Year with a dance on New Year's Eve. The dance is to be held in Druid Hall, 623 Superior avenue, N. E., and is scheduled to begin at 11.30 p. m. The reason for the late hour is because the operators must furnish the entertainment for photoplay fans before their fun can begin.

There are to be features for the occasion, a serpentine dance with colored spot light effects and other kinds of moonlight dances. At midnight caps and horns are to be given guests.

"Snow-White," in the films, Cleveland made and stamped with the approval of motion picture authorities in New York, was given a private screen at the Stillman theatre last week.

The picture is to be shown at the Stillman in the very near future.

Marguerite Clark will appear in the Famous Players' production of "Snow-White," and it will be interesting to note which film will be adjudged the best.

Judging is going to be a tremendous job, for Cleveland's "Snow-White" produced, under the direction of Eleanor T. Flinn and Mrs. Norma Harrison Thrower, by about 200 well-known Cleveland children, is a beautiful piece of work.

Cleveland's "Snow-White" is now the property of the Educational Films Corporation of America, and is being distributed by state rights.

William Ganson Rose, who has been interested in the success of the picture, said that fourteen prints have been made. They are to be released simultaneously throughout the United States.

"I have received inquiries about the picture from San Francisco and South America," Mr. Rose said. "These inquiries I have sent to the owners of the films."

The picture was made by the Regent Photo Play Company last summer. The scenes, for the most part, were taken on Shaker Heights and in other parts of the city.

The New Mall theatre which opened in Cleveland last week, eventually is to be the only double-decked theatre in the country. This is made possible by the difference in levels between Euclid and Superior avenues.

The theatre was promoted by Joseph Laronge, real estate dealer; Edward P. Strong, attorney, and Louis Becht, who is manager of the house.

Last week the Superior avenue side of the Mall was open to the public with a free day. Both afternoon and evening performances were complimentary to the public, and more than 8,000 people inspected the new theatre. A special program of short film plays and comedies, with organ and orchestra music was arranged.

Floral pieces in baskets and vases, tokens of congratulations to the owners, decorated the foyer and stage. Some of the features of the new theatre include drinking fountains with ice water; an organ with 1,100 pipes, a screen made of gold and silver and three ventilating systems. The interior is decorated in white and gray, and all the lighting is indirect. The seats are gray and upholstered, and the carpets and draperies red.

The New Mall theatre, besides being beautiful and a money maker, is the first illustration in Cleveland of the profitable uses to be made of what ordinarily is waste space.

One notable feature of the new theatre will be a special program for office and store workers at noon.

Sam Bullock, owner of two motion picture theatres, has made an offer to D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," to run the picture in open defiance of the Ohio Board of Censors. If the producers take Mr. Bullock at his word and run the picture, Mr. Bullock is liable for arrest. This would plunge the case into the local courts, and the film would then be tried on its merits by Cleveland judges.

Mr. Bullock says that the picture has been shown elsewhere without disastrous results, and by showing it here he hopes to be among the first to sound the death knell to Ohio censorship.

Parkway, Baltimore, Runs Paramount Films

Calvert Pictures Corporation Is Formed—
Will Begin Work on "Her Movie Romance"

BEGINNING Christmas Day the Parkway theatre, North avenue near Charles, Baltimore, Maryland, will present first run Paramount pictures. There has been no first run Paramount in Baltimore for some time, but a deal has been closed between Bernard Depkin, Jr., manager of the Parkway, and George M. Mann, of Washington, manager for the Paramount program of that territory, by which the pictures will come back to the theatre. The Parkway opened its house about eighteen months ago with Paramount pictures, but discontinued its service during the late summer of this year. The rebooking of these films by the Parkway has aroused wide interest among motion picture followers in Baltimore.

Rose Tapley of the Greater Vitagraph Company is expected to spend Tuesday, December 26, in Baltimore. Miss Tapley will address the audience of this theatre at both the matinee and evening performances. She will choose her own subjects. The visit of the photoplayer to this city was brought about through one of the women's clubs of Baltimore. She will appear before members of this club and will give a talk.

Another Vitagraph player, Kate Price, is expected to visit Baltimore in the near future and will be the guest of Schanze's theatre.

It is expected that the Ker-Mar Pictures Corporation of 301 Garrett Building, of which Dr. A. W. Marchant is president, and Harry Kerber, vice-president and business manager, will engage Eric Cedarberg, cameraman with Viograph and other large companies, for their photographer.

A recently formed motion picture producing concern is the Calvert Pictures Corporation with offices located in Baltimore. Frank P. Donovan is the director.

Lou Marks, Marie Joseph, George Ross, "Fatty" Weithger, Charles Barret and Mortimer Lawrence will be the stars of the pictures. Work is expected to be started shortly on "Her Movie Romance," after which "Raising the Room Rent" will be made. Feature pictures will be produced under the direction of Jerold T. Hevener, formerly with Lubin, World and Pathe.

Better Shows at Higher Prices Offered Detroit

DRASTIC changes are announced by many of Michigan's leading theatres, both as to policy and prices. The changes indicate the development of better shows, for which there necessarily be higher admissions. At the Washington theatre, Detroit, John H. Kunsky is to inaugurate on December 24 a season of dollar attractions, two shows daily, reserved seats for all performances, and prices ranging from 25 cents to $1. First under this policy will be "A Daughter of the Gods," and it will run indefinitely, or just as long as the gross receipts keep up to a certain mark. Then will be shown another Fox production, "The Honor System," which will remain for two to four weeks; then comes "Civilization" for four weeks, at least, following which will come other big film attractions.

The New Madison theatre, which opens in February, at Broadway and Grand Circus Park, Detroit, will show first-run Greater Vitagraph pictures, with prices from 25 to 50 cents.

The Majestic theatre, Detroit, raised its prices a number of weeks ago to 25 and 50 cents, with no seats at less than 25 cents at the evening shows; and now it makes another advance in prices, taking about 500 of the 25-cent seats and making the price 50 cents. If this new plan works out, we would not be at all surprised to see 50 cents as the minimum scale for next season at the Majestic. This theatre plays nightly to a wonderful audience—the best class of people in the city.

Prices at the Liberty theatre, Detroit, have been advanced, so that the new scale is 15 cents at night, with no more 10-cent seats.

The Drury Lane theatre, Detroit, which recently advanced its prices from 10 to 15 cents, is again raising its prices to 15 and 20 cents, and will adopt a scale of 10 and 15 at the matinees.

Pastors Favor Sunday Opening

Exhibitors in Hartford, Conn., have won the co-operation of the pastors of that city in a fight which they propose to make at the next session of the State legislature, opening January 1, for a law permitting them to show pictures on Sundays. Recently the showmen and clergymen had a get-together luncheon, at which they discussed the advisability of having Sunday performances, the nature of pictures which should be shown, etc. A temporary draft of a bill to be presented to the general assembly was prepared.

To have won the church over to their cause is considered by moving picture men there a great achievement, since the pastors have always been bitterly opposed to Sunday performances. Now they have not only convinced the clergy that they should no longer oppose Sunday shows, but have actually secured their promise of aid in bringing about the desired result. The bill which it is hoped to pass is said to be a liberal one.

New Haven pastors are also in favor of Sunday performances, but have taken no steps to bring them about. Exhibitors in New Haven have been considering the Sunday situation for a long time, and have frequently started out to seek favorable legislation, but have just as frequently abandoned their task at times when they seemed in a fair way of attaining their goal. The trouble appears to lie in the fact that the New Haven exhibitors are unable to work together, and are inclined to let matters drift. New Haven is the only city in the State which does not have moving picture entertainments on Sunday nights, others being permitted by the police and mayor to hold exhibitions in the name of "charity."

Stockton, Cal., Mayor Urges Censorship

Mayor A. C. Oullahan, of Stockton, Cal., recently addressed a message to the City Council urging that steps be taken at once to adopt measures for the censoring of moving pictures. He suggested that the Chief of Police be made the official censor with power to prohibit the exhibition of improper productions. At present, he pointed out, the city is powerless to prevent the showing of pictures which "made a bid to salacity and are offensive."

"Joan the Woman"

(Jesse L. Lasky—Ten Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE producers have accomplished in "Joan the Woman" that which many have striven for and few achieved since the day of the first two dollar attraction; a combination of the human interest and spectacular, so intelligently welded as to give complete satisfaction and to be fully worthy its classification as a high grade piece of theatrical entertainment offered at corresponding prices. "Joan the Woman" is sweeping in its effect. As you sit in your chair you are alternately swayed by the grim struggle of battle, the thrill of conquest, the tragedy of the unjust death meeted out to Joan of France. But through it all, because of the magnificent inspirational performance of Geraldine Farrar, you feel inspired yourself. It is because of Miss Farrar as the Heaven-sent Joan, that the picture possesses such remarkable balance. The first half of the picture runs to the spectacular, the second gives you the tragic downfall of Joan. After the thrills and sensations of the battle to switch to a story of personal interest is a difficult test to apply to even the most accomplished star. Miss Farrar rises to the occasion triumphantly and in truth saves the picture from being top heavy.

Eric Begs Joan to Marry Him and Leave France

"Joan the Woman" is a triumph for Geraldine Farrar, but equally as much is it a triumph for Cecil De Mille, its producer. Through his long picture he has interpolated the personal and the spectacular veins of interest with the fine result of dramatic contrast. The first half of the picture closes after the battle of Orleans has been waged with all the fierceness of reality between the French on the one side and the Burgundians and the English on the other. Here Mr. De Mille has spread his work to every nook and corner of the immense field covered by the camra. The battle begins with a sweeping charge of the French led by Joan across the picket works of the English up to the very walls of the castle.

A horse turns a sommersault and catapults its rider, a warrior clad in chain and armor into the very ranks of the enemy. At the walls the invading horde is met with rocks and arrows and spears and hatchets from the defending English. Whole bridges of men give way to the muddy mote below. The soldiers drop from the walls above to fall into a veritable mess of struggling men and horses. And then at last a French soldier climbs to the top of the tower and catches the standard of the Burgundians and falls with it to the ground. In another instant the flag of the King of France is run up. It is the triumph of Joan—the beginning of the end.

And then comes Joan's capture by the enemy, her trial conducted by the villainous Pierre Cauchon, her conviction and her death at the burning stake. While Joan spends her last night in the cell, Charles, King of France, because of Joan, wastes his time in revelry. In the morning he is told of Joan's impending death. And he takes the jester's stick mounted with a fool's head and crushes it in his hands. There is a real touch. And so the Saviour of France comes to her end. In the crowd is the man who loved her, an English captain who betrayed her to her enemies despite his love. Jeanie MacPherson, who prepared the scenario, introduced the love story basing its incidents on the plays of the French and the German. Its presence adds much to the tragedy of Joan's life. Incidentally Miss MacPherson worked out a wonderful script for "Joan the Woman." It tells the life of the maid of Orleans clearly and distinctly. He must not be familiar with French history to appreciate the picture. And while she has left nothing untold that must of necessity be inserted for charity's sake, she has not loaded down her scenario with the obvious. In a word she has not insulted the spectator's imagination.

There has been some question raised as to the manner in which those of the Catholic faith will accept the characterization of Pierre Cauchon, the churchman who ultimately causes Joan's downfall. There should be none whatever. The Catholic Encyclopedia itself refers to Cauchon as "an unscrupulous and ambitious man" and states in dealing with the various acts of Pope Callixtus III that the sentence passed on Joan by the first (Cauchon's) court was "quashed and the innocence of the Maid of Orleans proclaimed." The Encyclopedia Britannica quoted on the program, tells more harshly of Cauchon's fate, in that "he was excommunicated posthumously by the Pope, his body exhumed and thrown in the common sewer."

And so it seems that "Joan the Woman" is free to sweep on to complete success, offending none and pleasing all. It seems peculiar perhaps to see the French and English in such bitter conflict when the present time is called to mind, but then remember that the chief opponent of the French was the Duke of Burgundy and if one cares to delve far enough back into the history of the middle ages he will discover that a bit of Teutonic blood ran in the Burgundian's veins. So there is little worry on this score either.

And if this does not suffice witness the manner in which Miss MacPherson was attempted and to our mind succeeded to do away with the revival of extinct prejudices of race. The picture opens with a scene in an English trench at the present time. An officer has just been commissioned to go on a mission from which he will never return and pondering over it a vision of Joan of Arc appears before him and bids him do and die, that his sin against her, centuries ago, may be effaced. Wallace Reid, who appears as the modern Englishman, also takes the part of Eric Trent, the lover of Joan who betrays her to the Burgundians.

To come down to the more minute details of the production, there are so many that space forbids their complete listing. The color effects introduced by Alvin Wyckoff are perhaps the most startling in their realism and beauty. The settings and the costuming on the other hand, which we suppose were in charge of Art Director Wilfred Buckland, are elaborate and lend a fine atmosphere of reality to every scene. As for Miss Farrar's support, one hardly knows where to begin. Raymond Hatton as the degenerate Charles VII gives a wonderful characterization of the part. Theodore Roberts is horribly wicked as Cauchon and Tully Marshall as a half witted monk is fine. Hobart Bosworth makes General Le Hire an heroic figure, and there is Wallace Reid as Trent. Charles Clary, James Neill and Larry Peyton head a large cast of competent supporting players.

In closing let it be said that "Joan the Woman" deserves to rank as a true classic of the screen. It deals with one of the most thrilling episodes of history. It presents real facts enhanced by imagined incidents. It has the spectacular side; the personal side. To alter an old phrase, it makes the audience run the gamut of human emotions.

"Vanity"

(Metro—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

AN eye for an eye is the moral excuse for this play, which gives Emmy Wehlen a fine opportunity to enact the role of a young woman who from unfortunate circumstances finds herself in the uncomfortable position of betraying her betrothed to the police for a murder committed by him under extenuating circumstances. The only unsatisfactory part in the story is the fact that the real villain is not punished, only forced to remove his fangs from the friends whom we have been following with sympathy through the unraveling of an interesting plot.

Miss Wehlen pleases in this picture, and the plot is an acceptable revamping of old material. Tom O'Keefe, Edward Martindell and Paul Gordon play the principal supporting roles of Chief Burke, and the Armstrongs, father and son. Esther Evans pleases as Bessie Allen.

"Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea"

(Universal Special Production—Eight Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

AS an adventure story, with the thrill of the pirate crew, and the call of the wild and the sea, with the improbable and impossible so combined with reality that one can hardly determine where truth begins and fiction ends, "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" is a great success. Indeed the pictures of men and sharks and develfish, and whole gardens of undersea life, hold and fascinate and seem like a dream. For although Verne's submarines are now the commonest things we know—in pictures—yet combined with the marvelous Williamson pictures, the old fascination that held us spellbound till we finished one of Jules Verne's stories is now carried into motion picture entertainment of a most extraordinary kind.

Captain Nemo and his strange adventures prove an entertaining means of renewing one's childhood fancies. Submarine gardens of indescribable beauty, "tigers of the sea," ravenous looking sharks, one of which actually attacks one of our adventurers, and other novelties, work into a credible plot, which includes a fight with a devilfish and the rescue, all on the ocean's bottom. Torpedoing a good sized yacht, and the destruction of an East Indian Walled City over which Captain Nemo formerly ruled, furnish excellent spectacular effects in addition to the undersea wonders, and it can be surely said no one will be disappointed who makes proper allowance for the fanciful material from which this film story is constructed.

What more impressive dramatic scenes can be imagined than the burial of Captain Nemo under the familiar coral reefs which he traveled in his magic ship Nautillus?

This picture will be well received by the public as a whole. Some will say, "impossible," "ridiculous," but the great majority will say "marvelous," "how did they do it?" And those whose fancy and imagination will not carry them into the spirit of the drama, will see enough sensation in the undersea scenes alone to bountifully satisfy them.

"A Woman Alone"

(Peerless-World Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE familiar triangle, represented by an unsympathetic husband, a justly bored wife and a relentless villain who pursues and pursues and pursues her is offered here in a setting of originality and presented with several unusually pleasing characterizations. The picture has been given a fine production from every angle. There is never a scene that strikes an unrealistic note, while the acting of the principals does much to carry the story through to a convincing finish, despite its several lapses in the last reel. Willard Mack who wrote the story has done more than give his several players a vehicle. His leading figure, the wife, suffers from an enforced environment. She is lonely and her monotonous life palls upon her. In her room above the station she hears the grinding of the train wheels and the dismal whine of the whistle from morning till night. Several scenes of this sort serve to get the character firmly placed, and so when the third angle of the story is introduced the manner in which she innocently plunges into trouble easily convinces the spectator, who by that time is thoroughly in sympathy with the woman.

Alice Brady is seen in the role of the wife. Her excellent performance is one of the dominating notes of the picture. Miss Brady perhaps can "suffer" better than any actress on the screen. Here she suppresses her emotions to a nicety; does not let them become so pronounced that she will meet the accusation of overacting. Her performance here is about the best she has contributed to the screen. Edwin T. Langford acts the husband to fine effect and Arthur Ashley typifies the idler wonderfully well. J. Clarence Harvey, Edward M. Kimball, Justine Cutting and Walter D. Greene comprise the supporting cast. Frances Marion did the scenario.

"Enlighten Thy Daughter"

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THIS is an unusually well told lesson-story, formulated upon this sex question of enlightenment by the father and mother of children, to save them from the irremediable disgrace liable to follow blind ignorance of the nature instinct and what it means. Delicacy of suggestion marks the presentation from beginning to end, but beyond that, we find more than adequate cast, direction that shows genius of a high quality added to infinite pains, and by no means average standard of staging this sort of play. I want to convey to the State-rights buyer, and to the theatre manager, the idea that this theme is dressed up in a manner that will command attention and is worthy any amount of genuine endorsement on the ground of good acting, good direction, and absorbing plot. The boldness of the theme itself is plainly indicated in the title. The picture may disappoint in not being ultra sensational, gruesome and horrifying.

The symbolic prologue, showing vividly the fall from the heights of purity to the depths of shame—a mere chance misstep plunging over the palisades, blind, unseeing, prepares for the story to come. Another symbolic scene that can be calculated to send some members of any audience home with a vision they will carry for months, perhaps for a lifetime, is the dagger pointed to destroy the unborn babe, which the mother sees in her dream following her consent to the unscrupulous physician's services.

The story is of a young girl who yields her virtue to a young fellow who does not think seriously of wrong, and who embraces an opportunity given him by being caught out in a storm with the girl. The wrong is not premediated. He is the ordinary good fellow of society, not a villain. Lillian's mother, and Ruth's mother are sisters. Lillian's mother gambles, and falls to an unscrupulous physician. She does not want Lillian to know the sordid side of life which she has seen. When Lillian, as the result of this ignorance, is ruined, the mother's paramour completes the ruin by an illegal operation, and Lillian dies. Harold, meantime, has reformed, and subsequently falls deeply and truly in love with Ruth. Lillian's death, and the knowledge that Harold caused it, breaks up this happiness and the story closes at this point, without uniting the lovers. If the ending here followed usual convention, the lesson would undoubtedly be weakened. We cite this as an example of the sincerity and art with which this play serves its mission. Frank Sheridan, Katherine Kaelred, Zena Keefe (as the girl), James Morrison (as the boy), and Violet Hodges, have important roles, which could hordly be better handled. Others in the cast furnished natural and pleasing support.

"Snow White"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Six Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

IN "Snow White," Marguerite Clark repeats her former successes and adds another link to the chain of attractive plays which the Famous Players have furnished her. That they have not before delved into the unlocked treasures of her past stage successes is remarkable. This is the first appearance of this favorite of favorites in a play which she made a success before her transfer to the silent drama for expression of her charms.

As all know, this is a Grimm fairy tale, translated with all the charm and wealth of material for story-telling entertainment into a six-part photodrama of which the Famous Players Company may well be proud.

From the opening prologue, in which Snow White's arrival into this world through the beneficent auspices of a kindly stork is shown, we pass through several fantastic scenes, including a very clever transformation of a tableful of dolls left by Santa Claus into real little beings, to the point in the story where the wicked Brangomar is transformed into a beautiful Queen by the Witch Hex, and promises to give her heart to Hex in return, upon the betrothal of the Princess Snow White. So Snow White is kept always in the kitchen, like Cinderella, while not in rags, yet in calico, and supposedly unattractive dresses, which appear attractive on this petite little lady.

One day she goes to seek three ducks for dinner, and meets in the forest the Prince Florimund, who takes an instant fancy to her. Little does either realize that this prince is to demand her hand as "Princess Snow White," shortly afterward.

The wicked Brangomar, discovering the love of the Prince for Snow White, orders Snow White killed, but the man she chooses to command to do this terrible deed cannot bring himself to perform it, even under the fear that his own children will be sacrificed if he doesn't.

He tells Snow White his mission, and a way is found to seem to comply with the command, by substituting a pig's heart for Snow White's, which Berthold the huntsman duly delivers to the wicked Brangomar.

Left alone in the forest, Snow White finds the seven dwarfs, in their quaint retreat, and endears herself to them. Meantime the mirror tells Brangomar where Snow White has gone, and she makes two attempts to poison her. The last seems about to have succeeded, when Snow White suddenly awakes to find the poisoned apple lodged in her throat, so it only caused a temporary stupor, and the witch, relenting, appears just in time to see the transformation of the cruel Brangomar back into her original ugliness by the breaking of the magic mirror which has protected her and been her talisman.

In this play Miss Clark is charming beyond words to describe. She fits exactly into the role of the Princess Snow White, and Creighton Hale as Prince Florimund is a likely match for her charm and beauty.

The many clever tricks of photography and novelty which helped perfect the illusion speak of infinite pains in giving this worth while fairy story an adaptation worthy its former stage success and the vast number of persons who have been fascinated by it as a fairy story. The pet bird which entered into the plot wonderfully in several places, will be the talk of the children for months. This feathered member of the cast seemed to have a real personal affection for Miss Clark, and saved her life time and again as a reward for her kindness in liberating it from its cage early in the story. It led her to the dwarfs' house. It brought the rope to Berthold which enabled him to escape from the prison. it told the bunny that told the dwarfs of the impending peril of the deadly comb, and was really the hero of the play. The children will surely love that bird.

Grown people will enjoy this play fully as much as the children, and we know the children will just rave about it. There is a combination of fancy and fascination, of fine interpretation of a classic role by Miss Clark, not to mention individual scenes of surpassing beauty, which will entitle this subject to first recognition in the motion picture hall of fame. H. Lyman Broening is responsible for the excellent camera work.

"A House Built Upon Sand"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

HERE is a conventional sort of comedy-drama in which the man in the case practises the cave-man stunt and bears his flippant wife off to a factory town, where she learns there is something else in life besides the dansants and debutante receptions. She suffers terribly when her latest Fifth avenue creations are stolen from her over night and a coarse gingham gown, or one of equally despicable weave, is placed by her bedside. But it dosen't last long of course.

Her husband is interested in factory workers and she becomes interested also. She starts to love her husband after a while and first gives evidence of it by giving his pipes a thorough cleansing with soap and water. They had such an offensive odor. Poor hubby! And then just to bring on something of a climax she believes him faithless and runs away, but hubby runs after her and explanations make everything all well.

The element of humor is the saving grace in this picture. Without it there would be little to interest. With it a perfectly obvious story containing no suspense at all is made entertaining. Whatever demands were brought to bear on the director were met with ease. A fire scene in the last reel, though dragged in by the heels, as the saying goes, is executed with realism, considering the fact that the whole of the framework house is destroyed.

In the New House

Lillian Gish is at first the shallow wife. She plays well. Her forte is comedy and in it a certain theatrical tone in her work, which is apt to be taken for insincerity, is more appropriate. Hers is in general a fetching performance. When she smells the pipes she is great.

Roy Stuart is fully capable of carrying the husband's role. Others are William H. Brown, excellent as a fatherly old attorney; Bessie Buskirk, Jack Brammall, Josephine Crowell and Kate Bruce. Mary H. O'Connor wrote the scenario and Edward Morrisey directed.

"The Lash of Destiny"

(Art Dramas—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

"THE LASH OF DESTINY" describes the adventures of Myra Fielding, a village school teacher after she has been transplanted to Broadway. The incidents in the picture seem true to life without an unreasonable reliance upon coincidence; and the direction, which is exceptionally good, shows throughout a laudable independence of old situations and effects. With one exception, disagreeable scenes are made vivid without offensiveness.

Myra borrows money to pay for her father's operation, from Al Wayne, a man with a limited sense of decency. In this scene innocence and guile confront each other, and their faces register so faithfully that the subtitle telling what is in the man's mind is superfluous.

Bert Temple, a country admirer, follows Myra to the city, and finding her in the company of Al Wayne, denounces her without listening to her explanation. Wayne lends his wife's money to Myra, who does not know that he is married. Later he is supposed to be killed on the way to Chicago. His wife takes a position in the same office with Myra's old sweetheart. They fall in love and believing that she is a widow, they marry.

Five years later Temple is district attorney in Chicago, where Wayne, under an assumed name, turns up as a political swindler. He tries to blackmail his former wife, now Mrs. Temple. He is suspected of treachery by a fellow grafter and the leader of this precious band decrees that he must die. Myra, anxious to make amends to Temple's wife for her innocent part in Wayne's fraud, goes to his apartment to urge him to leave his wife in peace. Mrs. Temple follows and in a quarrel with the swindler she shoots him. At the same moment a shot, fired from the window, kills Wayne. The wife believes that she did it and to spare her Myra takes the blame, the real murderer is captured and the generous girl is freed.

Gertrude McCoy as the village teacher is innocent and pretty. As a successful singer and dancer she is modest and natural. Miss McCoy is supported by Duncan McRae, Helen Green, Arthur Houseman and Mabel Scott. All do good work, but do not rise to the possibilities of the story.

Because there are no gross or violent incidents, and the interest is held throughout the picture by brisk action, "The Lash of Destiny" will be profitable to exhibitors and appeal to all audiences.

"The Jade Necklace"

(Niagara-Mutual—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

THE first part of "Our Girl Reporter" shows that through indulgent parents, who hate to wound her feelings, Dorothy Desmond is led to believe that she has the gift of a ready writer. After her father's death she applies at a newspaper office for a position. The editor with a concealed smile, tells her to get him a good slum story, then turns her over to the star reporter for further instructions.

She is told to go to Chinatown to get her story, but misses the star reporter, who is supposed to accompany her. She runs into a Tong battle, and takes refuge in the store of Shing Hatie, who before locking her in a dark room tries to tempt her with a fine jade necklace. He succeeds in putting it around her neck, where in the excitement that follows it remains.

The editor gets word of the Tong war that has broken out and sends every one on the staff, even the protesting dramatic critic, in search of Dorothy. After a great shooting fracas they rescue the girl and Shing Hatie is arrested.

It is to be hoped that more swiftly moving episodes of "Our Girl Reporter" will soon follow the first. Helen Green is the reporter, and a very timid one too, but she has started in well, and it is safe to predict that there will not be a dull moment in that editorial room as long as she is on the staff.

"The Victim"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

VALESKA SURATT does away with her role of the wicked seductress in "The Victim." Gone are the cigarettes, the cocktails, the sneering disposition. The impossible coiffure still remains, to be sure, and so do a good many of the gowns of a startling description, but the Valeska of the past is temporarily shelved, and instead we have the Valeska of girlish innocence who, to furnish situations of a conventionally popular character, is pursued villainously from first reel to last. She is the center of several intense scenes; for instance, the third degree episode, in which the star, tortured by the persistent nagging of the police, ends up by writhing on the floor.

Will S. Davis, who wrote and produced "The Victim," has worked on a sure-fire pattern. His is a story crammed to the full with situations of a luridly melodramatic character, and he piles them one upon another with such rapidity that no one will have cause to complain of a lack of action. If he be particular as to the kind of action his complaint might be registered with some justification. Mr. Fox, however, knows his public, and he knows with what to feed it.

Ruth (Valeska Suratt) is the daughter of a crook, who, when her father is arrested, is forced to serve six years in jail, though she be innocent. When released she finally secures a job as maid in the home of Dr. Boulden. She wins his heart and, after successfully putting to rout a villainous suitor of the doctor's sister, she marries her benefactor. Then a detective who was instrumental in convicting her turns up as a blackmailer. He is killed by Ruth's father, an escaped convict, and Ruth is accused and is put to the third degree. After it the father turns up, mortally burned in a fire, and confesses, and so all the troubles are over.

Miss Suratt is hardly fitted either by appearance or ability to carry the role of Ruth. She is a type, and a pronounced one. Herbert Hayes is a fairly good hero. John Charles, Joseph Granby, Charles Edwards, Oscar Nye and Claire Whitney make up a typical Fox supporting cast.

"Indiscretion"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THREE reels of introduction, showing Penelope in her many happy moods of unrestrained freedom, because her bookworm father has not time from his books to watch and safeguard her, take us from the pretty bathing pool, where Miss Walker's graceful poses in skin-tight bathing suit fascinating, through scene after scene of varying animation in which she is the center of attraction, whether it is fishing, or riding, or motoring, in all of which she excels.

Then the happy thought is suggested to the fond parent of sending his now thoroughly wilful daughter to a fashionable boarding school to "be civilized" as the bright lines of the title state. And here we are told, again by a title (and the titles in this offering have been given obvious attention and care) that "Caprice is always the companion of youth and indiscretion." The scenes where Penelope and her girl friends show the effects of this "civilization" by making a rarebit with real beer, and imitating their brothers in smoking cigarettes, too, much to the horror of the motherly principal, do not seem overdrawn, and doubtless typify real life in many such institutions.

The story gets really interesting when Penelope starts a flirtation at a dance with a married man, who mistakes her innocent freeness with him for genuine "indiscretion." And from this point the picture is melodramatic, although it is not made clear that her indiscretion is as great as the result makes it. However, when she finds herself at a road-house and realizes the meaning of the man, as he plainly enough tells it to her, when he says, "You are the friend I came here to meet" and shows her the adjoining bedroom, there is material for a stronger finish than is given even by the well-directed fight for freedom which she makes. Vitagraph handles these situations with a delicacy to be expected from this company. The surprise is, rather, that Vitagraph should essay a story with this kind of a climax. In the hands of Vitagraph, as those who know this company's policy will understand, it cannot be the kind of picture its title would indicate, and that some theatregoers will pay their money expecting to see.

The friends of Lillian Walker will enjoy immensely the working out of this theme, which gives her natural charm excellent opportunity.

"The Vampires"

("The Thunder Man," "The Poison Man," and "The Terrible Wedding"—Seventh, Eighth and Ninth Episodes. Gaumont-Mutual—Three Reels Each)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

ALL the deviltry that has not been practiced in the earlier parts of "The Vampires" is freely indulged in in the last three episodes. The most daring escapes and thrilling rescues are represented. These Vampires are "high class villains"; they do not murder or assassinate their enemies in the usual gangster fashion. No matter at what cost or trouble, their aim is to dispose of them in a truly scientific manner.

Elaborate plans are made to fire an electric gun from a hotel window, that blows up a ship at sea as easily as snuffing out a candle. Satanas is a terrible fellow, but he gets caught at last; and then, true to his ideals, he chews up a letter that has been inoculated with poison, and cheats the guillotine. Irma Vep, Satanas' accomplice, who was supposed to have been blown up on the ship, is rescued and returns to her old haunts. Every infernal device is employed by the Vampires to destroy Phil Guard, the Cub Reporter. Bombs are sent in hatboxes; an electric clock that is intended to do more than alarm, is found in a hat lining; its ticking betrays its presence.

A fearsome device with a long tube attachment is secreted in Phil's apartment; the tube is put in the keyhole of the Cub's sleeping room. Another view shows poisonous gas pouring into the other room. A well planned scheme is to poison the champagne at Phil Guard's wedding, but only the janitor is killed. His wife gave the alarm just in time to save the rest.

Normandin, the reformed Vampire, stumbles out of one trouble into another, but he manages to check the terrible band a good many times. On one occasion Irma sprays him with a potent anesthetic, which promptly puts the poor fellow temporarily hors de combat. The same spray is used for the inside of an automobile that Phil is supposed to occupy.

There is a very good climax to the last episode. The house in which Phil Guard's wife and the janitor's widow have been hidden by the Vampires is raided while Irma's "Terrible Wedding" is in progress, by Phil, Normandin and the police.

Every Vampire is killed or captured except the wicked Irma Vep, Queen of the Vampires. Determined to have a final inning with Phil Guard, the vixen finds a pistol and disappears into the basement where her prisoners are concealed. Her hand is raised and she is about to fire at the women, but she reckoned without nervy little Jane Guard. Phil had given his wife a pistol, which she uses effectively upon Irma. And so passes away the last of the terrible Vampires. Charles Moriss impersonates Venenos, the Poison Man. Edmond Mathe is the Cub Reporter. Irma Vep is very well represented by Juliet Musidora. People who like lots of excitement, mystery, detectives, disguises and other melodramatic devices will like these episodes.

"The Bride of Hate"

(Ince-Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A POWERFUL dramatic offering is "The Bride of Hate," which stars Frank Keenan. The scene of the picture is the southland in the days before the Civil War, and happily the author, John Lynch, has written a drama and a good one without having recourse to the introduction of the strife. The South of the time had its own drama and it is still a fertile field for writers minus its conflict with the North, even though many of them seem to think this impossible.

For all Mr. Lynch's gripping story it takes Mr. Keenan to carry it convincingly over its one feeble place. This comes with the revelation that Mercedes has not a drop of negro blood in her veins. The story obviously takes this turn to fulfill the author's idea that a happy ending is always desired. Maybe it is. But the fact remains that minus Mr. Keenan such a twist would loom up awkwardly bare to the bone.

The atmosphere of the ante-bellum days has been effectively pictured with the exception of a very modern appearing deck of a Mississippi River boat. To bicker over that though would be an injustice. The actors with their stove-pipe hats, frilled shirt fronts, immense canes and long-skirted coats, and the selection of some typical old southern exteriors with interiors that in every respect are apropos, create an atmosphere of realism that pervades the entire picture.

Mr. Keenan is cast as Dr. Duprez, a doctor. The very apple of his eye is his grand neice who has faltered and loved too well.

An Impressive Moment

While the doctor is away on a trip she poisons herself. Discovering who the betrayer is, the doctor sets to work to avenge the girl's death. Mercedes, a beautiful slave, supposedly with only a slight trace of negro blood, is introduced to the man as a Spaniard. The betrayer is enraptured, and finally the two are married. Then the doctor makes known to the guests that "he is the husband of a nigger." Later he discovers that the girl is a real Spaniard and his own granddaughter. The betrayer is killed and Mercedes wins the old man's love and his apology.

Margery Wilson scores to good effect as Mercedes, while Jerome Storm does the heavy part villainously well. David M. Hartford, Elvira Weil and Mrs. J. Hunt give support. Walter Edwards directed.

"Black Orchids"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CLEO MADISON is again the "beautiful sorceress, fickle and mercenary, whose only aim in life seems to be the entanglement of men in her meshes." She is in fact, as Zoraida, what would be called in the words of the elite a vampire. As such pictures go, "Black Orchids" is an average production, a little far-fetched, when a man with a sword thrust in his breast manages to walk around and arrange the death of Zoraida and her latest love, but maintaining throughout the usual appeal of such offerings.

The Story Completed

The story of Zoraida and her downfall is told a girl by her father, a famous novelist who has just completed "Black Orchids." The vampire is loved by father and son and when the former grows dangerous she poisons him. The son goes to war and, forgetting quickly, Zoraida marries De Chantal. Back comes the son from the front and back comes all Zoraida's old passion for him. She manœuvers things so that a duel comes about and De Chantal being sadly outclassed is believed to have paid the penalty. But instead he lives long enough to entrap Zoraida in a vault full of slime and snakes and then he kills the other fellow and throws him in with her.

Well produced in most respects "Black Orchids" has suffered somewhat by the introduction of too many subdued lighted scenes. The action in these is not always sufficiently clear. A good many of the scenes show the character acting before a background of black. There is no set. Luckily the action is strong enough in these places to make the spectator forget the lack of real background.

Two Educational Scenics

("High, Low and the Game"—One Reel. "Serene of Index"—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"HIGH, Low and the Game" is a reel filled to the full of beautiful scenes, most of them taken on the shores of the Pacific in the state of Washington. Water stuff is never dry. In fact, to watch the rollers sweeping in across the sands, to look down on the breakers from a height of four hundred feet or more is one of the most restful pastimes we know of. This reel doesn't deserve to be pooh poohed and shunted aside merely because it hasn't the action and the touches of comedy that Robert Bruce so often obtains in his pictures. The camera was well placed for every shot and, with the ocean framed artistically, time and again the picture almost rivals the original.

"Serene of Index" runs short of a reel, but seems ideally suited to every exhibitor's needs. Why bother about going to Switzerland when you can get just as majestic views in the United States? Serene is a lake, Index a mountain. Mr. Bruce has arranged the film in diary form and shows various incidents connected with his rapid climb up the mountain until he comes to the lake and then to the summit. The view there makes him stop and look around. The spectator will want to look too, and he may be sorry when the picture fades on such a glorious scene.

"Polly Put the Kettle On"

(Universal-Red Feather—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

THERE is a Christmas tree and, to judge from the way the children go at the drum sticks, a real turkey in this very interesting picture. Polly does a great deal more than Put the Kettle On; she works by day and patches old clothes half the night for some of the cutest youngsters to be found in pictureland.

Mr. Vance, the father of this hungry family, is an inventor, who is so dead to what is going on in the world, that he works on a model that has been tried out and in use for years before his is completed. The shock of this discovery causes his death, which leaves his family still worse off. Polly takes a position to read and shop for a dame, who looks like a picture from Puck.

Aunt Johanna has a nephew, Chester Hollingsworth, impersonated by Douglas Gerrard, who comes between the cross old woman and Polly. This causes a parting. Chester leaves home and Polly is discharged. She becomes a nurse in the hospital where Chester is brought after rescuing the little Vance children from a burning house. The young man is blinded and only an expensive operation can restore his sight. He vows that he will never accept his aunt's money while she lives.

Polly goes to Aunt Johanna, who has searched in vain for her bright little companion. She explains Chester's danger and his resolution about his aunt's money. Polly advises Aunt Johanna to die, which the old lady, thoroughly softened, promptly does, officially. Later she appears before her sightless nephew as his housekeeper.

At the Christmas dinner, where the drum sticks are so much in evidence, the bandages are removed from Chester's eyes. His recognition of Aunt Johanna at the end of the table is a delightful climax. Mr. Gerrard is cleverly supported by Ruth Clifford, who makes a very lovable Polly. The rest of the company, including little Zoe Rae, round out an exceptionally good picture.

"Pearl of the Army"

(Pathe—Sixth Episode—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE serial gathers in mystery in this number, owing to the introduction of another Menace, dressed exactly like the original. The fact is also disclosed that the first Menace dons the uniform of a United States army officer at times. We only see his back after this change of costume and the general contour suggests Major Brent, the gentleman who is forever hovering between deeds of heroism and villainy. On the other hand, there is the other peculiar gentleman who sallies about under the title of T. O. Adams. He it was who appeared so mysteriously after the death of Pearl's fiance. In fact, the mysterious is the main note of the whole serial to date. People will begin to look for an out-and-out hero before long.

Pearl and Adams, after escaping from the watery cellar, are again captured by the Grenadians. An aviator sailing above drops bombs on the renegades, freeing the captives. The aviator is forced to land, having been wounded and Pearl takes flight in the machine. Major Brent secures the plans from Adams and is commissioned to take them to Washington. Pearl accompanies him. On the train they are attacked by a Menace. Pearl, still in possession of the plans, is thrown from the train. Another Menace appears and the two masked marvels engage in a battle royal. While the train is crossing a bridge they fall off into the water. As Pearl sits reading the plans one of the Menaces approaches and steals them. . . . Next.

"Her New York"

(Thanhouser-Pathe—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE value of "Her New York" can be appraised by recalling "Prudence the Pirate," which presented the same star, Gladys Hulette in a vehicle by the same author, Agnes Johnston. Comparisons though are never pleasant and the mention of the former Hulette-Johnston picture is given merely to give the reader an idea of the commercial value of the present one. No one would accuse Miss Johnston of writing in a rut. The charm of her work lies in the human touches that she introduces in each and every scene. And the human element is so often lacking in pictures, no matter how good they may be from the dramatic point of view. This leads to the obvious conclusion that her work is original.

The Only Meal in Sight

Indeed it is. How many authors would have the daring to deprive the hero of a rescue scene and give it to a hen? The dramatic possibilities of the hen are further utilized when it is cooked and eaten. And better than the hen even is the baby, a homeless and nameless infant adopted by Phoebe and Philip. The baby is a young brother of Helen Badgley's, the famous Thanhouser kidlet. He has big brown eyes and a cheery disposition and when he looks at the camera and smiles you smile with him.

"Her New York" is the story of a country girl who idolizes the great city, of which she has heard so many alluring tales and none of the despairing ones. She has her wish at last and goes there to marry a young fellow who entertains ambitions to be a poet. They find the waif and adopt it, and then to spoil the happiness Philip starts gambling and gets in debt to his employer who looks with covetous eyes on Phoebe. The employer succeeds in creating a doubt that later turns to certainty in Phoebe's mind that her husband has deceived her. Then for a time there is only a hard unfeeling New York around the girl, but of course it all comes out right. New York gets bright and happy again.

If we had a review to write on the psychology of "Her New York" it would be simple. Phoebe finds her dream city drab and colorless when all the joy for a moment goes from her own life. And then her illusions of it are realized again when happiness returns to her. And of course New York was running along just the same. An audience will feel the effect of this either subconsciously or otherwise. But that is only one of the many ways in which it will respond to the picture. Aside from the fact that it is well written, well acted, well produced, and well subtitled there is a certain simple charm in "Her New York" that can not be described. Anyone is certain to be caught at it.

Miss Hulette gains new laurels as Phoebe. A girlish appearance and manner combined with an ability to act is her. Opposite her is William Parke, Jr., who plays the weak-willed Philip appropriately. The two leads make an excellent team. In other parts Robert Vaughn, Ethyle Cooke, Riley Chamberlain and Carey Hastings appear to good advantage. O. A. C. Lund directed the production.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR BUSY EXHIBITORS

General Film Service

"The Girl God Made for Jones." (Essanay. Screen time, 33 minutes. Comedy drama.)—Synopsis—Jones, searching for the girl he wanted did not know she was beside him, but in a railroad wreck where he is pinioned he hears a voice and believes he could love the owner of such if he should live. On his recovery he starts a search for the girl and on the suggestion of a newspaper man he writes his vivid account of the wreck. The editor to whom the story was sent directs Faith Garland, his secretary, to take further dictation from Jones and in this secretary Jones discovers the girl God had made for him. Released Tues., Jan. 2, 1917.

"A Dollar Down." (Essanay. Comedy. Split reel.)—Synopsis—A vaudeville actor vanquishes all comers in the lone game at Banana Harbor, all on account of his "dollar down" attire, and is about to become a subject for violence at the hands of the stevedores when he resorts to a grotesque make-up that scares them all off and he has the field to himself, and so wins the queen of the Settlement. The reel is shared by 500 feet of scenes, taken in Yosemite Valley. Released Wed., Jan. 3, 1917.

"When the Man Speaks." (Essanay. Synopsis. Drama. Screen time, 29 minutes.)—James Gordon, having killed a man and got away with it, resolves never again to lose his temper and his unwillingness to fight thereafter is construed as cowardice, and his actions disgust Irma Alvord, a social butterfly, now his wife. She makes no secret of her feelings, so that Gordon, driven to a frenzy by the taunts of his wife and friends, breaks his resolution. He invades a party in his own home and "cleans house," hurling guests right and left, and so wins back Irma's love and respect, and the regard of those who had formerly sneered at him. Released Sat., Jan. 6, 1917.

"Rival Romeos." (Kalem. One reel. Comedy. To be released Tues., Jan. 9)—This reel is chock full of the Ham and Bud uniqueness in comedy. The situations, though based on an old theme, are cleverly worked out and their attitude on discovering that both have been duped by a matrimonial agent is really laughable. For rough and tumble comedy with a true vein of humor "Rival Romeos" should find favor wherever Ham and Bud have been introduced.

"That Terrible Tenderfoot." (Kalem. One reel. Comedy. To be released Tues., Jan. 2.)—A cleverly conceived burlesque of the so-called bad men of the West. The "Screaming Skulls," a band of bad men, ride into town, driving everything before them and incidentally shooting up everything in their path and then the whole bunch are cowed by one man, and this one man in his turn is subjugated by Bud, although the latter has to resort to strategy to perform the trick. Nevertheless he gets away with it, and wins the plaudits of "the proud beauty of Blazing Berry Gulch." A good picture and bound to be well received by lovers of satire and travesty.

"A Mission of State." (Kalem. Grant, Police Reporter, Series. One reel. Drama. Fri., Dec. 29.)—It is really remarkable the way interest in this highly exciting serial is maintained. Up to the present there has not been a dull moment passed or a commonplace incident recorded in the versatile career of Grant, Police Reporter. And this latest is no exception. Ever on the alert for news items, Grant's inquisitive nose leads him into many escapades, most of which call for ready wit and readier action. Here, after an exciting automobile race to recover certain papers of international importance, which might "involve our country in war," he drops from a bridge into a rapidly moving automobile, where he has a strenuous struggle with Paul de Graf, accomplice of the Countess (Ollie Kirkby), who stole the papers by the substitution of a wallet. He brings them both to justice.

The photography of this reel is consistently clear and even and the surf scene is especially commendable. Grant has already made an enviable record for himself and this episode will not detract one iota from it.

"The Mogul Mountain Mystery." (Kalem Hazards of Helen Series. One reel. Drama. Released Sat., Jan. 6, 1917.)—Helen Gibson as Helen, the operator at Lone Point, still risks her one neck and all her limbs in her almost unbelievable stunts to protect the interests of her employers and incidentally to thwart the evil designs of various malefactors. In this instance, she is swung from the cross arm of a telegraph pole into an open freight car which has been turned loose on a down grade. Guaging the time to the fraction of a second, we see the lineman swinging Helen by the wrists and then as she drops in a heap, dazed and bruised in the car, it is but the work of a few moments to collect herself and bend her energies toward stopping the car before it comes into collision with a Special being run over the long discarded tracks to preserve the conditions of the charter. The car is brought to a standstill within a few yards of the Special and so a great catastrophe is averted, for a large case of Trojan powder has been placed aboard the car with evil intent Helen, of course, is congratulated on her bravery, complimented for the service thus rendered and once more proves herself worthy of the enconiums of her employers and the ardent support of her many film admirers.

Mutual Program

"Fickle All Around." (Vogue-Mutual. Two reels.)—Rube Miller directs and leads in this picture, which does not come up to his best work. His plot is frazzled and the tone is not what Mrs. Grundy would call high. Of course, Rube Miller is always funny, but that cannot be said of "Fickle All Around." A woman buys a coat with money she has received from Rube. Then she pawns the coat and tells her husband that she found the ticket, and asks him to redeem it. He gets the coat and gives it to another woman, who happens to be Rube's wife, and tells his wife that the coat was no good so he tore up the ticket. His wife is afraid to explain, but soon sees the coat on the other woman and such a hair pulling scene follows as we sincerely hope never to see again.

See America First, No. 67. (Gaumont. One reel.)—In this reel picturesque scenes in Virginia are shown—Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson; Staunton, the birthplace of President Wilson; beautiful orchards where the famous pippin apples grow; and distant views of the Blue Ridge Mountains.

Reel Life, No. 34. (Gaumont. One reel.)—"Food Products of Soudan," is an instructive film, showing how Karite nuts grow and are prepared for food; millet and its uses are clearly explained. "Pork and Beans" are shown in every detail; gathering the crop, carrying, threshing, cooking, making the cans and filling them. Even putting in the slice of pork and the tomato sauce, and sealing the cans are not left to the imagination. "Building Sailing Vessels" shows the out-of-date craft in the making. In "Rufus Rastus Rides the Road," a smiling darky is seen traveling in a flivver of his own invention. A pair of old wheels and somebody's discarded furnace are made to run along the country roads. The price of gasoline has no terrors for Rastus; when the power gives out he chops logs by the roadside, feeds the furnace and goes on his way.

Mutual Weekly, No. 103. (Gaumont.)—New York's blind receive annual Christmas aid: the government vessel Sumner caught in the shoals off Barnegat; Sir William Dunn, the new Lord Mayor of London, is seen in the famous Lord Mayor's show; the new ice skating rink at the Biltmore with demonstrations in fancy skating; King George reviews troops in London; more troops are seen landing at Salonica, and the British ship Strathaby strikes a mine off the coast of Ireland.

"Grouchy." (Mutual. One reel.)—Elijah Snow, the neighborhood grouch, after shooing away would-be tenants who have children, from the house he lives in, and getting struck on the head with a base ball, insures his life and makes out his will in favor of a bachelors' home. Coincidently he receives an invitation to visit his married niece. Anxious to know if there is any one who really cares for him, apart from his money, he decides to take the trip. He is horrified upon his arrival to find there are two children, and is about to return, but the young couple show great disappointment. He tests their sincerity by telling them that he has lost all his fortune. It makes no difference; they offer him a home. After hearing two of the cutest children mention him in their prayers he is completely won over and tears up the unsigned will. This picture is a capital climax for an evening's entertainment.

"Within the Lines." (Mutual. One reel.)—This picture is better than many stories of the war. Paul Parnane finds letters from his wife in the pocket of a wounded soldier. Among the man's papers are some war despatches. The injured husband decides to deliver the messages himself and leave his treacherous comrade to the mercy of the enemy. Meanwhile other French soldiers appear, to whom Maurice, the wounded man, declares that Paul has robbed him of his despatches to sell them to the enemy. The papers are found in Paul's pocket and he is arrested. His own home being the nearest place, his trial takes place there. He is sentenced to death. His wife tries to atone for her folly. She uses all her arts to wring the truth from Maurice. Believing that they are to elope, he writes a confession that clears Paul. The wife does some fine riding and arrives at the place of execution in time to prevent the shooting of her husband.

"Jealousy." (Mutual. Two reels.)—Featuring Ethel Grandin as a trained nurse who marries the chief surgeon (Warren Richmond) in the hospital, after a mild affair with one of the internes (Lawrence White). Her husband is insanely jealous and picks upon the young doctor ever after. His wife's attendance at the latter's sick child's bedside through all of a night brings about a crisis and she returns to her profession. Later her husband is summoned to operate on a patient there. When he finds it is none but his medical rival, and that he is attended by the much abused Ethel, he turns away in a frenzy, but is finally brought to the operating room by a recollection of the ethics of his profession. There he inadvertently learns things that prompt him to welcome her back to his home and promise to suppress his jealous instincts ever afterward. An operating room scene is rather morbidly staged, but it is realistic indeed.

Mutual Weekly, No. 103. (Gaumont. Wed., Dec. 20.)—This number shows scenes in Washington, D. C. Uncle Joe Cannon, to judge from the screen, is as alert and active as ever. School children of Washington co-operate in collecting waste paper. They are shown in an endless chain on the way to a paper mill to dispose of bundles, varying in size from a handful of newspapers to packages as big as themselves. Threshing Lima beans is made interesting by an ingenious contrivance that mows and gathers the beans at one end and threshes them at the other.

Pathe Exchange

"The Last Volunteer." (Three reels. Re issue.)—Originally offered as a five-reel feature some seasons ago, this has been trimmed down and now presents a three-reel story with action aplenty. It was a big money maker in the past and while in the matter of production present day pictures have advanced the plot is able to achieve just as big a hold on the spectator today. The story is laid in a mythical kingdom where romance comes to the king and a peasant girl. The match can never be. War breaks out and the Last Volunteer is the girl who dashes from the inn and raises the signal flags which save the day. The deed exposes her to the enemy's fire and when the king arrives victorious she is breathing her last. Irving Cummings and Eleanor Woodruff are the principals. The former poses too much in many of his scenes. Robert Broderick and Paul Panzer also appear.

"The Shielding Shadow." (Astra. Two reels. Last episode.)—"The Final Chapter" sees Jerry at last restored to Leontine, preceeded by numerous revelations as to his miraculous escapes in the past. There is a particularly good scene showing Jerry fighting with the octopus on the ocean's bed. Sebastian meets a villainous finish. When it comes to a choice of giving himself over to the law, or jumping over a precipice, he takes the latter course and is killed by the fall. A lavish wedding is staged in the last scene which will no doubt impress. It looks like the grand finale of a musical comedy.

"Luke's Lost Liberty." (Rolin.)—A burlesque on prison reformers is this comedy, an average reel starring Lonesome Luke. The convicts sit around, smoke good cigars and imbibe rare wines, while others less fortunate serve them dutifully. There are a few excellent gags introduced. The company has been offered in better stories.

What does it mean?

¶ It means that if you are wrestling with the problem of publicity for the coming year you have not made yourself acquainted with the newest ways of bringing your product before the public eye.

¶ Film advertising is the modern method—not the stereotyped plates that are thrust before the eyes of the movie audience, but an interesting, progressive portrayal that will delight the audience and leave its impression with them.

¶ All work is guaranteed. It covers every field of endeavor, social, industrial, commercial, etc. American Bioscope Company make a progressive picture of a family wedding or show the rapid stride in the construction of your new factory.

AMERICAN BIOSCOPE COMPANY, with larger and improved facilities, are able to print, develop, title and color film in any quantities, large or small, giving each order the careful expert and prompt attention that insures satisfactory results.

Under contract with the Newspaper Enterprise Association, American Bioscope Company has been producing, manufacturing and distributing the motion picture comedies and cartoons of Everett True.

They are also the originators, owners, manufacturers, and distributors of the Jungle Jolo Comedies.

American Bioscope Company invite you to visit their studio-laboratories if you are interested in the technical workings of the plant, and would be more than pleased to provide you with any necessary information if you will write or drop a postal to

THE following letter needs no introduction. It speaks for itself. When you have read it, you can see whether it fits your case. If so, our suggestions may be found to be worth while.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
New York City.

GENTLEMEN:

BEING an exchangeman and being on the road a gread deal of time, many things come up connected with motion pictures which need concerted action in order to have them remedied. In the exchange we may be criticised for many faults, some within the power of the manager to remedy and others due to those higher up in the home office. I may write about those later, but as time is short I merely want to point out one thing which is helping kill pictures, particularly in the transient houses.

AN actual illustration is probably the best method of showing just what I mean. I had booked a film in one of the larger downtown houses of ————, Pennsylvania, and was standing outside when the first show was over to hear what the patrons had to say. I do this as often as possible, for the successful exchangeman must know exactly how his pictures are taking.

AS the people came out, I heard what I wanted, namely, an unbiased opinion. As I stood there the manager came up and asked me if I did not feel flattered. I told him I did in the main, but on the other hand I was not enthusiastic with some of the opinions which I had heard. As we talked, a middle-aged man and woman came up to the box office and asked when the big picture was to start. The girl selling tickets said it had just begun. The tickets were purchased and they went in. I took the manager by the arm and insisted that he go in with me. We followed the couple and took seats directly behind them.

THE title on the screen said "Part 3." I sat and waited. I had seen it happen often before. Our friends in front, for whom the theatre should be run, began to fidget; finally they began to talk in a stage whisper. I told the manager to listen; enough could be heard to understand their state of mind.

THEY were sore, sore at the theatre, sore at pictures in general, and to my sorrow they were sore at my film. Why? Because they felt that they had been misled. The ticket girl had told them the picture they wanted to see had just begun, when in reality it was half over when they came in. She was there to sell tickets; she had done it—the manager had thirty cents more to his credit than as though this couple had not gone in—but what was the result?

1. At least two of the audience were dissatisfied.
2. They left knocking the theatre.
3. They would tell their friends all about how they had been skinned.
4. It was a fair gamble they would never come back to that house.
5. It was a definite set-back to pictures in that district.

LAST, but not least, they were dissatisfied with my picture, which is my reason for asking the NEWS to step in and give exhibitors a hint by publishing my ideas on a subject which, to my mind, is one of the most important before the exhibitors today.

I HOPE this letter is not too long and that it may meet with your approval. I wish the NEWS the best of success during the coming year, for you are doing a great work in the way in which you are helping exchangemen and exhibitors alike.

Very truly yours,
A NEWS BOOSTER.

THIS is a great letter and hits one of the weak spots in the exhibiting business right on the head. Our pictures are better than they used to be; our projection is excellent in the real picture houses, which are built with the idea 100 per cent. perfect projection; our theatres in most cases are neat and clean, but personal attention to the patron in this particular way is not all that it should be.

CRITICISM without remedy is bad, so we will make two suggestions which will eliminate entirely the trouble to which our friend refers. The first method is more expensive than the last, though in the end more satisfactory.

1. There are manufactured by several companies interior telephones with two or more terminals. By installing one of these, the projection room may be directly connected with the ticket window, so that when patrons come up and ask when such and such a picture is to be shown, the ticket seller can give them accurate information so that they may judge for themselves whether it is worth while going in or not.

This method may be extended so that terminals may be placed in the manager's office as well as in the orchestra pit. The entire house may be thus connected so that each unit may be kept in constant touch with every other one. This is important.

2. The following method is cheap and practical, though not as satisfactory as the first. Have your operator connect his projection room and ticket window so that there may be an electric button within his reach and a light buzzer in the ticket booth. Have a card drawn up similar to the one shown here, tacked up by the button,

TITLE of FILM	NO. Reels	TIME Begun	TIME Ended	TOTAL Minutes
Scenic — — — — — —	1	7 30	7 44	14
Feature — — — — — —	5	7 50	9 00	70
Comedy — — — — —	2	9 04	9 36	32

and another exactly like it placed near the ticket seller.

When the first picture begins the operator rings the buzzer once—several times at intervals, the time being re-

EQUIPMENT OPERATING PROJECTION QUESTIONS ANSWERED

A B C of the Motion Picture Operating Room

THROUGH the courtesy of the Bausch and Lomb Optical Company, Rochester, N. Y., I am going to give my readers this week a few of the principles of optical projection. The matter contained herein is largely culled from their booklet on Projection Lenses.

This brief review is designed for the operator who, having no knowledge of the science of optics, wishes to understand the operation of projection apparatus. In Fig. 1 it is seen that with the aid of the projector we throw or project upon the screen an enlarged image of a transparent object which may be either a slide or film.

This process is almost the reverse of ordinary photography. In photography the scene is taken by means of a photographic objective or lens and is registered, greatly reduced, upon a sensitized plate and by the use of certain chemicals the image is fixed thereon. In projection we reverse this process.

From the picture made with the camera lens we make a transparent slide, or we use the film negatives, and by means of a condensed light we strongly illuminate these, and with an objective lens an enlarged image is projected upon the screen, and this screen image corresponds to the scene first photographed.

From the accompanying illustration it will be seen that the first essential in projection is the lens or objective. As in photography the quality and tone of the picture depends upon, to a great extent, the quality and character of the lens, so in projection does the objective become a factor in determining the excellence of the screen image.

The condensing lenses must be of a diameter slightly greater than the diagonal of the slide or film in use. The size which is most generally used is 4½ inches in diameter.

As the condensing lenses are in close proximity to the arc or other sources of light, they are, of course, subjected to considerable heat and will expand and contract accordingly as they are heated or cooled. This has been taken care of by the various machine manufacturers, by having their condenser mounts so arranged that the circulation of air is such as to ensure the even expansion and contraction of the condensers.

The optical principle of projection for both lantern slide and moving picture film will, perhaps, be more understandable from the diagram.

At E is an electric light or other suitable illuminant the light from which is caught up by the condensing lenses or condenser C; this condenser is an arrangement of lenses so constructed as to gather up as great a light as possible and to concentrate that light at the center or diaphragm plane of the objective when the objective is located at the proper distance from the slide or film, which distance is determined by the focal length of the objective.

The slide or film should be placed at such a point that the entire area of the opening is fully illuminated, and it should also be placed so that the greatest number of light rays possible should pass through it. Taking into consideration the fact that the opening in the mat in the lantern slide is 2¾ x 3 inches and in the moving picture film is 11/16 x 15/16 inches, it will at once be evident that the slide must be placed at D in the diagram in order that its entire area be covered, and the moving picture film must be located at F in order that it may take in the greatest number of light rays.

Proceeding from the slide the light passes through the objective O, where the rays cross and the object is reversed, and by means of the objective lens the object is imaged or delineated upon the screen S. The degree of sharpness and flatness of the image depends upon the optical correctness of the lens. The relative position of the arc, condenser, and objective must be such that an image of the light source will be formed at the diaphragm of the objective. All light coming from the condenser is then utilized and the image on the screen is at its brightest.

Oftentimes lantern slides and films are to be used interchangeably, and approximately the same sized image is desired with both. As the opening of the slide mat is approximately three times greater than the size of the moving picture film, it is, therefore, necessary to have a lens for lantern slides approximately three times the focal length of the lens being used for motion picture projection, and as it is impossible to match the size of the images in one dimension only (either width or height) as the two opening are not proportionate in size, it is necessary, therefore, in ordering lenses to specify whether the two images are to be of the same height or width.

At a given distance the greater the focal length the smaller will be the image. Short focus lenses, therefore, will give large images. Do not make the mistake of selecting a lens of such short focus, that the magnification will be so great that when the observer is seated near the screen much of the definition and perspective will be lost. BRILLIANT PICTURES OF MEDIUM SIZE ARE MORE SATISFACTORY than larger pictures with decreased illumination and less definition.

The following tables show the method of computing size of image, focal length, and distance from slide to screen:

SIZE OF IMAGE. This can be determined by multiplying the difference between the distance from lens to screen and the focal length of the objective, by the size of slide, and dividing the product by the focal length. For example: Let L be the projection distance, 40 feet (480 inches); S, the slide mat 3 inches; F, the focus of the lens, 12 inches; then we have the formula (in which D is the size of image)

$$d = \frac{3\ (480-12)}{12} = 117 \text{ inches, or } 9\tfrac{3}{4} \text{ feet.}$$

FOCAL LENGTH. To determine this factor multiply the size of the slide or film opening by the distance from lens to screen, and divide the product by the sum of the size of image and the size of the slide. Thus we have the formula $F = \frac{S \times L}{d + S}$ and substituting their values as before of slide mat, by the focal length, and divide this product by the size of slide mat, thus:

$$F = \frac{3 \times 480}{117 + 3} = \frac{1440}{120} = 12 \text{ inches.}$$

$$L = \frac{(F\ d + S)}{S}$$

substituting values

40 feet.

New Theatre for the Bronx

The opening of the U. S. theatre, at 195th street and Webster avenue in the Bedford Park section under the management of the Big Three Amusement Company which comprises the Messrs. Fleischman, Goldreyer and Kramer will be long remembered by those fortunate enough to have been present.

Arriving at 95th street at 7:30 P. M., I was in doubt as to whether a fire or a political spellbinder was the cause of the enormous crowd which thronged the street. As I approached and mingled with the crowd I saw they were massed about the entrance of the Bronx's latest picture palace. There was a crowd of approximately 5,000 people trying to get in and I thought to myself, here's where I get stung and was about to hop on a car that would bring me back to the Big City. But at last plucking up sufficient courage I pushed and shoved and elbowed my way into the lobby and up to the entrance, presented my invitation and was pushed, shoved and elbowed into the theatre itself which was a little more than half filled at that early hour. The promenade was banked with floral pieces from the many friends and well wishers of the Big Three, and after pausing to admire the beautiful floral display, I began my tour of inspection.

The building occupies an entire city block, running from 194th to 195th street. The front of the building consists of a number of stores, some of which are already rented, and occupied, and is separated from the theatre proper by a narrow court, or alley. The theatre entrance is near 195th street, and upon entering one walks directly from the lobby into the rear of the auditorium which runs from 194th street to 195th street, the screen being located at the 194th street end and the operating room at the other.

The seating capacity of the U. S. is about 2,200, and 2,000 of these seats are located upon the main floor, while the balance of 200 is taken care of in the balcony, the front being divided into loges.

The distance from operating room to screen is approximately 190 feet, the auditorium is 200 feet long by 63 feet wide. The interior decorations, while nothing elaborate, are of a dignified and refined character, and with the lighting effects, are such as to appeal to the artistic sense of the patrons in the locality in which the theatre is situated.

The house rapidly filling, I made my way to the operating room which I wished to look over before the starting of the show, and there I met Harry B. Kraissman, chief operator, who was being assisted by J. F. Gruenberg, electrician for the Big Three, and my old friend Joe Abrams, of the Nicholas Power Company, which means that the projectors are Powers' 6-Bs, both of which are motor driven. Current is supplied to the machines by a 75 ampere "Transverter" manufactured by the Hertner Electric Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

The operating room is 10 feet deep by 30 feet in length, and is divided into three parts, the first being the operating room itself, the second, the rewinding and inspecting room, and the third the room containing the "Transverter" and other resistance devices, each room being separated by a fire proof door. The construction of this important part of the theatre is absolutely fire-proof, and well ventilated, as is the entire ventilation of the theatre which is accomplished, I think by Typhoon fans. It would hardly be fair at this time to make any lengthy criticism upon the operating room, the entire equipment not yet being installed, and it was evident that things had been rushed to allow the theatre to open on the specified date.

Shortly before eight o'clock Joseph I. Berry, Democratic Leader of the 35th Assembly District, walked upon the stage and dedicated the U. S. theatre to the residents of the Bronx in a few well chosen words, and also commended the Big Three upon their business enterprise.

As Mr. Berry left the stage the lights were gradually dimmed, and the beautiful red velvet curtains were drawn aside disclosing to the gaze of the audience the largest "Atmospheric" screen in the world, being 17 x 22 feet.

The piece de resistance was Thomas H. Ince's million dollar spectacle, "Civilization." The projection of this picture, supervised by Edward Burnes, was notable for the almost perfect timing of speed and the blending of colors which lent added tone and charm to this photoplay. The size of picture being projected was approximately 15 feet 11 inches, by 21 feet 3 inches, and considering that the width of the theatre is only 63 feet, I believe that this size may be reduced to a width of not more than 18 feet without materially affecting the view of those seats in the extreme rear of the theatre. Eight and a half inch, E. F. Gundlach lenses were being used, and although there was considerable loss of light it did not seem to have any effect upon the definition which was indeed very good on the opening night. The operator informed me that half size lenses were to be used as soon as they could be secured.

After the show, which was over shortly before 11, a number of invited guests made their way to the Plaza Restaurant, Webster avenue and Fordham Square, where a dinner was served under the direction of Martin Elkind, caterer, in honor of the opening of the U. S. theatre.

Among those present at the dinner besides Senator Sheridan, were the Messrs. Fleischman, Goldreyer and Kramer; Joseph I. Berry, Edwin Margoulis, Tobias A. Keppler, attorney; Jules Sarzin, James Kirkvoorde, William A. Schact, and I. G. Sherman, Motion Picture News.

An Operator I'd Like to Know

Frank McManus, Corvallis, Ore.: Enclosed you will find a photo of myself and machines. The old Edison, which is shown by the side of the Powers 6-B, has been out of service for several years. It was one of the first machines in Corvallis, and the picture shows a marked contrast between the old style machines ond the new, for which reason I am sending it to you. I thank you very much for your kind and courteous reply to my question in regard to setting up the intermittent sprocket on the Powers 6-B. While the answer contained nothing new to me, I felt that you had taken an interest in my question and was willing to help me out, and that is more than I can say for some editors.

I have written to some projection departments and if my questions did not seem practical enough for them they would give me an answer sarcastic enough to make a person feel like "crawling in a hole and pulling the hole in after him." I can set the intermittent on the Powers machine O. K., but it takes so long and is such a hard job that I thought you might give me some hint as to a shorter method.

It seems to me that Mr. Power could devise a method for setting up this part of his machine which would be effective and yet simple. The crude method now employed is not in keeping with the rest of the machine. It is a slipshod method and only an expert machinist can set it up as it should be.

Answer: Mr. McManus is one of my valued correspondents, and it is with pleasure that I received the photo and am reproducing it in these columns. A fellow likes to know who he is "talking," to and from the various letters I have received from the above correspondent I had pictured him altogether differently. The photograph does show a "marked contrast" in the different style machines used, but the "Old Edison" looks in a healthy condition yet. I have taken up with Mr. Power the matter of setting up the intermittent in a more simple way and am waiting to hear from him as to whether he cannot devise some more "effective yet simple" way to do it.

It will always be my aim to treat in a courteous way any communication sent me. Having been an operator myself for a number of years, I try and put myself in the other fellow's place and give to him the courtesy I would like to receive were the positions reversed. There are times though when a communication will be received that appears nonsensical, but I try to find some merit in it, and when an operator encloses postage for a reply I believe him to be on the level and do my best to be of assistance to him.

It is impossible to reply personally to the many correspondents other than in the columns of this department, and as the number of inquiries that have been received has reached as many as forty a day, you can readily see that it takes some time to answer them and have these answers published. I will let you know the results of Mr. Power's findings as soon as I hear from him.

Poor Light

Harry MacMasters, Lincoln, Neb.: I don't seem to be getting as good a light now as I did when we first installed our generator. The generator is apparently working all right and I am getting a good arc, but the picture does not show up on the screen as good as I think it should. We are using a reflecting type screen and Motiograph projector. Current is 220 volts A. C., through a Ft. Wayne Compensarc, and, believe me, it is some generator. I have never had a bit of trouble with it since it has been installed, and if I can find a remedy for my present trouble I'll have no kick to make.

Answer: If that is all you want I think I can help you out all right. If the generator is apparently all right, and it surely must be, for from what I have seen of these generators they are well built and meeting with much favor among operators. It caused me to smile when I read your boost, for generally when anything goes wrong the first thing the operator does is to blame it on the equipment, and in this case, if you will pardon me, I think you are to blame.

Try the following suggestions and let me know the results: First, examine the wires leading to your lamp and see if they are not badly decomposed. If they are, cut off a sufficient length from the end which attaches to the carbon arm and when you find wire that is not lifeless, i. e., fresh copper surface, put your lugs back on, making them tight, and attach to your lamp. Also be sure that the inside of your carbon jaws are bright and clean, allowing the carbons to make good electrical contact.

See that the deposit of carbon dust is removed from the burner at least once a day and the entire lamp house thoroughly brushed out once a week. Cleanliness is one of the most important factors in the conductivity of electricity, and if it is adhered to will surely prevent much of the trouble which you and others complain of. The second point to be considered, even though I have my doubts as to such being the case, is that your screen may have become dulled by a deposit of dust accumulating upon its surface, which will in a larger or smaller degree affect the brilliancy of the picture.

It would do no harm, however, to first brush off the screen with a soft brush such as the women use to clean up about the house with, and afterward wash off the screen with soap and water, using a soap in which there is no alkili.

This is the method which this certain manufacturer recommends, and there is no doubt but what it will greatly improve your projection. If you follow out the above instructions I feel sure that you will indeed have a Happy New Year, as far as the operating room is conecrned.

Freezes Carbons with Mercury Arc

William B. Smith, Ohio, writes: "Am using a G. E. Mercury Arc Rectifier and at times the arc burns unsteadily and makes a roaring noise which I overcome by freezing the carbons, that is, jamming them together and separating them quickly several times. What I want to know is, Does this cause any injury to the tube?"

Answer: It is evident that you hold your arc too short, and where the carbons are too close together this will cause your light to become unsteady for the reason that a tit develops on the lower carbon by reason of the arc not getting sufficient air to allow it to volatize properly, and graphite is formed to such an extent that the lower carbon burns to a mushroom shape, commonly called a "tit."

This tit has the effect of lessening your illumination while it increases your amperage and you then proceed to jam your carbons together in an attempt to remove this tit, which is noticeable upon the screen and very annoying to the audience. Sometimes you may be successful in removing it at once, but there is also the possibility that you may break off one of the carbon points and so destroy your crater, and will be giving poor results on the screen until a new crater has been formed and the light restored to its normal intensity.

EVERY TIME YOU FREEZE YOUR CARBONS YOU THROW AN OVERLOAD ON THE TUBE, AND THIS IS NOT GOOD PRACTICE. This overload may only be for a few seconds, but if continued from day to day will greatly shorten the life of the tube. Three things to remember are these: First: DON'T FREEZE YOUR CARBONS. Second: Burn a longer arc. Third: Should a "tit" develop at any time, have a pair of arc glasses to look through and open the door of the lamp house and with an old screw driver gently knock it off.

Enterprising Manager for Enterprise Optical Company

O. F. Spahr

O. F. SPAHR, whose photograph appears herewith, has been intimately identified with the progress and expansion of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, Chicago. As Vice-President and General Manager of this company, he has been largely responsible for the rapid growth of this firm.

Mr. Spahr joined the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company in the fall of 1913. The first year of his association with this company was spent in reorganizing and strengthening every department. The sales of the season of 1914-15 showed a 90 per cent. increase over those of 1913-14. The following year, 1915 to 1916, marked an increase of 300 per cent. in the Motiograph business. In the fall of 1915 the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company offered to the trade its new and improved model projector.

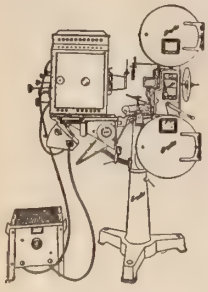
During 1916 Mr. Spahr has devoted a great deal of his time in traveling about the country, getting in touch with dealers, exhibitors and operators in all sections of the United States. Being a man of fine personality, courteous in his dealings with all those he met, he has made possible the establishing of a really helpful Service Department. In organizing this department Mr. Spahr utilized all the ideas he picked up during his extensive travels.

Before joining the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, Mr. Spahr was connected with two large corporations in other fields. Having shown his ability as an organizer and efficiency expert in these companies, he was called upon to put into practice the ideas which he had gathered.

Wagner Forces Shift About

Various important changes in sales office personnel and locations, and in department heads are announced by the Wagner Electric Manufacturing Company of St. Louis, incident to its extensive expansion. They include the following:

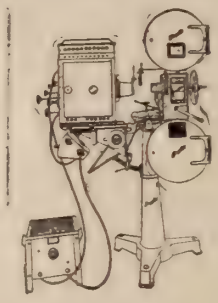
The Chicago office will remove to 918 South Michigan avenue, where it will combine with the service station. The Boston office will remove to 88 Brookline avenue, where it will combine with the service station. The San Francisco office will remove to 159 New Montgomery street, where it will combine with the service station.



P. B. Postelthwaite, formerly manager of the Cincinnati office, is now in charge of the service department with headquarters at the home office. J. T. Bryant, formerly in charge of the Buffalo and Syracuse offices, is now Cincinnati manager. C. P. MacGonigal, of the Philadelphia office, will be in charge of the Syracuse and Buffalo office.

The Los Angeles office will be augmented by the services of H. W. Doubrava, for many years with the New York office. The St. Louis Service Station is now under the direction of Mr. C. M. McCord, who was with the home office. The sales force of the home office has been augmented by Messrs. E. V. Potter, E. Holstrum and O. J. Miller.

Calehuff Supply Company in New Home



With the installation of the Calehuff Supply Company in its comfortable new home, 1233 Vine street, Philadelphia, this supply house acquires the largest quarters in the city, occupying a space of 2,000 square feet. The building is tastefully fitted up, with walls of pleasing yellow tone, floor coverings of substantial brown linoleum and offices furnished in handsome mahogany. The firm handles a complete line of supplies, including screens, scenery, stage settings as well as all the necessities, so that any new theatre may be equipped complete.

Charles A. Calehuff, the president and general manager of the Calehuff Supply Company, is one of the most popular men in the industry.

Wagner Quality

The man who uses alternating current for projection is putting himself in a poor light before his patrons. Perhaps he thinks his light is good enough. Is anything less than the best good enough if the best costs no more? More, a better light with less current than from alternating current is the best reason we can advance for the purchase of a Wagner White Light Converter.

THE CAMERA

How Photographic Developing Compounds Are Made

THE severe shortage of German developing chemicals, caused by the European war, and the subsequent disappearance of practically all such compounds of foreign manufacture, has been the means of attracting considerable attention to the chemistry of benzene or naphthalene derivatives during the past two years.

As is, perhaps, well known, some of the more prominent organic developing substances are being made in the United States—notably hydrokinone, pyrogallic acid and paramidophenol—and while domestic hydrokinone of satisfactory quality is now obtainable, the American made pyro, paramidophenol, and numerous synthetic mixtures sold as photographic developers, leave much to be desired as regards their chemical stability and the quality of results which they produce.

At an opportune time (issues of May 20 and 27, and June 3 and 10, 1916) there appeared in the Camera Department a description of the chemical constituency of the various well-known developing reagents, with some further remarks concerning their characteristics and utility in processing cinematograph film.

As the subject of photographic chemistry is one of absorbing interest, so also is the chemistry of aniline colors and organic developers. It will, therefore, prove interesting to photographers and laboratory men in general, and to our more technical readers in particular, to survey briefly the rationale of the processes by which the more prominent developing substances are prepared.

The following outline of the methods by which photographic developers are prepared is abstracted from the "Chemist and Druggist," a London publication, and well repays the reading.

"Pyrogallic acid, or pyrogallol, is always prepared from gallic acid. On the commercial scale, gallic acid is heated with two to three times its weight of water in a bronze digester at 200 to 210 degrees Centigrade for about half an hour, a paper ring being placed between the vessel and its cover to allow the carbon dioxide to escape. The resulting solution of pyrogallol is boiled with animal charcoal, filtered and concentrated. The pyrogallol, which crystallizes out on cooling, is finally distilled under a pressure of 20 to 30 mm., in order to obtain it perfectly white.

"Hydrokinone or quinol—Aniline (1 part) is dissolved in sulphuric acid (8 parts) and water (30 parts), and a solution of sodium bichromate (2.5 parts) gradually added to the cooled (5 deg. to 10 deg.) solution. Potassium sulphite is added to the brown liquid thus obtained, and the whole extracted with ether. The ether is then distilled off, the residue dissolved in the smallest possible quantity of hot water, sulphurous acid and animal charcoal added, and the solution boiled and filtered. On standing, the quinol separates out from the filtrate.

"Adurol is a haloid substitution-product of quinol, the monochlor-compound being made by passing chlorine through quinol dissolved in benzol. The bromo-derivative is obtained by adding a solution of bromine in benzol to a solution of quinol in the same solvent, evaporating the benzol and crystallizing from ligroin.

"Pyrocatechin, or catechol, is obtained from Beechwood-tar creosote, or by fusing Phenol-ortho-sulphonic acid with twenty-four molecular proportions of Caustic potash at 320 to 330 degs. C.

"Eikonogen is the sodium salt of amido-beta napthol-beta-monosulphonic acid, the discovery of which was made in 1880 (or 1881 Ed.) by the late Professor R. Meldola. It is prepared from Schaeffer's acid, obtained as a by-product in the aniline-dye industry.

"Imogen is eikonogen modified by the introduction of another amido group.

"Diogen is also a napthalene compound—sodium amidonaphtholdisulphonate.

"Para-amidophenol is photographically of considerable importance. The following are two methods by which it is prepared:

"(1) Para-nitrophenol (25 Kilos.) is added to hydrochloric acid (180 Kilos.) at 20 deg. Beaume, and tin (75 Kilos.) contained in an earthenware vessel, the temperature rising to 100 to 106 deg. Concentrated sulphuric acid (200 Kilos.) is next added in a fine stream. After standing for three days, the para-amidophenolsulphate which has separated is filtered off, drained, dissolved in cold water (200 litres) and decomposed with soda, sodium bisulphite (1 Kilo.) being added to the solution to protect the precipitated base from oxidation. The precipitate is filter pressed and dissolved in boiling water (200 to 300 litres) along with sodium bisulphite (10 Kilos.), the filtered solution, on cooling, depositing the base in colorless needles.

"(2) Para-nitrophenol (250 grams), hydrochloric acid, 20 deg. B. (45 grams) and water (500 cc.) are heated to 98 deg. C. in an iron vessel provided with an agitator, and iron borings or filings (about 400 grams) added gradually (15 to 20 grams at a time), so long as a vigorous reaction takes place. The whole is then boiled for half an hour, and extracted with water (about 2 litres) and sodium carbonate (25 to 30 grams). The filtered solution deposits para-amidophenol on cooling, and the mother-liquor is used for the next extraction, which is continued so long as para-amidophenol crystallizes out on cooling.

"Rodinol, as is generally known, is the hydrochloride of para-amidophenol in concentrated solution.

"Orthol is methyl-ortho-amidophenol combined with hydrokinone in its chemical state. The starting point in the manufacture of ortho-amidophenol is ortho-nitrophenol, the ammonium salt being reduced by passing hydrogen sulphide into the solution slowly heated to 40 deg. C.

"Metol, or methyl-para-amidophenol sulphate, is obtained by methylating para-amidophenol by an indirect method such as the following: Two molecules of para-amidophenol and one molecule of chloracetic acid in aqueous solution are boiled for about an hour. On cooling para-hydroxyglycine crystallizes out, which, on melting at 245 to 247 deg. C., decomposes into carbonic acid and metol base, the sulphate of which is the metol of commerce.

"Amidol, or diamidophenol sulphate, is prepared by reducing ordinary dinitrophenol with tin and hydrochloric acid in a similar way to that practised in making para-amidophenol. Dinitro-phenol is best prepared by warming para-nitrophenol with an equal weight of Nitric acid (specific gravity 1.37).

"Glycin, or para-oxyphenylglycocoll, is also prepared from para-amidophenol by the action of monochloracetic acid.

"Edinol is para-amido-saligenin hydrochloride, the saligenin being made from salicin.

"Diphenal, or diamido-oxydiphenyl, is prepared by a method described in British patent No. 25,136 of 1897 (now expired)."

Our non-technical readers will more readily comprehend these descriptions of interesting chemical processes by first referring to our former article on "Photographic Developers," which appeared in the previously cited issues of the Camera Department. Some of the developing reagents at present being manufactured in this country are doubtless produced by methods closely resembling those outlined above, but it remains a source of surprise that the American chemists are, as yet, unable to produce a satisfactory grade of "Metol." It might be of interest to state here that a very high grade of Metol is produced by a concern in France—the Societe Chimique des Usines du Rhone of 6 Rue Pigalle, Paris. This French made Metol has been used with great satisfaction, being known in America under the trade name "Rhodol."

Kodak Company Reissues "Wratten Light Filter" Booklet

WE are pleased to note that the Eastman Kodak Company has brought out a new and revised edition of that extremely valuable booklet, "Wratten Light Filters."

The booklet in question is an atlas of the absorption spectra of an extensive series (something like 100) of photographic light filters, prepared by the Research Laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Company and supplied for use with Wratten Panchromatic plates and for all other branches of scientific, orthochromatic, and color photography.

There have been two previous editions of "Wratten Light Filters," both issued by the Wratten and Wainwright firm in London, but the latest edition is miles ahead of its predecessors, and will find favor with color photographers (and cinematographers) everywhere.

In previous editions of the Wratten filter booklet, the absorptions of the various color filters were illustrated by half-tone illustrations reproduced from Spectrograms taken through a black-glass wedge, this artifice having been introduced by Dr. Mees in 1907. Modern practise in spectroscopic work and in sensitometry has resulted, however, in the appearance of very precise instruments of the polarization type called Spectro-photometers. It is with such instruments as the Hüfner Spectrophotometer or the König-Martens polarization photometer that present-day research work is carried out, and in the present edition of "Wratten Light Filters," the absorption curves of the various filters are depicted exactly as measured on the spectrophotometer and plotted on a wave-length scale. The absorptions of the filters shown are printed black (blocked out) on the diagrams, and the remaining white portion of each diagram shows at a glance the spectral transmission of the filter.

For those who require more quantitative information there are provided, at the back of the book, tables showing the percentage of the incident light transmitted by any given filter at 100 wave-length intervals throughout the spectrum.

There is much further information of value in the booklet in question, and those working on natural color cinematographic processes will see listed numerous filters and sets of filters specially prepared for such work. Although the filters are the main issue, the booklet also has great value, and we recommend its study by all workers on Color Cinematography. While the edition lasts, "Wratten Light Filters" may be obtained from the Eastman Kodak Company for fifty cents per copy.

corded at both ends. When it is over, the buzzer is rung twice several times at intervals. When the second picture begins the buzzer is again sounded, just as it was when the picture started, except that two rings are used. Each time a record of the exact time is made. It is important to have a pencil attached by a string near the card so that there is no excuse for either the operator or ticket seller not keeping the record.

IN addition to helping the patrons, it is a time record for the manager, which will help him regulate the schedule of the house. It is a record of films shown and the back of the card may be used as a record of receipts and attendance, which also helps materially in checking up the income of a theatre.

Suggests a Column of Ideas Contributed by Cameramen

W. G. B., Allston, Mass., writes:

"I have just finished your 'Color Cinematography' series, and think it was all good stuff, especially inasmuch as it really explained, instead of jumping over the hard places.

"Might I suggest that a department of 'kinks and twists,' made up of little practical suggestions and odds and ends of helpful information not known by every cameraman might do a whole lot towards helping a good many of us who haven't years of experience in the game? If every cameraman in the business would "come thru" with just one little bit from his own fund of experience, we would all be better photographers. I would be glad to have you comment on this in your columns and see what your readers would be willing to do to help. In all deference and respect to your knowledge and ability, I doubt that any one man could carry on such a department for any length of time, so suggest the contributing idea.

"With best wishes for departmental and personal success."

In Reply:

We are pleased to hear from Mr. B., whom we have previously met in New York, and who is the progressive and studious type of worker that will be heard from as a leading cameraman in the future. You rather flatter us, Mr. B., in your remarks concerning the "Color Cinematography" article. The pressure of regular Camera Department matters forced us to greatly curtail that article, and many interesting things which we wished to put upon record there must appear in forthcoming issues. We hope, moreover, to be able in a short while to place within reach of all those interested a revised and amplified version of "Color Cinematography."

Our statement that the correspondent is a true "progressive" is borne out by his suggestion concerning a department of "kinks and twists" contributed by cameramen from their own experience. The attitude of the Camera Department and the writer toward this proposition is a hospitable one. We will welcome any useful suggestions or ingenious and readily applicable remedies for the difficulties encountered by cameramen, and will present them to Camera Department readers with or without our comments as occasion may require.

Those who contribute should not fail, however, to bear in mind that their propositions must be in accordance with facts and not previously published elsewhere. As is generally known, the purpose of the Camera Department is to promote scientific knowledge of the practice of cinematography. The Department leads in this field, and of consequence material to be of service must be exclusive.

We believe that a perusal of former issues of the Camera Department will serve to show the correspondent that many kinks and twists are included in the text of the articles on various subjects. It has always been our endeavor to make each article a small encyclopedia of information on its particular subject.

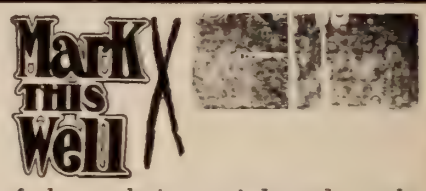
Although many correspondents, both amateur and professional, have not so far favored the department with any ideas for publication, a large number of inquiries are constantly being dealt with. Our message to cinematography is—that the Camera Department is ready at all times to answer inquiries pertaining to photography, cinematography and laboratory work. No charge of any kind is exacted, but if anyone has anything good, we think it only fair that they give us a story in exchange for our advice.

Slide Company Opens Office in Heart of Industry

THE Greater New York Slide Company, which for the past four years has been located in the Academy of Music building, Fourteenth street, has opened its main offices and studio at 154 West Forty-fifth street, opposite the Film Exchange building.

Finding quarters getting too crowded to handle the volume of business, it opened an uptown studio and is now operating both.

It has been working to capacity filling the demand for Mica slides from the film trade, aside from making all the slides for the music publishers.



The Greater New York is now issuing a forty-eight-page catalogue, showing over three hundred illustrations pertaining to slides, which can be had free.

MUSIC AND THE PICTURE

Poor Music Drives Away Patronage

SEVERAL days ago I had the opportunity of meeting a gentleman who I know as a great picture fan and a man who likes to see a good picture. "Well," he said to me, "don't you think that music is greatly improving our moving picture shows? Just look around and you will quickly notice that the most successful theatres today are the ones paying special attention to their musical programs." "Is that so?" my friend replied. "Well, it seems to me that you never visited some of my neighboring theatres," and then he began his sad story.

"We were out again searching for a show, myself and my wife. Nearing 174th street we noted some attractive posters that bespoke a good show within, and we hied ourselves thither. The pictures were good, very good, but ye gods, the music, if you dare call it music. The being who presided at the piano believed that he could really play that instrument. His wreteched melody (it's a crime to term it melody) was a mixture of discords and a lot of jamboree. When the picture called for staccato, he promptly rattled off moderato. When the scenes switched to that which would have balanced well with pianissimo music he jumped into fortissimo music. Altogether his offerings were terrible. I overheard remarks from neighbors something like this: 'For goodness sake, who let that pianist in?' 'Why don't they chloroform him?' It occurs to one that the owner of this music house certainly made a bad guess as regards his musical offerings.

"Of course, it is understood that in a small theatre the expense of a two or a three piece orchestra is out of the question, and that one player is all the owner can ordinarily afford; but, great guns! cannot the theatre owner provide a pianist who can at least finger the keys half way decent and entice from his instrument a semblance of what the average audience wants. This question of musical accompaniment for pictures is of vital importance. Ask the average theatre owner if he provides good music and he will say I certainly do, and when you hear the average offerings you feel like weeping in sympathy for the poor deluded exhibitor who thinks he is providing good music when what he offers as music is simply junk. If your music is poor your audience is first to scent it and you cannot remedy it unless you switch your player and get one who can really play pictures.

"Playing pictures is an art. The player must not only be alert to the constantly changing action going on all the time, but he must be able to shade his playing or accentuate it where such light and shade is required. Pay a little more attention to your music and you will be rewarded generously in growing patronage. Later I wrote a letter to the theatre manager and advised him to change his pianist. Goodness, goodness, how the theatre owner flew off his handle. 'You don't know what you are talking about. Why, I pay that pianoplayer $30 per week and his music is fine.'"

Moral: Look to the quality of your music, Mr. Exhibitor. Don't hire a player and pay him thirty dollars per—when you receive in return not alone about eight dollars' worth of music, but worse than that. Instead of attracting patrons for other nights, this bugbear melody drives people away. Who wants to attend a show where bad music is dispensed with the picture? How many others do you suppose sat in that house that night and squirmed through that show listening to the nerve-racking mixture of discords? How many people do you suppose walked out of that theatre disgusted, vowing never to return again unless new and better musical accompaniment was provided?

"News" Will Answer All Musical Inquiries

THE music page published in the NEWS is a great aid to orchestra leaders, and all the theatre manager has to do is to hand it to his musicians.

Suitable and effective musical accompaniments are of prime necessity and to every moving picture production. In view of this important necessity MOTION PICTURE NEWS has now completed special arrangements to provide all subscribers with complete musical cue sheets free of charge. The practical benefit of this service will and must be of incalculable benefit to musical directors as well as to exhibitors. Write to us as soon as you know your bookings for musical cue sheets, if you do not find them in the NEWS. All such requests for cue sheets will be promptly attended to.

When to Get "Effects"

MAURICE SMITH, Philadelphia:

I would greatly appreciate your opinion as to "effects" for the pictures. Are "effects" effective?

Answer—In many a moving picture orchestra there is more attention given to securing "effects" of a low comedy nature, than real consistent "effect." Sandpaper and bear growl, the slamming of a door and the screeching of steamboat whistles, imitation of a dog barking, gongs ringing out while a burglar sneaks through a chimney—burlesque realistic effects of this kind are anything but "effective" if not exactly timed.

We are very apt to get the would-be effect after the reason for it no longer exists. In many cases these forced "comedy effects" are vulgar and likely to offend the better part of an audience. And quite indefensible is the introduction of comedy effects into serious or tragic pictures. An occasional laugh may be secured, but at the expense of what is artistically right and fitting. It should be remembered that the majority of people who attend the photoplay houses are "serious in their serious moments," and object to the introduction of comedy where it is out of place.

Comedy has its own legitimate field, where humorous effects are in order, and in the company of music players the drummer is the leading comedian. But he should confine his efforts to his special field. To quote an authority on the subject:

"A comedy is the only battle field for the live drummer. He should try to work in all possible effects to get a good laugh from the audience. But he should not get the laugh owing to the confusion arising through being always too late with his instruments. I have heard a dog bark while a lady spoke—a locomotive bell ring for an ambulance!"

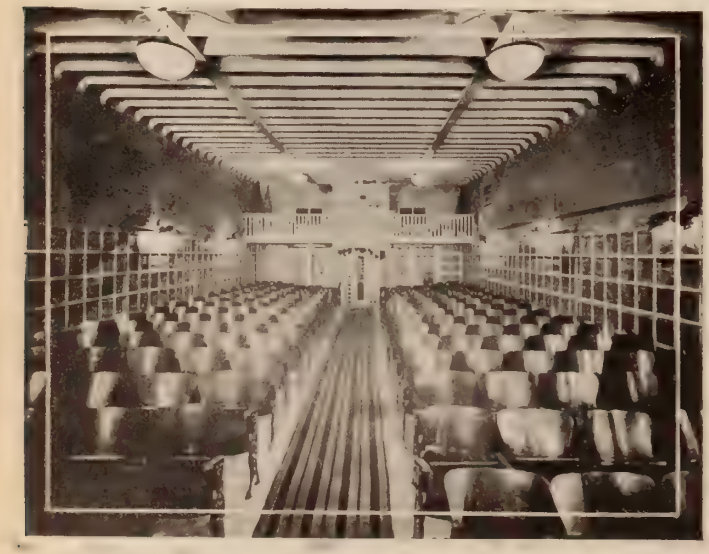
BUILDING AND FURNISHING

Winter Garden of Westerville, Ohio, Is Artistically Decorated

THE Winter Garden, owned and operated by the Winter Garden Company under the management of Messrs. Williams and Phalor, is located in the business section of Westerville, Ohio, and is doing a big business.

The simplicity of construction of the house, together with its attractiveness, has been a source of considerable comment. There have been several theatres in towns of this locality copied along its lines, this theatre being ideally constructed for the showing of pictures.

The house is twenty-seven feet wide by seventy feet deep and is constructed of brick and concrete, thus making the building absolutely fireproof.



The front of the theatre is artistically decorated with small box-wood trees. A row of incandescent electric lamps is strung across the front of the theatre and some have been placed in the flower-box above. At night this lends a very pleasing and attractive effect.

The lobby, which is ten feet deep by twenty-six feet wide, is worthy of much comment for its simplicity. The box-office, which contains a National Cash Register Ticket Selling machine, is built right into the theatre and is centered between the two doors, the ticket window being flush with the front wall of the house. This idea in construction gives a neat and uniform appearance to the theatre. There are four poster frames in the lobby in which the posters of daily and coming attractions are displayed. The doors on either side of the ticket window lead directly into the theatre, there being no inner lobby or foyer. The floor of the lobby is of a composition red tile.

An Old English Garden was the theme for the interior decoration, the walls being of light green brick—no plastering—white trellis running around the wall to the height of six feet, covered with artificial vines, this giving the atmosphere of a garden more than an enclosed theatre. The woodwork throughout the interior is white, tastefully harmonizing with the green. The floor is of concrete.

The theatre was furnished by the Bennett Seating Company with 250 comfortable opera chairs (stained green to match interior) and the management contemplates adding 100 more.

The projection room, which is under the care of Merrit Ream, contains a Power's 6-B machine equipped with an Amberlux Lens Filter. The Winter Garden claims to be the first theatre in the world to use the Amberlux to eliminate eye strain on people in the front rows and make these seats as desirable as those in the rear.

Interior of the Winter Garden, Westerville

This projection room is ideally located in that it is placed in the exact center of the auditorium and its height is such as to show the pictures to their best advantage with absolutely no distortion at any point, thus securing perfect definition of the picture, bringing out every detail with absolute naturalness. The projection room is also equipped with a ventilating flue of ample dimensions, leading to the open air, which not only secures to the operator sufficient fresh air at all times, but will carry off all smoke and flame should any accident occur, without unnecessarily alarming the audience. The length of throw is 59 feet, and a Mirroroid screen is used, giving very satisfactory results.

Attractive Exterior of the Winter Garden

The theatre is heated by a hot-air furnace used in connection with electric forced draft. This system serves the same purpose as a more expensive outfit, and keeps the theatre well heated and ventilated at all times. The semi-indirect lighting system is used. The ceiling fixtures are the bowl type, opalescent globe suspended by chains, which light the auditorium by the indirect method, and can be dimmed down to the necessary degree by means of dimmers. In addition to the ceiling fixtures there are side-wall brackets containing two lamps each, which, used in conjunction with the other fixtures, make the interior of the theatre as bright as day.

The orchestra, consisting of a violin, clarionet and a Steinway grand piano, render music most suitable for the picture.

Pathe, Fox and Universal share the honors for the week, five reels being shown daily. The management advertises its daily attractions and features extensively in the local newspapers, by automobile and by distributing hand bills among its patrons.

There are three performances daily, no matinee. Admission prices are ten and fifteen cents.

"Before and After" Floral Decoration

THROUGH the courtesy of the Scroeder Art Flower Manufacturing Company some interesting pictures of theatres were shown in this department last week "before and after taking" their treatment for that cold bare feeling which some theatres find it so hard to get away from. The illustrations do not represent decoration that is by any means prohibitive in cost. The stage setting, which is typical of what can be done with the Opera House in any good sized town, is particularly worth study.

The modern tendency is of course away from too elaborate decorations, whether floral or otherwise, but the big stage, where pictures are shown in a setting that must be elaborate to be proudly effective, lends itself to the use of artificial flowers and greenery better than to any other form of treatment. All artificial flowers nowadays are fireproofed, when put to such use.

Washington's Savoy, Reconstructed, Is a "House of Beauty"

THE Savoy theatre, located on Fourteenth street, near Columbia road, Northwest, Washington, D. C., the fourth of the string of houses conducted by Harry M. Crandall, one of Washington's foremost exhibitors, is a surprise to those connected with the industry and a treat to the patrons, for during the period that it has been closed it has undergone many changes.

To permit of the installation of a balcony with seating accommodations, it was necessary to cut away a large section of the ceiling so that the projection would not be interrupted and to give the necessary height. Another important change was the entire refinishing of the front. As it was originally built, from plans drawn by B. Stanley Simmons, the front was of tapestry brick done in Old Colonial style. This has all been changed and one would hardly recognize the reconstructed building as that which has occupied this site for several years.

The interior is very beautiful. All ornamentation is carried out in the Italian renaissance style, grotesque ornament being entirely eliminated. At the back of the stage, curtains are drawn, completely covering the screen at intermission. These curtains are painted to lend distance through an Italian garden scene with banks of flowers obscuring the front of the stage. Over this the proscenium arch is highly ornamented, beginning with the receding color, blue, advancing with old ivory and French grays to the box line draped in the stationary color, red. Going forward the side walls are toned in old ivory and grays, with a base of Sienna marble, leading to the lobby.

The floor is of cement, having a hardened top layer, to prevent chipping, and is covered with cork carpet. In each of the ceiling panels there is suspended ornamental electric light fixtures, each containing lamps of one-hundred-watt power. On each of the twelve pilasters along the walls is a bracket with the lights masked by artificial fruits, leaves and flowers. At the rear of theatre, running from wall to wall, is an arch containing more than thirty electric lights.

The auditorium has a width of nearly seventy feet and a depth of about one hundred feet. The floor is laid bowl-shaped on an incline sloping one-eighth inch to the foot and as a result the screen is easily visible from all seats and there is no need for the patron to twist and turn in an effort to see over the heads of the other patron in front of him.

From the floor line at the walls a base of imitation marble extends to the belt course. The wall lines run to the first rib of the ceiling, forming a slow half elipse. Pilasters are placed on each side of a blind window which ornaments each of the walls. At the ends nearest the stage the walls have been splayed to an angle of sixty degrees and recesses formed therein to give the appearance of private boxes. These are decorated with fan-shaped ornaments and above the center of each is a cartouche.

The floor of the lobby is paved with mosaic blocks in which a handsome lyre is worked as a centerpiece. The walls are carried up to a height of six feet with a base of Irish Conamara marble and a dado of Carian green marble. The walls above this are of a greenish yellow Caen stone leading to a ceiling elaborately treated in gold leaf, French grays and cobalt blue. The mirrors across the west front of the operators' booth are done in gold leaf lacquered. The doors are full mirrored. The lobby is forty-five feet wide at the street line and has a depth of thirty-four feet.

The operators' booth runs the full width of the lobby and is eleven feet deep. It is equipped with toilet facilities and is well ventilated. Two new Simplex motor-driven machines have been installed, replacing the two that were formerly used.

Reconstructed Lobby, Crandall's Savoy, Washington, D. C.

The gallery, which seats three hundred people, is of the cantilever type, the face of which is handsomely ornamented in decorations and ornamental plaster. The seats are done in Flemish oak, with the ironwork colored French gray with the initial S done in gold, in relief, on the outside of each row.

The front is done in the Moorish East Indian type, the colors in the ornament being polychrome, worked up in vandykes, greens and reds. The background is pure with Medusa. The marquise is done in verde antique with high lights in vermilion. The doors and woodwork of the exterior is in the same colors.

Twelve exits make it possible to empty the theatre in a minute. Rest rooms have been provided for ladies and gentlemen at the entrance to the auditorium.

The Savoy theatre is operated by Harry M. Crandall, who has associated with him Joseph P. Morgan. The latter is the house manager.

Bethlehem to Have 1,400 Seat House

KURTZ BROTHERS, of Bethlehem, Pa., are planning to erect a new modern opera house. The new building will have a frontage of 100 feet on East Broad street, and a depth of 190 feet, leaving proper room for exits on each side. The width of the proscenium opening will be 50 feet and it will be 48 feet in height, shielded by an asbestos curtain. The stage will be the entire width of the opera house with a depth of 50 feet from footlights to the rear wall. There will be a number of modern equipped dressing rooms and a large rehearsal room underneath the stage. The auditorium will be 96 feet clear by 100 feet deep, from the entrance to footlights and the seating capacity will be 1,400.

The foyer will have a ladies' cloak room, with a matron in charge, and a men's lounging room. There will be six large loges on each side of the stage. The balcony will be of the very latest design, with a seating capacity of 600, making the entire capacity about 2,100. The furniture will be upholstered. The interior decoration will be carried out very handsomely with most modern electrical fixtures.

With the purchase a short time ago of a forty-acre tract of land on Murray Hill near San Diego, the Empire Feature Film trust began actual work in preparation for the construction of a motion picture studio that will cost $100,000. The site overlooks the city and bay and will be taken over by the Empire Trust for Henry Kabierske, who will produce, as director general, feature films.

Among some of his greater efforts will be three ten-reel features, "The Conquest," an Indian story; "The Silver Arrow," by Elbert Hubbard, and "The Ten Commandments."

Mr. Kabierske, it is known, directed "The Argonauts," "The Daughter of the Don," and other big pictures, and was formerly one of the greatest "pageant men" in the country.

The affairs of the trust will be administered by a board of managers composed of S. H. Woodruff, architect and builder of New York and Los Angeles; Tracy E. Shonts of Los Angeles; Hugh McKean of Philadelphia and Los Angeles, and William B. Gross, a well known wealthy citizen of San Diego.

A stipulation in the agreement for the transfer of the land calls for the expenditure of $20,000 within six months.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA

Negotiations have been closed for the construction of a handsome new theatre at Thirteenth street, between E and F, northwest, Washington, to be ready for opening next September. George M. Mann, the manager of Paramount films in this territory and Washington; H. Rozier Dulaney, representing the Willard estate; R. S. McGill, for Thomas J. Fisher and Company, representing A. T. Babcock, and C. M. Casey were the principals in the purchasing of the property.

GEORGIA

J. Wilson Smith has taken charge of the Alamo theatre No. 1, Atlanta.

Mr. Smith went to Atlanta from Spartansburg, S. C., where for a number of years he managed various theatres for the S. A. Lynch Enterprises.

Mr. Smith has been in the exhibitor end of the picture business for a number of years and will no doubt make a big success of the theatre as he is going to change the present policy of the house by giving the patrons a better class of pictures.

W. L. Schmidt has been appointed manager of the Savoy theatre, Atlanta, by Adolph Samuels to succeed Mr. Jackson.

Mr. Schmidt is an old timer in the film business, going to that city from New Castle, Ind., where for a number of years he has managed picture theatres.

He is going to change the present policy of the theatre by installing a seven-piece orchestra and running the Paramount service as well as other special features, and he believes by doing so he can furnish the patrons of his theatre a better class of pictures.

The house is to be thoroughly cleaned and art directors have been given instructions to proceed with the decoration. The house has a seating capacity of four hundred.

ILLINOIS

A $1,000,000 theatre is to be built in Chicago by Gilbert M. Anderson, formerly part owner of the Essanay Company and known to film fans as "Broncho Billy." It will be devoted to the legitimate drama and will be located in Randolph street, near the Garrick. Building operations will start May 1. With the new playhouse which Al H. Woods plans to adjoin the Garrick, Randolph street will rank a close second to Broadway as a rialto.

MASSACHUSETTS

Waltham.—Architects's plans for a new motion picture house on the North Side are completed and the city will have a theatre constructed upon the very latest model. Waltham men are furthering the project and work will start on the building within a short time.

OHIO

Mark Gates, who was instrumental in the promotion and erection of the Circle theatre, has just completed a deal for the erection of a motion picture theatre at Dayton, O. The Dayton Theatre Building Company is about to be incorporated under the laws of Ohio with a capital stock of $250,000. The new theatre is to be built near the new Miami hotel, also built by Indianapolis and Dayton men. Indianapolis men interested, in addition to Gates, who has been most active in the organization, include Meyer Efroymson of Efroymson and Wolf and Isadore Feibleman of Ramberger and Feibleman, attorneys.

W. A. Bryson of Dayton, Ohio, is handling a proposition to lease or purchase the old First Methodist Church site on Main between First and Second streets and to erect thereon a modern motion picture theatre to cost $100,000. An outright sale for $175,000 or a long term lease at $125,000 is the program. The building now on the site is owned by the Associates' Improvement Company, composed of Fred H. Rike, Frank R. Wright, and Harry L. Schenek.

KENTUCKY

The new Alhambra theatre, Campbellsville, Ky., was opened December 12. This motion picture house is one of the most modern and handsomest to be found in the state outside the city of Louisville. The theatre is under the management of W. I. Meader. James Arvin and Ray Borders have been engaged as operators.

The new Brownie theatre opened recently by the Brown Amusement Co. at Middlesboro, Ky., is the handsomest and best equipped motion picture house in the mountain region of the state. In design, decoration and equipment this theatre is in every way modern.

The lobby opens on and at the sidewalk level with entrances leading from it to the foyer of the first floor and to the stairways on either side which lead to the theatre balcony and to the third floor of the building. The foyer leads by side entrances to the aisles of the first floor. Eighteen rows of seats are arranged on the level floor of the auditorium and sixteen more rows of seats on an inclined rear floor. Access to the 142 balcony seats is had by side stairways from the lobby and thence by two partly inclosed side passageways. An unobstructed view of the screen is had from every seat in the house. The indirect system of lighting is used and the wall colors are of white and light yellow. The seating capacity is about 480.

PENNSYLVANIA

A new theatre is to be erected in Center avenue and is to be known as the New Victoria theatre. It is to be erected by the Enterprise Amusement Co. at 1714-20 Center avenue, Pittsburgh, and will be one of the finest theatres in that part of Pittsburgh.

It will be erected in a district which is in need of a theatre, and Mark Browarsky, the manager, is well versed in the needs of his patrons. He now operates the Victoria theatre and has had a great deal of experience in the theatre business in that section of the city.

The lease on the Victoria theatre expires in the spring and the new Victoria theatre is to take the place of the one now running, which will be torn down later in the spring.

The new theatre will have a capacity of 1,000 and will be erected in the bleecher style, similar to several of the newer theatres in this section. The building will be 60 by 100 feet and four store rooms will be contained in the frontage of the first floor besides the entrance to the theatre.

The Enterprise Amusement Co. now operates four theatres in this section—The Rex, The Victoria, The Rialto and the Orpheum.

G. B. Meyers and Son, owners of the Gem theatre at Derry, Pa., are erecting a fine new picture house in that town which will cost when completed $10,000. The work on this theatre has been going on for some time and it is expected that the theatre will be completed by the middle of January.

The theatre will have a capacity of 550 and will be up to the minute in every particular. A balcony will be included in the plans and more than 100 persons will be seated there.

The owners of the new theatre have spent their time and money to make this theatre one of the best and safest in the state and will have one of the prettiest of theatres when the work is done and the doors opened to the public.

Philadelphia Has New $200,000 House

THAT part of northern Philadelphia known as Tioga, comprising an immense section including both business and residential patronage, has had a new theatre added to its list. The Strand, a $200,000 photoplay house, situated at the intersection of Venango street and Germantown avenue, will throw open its doors on New Year's Day.

Many new ideas are embodied in the construction of the Strand which is under the management of Herbert Effinger, also manager of the Leader in West Philadelphia. A full description of this newest Quaker City picture house will appear in a forthcoming issue of MOTION PICRURE NEWS.

Kansas Man Spending Money

HARRY MILLER is the proprietor of a new theatre at Greensburg, Kansas, the construction of which is now going on. The theatre will cost about $25,000 and will be strictly modern. Mr. Miller is a former Kansas City man.

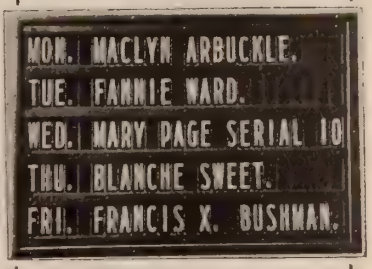
Alexander Moore, owner of the Hilltop theatre, Warrington avenue, announces that he is making arrangements to remodel his theatre with the coming of the new year.

The seating capacity of the theatre is to be doubled and a new lighting system will be installed and the theatre is to be painted inside and out. The cost of the work is fixed at $6,000.

Work on the improvements will be started with the coming of the New Year and it is thought that the work will take two months to complete. There is to be no interruption with the shows of the theatre, all the work to be done will be carried on at night after the theatre is closed to patrons.

When all the work is completed this theatre will be one of the best in that part of the state and one that will be a credit to Pittsburgh. It will be one of the safest theatres in Pittsburgh also, as the aisles will be widened and fireproofing will be done.

American Auto Arc Again Raises Price



ANNOUNCEMENT has just been made that on February 1 the price of the American Auto Arc will be advanced to seventy-five dollars.

The reason for this second raise in price is due to the continued advance in price of raw materials as well as labor.

Picture Achievements, 1916

During the year 1916, William Fox produced and presented to the public "A Daughter of the Gods"—the picture beautiful—with Annette Kellermann, the greatest "box office" moving picture ever made.

He also produced "The Honor System"—the greatest human story ever told, staged by R. A. Walsh, which will be the sensation of the coming season.

He also produced 52 big features during 1916, headed by 100 celebrated box office names.

Picture Promises, 1917

For the year 1917 William Fox will present to the exhibitors and public 70 productions varying in length from 4500 to 6000 feet.

These productions will be on a scale of unsurpassed magnificence and will maintain the Fox standard.

William Fox will also produce 52 comedy features of 2 reels each, released one every week, with production details that will startle the world.

Watch for the announcement of another gigantic production.

By A. C. Gunter

A Five Part Drama of a Man Who Returned from the Valley of the Shadow,—To Live Again Among Those Who Thought Him Dead.

Directed by Frederick Thomson

"The Chattel" and "An Enemy to the King", Mr. Sothern's earlier Vitagraph productions, have demonstrated conclusively his enormous box-office value.

"The Man of Mystery," his third Vitagraph photoplay, gives exhibitors yet another opportunity to bring to their theatres all the prestige and popularity that is carried by E. H. Sothern's name.

The unprecedented success of the first two Sothern releases assures crowded houses for "The Man of Mystery."

With charming Anita Stewart, darling of the millions, in the role of Robert W. Chambers' most lovable heroine, the wonder film comes into being.

Robert W. Chambers is unquestionably America's most popular author. When "The Girl Philippa" was published serially in Cosmopolitan Magazine it delighted upwards of five millions of readers and the story is now being widely read in book form.

This means months of crowded houses for the photoplay before the demand already created can be accommodated.

All the Hearst newspapers throughout the country will carry full-page, half-page and quarter-page spreads for a period of eight weeks, timed to meet the release of "The Girl Philippa" in each territory.

Full pages will be taken for three issues each in Cosmopolitan Magazine, Harper's Bazar, Hearst's Magazine and Good Housekeeping Magazine.

"The Girl Philippa" is above all else, a drama of intense power.

True, it is a wonderful spectacle, but that is merely the setting. Secret service agents in a baffling chase that leads half across the world, Europe on the brink of the Great War, daring adventure and thrilling fights, and through it all as sweet a love story as has ever been told.

Here is a pulse-quickening drama that will make you forget even the spectacular beauty of the picture. It's the kind of a play you'll want to see again and again.

RELEASED BY TRIANGLE DISTRIBUTING CORPORATION

ALL PERMANENT successes in motion picture production have been founded on the greatness, the vitality and power of the plays offered to the public. After centuries no one has improved upon Shakespeare's "The play's the thing."

GOLDWYN PICTURES will link the greatest plays with stars of only the first magnitude from the ranks of the theatre and the screen.

THIS ORGANIZATION will rank the play, its production and its star as of first concern. To guarantee picture perfection this company has allied with it the playwrights responsible for the greatest box office stage successes of the present theatrical decade. These authors are:

IRVIN S. COBB	PORTER EMERSON BROWNE
ROI COOPER MEGRUE	MARGARET MAYO
EDGAR SELWYN	AVERY HOPWOOD

and as many more, soon to be announced. Their plays will receive the most elaborate production that can be devised by the masters of stage, screen and scenic investiture.

BEFORE ONE PICTURE is released the exhibitors of America will have the opportunity to see not less than SIX finished Goldwyn Pictures, complete in every detail.

ONE OF THE NOVEL developments in this organization will be its reliance upon and confidence in the judgments of the nation's exhibitors—instead of treating their views with the contempt and disregard that have so undermined the solidarity of the picture industry.

MUTUAL NEWS

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

JANUARY 13, 1917

MARGARITA FISCHER WILL BE SEEN IN "THE BUTTERFLY GIRL"

MARGARITA FISCHER'S third Fischer-Mutual Photoplay is ready. It's title is "The Butterfly Girl." It is released the week of January 8. It is in five acts. It was directed by Henry Otto. Miss Fischer is afforded unusual opportunities in the odd role of a girl of the sideshows. For it is as a girl of the "honkatonks" that she is cast. The cries of the sideshow "spieler" can almost be heard, so saturated is the production with the spirit of the carnival, the Midway and the amusement park.

Thrilling Scenes Aplenty.

Aside from the glamor and glitter of the sideshow, scenes of real thrill and daring mark the production. Ere it ends the spectator will witness some views of magnificent beauty atop a Hawaiian volcano. All the attention to detail which have made previous releases of the Pollard Picture Plays Company unique, is again assured. Miss Fischer is supported in this production by a remarkable cast. In even minor roles are cast players who are ordinarily stars themselves.

Third of the Fischer Series.

"The Butterfly Girl" is the third of the Margarita Fischer Series of Mutual Photoplays. "The Pearl of Paradise" and "Miss Jackie of the Navy," already released, are playing to capacity business at theatres all over the country. Bookings on these productions can be made at any of the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges in America. The coming Fischer-Mutual Photoplays are "The Devil's Assistant," "A Knight at Tarquizzi" and "Birds of Passage." The nearest Mutual Exchange can arrange bookings on the entire Fischer Series.

Unusual Lighting Effects In "Lumberlands" Serial

Notable as "A Lass of the Lumberlands" has been in other respects, it is setting new standards in lighting effects. Some of the night scenes recently shown have been little short of marvelous. Audiences everywhere have commented on the beauty of effects obtained by the filming of brightly-lighted trains rushing through the night at top speed—the weird light of bon-fires reflected on the faces of men assembled in the big forests of the lumbering regions—and other startling effects arranged by the director of the latest Helen Holmes production released by the Signal Film Corporation through the 68 Mutual Exchanges. Bookings on this startling chapterplay can be made now at any Mutual Exchange.

NANCE O'NEIL WILL

In Her New Series of Mutual Photoplays

HAVE STAR SUPPORT

A supporting cast of unusual merit has been assembled by the Frank Powell Producing Corporation for the series of Nance O'Neil-Mutual Photoplays now under way. As leading man for Miss O'Neil in "Mrs. Balfame," the first of the O'Neil-Mutual Photoplays, Robert Elliott has been engaged. Mr. Elliott on the speaking stage has appeared in such famous productions as "The Country Girl," "Seven Keys to Baldpate," "Within the Law," and "The Lie." In musical comedy he has been cast in prominent roles in "The Arcadians," "The Quaker Girl" and "The Pink Lady." In pictures, too, he has won laurels of no mean sort. The supporting cast is still further augmented by the signing of Alfred Hickman and Agnes Eyre in other leading roles. "Mrs. Balfame." the first Nance O'Neil-Mutual Photoplay, is now in course of production. Its release date will soon be announced. Bookings on the O'Neil-Mutual Photoplays can now be made at any Mutual Film Exchange.

William Russell's Next

William Russell is already hard at work on the next Russell-Mutual photoplay—the first which has been undertaken since the renewal of his contract with the American Film Company, Inc. It is entitled, "A Son of Battle," and is from the pen of Nell Shipman, already famous for her stories and plays. Francelia Billington, recently secured as leading woman for Mr. Russell, will play the leading feminine role.

GAIL KANE SIGNED BY AMERICAN FILM FOR MUTUAL PLAYS

STILL another famous star has been secured for the Mutual photoplays. The American Film Company, Inc., announces the acquisition of Miss Gail Kane. Today this popular favorite is ranked as one of America's foremost artists, having risen to fame by sheer merit alone. On the speaking stage she scored many triumphs. Since adopting the screen as a medium of expression for her art she has endeared herself to thousands of motion picture goers. Now in Gail Kane-Mutual Photoplays she is to be provided with vehicles worthy of her talent and undoubtedly will rise to still greater heights.

Will Star in New Series.

Miss Kane will be presented in a series of Gail Kane-Mutual Photoplays. These multiple reel feature productions will be staged at the studios of the American Film Company, Inc. The utmost care and attention will be paid to each detail of production. Stories, staging and costuming will all be in keeping. The best of direction and photography will be assured. In every way the Mutual and the American will co-operate to the end that the Gail Kane-Mutual Photoplays may be fitting examples of the Mutual Film Corporation's new policy for 1917—"Big Stars Only."

Big Stories Provided.

A number of vehicles for Miss Kane's debut as an American-Mutual star are already under consideration. Among them are included manuscripts from some of the best known authors in the world. Only those plays best suited to Miss Kane's peculiar talents will be selected. The public may rest assured it is Mutual's intention to present only the leading stars in productions of the highest quality. Exhibitors will find it advantageous to confer with their nearest Mutual Exchange regarding the Gail Kane series of Mutual photoplays.

First "Reporters" Release Welcomed by Eager Public

"The Jade Necklace," first installment of the new Mutual serial, "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters," has been shown. It has gone over "Big." Exhibitors everywhere are reporting it brought them capacity business at every performance. It was hailed by the photoplay fans as something really new—really different—a novelty. It features Earl Metcalfe, Helen Greene and Zena Keefe. It is booking now at 68 Mutual Film Exchanges.

The Popular Favorite

GAIL KANE

THIS announces the acquisition of another new American-Mutual Star—Miss Gail Kane. Among the foremost artistes of the screen and stage, Miss Kane occupies a most prominent position. Her charming personality and her extraordinary dramatic talent have won for her an exceptional reputation in the photoplay world.

Miss Kane will be presented in a series of super-productions to be made at the studios of the American Film Co., Inc., and to be distributed through the 68 Exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation throughout America. A number of remarkable plays have been secured in which Miss Kane will be starred.

This announcement is made in furtherance of the Mutual Film Corporation's new policy for 1917—"Big Stars Only." It is merely another indication of the Mutual plan to present only the leading stars in productions of the highest quality. Announcements of releases of the Gail Kane-Mutual Photoplays will be made shortly. Exhibitors are requested to confer with their Mutual Exchanges for detailed information.

HELEN HOLMES in A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS

A Spectacular Motion Picture Chapterplay of the North Woods

"We have been holding the people out every night we play 'A Lass of the Lumberlands' and now each night the receipts are bigger," writes J. Cairno, manager of the Amo Theatre of Detroit, Michigan. On the very first night that he opened with the big new Helen Holmes chapterplay a crowd jammed his lobby and extended out into the street before the doors were opened. For capacity business at YOUR theatre, book this spectacular story of the lumber camps—"A Lass of the Lumberlands." Fifteen chapters—a new chapter each week. See your nearest Mutual Exchange.

Pearl of the Army

We've been telling you that Pathé Serials are a real and definite part of national life - that everyone sees them and everyone talks of them.

The Terre Haute Tribune
AND GAZETTE.

An independent newspaper. Daily and Sunday. The Terre Haute Gazette, established 1869. The Terre Haute Tribune, established 1884.

KEEP YOUR EYE ON THIS.

"Pearl of the Army," the Tribune's great serial which will start Monday, is a story with a purpose. It deals with a topic which should be foremost in the interest of every citizen.

Events continue to demonstrate that, in spite of great progress made in building up the nation's military strength and preparedness, the United States is still woefully unready for anything like a real war emergency. More and more, we believe, public sentiment will be found veering toward the necessity of some system of universal military training.

The annual report of Major General Scott, chief of staff of the army, emphasizes what every well-informed American already realizes, that the United States is still in a condition of unpreparedness.

The mobilization of the guard proved the inadequacy of the system. Even under the favorable circumstances attending the calling of the state troops into the national service, recruiting was found extremely difficult, slow and expensive. Mere skeleton regiments answered the call.

Editorial, Dec. 15 - '16

Look through the papers, Mr. Exhibitor. Can you afford to overlook pictures so good that they are used as a basis for editorials, so good that the big papers are filled with mention of them?

When Henry Walthall said that his role of Dr. John Lancaster in "The Truant Soul" was his best effort we who remembered "The Avenging Conscience" and "The Birth of a Nation" smiled dubiously and thought it was one of those little remarks that the press agent sometimes demands from even the most truthful star. But Mr. Walthall was too modest. For straight dramatic value we cannot expect better on the stage or the screen. That sounds like a strong statemen, but when an audience large enough to fill the Studebaker Theater sits tense and still for two hour and the voice of a little child in the balcony tells all of us to "look at the little mouse," we know that we have seen a masterpiece. Photoplays there have been with more beauty of pageantry, with more cleverness of dialog expressed in the subtitles, but for emotional acting there has not been anything seen lately that can compare with "The Truant Soul."

HAM is back. ETHEL is back. BUD and HENRY MURDOCH are right on the job, and have been all along. The combined efforts of these comedy artists can be seen to splendid advantage in the latest HAM COMEDY to be released Tuesday, January 9th.

The Title—

"RIVAL ROMEOS"

The Funmakers—

HAM and BUD, ETHEL TEARE and HENRY MURDOCH

The Story—

Ham and Bud, without each other's knowledge, pay over fat fees to a marriage broker for young, domesticated wives. Both get stung when the Girl proves that she is already married.

Wednesday, January 10th.

"THE RESURRECTION OF GOLD BAR"

—another splendidly directed episode of "The Girl from Frisco."

The Stars—

MARIN SAIS and TRUE BOARDMAN

with a strong supporting cast, including Frank Jonasson, Ronald Bradbury and Edward Clisbee.

The Story—

The Girl from Frisco, accompanied by her father and her fiance, discovers gold in the abandoned mining town where she was born. Her fight to hold the newly staked out claim until the papers can be filed provides plenty of red-blooded excitement and snappy action. Written by Robert Welles Ritchie.

Friday, January 12th.

"THE TRAIL OF GRAFT"

"Up to the present time there has not been a dull moment passed or a commonplace incident in the versatile career of 'Grant, Police Reporter.'"—Motion Picture News.

The Stars—

OLLIE KIRKBY and GEORGE LARKIN

The Story—

Grant's adventures nailing the corroborative evidence necessary to expose a grafter form the basis of this thrilling chapter. Imprisoned in a smoke-filled room with the grafter's stenographer, whose notes constitute the evidence, he climbs out on a rope with the girl on his back and swings across and down to safety.

Saturday, January 13th.

"THE FIREMAN'S NEMESIS"

Maintaining the fast and furious pace set by "The Hazards of Helen" for the past two years, this second "Hazard" of the New Year makes good Kalem's boast that it is the Supreme Producer of Series Pictures.

The Star—

HELEN GIBSON

The Story—

Joe, the Wop, is promoted from engine wiper to the job of fireman. His success calls down upon him the hatred of an agent of a secret Vendetta. How Helen, the operator at Lone Point, goes to Joe's rescue, provides the thrills.

What of the New Year?

Here is a New Year Announcement from the Selig Company!

There will be an added number of spectacular specials, including "The Light of Western Stars," "Little Orphan Annie," "Bob Hampton, of Placer," "The City of Purple Dreams," etc., etc.

The Selig Red Seal plays, released through K.E.S.E., will include "The Princess of Patches," "The Little Lost Sister," and other winners.

In General Film service a succession of gilt-edged comedies and dramas are provided. These productions will be one, two and three reels in length.

The best authors and directors will contribute to Selig plays in General Film service in 1917. No expense will be spared in making the releases noteworthy.

The Selig-Tribune, the world's greatest news film, will continue to be released every Monday and Thursday in 1917 in General Film service.

During the past year the Selig-Tribune has scored a series of news pictorial "scoops." Alert cameramen in all parts of the world will see to it that the Selig-Tribune misses no important news pictorial event during the new year.

"The Girl who Doesn't Know", is a story of life that carries conviction in an earnest, chaste, and straight forward way. It is better a girl should learn some things from a moving picture than to learn them in the peril of society. It is best of all that she learn them at first hand from one who can be both Mother and companion to her daughter. The Girl who Doesn't Know speaks its mute appeal to mothers everywhere, to supplant ignorance with knowledge that girls forwarned may be forearmed.

For Exhibitors Who Want Good Comedies

David Horsley long ago established his reputation as a producer of "worth-while" comedies. He cherishes this reputation highly. So when the craze for multiple reel subjects struck the film business he did not slight his comedies in favor of greater length features.

Rather he redoubled his efforts to make them better. He put more time and money into them than before. He also saw to it that they conformed with the prevailing public taste. Naturally enough his product has had, and is having, a tremendous sale.

Right now really good comedies are harder to find than ever. And right now David Horsley is offering the best in that line he has ever made—a new series of Cub Comedies featuring George Ovey. This series is distributed through the Mutual, with a new release every Thursday. The current subject is "Jerry's Winning Way," released January 11th.

The pictures in this series are not "fillers," but one reel features —the best one reel comedies on the market. Your Mutual exchange can supply you with them.

FROM AN EFFICIENCY MAN

AN efficiency man has looked into the picture business and finds some glaring wrongs.

He raps them; and he says he speaks with full authority and knowledge of his facts.

He says, for one thing, that fifteen cents is an impossible admission price.

If he is right a good many people are wrong. What have you to say—you exhibitors who charge fifteen cents?

He says posters should be free; and he calls for the elimination of still photos, heralds and similar extras. Who will reply to this?

Editor MOTION PICTURE NEW:

The writer has noted, with great interest, your "Keep the ball rolling" article in this week's NEWS.

Permit me to add a few thoughts to those already expressed. As an efficiency man and one who has, for reasons not necessary to mention herein, given a careful study to the film business, I believe I can state a few fundamental reasons for the present chaotic conditions in the film market.

COLD figures and analysis of conditions show very clearly that in every branch of the business the expenditures have increased enormously but the receipts have not kept the same pace or anything like it, with the natural result that losses are being met with on every hand.

It will not be denied that the raise in the price of admission from five to ten cents was fully justified and was the logical move; better theatres and longer programs making it worth the difference in price to the public.

But when it is proposed to raise to fifteen cents it appears that the danger point has been reached. In the first place fifteen cents is not a popular price for any commodity; any merchant will verify that statement.

Fifteen cents admission—a danger point.

High prices hit only the high spots.

Low prices get "old junk."

Overhead today is ruinous.

Injudicious newspaper advertising.

Centralize the distributing business.

TEN cents is a popular figure and so is twenty-five; but not fifteen. Then again, it places the picture house on a plane of opposition to the cheap vaudeville house where, in most cases, just as good pictures are shown, a good sized orchestra is maintained and vaudeville shown besides.

A large seating capacity and best of locations gives the vaudeville house a great advantage over the picture house.

Ten cents keeps the picture house on a solid and lasting basis.

The manufacturer's cost of a picture and his possible profits are computed solely on the number of prints he sells and the profits of the exchange on the number of times the prints are rented. It will readily be noted that by increasing the number of prints sold and rented the cost per rental can be lowered without reducing the profit to the exchange or to the manufacturer.

This evident fact seems to have been entirely overlooked.

EACH big feature company, as now organized, has taken the wrong steps to remedy the evil and incidentally corral the business. Instead of making the price for service a very low one and in that way getting all the business, they have gone after the high spots at very high prices and have neglected the big end of the business.

Don't forget the five and ten cent stores of the country and how they have profited by selling at low prices only. The trouble has been that, in the film business, only "old junk" has been offered at the low prices.

THE office, overhead and advertising expenses of the manufacturing and releasing concerns as now conducted are not only extravagant but ruinous, and they naturally pass this on to the exhibiting end under the guise of a charge for film service.

All actors agree that picture work is much nicer, easier and far steadier from an employment standpoint than the stage ever was. Why, then, should they be paid such exorbitant salaries, so much more than they ever were paid when on the stage?

THE film heads—the so-called magnates—pretend to be big men, but they have shown themselves as almost anything else in the plans they have formulated and put into effect in the last few years.

None of them dares submit his work to the scrutiny of a competent efficiency man or skilled accountant.

Scenario writers of note are almost unknown, although some of the world's greatest and best known writers are inviting propositions to enter the field. I am not theorizing on this point. I speak with authority and with full knowledge of the facts.

NEWSPAPER advertising for regulation picture houses, regardless of their location, is a waste of money. I except from this statement, however, the former regulation theatres and very large, specially built houses of the Strand type, as these are in a class by themselves.

Free posters (and these should be few in number and very much toned down in color and design), elimination of "stills" and photos, heralds and similar extras would make a big difference to the exhibitor at the end of the week.

Down With Dickens!

FOR censorial assininity we award the year's grand prize to a Quebec censor. He condemned "Oliver Twist" as offering "a veritable lesson in sneak-thievery and robbery."

But Quebec isn't wholly saved. Dickens may yet stalk through the province, since an appeal is to be taken to the entire board of censors.

Page Dr. Crafts, H. C. Barber, Canon Chase, et al. Let their typewriters hum and post-card the province in a final appeal to parents and preachers. Down with Dickens!

Business Leagues

ELSEWHERE in this issue is an article dealing with a new type of exhibitors' organization which is rapidly taking form in various parts of the country. These organizations are casting abstract problems aside and getting down to the questions which deal with dollars and cents. Some of their aims are the abolishment of the advance deposit, friendly arrangements to eliminate competition of the cut-throat variety, and methods for the establishment of exhibitors' credit ratings. They want to help each other make more money.

Bubbles of Rumor

ONE of the important reasons why the film industry seems to the public mind to be in a chaotic condition is that it is virtually a swimming place for rumors of all sizes and shapes. Every week "news" is brought to our attention of the consolidation of some great factors in the industry. Then the following week the bubble bursts. "Inside tips" regarding the selling out by film executives of their controlling stock come to us by the veritable dozen.

We do not believe in giving space to rumors unless they are augmented by positive evidence. Puncturing the rumor bubbles and presenting news according to its proper values is one of the duties a trade publication owes its public.

Films Via Parcel Post

THROUGH the persistent efforts of the National Association of Motion Picture Industry, the carrying service of the Parcel Post has been put at the disposal of exhibitors, exchanges and producers.

The chief advantages which will accrue are four:

1. Penetration of territories heretofore remote and inaccessible, with a resultant widening of scope.
2. Insurance against delays caused by strikes and similar calamities: protection afforded by the Government against delays of all kinds in the United States Mails.
3. Stimulation of express companies: more equitable rates; swifter service.
4. Reduction of film insurance rates: insurance companies will be forced to admit significance of the step taken by the Post Office Department in recognizing non-dangerous character of film shipments.

No more adequate proof of what unified effort in the proper direction can gain for the industry could be offered.

Dropping the Ball Program

BROOKLYN exhibitors intend giving a ball on the evening of Washington's Birthday. They will issue a small program. No producer will be "requested" to insert his advertisement. For the Brooklyn local has decided that advertising of that sort does not pay—either the advertiser or the association. This is not the only commendable action this excellent local has taken. The association is standing upon its own dignity, asking no alms, and devoting its meeting to sane discussion and business-like action upon the box-office problems of its members—all its members.

IT seems strange that with the big capitalists reputed to be engaged in the industry, none are apparently wise enough to work out something along the lines of the old American News Company idea and centralize the entire distributing end of the film business under one organization, and at one blow wipe out the dozen or more unnecessary exchanges in all the large cities. The plan is feasible and the writer is able to name the man who by training and instinct is just the man for the job. Of course, it is not myself.

Wm. E. Heal.

TO our mind, the most important point scored in the above letter is its reference to distribution.

The entire distributing end of the business, says the writer, should be centralized and handled by one organization. This is feasible, he says.

We are by no means sure that such a single organization is feasible. But we do believe that centralized distribution is not only possible but inevitable, and that sooner or later there will be much less than thirty-four exchanges in Minneapolis, fifteen in Syracuse, and so on.

HOWEVER, things move slowly as well as swiftly in this business. We shall shortly hear, undoubtedly, of the formation of a brand-new set of exchanges. Why, we don't know.

If we asked, we should be told undoubtedly that new exchanges were necessary, that a high-grade picture needs a special and exclusive exchange, that one and the same exchange cannot handle competing pictures. We have never heard of this ruling in other lines of merchandise. Big jobbers in various lines handle commodities of the most varied grades and qualities. We believe that divided salesmanship is necessary—always will be—but not divided distribution. However, this is an open forum. We invite other opinions. Wm. A. Johnston.

Rumor of Universal Sale is Branded "Pure Bosh"

Statement Made in an Alleged Trade Organ That Laemmle and Powers Have Been Bought Out by Wall Street Concern Is Denied Flatly by Cochrane

AN alleged trade organ which evidently intends to make a specialty of newspaper rumors made an "authoritative" announcement last week of the latest sale of the Laemmle and Powers stock holdings in the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

R. H. Cochrane, vice-president of the Universal, speaking for Messrs. Carl Laemmle and P. A. Powers, and for the Universal Company, made a flat and specific denial of the entire story to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"It's a lie out of whole cloth," said he. "The rumor seems to have no other foundation than the effort of the Los Angeles Times to make gossipy reading. Here's the item. It has evidently got to Times Square."

The newspaper item under the heading "More Rumors of Big Changes in Filmland" states that "it is reported" that P. A. Powers and Carl Laemmle have sold out their Universal interests to Ladenburg, Thalman & Company, New York bankers, who are backing H. O. Davis, general manager of production at Universal City, California; also that Messrs. Powers, Laemmle and Herman Fichtenberg, the New Orleans picture theatre owner, are to form a new producing concern.

"You may say," said Mr. Cochrane, "that far from dealing with Messrs. Ladenburg, Thalman & Company, I don't believe any one in the Universal Company even knows or has ever met any member of the banking firm except possibly in a purely social way. The whole matter is simply another newspaper rumor. It ends there."

As to the statement that Mr. Laemmle refused to affirm or deny the rumor and was unable to make any statement until after the first of the year—this, taken in connection with the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Universal Company to occur in January, Mr. Cochrane replied: "Pure bosh and misstatements of facts.

"The annual stockholders' meeting of the Universal Company has already occurred—on December 27. The present officers were re-elected: Carl Laemmle, president; R. H. Cochrane, vice-president; P. A. Powers, treasurer; Joe Brandt, secretary.

"As to Mr. Laemmle, any one could have got the above facts from him, if facts were wanted. As a matter of fact, no one came to Mr. Laemmle from any publication asking for his comment on the rumor."

RUMORS VS. FACTS

We announced in a modest way last week that the News has the habit of printing NEWS, authoritatively, and FIRST.

We call particular attention this week to the accompanying article, presenting the FACTS concerning a rumor.

You Don't Get the News Unless you read THE NEWS.

St. Louis Association Renounces Advance Deposits

At a recent meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of St. Louis, President Mogler reported that a letter had been sent to Governor-elect R. D. Gardener, requesting an audience for the Association's legislative committee in order to protest against the contemplated plan to tax motion picture theatres.

The following interpretation was made to the resolution adopted by the Association covering deposits on serials: Members of this association are not to pay any advance deposit or in any way advance money on any episode of serials, but that if exchanges require it, members should pay C. O. D. for each episode.

The following new members were accepted for admission to the St. Louis association: Fred Demko, Shenandoah theatre; Christ Zotos, Family theatre; J. F. Brinkmeyer, American theatre; Spyros P. Skuros, New Lafayette theatre.

Adam Kessel, Jr., Sails for Cuba

Adam Kessel, Jr., president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, sailed for Havana last week. Mr. Kessel has been confined by illness to his home for the past two weeks, and the trip to Cuba has been forced on him by his physician in order that he may get in proper shape to put through successfully the many big things which are already planned for the Kay-Bee and Keystone productions in 1917.

A large party of friends saw Mr. Kessel off and wished him "bon voyage." He will return about the middle of January.

Maxine Elliot with Goldwyn

Maxine Elliot, who has been in retirement in England, will join the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation at an early date.

The announcement comes as a surprise, as it is known that Miss Elliot has been strongly opposed to entering motion pictures. No definite announcements have yet been made concerning the picture she will work in. It is understood that she has agreed to sign a contract covering a considerable period of time.

Jacksonville Expects to Get Triangle Studios

Jacksonville Correspondent of Motion Picture News Says That A. Kessel Contemplates Erecting $200,000 Plant—Aitken and Bauman Deny the Rumor

A DISPATCH from the Jacksonville correspondent of THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS contains the statement that A. Kessel, president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and Triangle Film Corporation, who is now visiting Jacksonville, is examining property in that territory with the view of erecting a $200,000 studio and producing plant for the company which he represents.

Mr. Aitken, when requested to make a statement concerning the new studio plans, declared that he had no knowledge of proposed Jacksonville studios. Charles Bauman of the New York Motion Pictures Corporation, denied the Jacksonville report completely.

The dispatch follows:

Jacksonville, Fla. (Special).—According to A. Kessel, president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation and Triangle Film Corporation, those companies are contemplating erecting a $200,000 studio and motion picture producing plant in Jacksonville in the near future, and with an idea of looking the situation over, Mr. Kessel visited Jacksonville this week, and was shown the various studios now in operation by Mayor J. E. T. Bowden.

Mayor Bowden, and the motion picture committee appointed by him last year, to induce the movie folk to come to Jacksonville, entertained Mr. Kessel at the Hotel Mason, and were assured by him that his companies were considering the proposition seriously.

If these two big corporations build studios in Jacksonville, it will mean that this city will have become the producing center of the East, and many other companies will take similar steps.

There are already twelve studios in Jacksonville, many of them working the year round, and as was stated to Mr. Kessel, the sooner the producers find out that they can make pictures in Jacksonville in the summer, the greater will be the saving to them.

A previous dispatch from THE NEWS' Jacksonville correspondent contains the information that F. C. Bush, representative of the Chicago and North Western Railway of Chicago, is in Jacksonville looking over possible locations for three large motion picture producers of Los Angeles, California, who will move their entire plants to Jacksonville over that railroad. The company names are not mentioned.

Broadway to Have New $500,000 Picture Theatre

"Triumph" Will Be Erected at Corner of Forty-ninth and Broadway—Rumor That Rothapfel Will Be Director Is Untrue—Facade Will Resemble Ancient Greek Temple

A THEATRE to be devoted to the art of the motion picture, and costing in the neighborhood of $500,000, is to be erected at the northeast corner of Broadway and Forty-ninth street, New York. The name of the new theatre will be the "Triumph."

It was learned from an authoritative source some time ago that Samuel L. Rothapfel would become the managing director of the new theatre, and at the time Mr. Rothapfel, when questioned, admitted that plans were under way. He requested then that nothing be published.

Last Friday, the engineering firm of Russell B. Smith sent out a form letter to the trade publications announcing that the deal for acquiring the real estate had gone through and that notices have been served upon the tenants of the premises to vacate.

Construction of the new theatre, says the letter, will be started on or about April 1 and rushed to early completion with the expectation of opening the house in the late fall.

No mention of Mr. Rothapfel's name was made in the letter, and when Mr. Rothapfel was requested to make a statement he simply said: "The deal is off. I am not going to the new theatre, the Temple or Triumph or whatever its name is going to be."

It is learned from a thoroughly reliable source that Mr. Rothapfel contemplates entering the producing field soon. Mr. Rothapfel declined to affirm or contradict this report.

"I have had a number of attractive offers," he said, "but I don't want to talk about any of them just now. In a few days I will have important announcements to make."

Mr. Rothapfel intimated that a radical change in the construction plans was the cause of his withdrawal. He seemed angry, and did not desire to speak at length for publication.

L. A. Walsh, general manager of the engineering firm of Russell B. Smith, was asked why Mr. Rothapfel was not to be associated with the new theatre, but he declined to give the reason.

The 1620 Broadway Company are the lessees of the property, and the Barney Estate, the sellers.

The Triumph will seat 2,600 people. The facade will be fashioned along the lines of an ancient Greek temple, in white marble. The lobby will contain a fountain in which live swans are swimming. On the left of the lobby will be an elaborate waiting room for women, and on the right, a smoking room for men. Further plans of the Triumph will be published in next week's issue of THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Quebec Censors Make Astonishing Decision

"Oliver Twist" Falls Under the Ban of Their Displeasure—Picture Will Be Re-examined, However

"OLIVER TWIST," the Dickens' picture, which was to have been shown at the St. Denis theatre in Montreal during the Christmas season, has been condemned by one of the Moving Picture Censors of the Province of Quebec. However, an appeal has been entered from this unfavorable decision, and, as the law enacts, in such cases, the film will be submitted again for inspection by the full board.

"I understand," said Sheriff Lemieux, chairman of the board, "that the film story was rejected because the censor considered that it was a veritable lesson in sneak thievery and robbery. An appeal has been made to the full board, and we will re-exine the picture."

A. T. Chapman, president of the Dickens' Fellowship, stated that not having seen the picture, he did not care to express any opinion upon the censor's action. However, he declared that there was so much that could be cut out in a picture rendition of the book, and so much that could be added, that it was almost impossible to decide without having actually witnessed the picture.

January 1 is the day fixed for the provincial Government tax on places of amusement to go into effect. So far, theatres, moving picture houses and other places have not been officially notified of what is expected from them by the Government. The Government, however, while it has the power of putting the new tax into effect on the first of the year, is not obliged to do so on the exact day, and the intention is not to rush the theatre people, especially in view of the fact that the theatre men have expressed themselves as being quite willing to do their utmost to accustom the people to the new rates, and to aid the Government as much as possible.

The scale of taxes which will affect the film houses is as follows:

On every admission of a price less than ten cents, one cent.

On every admission of a price of ten cents or more, but less than thirty-five cents, two cents.

On every admission of a price of thirty-five cents or more, but not more than seventy-five cents, three cents.

On every admission of a price of more than seventy-five cents, but not more than one dollar, four cents.

This is the scale of taxes which is authorized to go into effect on or about the first of January by virtue of the recent legislation enacted at the last session of the Quebec Legislature. The former theatre tax of the city is wiped out, but the city will not lose, and other municipalities which have not been charging a "charity tax" will specially benefit. The province will collect the whole proceeds, and will pay to each municipality one cent for each ticket to a place of amusement.

New Director and New Star the Fox Record for a Week

William Fox acquired one new director, another film star, and several more photoplayers in the course of the last week.

The director is William Nigh, lately with the Metro forces. The star is Miriam Cooper, who has the leading feminine part in "The Honor System," the big ten-part Fox photodrama; and the new players include Ned Finley, Pearl Palmer, Ruth Thorp, and Edward Roseman, who will be in the first Nigh production, and Florence Crawford and Francis Carpenter.

Miss Cooper will appear under the direction of R. A. Walsh, who staged "The Honor System," and who is, incidentally, Miss Cooper's husband. The new Fox luminary enjoys the distinction of never having had any stage experience, despite her notable performances in "The Honor System," "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance."

William Nigh, the newcomer to the Fox directorial staff, makes the twentieth filmmaker now with the Fox organization. Seven are screening dramatic subjects in the West, six in the East, and seven are at work on comedy productions, in California.

Lionel Barrymore Begins "Great Green Eye" for Metro

Lionel Barrymore began work last week on his new Metro-Rolfe production, "The Great Green Eye," the joint product of Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf. George D. Baker is directing this five-act feature, assisted by Charles Hunt, and John Arnold is doing the photographic work. Irene Howley, co-starred with Mr. Barrymore in "A Yellow Streak," with Ralph Herz in "The Purple Lady," and with William Nigh in "Life's Shadows," all Metro features, shares stellar honors with Mr. Barrymore in "The Great Green Eye." In the cast are Ilean Hume, Frank Currier, Charles Eldridge, Hugh Jeffrey, George A. Wright, Florence Natol and Marien Dennis.

Charles Eldridge plays Barron, senior, the father of the character played by Mr. Barrymore. Mr. Eldridge has been seen in "The Pretenders," with Emmy Wehlen, playing the father, Silas Pettingill, and with Emily Stevens in "The Wager," and Andrews the engineer with Emmy Wehlen in "The Pretenders." Ilean Hume was last seen with Miss Wehlen in "The Pretenders," and before that in "The Kiss of Hate," with Ethel Barrymore; in "Her Debt of Honor," with Valli Valli, and in other Metro plays.

Warners Do Some Quick Work

Warner Brothers are authority for the statement that within twenty-four hours after the initial private showing to state rights buyers of "Are Passions Inherited?" the rights to the feature were sold for twenty states. The production is in seven reels, and features Dorothea Farley and William Conklin. It was staged by Gilbert M. Hamilton, one of the real "pioneers" of the film game.

All International Films to Be Released Through Pathe

News Reels to Be Combined—International Exchanges Will Be Retained and Consolidated Under Name of Pathe in Some Cases—Radical Changes First Week of New Year

PATHE Exchange, Inc., and the International Film Service have issued an announcement jointly in which is stated that all International films will be released through the Pathe exchanges.

E. A. McManus, manager of the International Film Service, desires to make the point clear that International films will be issued just as they have been issued in the past, the only change being that the International exchanges will be consolidated with the Pathe exchanges.

"In some cases," said Mr. McManus, "the International exchanges will be abolished entirely, the best men of the working force going over to the Pathe exchange in that locality. In other cases, where the International exchanges are now more advantageously located and equipped, the Pathe force will move to the International offices. The rumor is incorrect that Pathe has 'taken over' International."

Mr. McManus declined to make any statements regarding the consolidation of Pathe and International for purpose of production only. It is understood from a reliable source that some such arrangements are under way. Details of these arrangements will be forthcoming shortly.

Mr. McManus and Mr. Berst dictated the following announcement regarding the future activities of the two concerns they represent.

By an agreement completed Thursday, December 28, 1916, between Pathe Exchange, Inc., and the International Film Service, Inc., all of the pictures of the International, including serials, features, cartoons and the Hearst International News Pictorial, will be released through the Pathe Exchange, Inc. The new arrangement is effective January 1.

The agreement was concluded by Edward A. McManus, general manager of the International, and J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathe.

One of the most important features in connection with the new arrangement will be the consolidation of the two news reels—the Pathe News and the Hearst International News Pictorial. In future the combined news reel will be known as the Hearst-Pathe News. It will be issued twice weekly beginning January 10.

The consolidation will also have an important bearing upon "Patria," the International's photoplay serial supreme, in which is featured Mrs. Vernon Castle. It was the original intention of the International to issue this serial on January 1. With the deal pending with Pathe, W. R. Hearst recommended the postponement of the release date of "Patria" until the consummation of the consolidation. Accordingly, it has been decided that the serial, all episodes of which are practically completed, will be released on January 14 through the Pathe exchanges.

The Pathe exchanges will also start to release on January 10 the International's cartoon series. This includes the original Katzenjammer Kids, Jerry on the Job, Bringing Up Father, Krazy Kat and the cartoons in addition to those of Walt Hoban, George Herriman, and George McManus, of Fred Opper, Tad, Jimmy Swinnerton, Tom Powers and others.

Immediately upon completion of the consolidation J. A. Berst sent a telegram to William Randolph Hearst, who is spending the holidays in California, in which he said:

"I foresee an era of unusual prosperity in this move, which will work for the best interests of all concerned and by eliminating a certain amount of the waste of competition through co-operation, advance by that much the interests of all exhibitors."

E. A. MacManus, general manager of the International has been devoting most of his attention during the past month to the completion of the transaction. He has visited either in person or by representative, all of the fifteen branches of the International throughout the country, arranging for the transfer of the offices as well as for the contracts of "Patria," "Beatrice Fairfax," and "The Mysteries of Myra," and of "Jaffery," "The Ocean Waif," "The Flower of Faith" and "The Jockey of Death," recent International features.

"The arrangement just entered into," said Mr. MacManus, "will mark an epoch in the motion picture business. Pathe pictures, plus Hearst publicity and promotion, will form the strongest combination ever effected in motion pictures, and will make their product the most sought for in the industry.

"The novelized versions of Pathe's serials as well as 'Patria' will be published in Hearst publications, in New York, Boston, Atlanta, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles, as well as in practically every other large city in the country. Exhibitors can well forsee how important this consolidation is to their own interests. I am delighted at its successful termination."

"The advantage of this alliance between the Hearst and Pathe interests are manifold," said Mr. Berst. "Pathe pictures plus Hearst publicity will be an unbeatable combination. The advertising derived from the Hearst interests will of course be of direct benefit to exhibitors everywhere and that is the reason this alliance was formed. This advertising will be prepared with a view of carrying out to the fullest possible extent Pathe's policy of co-operation.

"The New Hearst-Pathe News will be the greatest news pictorial ever assembled. Already the Pathe News is an American institution. Added to Pathe's world-wide camera and distributing organization will be Hearst's unrivaled news gathering facilities, supplemented by the greatest publicity organization in America.

"The Cartoon service of Pathe will be greatly strengthened by the addition of the Hearst cartoonists. Alternating weekly, the work of these famous Hearst artists will appear in addition to Pathe cartoons made by the world famous Bray process.

"For months, Pathe has been building the finest exchange organization in the industry. Now this organization will be further strengthened by the addition of the best men of the International exchange. The best office in each city will be retained and the other exchanges closed."

Must Have "News" for Correct Information

Vinton, Iowa.
Wm. A. Johnston, Pres.,
Motion Picture News,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

I find that Motion Picture News is a necessity, if you intend to be alive to what is going on in the industry today.

I will say this for the "News," that it has been in my home for many years. Long before I became an exhibitor I found it a "main stay" if I wanted to be posted and correct.

Yours truly,
Arthur G. Stotte,
Mgr. Palace Theatre.

Mayer and Cohen Will Handle "Great Secret"

Louis B. Mayer and Harry J. Cohen have just left the home offices of the Metro Pictures Corporation, No. 1476 Broadway, New York, and have started on a Western tour to handle the demands from exhibitors for the new Metro-Quality serial, "The Great Secret," in which Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are co-stars.

Mr. Mayer, who is the sole distributor in New England for Metro pictures, will make his headquarters at the Metro offices in Chicago. He will attend to the serial business in the Middle Western States.

Both Mr. Cohen and Mr. Mayer took with them the first five chapters of the fifteen-chapter screen story. Mr. Mayer will give special showings for exhibitors in Chicago, Detroit and other cities. It probably will take several weeks for him to wind up the Middle Western business.

Mr. Cohen will make his headquarters at 55 Jones street, San Francisco. He also will give special showing.

Conditions Here as Seen by England's Foremost Producer

George Loane Tucker, in America for Winter Months, Is Gratified at Marked Improvement in American Productions, But Disappointed in Activities of Unscrupulous Fly-by-Night Concerns.

GEORGE LOANE TUCKER, production manager and chairman of the Board of Directors of the London Film Company, the largest film producing concern in England, has arrived in New York for the winter. Part of his time will be spent in the East; the remainder he will devote to the California studios.

Before leaving America, Mr. Tucker was associated with Griffith and Ince. During his three years' residence abroad, he produced a number of successful photoplays, among them being "Prisoner of Zenda," "Rupert of Hentzau," "The Middleman," "The Christian," "Arsene Lupin," "The Hypocrites," "The Mother," "The Maximum," "The Man Without a Soul," and a series of W. W. Jacob's comedies.

In the first interview he has given out since his arrival in America, Mr. Tucker expressed himself frankly on film conditions here. He is an American, and he is recognized as the foremost film producer in England. One of his accomplishments in England was the establishment of a "footage-by-merit" system, replacing the arbitrary five-reel feature length.

Mr. Tucker has been given an opportunity to study conditions of this country at short and long range. He is a recognized master of his art, and what he has to say is of high interest and value. The first thing he commented upon was the gratifying advance and improvement in American films. The second comment he made concerned the misfortune of the reputable film producers, who are being traded upon by the "fly-by-night" manufacturers.

"The producers who came into the film industry to stay are not only being preyed upon by the get-rich-quick class," said Mr. Tucker, "but they are also being tempted tremendously. The reputable producer who has built his business upon clean methods and decent pictures is sorely tempted to discard clean methods and pictures when he sees the quick financial results of the disreputable producers.

"I left America three years ago for two reasons. One was that I wanted to broaden my point of view. The other was that I had produced a picture that while it was a great financial success was one that I did not like. In England I had to fight every inch of my way. I soon would open up the way to an avalanche of this class of picture, and I felt that I must flee the temptation to get big and easy money by producing other subjects of similar type, and I foresaw that the real future of the business lay in the production of the type of pictures that I hope to speak about later in these pages, and I met with nothing but encouraging friendliness.

"All of my friends here told me how foolish I was to dare the traditions and unfriendliness of the English. They said Americans were in disfavor there; that I would fail surely. I won't say that my ideas were accepted with shouts of acclaim. The British study a newcomer with infinite care. They took a watchful-waiting attitude. After a while they accepted the ideas.

"In America, conditions are different—reversed. There is such a broad market here that all classes of pictures can be sold, no matter how good or bad they are. Unfortunately, just now some bad pictures are selling better than the clean ones. That is why the legitimate manufacturer is tempted.

"Quality is inclined to suffer as a consequence—because things come so easy. Many beautiful and remarkable pictures are being made in America now. But if some producers were compelled to go out and fight for their results, their pictures would undergo marked improvement. Producers and directors are too quickly satisfied, because they see no need of being critical.

"These producers are menacing the industry's future. They care nothing for story values. In their advertising they dwell upon some spectacular feature. They produce the type of film which will fill theatres by its title. They consider their duty ended there. As for duty to the public, they recognize none. The public is drawn into those theatres; they go away dissatisfied or ashamed.

"I know that this notion that the public must be pleased is old—very old. Yet it has lost none of its importance. Pictures of this type do not please the public. They are burdening the future with a debt which will be difficult to pay off.

"Many American producers should recognize another duty they owe the public. I agree with them that the best and greatest in motion pictures is being done in America. Yet that is not proof that the other nations have nothing to offer.

"The motion picture is the only international language. It can be understood by the people of any land. At present America is pouring out its film to all parts of the world. These pictures in time will stimulate the more remote nations to produce film drama of their own. Americans should encourage them to do that.

"We are known abroad for our clarity in telling a story and the great effort we make to maintain intensity of interest and are admired for those qualities. Yet that does not mean that other nations have nothing to contribute to the art of the photodrama. French directors excel us in their sense of the higher dramatic values. Italian directors are noted—justly noted—for their sense of the pictorial.

"It is our duty, having such energy and clarity of vision, to exchange our qualities for the admirable qualities of the others.

"American directors can take companies to Italy and France; yet they cannot possibly sympathize with the viewpoints of their peoples unless for a certain length of time they enter into their life. I think we should invite and encourage them to contribute, instead of shutting our doors to them.

"With the proper encouragement, in time, I am quite sure, we will have great Russian pictures, with the true Russian viewpoint, and even Oriental pictures, made in China and Japan under the direction of Orientals who have mastered our principles. It is wrong to say that foreign directors are stealing our ideas; for while they are adopting our ideas, they will give us, in return, ideas of their own, nothing more nor less than a fair exchange.

"Art—no matter whether it is painting, sculpture or the moving film—recognizes no national boundaries. It rises above them and becomes international. Open the door widely, hospitably to foreign production, even to the extent of being a trifle uncommercial for the time being."

Express Companies Fail to Make Deliveries

Pittsburgh Theatres Complain That Express Companies Caused Darkened Theatres Due to Delay in Shipments — Several Theatres Complain of Thievery

THE express companies running out of Pittsburgh have been able to handle the increased business at Christmas time, but this year the companies fell down flat on the delivery of film to the theatres in that section, with the result that during the past week there were many dark houses.

The express companies refuse right along to make any special arrangements for the handling of film and the result is that some of the companies will have heavy damages to pay as a result of the loss caused by the failure of the express agents to see that the film packages were forwarded properly during the Christmas rush.

Thieves entered the booth of the Doris Theatre in Wilkinsburg, Pa., last week, and stole a complete Edison machine and the lens from another machine. The thieves made a complete get away and the police are unable to locate the stolen property.

Entrance to the theatre was gained by breaking in the side door of the theatre. The theft was not discovered until noon the next day. J. W. Hunter, owner of the theatre asks the exhibitors all over the country to be on the lookout for the machine and states that a point of identification is the flywheel which has been grooved for a belt. He has offered a reward of twenty-five dollars for the arrest of the guilty persons.

Heaney Booking Dixie Features

John W. Heaney, representative of the S. A. Lynch enterprises, is handling the booking of the two Dixie Company features, "Tempest and Sunshine" and "Just a Song at Twilight." Evelyn Greeley is starred in the first mentioned drama, while Pedro de Cordoba and Miss Greeley share the honors in the second. They are being marketed on states rights.

Parcel Post Film Shipping a Boon to the Industry

Territories Heretofore Unexploited Can Be Easily Reached—Post Office Department Issues Rules and Regulations Covering Film Shipments—Much Credit Due to National Association

THE exclusive announcement in THE MOTION PICTURE NEWS of last week that motion picture films could be shipped by parcel post after January 1, has been received by exhibitors throughout the country with expressions of gratitude and approval.

Much credit for this accomplishment is due the National Association of Motion Picture Industry. F. H. Elliot, president of the Association, points out some of the advantages to be accrued by parcel post film shipping, in a letter addressed to this office. Excerpts from the letter follow:

"By shipping films through the mails entirely new territory will be opened up, where heretofore there has been no service whatsoever, which may now be reached by the rural parcel delivery post. This will make possible the rental of old films which have gone the rounds of the larger cities and on which the margin of profit is now very small on account of the high express charges for short distances from the exchanges.

"Through this channel many thousands of smaller towns and villages will be made immediately accessible to the great film centers. This development and extension of territory heretofore beyond reach of the express companies should add many millions to the number of picture theatre patrons in 1917.

"One of the most important phases in permitting the films to go through the mails is that film shipments will always have the right of way in the event of railroad strikes, either locally or nation-wide.

"This recognition of the film industry by the Post Office Department should have a material effect upon the insurance underwriters, and it is not unlikely that lower rates will be granted in the near future."

The National Association is gathering together material for a folder which will tell the industry how to get full efficiency out of the parcel post, and will also tell just where the mail ceases to be cheaper than express—these figures cannot yet be given out. but these facts will be of interest.

A shipping case loaded with five reels (the standard unit of shipments) weighs between 45 and 50 pounds.

The parcel post regulations admit fifty-pound shipments within the first and second zones—that is, within 150 miles.

Beyond this area, packages are limited to 20 pounds, which will include two reels in the regulation packing case.

The National Association is working out a chart of comparisons between parcel post rates and express rates, and this chart will show just where the mails should be used.

At this time, however, the conditions seem to indicate that, as was anticipated. the chief monetary advantages of the parcel post to the distributor will be in shipments to theatres within a short radius of the exchange.

The distributors and exchanges will have available, beginning New Year's Day, two transportation facilities, namely, express companies and Federal postal service.

A chart of the rates under the new ruling of the Postmaster General will be immediately undertaken by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry and distributed to all the Association members throughout the United States and Canada.

The order issued by the Postmaster General, granting the use of the mails for film shipments, is a splendid recognition of the activities of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

RULES FOR SHIPPING FILMS BY PARCEL POST

1. Must be packed in metal boxes encased in spark proof cases or sheet iron cases not less than .02 inch thick lined with fibre.

2. All packages must bear yellow labels, diamond shaped, 4 inches long, on which is printed a fire warning.

The following rules and regulations have been issued by the Post Office Department covering the shipment of films by post:

Postmasters are hereby instructed to accept motion picture film for transmission in the mail, outside of mail bags, when packed and labelled in conformity with the Interstate Commerce Commission regulations, as follows:

RULES FOR PACKING DANGEROUS ARTICLES OTHER THAN EXPLOSIVES.

RULE 43.

(a) Moving picture films must be packed in tightly closed metal cases inclosed in a strong, spark-proof wooden box; or in spark-proof cases made of sheet iron not less than 0.02 inches thick (No. 25 U. S. standard gauge) and lined throughout with fiber board at least ⅛ inch thick, or some other equivalent insulating material. The covers of these cases must fit tightly and must lap over the body at least ⅝ inch on the sides, forming a tight joint.

(b) Pyroxylin, plastics (celluloid, fiberloid, pyralin, viscoloid, zylonite, etc.) in sheet, rolls or tubes must be packed in strong spark-proof wooden boxes.

(c) Labels will not be required on manufactured articles made from or containing pyroxylin plastics.

NOTE TO RULE 43.

Strong, spark-proof vulcanized hard fiber cases made of fiber not less than .070 of an inch in thickness reinforced by metal at the corners, purchased prior to October 1st, 1914, may be used until March 1, 1915, for the shipment of moving picture films enclosed in interior spark-proof metal cases.

All packages containing motion picture film must have attached thereto by the shipper a diamond shaped yellow label, in size four inches (4") long with the words printed in black letters inside of a black lined border, size three and one-half inches (3½") on each side as follows:

NOTICE TO POSTAL EMPLOYES
CAUTION!
KEEP FIRE AND LIGHTS AWAY

Sweep up and remove carefully contents of broken packages.

This is to certify that the above articles are properly described by name and are packed and marked and are in proper condition for transporting according to the regulations prescribed by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Shipper.

All such packages must be placed in cars and offices in position that will permit of their ready removal in case of fire. They must not be loaded in cars or stored in station or offices in contact with steam pipes or other sources of heat.

Seek to Oust Pennsylvania Censor Head

Governor Burmbaugh, of Pennsylvania, has asked for the resignation of J. Louis Breitinger, chairman of the State Censor Board, to take effect this week. It seems likely that the censor head, who has held this post since the formation of the board, will step down and that the appointment of a successor will be forthcoming within the week.

Pennsylvania politicians declare that there are political motives back of the request made on Breitinger for his resignation, it being pointed out that the censor is a Penrose follower and opposed to the Governor politically. Sentiment among film men is divided, the majority however welcoming the news, as they believe Breitinger's work has been of an autocratic nature. It is declared that Stanley V. Mastbaum is among those favoring the deposed head, and that only recently Governor Brumbaugh commended the work done by Breitinger to that prominent Philadelphia exhibitor.

Trigger Denounces Advance Deposit System

Protests That Deposit System, with Hoy Collection Service, "Adds Insult to Injury"—Favors Hoy System—Says Hoy Is Adequate

SAM TRIGGER, newly elected president of New York Local No. 1, of the Exhibitors League, has sent the following letter to all exchanges. The most important point he brings out is the unfairness of advance deposits, taking into consideration the successful activities of the Hoy Reporting Service.

The letter follows:

"Dear Sir:

"The sentiments of the exhibitors against the Deposit System now in vogue between them, and the exchanges is so universal that I feel it is up to me as president of the New York City Exhibitors' League to register my protest with theirs for its withdrawal. As you are aware, it involves quite a hardship on the majority of exhibitors.

"Now, with the Hoy System, which the exchanges have adopted, it does seem like adding insult to injury. I know you do not want to antagonize the exhibitor; nor do I, as their representative, wish to antagonize the exchanges, but I am simply trying to arbitrate and adjust matters amicably and with a fairness to all concerned.

"Isn't it reasonable to assume that the Hoy system covers the question and there is no need of deposits? This system makes it impossible for the exhibitor to get more than one week's credit; if he does not fulfill his obligations he cannot procure service in Greater New York.

"I am heartily in favor of this protection which the Hoy System gives, and sincerely believe it covers the exchange fully against loss. If so, WHY CONTINUE THE DEPOSIT SYSTEM?

"As stated above, the exhibitors are perfectly willing to arbitrate in any way that we can agree upon. We have not as yet been accorded a hearing on this subject, and in behalf of the exhibitors, I respectfully request an interview so we may arrange for an appointment when we can get together and discuss the question from our different viewpoints.

"Hoping to receive an early response, and wishing you a Very Happy and Prosperous New Year, I am,

"Very sincerely yours,

"SAM. H. TRIGGER."

Many New Picture Enterprises Incorporated

Friedman Enterprise Capitalized at $250,000—Many States Represented in Activities of New Concerns

Outstanding in the week's incorporations is the formation of Friedman Enterprises, Incorporated, with a capitalization of $250,000. Leonce Perret Arrives

Leonce Perret, the "king of French directors," arrived Tuesday in New York on the steamship "Espagne." He will start work immediately for Selznick Pictures, Inc.

He will direct Robert Warwick, who is now completing "The Argyle Case," under direction of Ralph Ince.

Leonce Perret's most recent success is "The Heroes of the Yser," which has had a remarkable run. Perret has been serving in a clerical capacity for the French army, but has been relieved from further duty. He has signed a five-year contract with Selznick. Negotiations for his services were made through Perret's American agent, Claude Patin, formerly the Gaumont manager.

"Witching Hour" Sold

WITHIN one week after the announcement of the exploitation of the Frohman Amusement Corporation's release, "The Witching Hour" rights to more than one-half of the entire world were disposed of.

This is rather unusual and while the company will continue to advertise "The Witching Hour," in the trade journals, it has, nevertheless, found that the best policy will be to advise the trade at the time there is no further territory to be disposed of.

It was stated at the offices of the Frohman Amusement Corporation that the object of this was to encourage inquiries from all over the country and from every possible state right buyer to the end that when the next special attraction of that company is ready for release those making inquiries and offers on "The Witching Hour" might first receive the benefit of a possible purchase on future releases.

First Ball in Denver Postponed

The first annual ball to be held by the Rocky Mountain Screen Club has again been postponed. It had been intended to hold the ball at the municipal auditorium on December 27, but owing to the nearness of the date to the many other events held in the city during holiday week it was decided to postpone the event until some time in January. The city's auditorium is being completely redecorated and will be in a more presentable condition at that time.

The stars who were to come as chief attraction for the ball were Wallace Reid and Sessue Hayakawa of the Lasky studios and Mary Miles Minter from the Mutual California headquarters.

The club having learned that Clara Kimball Young and her entire company are to be in Denver in January for the filming of final scenes for "The Easiest Way," decided to extend an invitation to Miss Young to join in the making of this the first annual ball, a great success. As yet Miss Young has not advised whether she will be able to be present or not.

G. H. Greaves, secretary and general manager of the Moore and Greaves Amusement Company, has returned for a three weeks' trip in the east. After spending a few days in New York Mr. Greaves stopped at Cambridge Springs.

New Type of Organization is Gaining National Headway

Frank J. Rembusch in Indiana Is Forming Body to Thrash Out Question of Competition—Similar Organization in North Carolina—New York Men Form Board to Fight Advance Deposits

A NATIONAL movement towards a new type of exhibitors' organization is rapidly gaining force. This new type of organization concerns itself more directly with the correction of business wrongs rather than with such questions as censorship and Sunday closing.

In Indiana, Frank Rembusch has formed a co-operative exhibitors' body for the purpose of thrashing out problems of competition and advance deposits.

In North Carolina a similar movement is in progress.

In New York, an organization known as the Exhibitors' Board of Trade, the chief purpose of which is to establish the financial responsibility of its members, has been formed. It is the belief of its organizers that the movement will spread to adjoining states and eventually to all parts of the country. This body will endeavor to attack problems which are reflected in all sections.

The charter members of the New York Exhibitors' Board of Trade are all well-known theatre men in that section. One of their first acts was to contribute $25,000 towards a sinking fund of $50,000, which will be deposited in a well-known bank. Each new member of the organization will be called upon to contribute to the fund.

The organization intends to make itself responsible for the financial dealings of its individual members insofar as film rentals are concerned.

Sydney A. Cohen, the president of the organization, told a MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative that the new board of trade will not conflict in any way with the various organizations now existing. He defined the purposes of the new organization and the exhibitors' leagues, stating that each has definite work cut out for it.

"The purpose of the league," said Mr. Cohen, "is to act in such matters as censorship, Sunday closing; in fact, anything that pertains to legislation. The Exhibitors Board of Trade will devote itself only to business matters. The first thing we intend doing for our individual members is to abolish the advance deposit system. By means of the general fund we will guarantee the responsibility of all of our members, and if any of our members fail to make good, we will make good for them out of the fund.

"We advocate advance payment of rentals. We will co-operate with any organization that wants our help. We will not fight the F.I.L.M. Clubs or the Hoy agencies. In fact, we approve of them, because they are working towards the same goal as we are. In many cases the advance deposit system is necessary, because some exhibitors are unreliable. We all know that bogus checks are paid for film rental and that illegal switching goes on. If we can put a stop to such practices we will, and by co-operating with the leagues and the F.I.L.M. clubs I think we can do it.

Sydney A. Cohen, president; Empire theatre, 161st street and Westchester avenue

E. Mayer, vice-president; and L. Schneider; Odeon, New Law, Crescent, M. & S., Waco.

John Manheimer, secretary; Park theatre, 44th street and Fifth avenue, Brooklyn.

A. J. Wolf, treasurer; Adelphi theatre, 89th street and Broadway.

J. W. Springer, 77th street theatre.

M. Glynn and Joe Ward; Century theatre, Alhambra theatre, Brooklyn.

Samuel Lesselnaum; Miller theatre, Vermont theatre, Penn theatre.

F. I. Unger, Regun theatre, 116th street and Lenox avenue.

I. Edelstein, Mt. Morris; 116th street and Fifth avenue.

Hurtig and Seaman Enterprises.

"John Film" of London Registers Some Protests

"You Over There in America Have Gone Wild Over the Word 'Biggest,' When You Should Be Hammering on the Word 'Better'"—Cleaner Plays Wanted

A WELL known film man of London, who wishes his identity to remain unknown, has written the following letter to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Probably his views are exaggerated, but he has at least the opportunity for a long distance glimpse of the conditions here. He spent several months studying American film methods; then he returned and thought over what he had seen and heard.

While the letter is written in a humorous vein, the thoughts it expresses are none the less pointed. On account of its length, only portions of the letter are reproduced here:

To Mr. Sam Film,
Mainly New York and Los Angeles,
U. S. A.

Dear Uncle Sam:—

I want to wish you a prosperous and happy new year and at the same time have a heart to heart talk with you. I intend attempting it in your own peculiar vernacular and, although I guess I'll slip up trying to write your slang, you will no doubt freeze on to the horse sense behind it—you're no bonehead.

I want to say right here, at the very beginning, that this letter holds no hymn of praise.

I've got three sure fire pills for you to swallow. You'll hate me if you bite into them, so just swallow quick and let the herb work.

Why do you build the biggest, thinking you are building the best? There is no artistry in big things merely because they are big.

Think it over! The exhibitor never asks for "stupendous productions; he never requests artists drawing "fabulous fees"; or "princessly dresses"—he never does. No Sir!

We, our side, are studying your papers with a microscope in the hopes of reading that some producer has forgotten his artistic temperament and although he has a million of real money to spend just runs around in a Ford and resists temptation.

Next Pill

Give us nice stories, Sam. We don't want vampires nor propaganda films, we've had enough of graft and gruesome stories, we won't have degradation and vice. Who wants these things? Do you want to see suggestions of darkness, vermin and slime? Or do you want what we want? We ask and implore you to send us stories which reflect health and sunshine, honor and faithfulness, beauty and manliness.

I'm not saying you don't send stories of this type, oh no, but you do send some of the other kind and we don't say grace nor offer thanks.

Last Pill

Why don't you expose less negative? You're overdoing it, my boy. You're making too many sprocket holes.

Where's the live wire who will connect up with the best of our studios and exchange or purchase productions and so avoid this overproduction and underselling? It's a sound proposition from all angles—look at a few:

1. You will not need to make as many films, so will be able to give more thought to those you decide to make.
2. By introducing international films you will get greater variety in your programmes.
3. You will get a better price for those films you sell our side because there won't be so much stuff to market.

Forget you have the biggest buildings, biggest newspapers, biggest stockyards, biggest canal and a few other "biggests" I won't mention.

And Lastly, My Dear Sam

What say to a few resolutions?

1. Better and less costly, instead of bigger and biggest.
2. Healthy women, manly men, idylls and homes, instead of vampires, degenerates, graft and gambling hells.
3. Reduction of output and a freer circulation of the fewer productions.

Again wishing you the good old British wish, "A Happy and Prosperous New Year."

Your affectionate relative,
JOHN FILM.

Protest Is Made Against Insurance Rulings

New Jersey Company Limits New Film Valuation to $1.00 Per Foot—Film Subjects Rejected by National Board of Review Are Not Covered by the Policy

A CONFERENCE of motion picture men took place in Newark, N. J., last Wednesday to protest against recent rulings of the Fire Insurance Exchange of New Jersey. This meeting is of importance to the entire motion picture industry, as the objections which were made and the rulings of the insurance company will arise sooner or later in every state.

Ralph A. Kohn, representing the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, the Pickford Film Corporation and the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, and J. E. Broulatour, representing the Eastman Company, voiced their protests against the following rulings of the insurance company:

1—The value of all negatives, the subjects of which have been issued for public exhibition on the market fifteen days or more prior to any loss or damage, shall be limited to not exceeding one dollar per lineal foot.

2—Negatives and (or) positives, the subjects of which are censored and rejected by the National Board of Review, are not covered by this policy.

With regard to the first paragraph, it was pointed out to the insurance men that it was manifestly unfair to assign an arbitrary value of $1 per foot to productions that had only been in circulation for fifteen days, since the value of feature productions at that stage of their life was almost invariably higher than even at the time of their release.

The fact that a motion picture had been rejected by the National Board of Review should not in any sense nullify its value, it was argued, because this board is unofficial in its capacity, being without legal authority, and any photoplays which had failed to measure up to its standards could still be released. The banning of any picture by the board, then, left the determination of its value to the producer, as it is within his province to decide whether or not he shall proceed to release the picture despite its disfavor with the board.

In summing up this case, Mr. Kohn drew the attention of the insurance men to the fact that the passing of these two rulings would work especial harm to the motion picture interests in the State of New Jersey because, despite the fact that better photographic results can be obtained in the laboratories to be found in that state than in those of New York, at the same time producers would not risk sending their films into Jersey if they were deprived of insurance coverage.

The withdrawal of the New York business from the Jersey plants would, it was pointed out, mean a serious loss to the latter.

Frank Rembusch Protests Against "Filth Film"

Lack of Profits for Exhibitor, He Says, Is Due to Absence of Clean Pictures—Unclean Pictures Are Keeping Patrons Away—National Association Should Act

FRANK REMBUSCH recently wrote a letter to a prominent producer in which he protested vigorously against unclean pictures. Vampires and degenerate pictures, he claims, are keeping people away from theatres. His letter, which follows, is of interest to all exhibitors:

"In Bloomington, Indiana, is located the foremost educational institution in Indiana. Mr. Robert Harris operates the motion picture theatres there and has been in the show business for 27 years, therefore has a world of experience.

"Mr. Harris told me yesterday that Pres. Bryan of the University called him to his office and asked whether there was no way in which the motion picture exhibitors could eliminate the sex problem plays or at least bring them within the bounds of decency.

"A minister of the Gospel said recently, "The picture theatres at one time were clean, light amusement. To-day they are heavy, nasty studies." He made the Scriptural comparison that they were neither cold or warm but lukewarm and therefore people would spit them out of their mouth.

"A trade publication said last week that there were almost four thousand shows closed permanently since the first of last May in the United States, and an exhibitor by the name of Alvin Stevens came by automobile from Austin, Texas, to Indianapolis, Indiana, and he said he called upon over 400 shows and only two were making any money.

"There is something wrong. I think it is the picture. They bump the line and they have a moral and a dirty strain so mixed up that it is hard to condemn and impossible to commend and therefore most people are quietly remaining away.

"I cannot resist the reiteration that if we have to have the eternal triangle let's have it in the dream of youth up to the marriage altar as we had it in the old days and not from the marriage altar to the grave as all stories are to-day, and leave out those things like the unnecessary nudeness and familiarities that embarrass friends who go to the show together. It is almost impossible for the patrons to discuss the movies anymore because the plot would lead them on forbidden grounds.

"I am going to prophesy that there are going to be some censorship fights this winter and we are liable to be in the same condition that the saloon keepers found themselves when they decided to be good but it was too late.

"What I have written is either so or it isn't so. I think the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry ought to find out and strenuously find a remedy.

"Very cordially yours,

"F. J. REMBUSCH."

"V" Has Not Bought Rialto

In spite of report to the contrary, neither Greater Vitagraph nor Vitagraph V. L. S. E. has bought the Rialto theatre, the magnificent New York picture house presided over by Samuel L. Rothapfel.

Rumor on Broadway during the current week coupled the name of Vitagraph with the Rialto in various ways to suggest that the Blue Ribbon company had acquired Mr. Rothapfel's house and would take it over as the Vitagraph theatre, retaining Mr. Rothapfel.

Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Vitagraph V. L. S. E., when asked to make a statement, said:

"It is in no way true that either Greater Vitagraph or Vitagraph V. L. S. E. has acquired any interest of whatsoever sort in the Rialto theatre, always excepting that interest which these two companies have and maintain in every theatre which runs Blue Ribbon productions.

"Mr. Rothapfel has contracted for Blue Ribbon features as the basis of his 1917 program. For these features Mr. Rothapfel pays a flat regular price per week, the same as does every Vitagraph exhibitor.

"Outside of these conditions, Vitagraph has no connection whatever with the Rialto theatre."

Wells Hawks Off for Ballet Russe Publicity

At the request of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, Wells Hawks has been "loaned" by Mary Pickford for a brief period to take charge of the Chicago and Middle West cities publicity for the Diaghilief Ballet Russe. The genial Hawks left Saturday night for Chicago, and several of his many friends saw him off at the Grand Central.

Mr. Hawks had charge of the road publicity of the ballet last season before becoming personal representative for Miss Pickford. He will continue his work for the Artcraft star on tour and on his return to New York.

National Association Dinner Is Set for January 26

The dinner and entertainment to be given by the General Division of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, will be held on Friday, January 26, as was suggested by the Executive Committee of the division. This was decided on at a meeting of the entertainment committee held Friday morning.

The members of the general division and their guests will be invited. Provision will be made for about 300 people, both men and women.

Shumway, Not "Shinway"

Through a regrettable error, Walter (i Shumway's name was spelled "Shinway" in an advertisement of "What Becomes of the Children?" which appeared in the January 6th issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. "What Becomes of the Children?" was written by Cora Beach and features her and Walter Shumway. It is being produced now in Jacksonville.

WITH THE EXHIBITOR

Splendid Ideas for Children's Shows

Donating Half Admissions to School Fund for Largest Attendance from Any School and Other Clever Schemes

Every day sees the progress of special matinees for children in the Omaha motion picture territory—including Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and the Dakotas. Some recent developments are the recent calling of a mass meeting promoting active co-operation of leaders of women's organizations and exhibitors at Omaha; the decided success of special Saturday morning matinees at the Majestic, Council Bluffs, after three months of experiment the indorsement of "Snow White" by Nebraska Federated Women's Clubs; and the starting out of a road salesman dealing exclusively with children's pictures.

The mass meeting was held in the Omaha Young Women's Christian Association. There were a number of brief talks by Mrs. E. M. Syfert, president of the Omaha Woman's Club; E. U. Graff, superintendent of the Omaha public schools; Karl Schreiber, superintendent of the Welfare Board of the city, and a number of exhibitors. Representatives of Mothers' clubs and Teachers' clubs also talked.

Superintendent Graff, recognized throughout the country as an authority in school work, spoke of the educational value of motion pictures, saying they would be in every school as a method of instruction in time. Superintendent Schreiber, who, under the city laws, has the right to censor motion pictures, said he had never yet found cause to exert his power as a censor because the exhibitors had co-operated with him in every suggestion.

The exhibitors spoke on children's pictures. What they said is no doubt of interest over the entire country wherever exhibitors are considering the subject.

"You can't expect a child to attend a theatre where only educational and travel pictures are shown," said O. C. Brown, of the Hamilton theatre. "You must first of all put some humor in the picture. A little humor will go a long way with a child, and will make an interesting, long-to-be-remembered show of one that without humor he will condemn as a bore."

"Give the youngster a program that will please the whole family," said A. E. Thomas, manager of the Strand. "You can crowd your house for the same reason that a circus tent is packed with parents who went 'just to take the children.' Fairy stories, travel pictures, and educational films that interest children are just as interesting to their fathers and mothers. Run your special matinee pictures on through. Your older patrons will enjoy them just as much as the children." Mr. Thomas said also that children's pictures should first be shown downtown in the big houses, which would advertise them big in the newspapers. Then they would work their way into the community theatres, and the suburban exhibitor could realize on the preceding publicity.

R. D. Shirley, of the Muse, said you must advertise for the children, just like you advertise for grown-ups, if you would get them. "You can't expect to book a program for a special matinee for children, then sit back and expect the children to come trooping in," he said. "The matinee must be firmly established, so a child will know when he starts to school Monday morning that next Saturday morning his theatre will show a picture specially for him. To get him started you must tell him of the matinee. Tell him again and again. Spread the word through the schools, through the homes, on your screen, in every way possible and cultivate your children patrons the same as you cultivate your older patrons."

Have you a real, lusty complaint against some evil of the business that you would like to thresh out with your fellow managers? This is your meeting place. Let us hear from you. An experienced exhibitor is here to lend you his co-operation—as well as that of other exhibitor readers.

Write that letter to-day—get one problem or one complaint off your chest!

Mrs. M. E. Goff, of the Franklin, said the average small theatre in the resident section of a city shows regularly only pictures which the children may see without harm. "We would do that all the time," she said, "if we could get them." Mrs. Goff is known to scores of her child patrons almost by her first name.

Louis Marcus, manager of the Majestic theatre, Council Bluffs, Ia., has reported the result of experiments in children's matinees for three months. "Hard to get started, but a success after they are going," he declared. "I had the co-operation of the women's organizations, the schools, and all others interested in children. I was the only one in a city of 30,000 catering to the children on Saturday mornings. Now, I have a steady stream of children patrons every Saturday, and my theatre has profited greatly through the parents of the children coming to the regular shows. The children are great little advertisers when you show them pictures they like. My greatest trouble is to find enough pictures for a program that will fit just what they want. I book a long time ahead. I don't know what will happen if every exhibitor tries to put on special children's matinees Saturday mornings. Where'll we get the pictures?"

"They're putting on special children's shows every day in the week," was the statement of F. A. Van Husan, whose campaign with the special children's picture with child actors, "Snow White," through Iowa and Nebraska is a feature of the campaign for children's matinees. "All I did was to explain how exhibitors could not all use the same picture, and I could not afford to let the film lie idle six days of the week. The women readily agreed to boost the matinees any day in the week. The exhibitors want regular times set, of course."

Mr. Marcus has just started a new idea that is working fine, he says. He says to the school represented by the most children at the matinee he will refund one-half of the money spent by the students of that school. This money is turned into the school fund for music or other needs. It results in every school trying to get out the most children.

Van Husan this week received the indorsement of Mrs. J. N. Paul, president of the Nebraska Federation of Women's Clubs for "Snow White." Mrs. Paul also furnished a list of the Woman's Club secretaries in every town in the State.

P. H. Monsky, representing Van Husan and the Western Supply Company, which has the state rights to the picture, "Snow White," is out selling nothing but the one picture. Mr. Monsky is a well-known Omaha enthusiast for children's matinees.

Invitations De Luxe for "Romeo"

Patrons of the Columbia theatre, Bath, Maine, crowded that house to capacity Christmas Day and Tuesday, to see the Metro production of "Romeo and Juliet."

Among other special methods of reaching the class of people sure to appreciate this production, were neatly printed cards, in two colors, which might well be called "invitations de luxe." We received one, and would certainly expect a high class performance from the manner of our invitation to come and see it.

This harmony between the class of picture shown and the way it is exploited is the key to the seeming "monopoly" that those who don't see the significance of infinite care and pains, envy where the other fellow has succeeded.

As we read in the "ads," "There's a Reason."

Plan Novel Way to Interest Public in Ball

Movie Fans Will Vote for Favorite Stars to Lead Jersey Grand March—Counting of Votes to Be Guarded

THE first annual ball of the New Jersey Exhibitors' League, to be held at the Auditorium, Newark, February 1, is to have a whirlwind publicity campaign backed by the theatre managers themselves, through their own theatres. This is a real stunt, if it works out as it is expected to do. There is to be no falsifying of the vote. The movie fans patronizing the Jersey theatres will have to decide who shall lead the grand march, with all its attendant honor and glory. And the theatre man who fails to get his patrons to vote will obviously lose a great chance for publicity of his house and stars.

Printed votes, on which spaces will be designated to write the name of the favorite actor, as well as the favorite actress, will be furnished to each theatre proprietor desirous of entering the contest, and they in turn will issue to the patrons of their theatre one vote for each ticket purchased at the box office. The votes, after they have been filled in by the patrons, will be sent to the League headquarters, Room 216, Globe Building, Newark, where a number of reputable business men have volunteered to act as a committee to count the votes, keeping a correct and accurate record.

The votes must be received at the headquarters for the current week not later than Tuesday evening of the following week, and the last votes of the contest must be received at headquarters not later than Tuesday, January 23, at which time the final count will be made in order to give the winners an opportunity to make arrangements to be at the ball.

All questions in reference to the contest will be answered by F. E. Samuels, manager of the ball.

But He Hasn't Stopped Hustling!

"It isn't necessary. I only use unusual advertising methods when business needs hustling," said B. M. Moore of the Lyric, Tekamah, Neb., while visiting the General exchange in Omaha last week. Mr. Moore is the head of a house of four hundred seats, where ten cents for the regular program and fifteen cents for features are the admission prices.

In the past he has resorted to unusual advertising "stunts," and is generally considered one of the leading live wires of the motion picture industry in Nebraska. He advertises in the newspapers and other regular channels constantly and vigorously.

Baltimore Theatre Sends Xmas Letter Signed by Mary Pickford

Among the numerous uses of the holiday greeting idea, the Garden theatre of Baltimore, Maryland, selected a sure winner, by sending out a letter over Mary Pickford's signature, in an envelope addressed as follows: "A Christmas Treat from Mary Pickford."

St. Louis Has Active Local Association

The Theatre Managers' and Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of St. Louis is an active organization that has been quietly doing some real good in that territory. In the first issue of their "weekly bulletin" is recorded (1) the election of five new members; (2) the settlement of a dispute between one of their theatres and the operators' local, satisfactorily to both parties; (3) the securing of the withdrawal of the deposit burden of several exchanges; (4) official endorsement of the "independent" supply houses; (5) the appointment of a committee of ten to assist the president in heading off unfair tax legislation, with a carefully compiled list of reasons why such legislation is unfair.

Needless to say this association represents the real "live wires" of St. Louis, and we shall watch with great interest the development of harmony within its ranks as more real things are accomplished for the mutual benefit of all exhibitors, without trying to control what is the individual and personal business of any one.

We acknowledge the courtesy of Oscar H. Damon, secretary, for putting us on the mailing list for their weekly "bulletin."

Who Was to Blame, Exchange or Exhibitor?

The Omaha F. I. L. M. club sat in session three hours the other day and answered this question twice:

First, there was a widely known exhibitor who, after widely advertising a big feature, received it C. O. D. with a bigger price attached than he had agreed to pay. The exchange manager said the price had been fixed and the road man did not have authority to lower it. He did not know, he said, that it had been lowered. The matter hung fire and a fight in the courts was imminent until the F. I. L. M. club was formed. The exchange manager and the exhibitor appeared before the club and the question was discussed. The exhibitor won.

The second case was of an exhibitor who had allowed a bill to accumulate against him until the exchange manager sent a shipment C. O. D., which was refused. The exhibitor telephoned another exchange and ordered film. The exchanges had been asked to protect the manager who had the large sum due. They could not refuse service, because that would have been a combination in restraint of trade and against the law, so the exchange manager sent the order, but sent it C. O. D. The exhibitor telephoned him and tried to get him to release the order, the exchange manager would not. In this case the exhibitor lost when the matter was discussed before the club. Now the exhibitor has paid his bills and is showing the films from the exchange with which he had a contract in the first place.

L. A. Getzler, manager of the Mutual exchange and recently arrived in Omaha from Chicago, told the club some of the advanced practices of a similar club in the "windy city." Meetings are not held regularly but are called when needed. Recently there have been as many as three in one week, and never less than one. Harry Heyman, manager of the World exchange in Omaha, has been elected secretary, and J. E. Kirk, dean of Omaha exchange men and former chairman of the club, was elected president.

Downtown Rialto Planned

It is reported that Messrs. Steiner, Wesiner & Schwartz, owners of the new 14th street movie theatre, are seeking a site on the low East Side whereon to build a photoplay house. They plan to model the theatre after the Rialto, with a seating capacity of 2,500.

Baltimore Managers Lend Theatres for Charity

Many of the Baltimore exhibitors have tendered their theatres for charitable uses during the holiday season. A number of special performances have been arranged for cripples, shut-ins and orphans. A special children's performance was tendered to several hundred unfortunate children at the Walbrook theatre on North avenue.

These children were from the Kelso Home, the Calverton Orphan Asylum and Kernan's Home for Crippled Children. Another entertainment was given to several hundred orphans at the Rialto theatre on North avenue on Wednesday morning after Christmas.

Glimpses of the Seventh Episode of "Pearl of the Army" (Pathe)

IOWA.—Dallas Center: The picture house at Dallas Center, formerly owned by H. M. Loos, has been sold.

Des Moines: The Majestic theatre in Des Moines, one of the largest picture houses in the capital city, has been leased by Abe Frankel and is now showing pictures. It is the plan of Mr. Frankel to show big features here. "Ramona" was the first production shown. This will be followed closely by "War Brides," "Intolerance," "The Little Girl Next Door," and other large and well known pictures, according to the new manager. Prices for "Ramona" were 25 and 50 cents; it is probable that this scale will be maintained during the season. The Majestic was at one time one of the best known and most popular theatres in Des Moines, but has recently been closed. Elbert and Getchell, who own various legitimate and picture houses in Des Moines, were the lessors. Mr. Frankel is also manager of the Casino theatre in that city.

Waterloo: A. W. McIntosh, who has been managing the Crystal theatre in Waterloo, has sold that house to Mr. Hostettler, who is now in charge.

KANSAS.—Chillicothe: Bookshire Bros., formerly owners of the Majestic theatre at Chillicothe, Kan., recently sold it to Foote and Lindsey, new men in the moving picture business. The former owners will go to Billings, Mont., where they own a bill posting plant. They will probably enter the moving picture business again later.

Wichita: Joe Fox, Holland theatre, Wichita, Kan., was in Kansas City the other day booking Mary Pickford pictures.

MARYLAND.—Baltimore: The Gordon theatre on Baltimore and Catherine streets, this city, has been purchased by Thomas T. Goldberg and Joseph Brodie. The new owners propose to make a number of improvements to the house, which will include an entire renovation of the exterior and interior, while a special line of film production will be included on the program. The improvements will be made at once, although there will be no interruption to the regular performances.

A novel plan has been decided upon by the management which will present the distribution of gold coin, prizes, season tickets and other premiums. There is an airdome connected with the theatre which has also been purchased and will be conducted by the present owners during the summer months.

This is Mr. Goldberg's second picture venture. He has been actively identified with the motion picture business of Baltimore for several years and is the proprietor and manager of the Goldberg theatre on North avenue. Mr. Brodie, who is also active in the motion picture business of Baltimore, is proprietor of the Brodie on Light street, and has had at various times other interest in the film industry of Baltimore.

MICHIGAN.—Mt. Clemens: L. G. Peltier, proprietor of the Bijou, Mt. Clemens, Mich., has purchased the control of the Lyric theatre in that city, and has closed it for repairs and alterations. He plans to make the Lyric a daily change house, playing all big features at the Bijou two days each. A. J. Kleist, former proprietor, has returned to Pontiac, Mich.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Harrisburg: The Victoria motion picture theatre, owned and operated by James and Athens George, 221 and 223 Market street, has just undergone extensive alteration. An entire new lobby has been built at the entrance at No. 221, and the seating capacity of the house has been materially increased.

TENNESSEE.—Chattanooga: A deal has been closed by the Signal Amusement Company for the purchase of the Royal Motion Picture theatre on East Main street. The consideration is understood to have been $20,000. With the purchase of this theatre the amusement company now controls all the film houses in the city, with the exception of one on Main street. Paramount and Triangle pictures will be shown at the Royal.

WISCONSIN.—Appleton: Mrs. H. Bradley Fish, wife of H. Bradley Fish, the manager of the Princess theatre in this city, has taken over a suburban theatre known as the Eleventh Avenue theatre. Mrs. Fish, with her sister, Miss Rosenbohm, of Appleton, Wis., is successfully conducting this little 360-seat house, presenting only Paramount and Triangle programs with daily change. Although entirely inexperienced in the show business, Mrs. Fish has figured out something special for practically every night in the week and has already received countless congratulations from her patrons for the splendid manner in which her theatre is operated.

CANADA.—Alberta, Edmonton: Frank McQueen, a well known resident of Edmonton, Alberta, has just opened the Garland theatre, which has been dark for some time, and which has just been subjected to a thorough renovation.

The Children's Show a Big Problem for This Man

D-At-Ka Theatre,
Fred A. Rice, Proprietor.

Editor, with the Exhibitor,
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Sir: I was just reading the article in the News of December 23, "Consider the Little Ones, and Profit Thereby." I think the article very good, and that there should be more children's pictures produced.

Last winter I tried running a children's show Saturday morning at 10.30 a. m. I had special children's pictures, but could not seem to get up enough interest to pay for the films, to say nothing about the other expense.

The mothers would not come, but send the little folks, and, of course, that was only a nickel, and it did not bring in much money; in fact, some of the smaller children would not buy a ticket at all.

I would like to have a list of the children's pictures that are on the market, if you could give them to me. I think I will try my Special Children's Show at 1 p. m., and allow all who like to stay through our regular show at 2.15 p. m. What is your opinion of this way of doing it?

I am very much interested in pictures for the children, as I know they go home and talk picture to the older members of the family. I have a high-class town, and high-class patrons, so this children's side of my business must be looked after. Any suggestions you may offer will be greatly appreciated. Thanking you in advance for same, I am,

Respectfully yours,
Fred A. Rice.

Brother Rice says the mothers would not come, but would send the little ones, and, incidentally, complains of the nickel price. He also asks a very pertinent question, "Should I let them stay through and see my regular show?"

Obviously, the mothers and the children themselves cannot be expected to enjoy the same kind of a show. They don't go, anywhere, if the show is strictly for the kids. Also, the larger children will be sensitive about going to a "children's show." Maybe some of the many exhibitors experimenting with this class of show can answer this question for Brother Rice, What will interest children and grown-ups, too?

The five-cent price is correct, and should meet the expense of a children's show? Children are not critical about the age of reels, or whether the picture has been shown many months before.

We say, decidedly, "Don't!" to the suggestion of letting the children stay through the regular show. The kids would stay all day, if permitted, but the regular show is not supposed to suit them, and in addition to the special show is too much. Then if you want the children to boost your other show, turn them loose and let them go home and talk about the good time they had at your theatre. Turn them loose while they are still hungry for more. Give them a full nickel's worth, and, if they then want more, let them come next week and spend another nickel.

If the kids don't come the first time, there has been lack of co-operation by the teachers and mothers. If they come once, but don't come back, the trouble is wholly with your show. This must be selected by the management, not the teachers and mothers. It must NOT be educational, or advertised as "good" for the children. They want candy, not medicine, so to speak. Historical and fairy stories are entertaining to children. Indian pictures, and all pictures with action, are suitable for children in every sense of the word. Vulgarity, criminal sensationalism, and sex pictures are the only pictures which cannot be shown at these performances. Short scenic, industrial, nature studies and travel pictures, do well enough for color and variety, and to entertain the brighter children, but will have to be used sparingly. One thing is certain, the children come if they want to, not because of mother or teacher.

Harry Reichenbach's Stunt for the Pre-Release Showing of "Enlighten Thy Daughter," Might Well Be Used by Exhibitors

Dreamland at Kiowa, Kansas, Pulls "Some Stunt"

The half sheet poster herewith illustrated is from the Dreamland theatre, Kiowa, Kan., operated by Goforth & Son. They evidently believe in "trademarked goods," and have the courage of their convictions that the big name of the producing company will get them business every time it is displayed. Right idea, gentlemen, when you are dealing with a producing company that sticks by its customers and does not change its service to the highest bidder every few months.

This is the tremendous advantage the small town exhibitor, dealing with a reputable exchange, has over his big town competitors, and this kind of advertising, backed by a properly managed show, is sure to succeed. All he has to do every time his bill changes is to print or rubber stamp as many of these half sheets as he can find convenient posting space for all over town, and the whole town knows that Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, or whatever star he has will be at the Dreamland theatre that night. It beats mileposts and other permanent and never-changed signs a thousand per cent.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

Lobby Display Is Governed by Patronage

What Appeals in One Locality Fails in Another Section—Putting Your Message in the Right Key

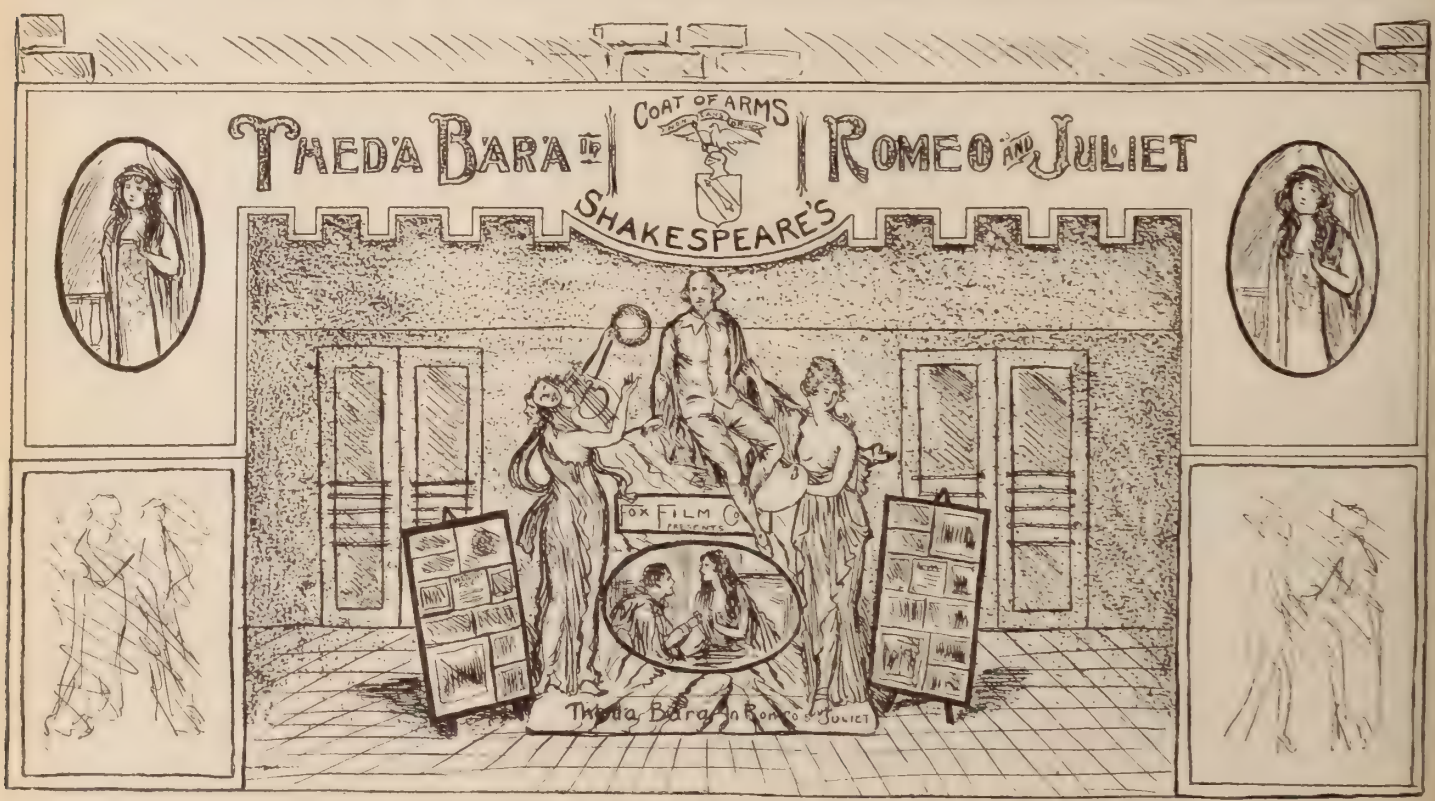
BY M. KASHIN

THE magnificent commercial possibilities of lobby displays are too obvious to leave much room for adverse criticism, but here and there you meet with one or two doubtful ones who, through ignorance of the psychological effect produced, profess to be skeptical. Their main argument is that though lobby displays may be productive of gratifying results in so far as a theatre of second, third or fourth class standing is concerned, yet to a house of the first class such publicity work would be barren of any good, and would tend to cheapen rather than to raise the prestige of that particular theatre.

That is to say, what is meat to one portion of a community is poison to another—what appeals to the wife of a workman would repel the wife of a bank clerk. But that is not a sound argument. Let me draw an illustration from a very common article of consumption—the onion. In all walks of life this vegetable is eaten and enjoyed, but it is put on the table in a different way. The wife of the laboring man will eat it raw or pickled, the wife of the bank clerk will perhaps only have it cooked or used as a flavoring. And so it is with lobby displays. The highly colored, somewhat glaring and circus-like appeal which will attract the downtown passerby will be no attraction to the uptown, but tone the display to a more minor key, make the color scheme more artistic, make your suggestions appeal to a more highly developed train of thought and feeling, and the result will be the same.

Every man, woman and child has imagination, each one has that fatal gift of Eve—curiosity—each one can be influenced by a certain train of thought. As an illustration of my argument compare the display of Theda Bara in "Romeo and Juliet," published herewith, and the design published recently for Kitty Gordon in "Her Maternal Right." The latter was divested of all exterior ornamentation; it did not aim to appeal to a highly cultured and highly educated state of mind. It went straight home to the maternal feeling of a woman, but in a way that would appeal to the dullest imagination.

The lowest type of immigrant, the most illiterate, could understand and be affected by the outstretched hands of a mother anxious for her child. In the design for "Romeo and Juliet" there is a different appeal. Here an artistic effort is attempted. The play, and not the actress, is the dominant figure—Shakespeare and not Theda Bara. The wonderful genius of the great writer, the glorious art which he enriched, the magnificent train of thought that he induced, are brought out. The effect is the same, though the method of producing it is widely different. I have no hesitation in saying that the display of "Romeo and Juliet" would cheapen no theatre, not even the finest in the country, while it certainly would help its booking receipts.

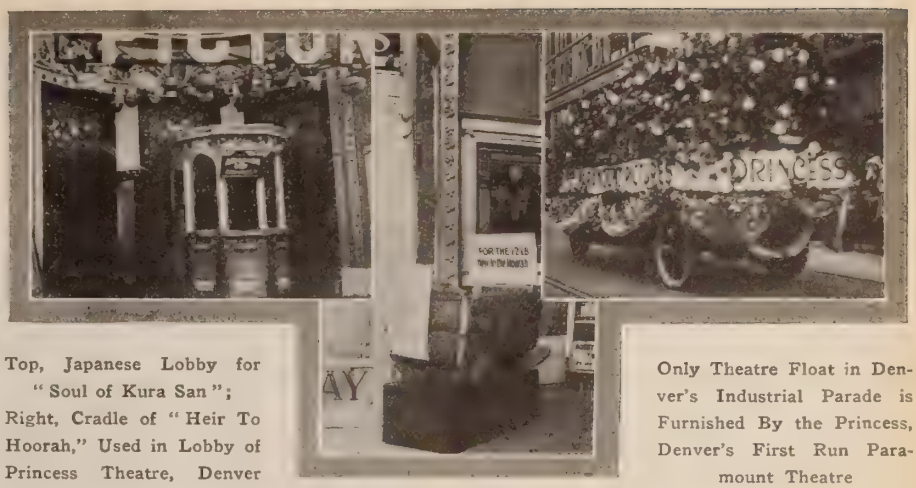


"V" Supplies Free Slides of Its Stars

Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Vitagraph V. L. S. E., has augmented the service which the various exchanges of that company supply to exhibitors throughout the United States by adding a series of special slides, which are furnished free to all Vitagraph contract exhibitors.

Included in these new free slides are those of Anita Stewart, Earle Williams, Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno, Lillian Walker and Walter McGrail, Rose Tapley, Peggy Hyland and Marc McDermott, and Alice Joyce and Harry Morey.

It will be noted that these slides follow closely the plan which Mr. Irwin secured for the release of Vitagraph's Blue Ribbon features in a rotary system that provides for the return of each star or group of stars every six weeks.



There has also been made available for Vitagraph exhibitors special Blue Ribbon trademark cuts in five different sizes, these cuts being intended for exhibitors' programs and exhibitors' newspaper ads.

A Dignified Display in Keeping With the Subject and the Theatre

Princess, Denver, Pulls Live Stunts

The Princess theatre, Denver, Colo., uses every possible means of attracting patrons, as illustrated herewith. The specially designed two column newspaper advertisement of "A Son of Erin," the float which was the only picture theatre float in a recent Industrial Parade, and the lobby decorations for "Soul of Kura San" and "Heir to the Hoorah," are neatly but conspicuously illustrative of the character of the pictures, and the theatre itself. The "cradle" which is a reproduction of the most novel scene in the "Heir to the Hoorah," made a big hit and was shipped all around the "Princess" circuit of theatres at Pueblo, Colorado Springs, and Cheyenne (Lyric.)

Many Christmas Programs Are Attractive

That the theatre's own program, replacing the "herald" of ancient days, has improved several hundred per cent. since last Christmas, is the evidence from the many attractive ones coming into the NEWS office the past week. Several took advantage of the red and green combination to make their programs look like Christmas greetings, sure enough. And this personal touch between the theatre and its patrons is very important.

One of the many gems which have reached our desk, is a neatly printed eight page bound leaflet from the Elmwood, Buffalo, N. Y., in the two colors named, with red catch lines and date indexes, and topping the page given over to the New Year's bill, is a tasty bell, appropriately suggesting ringing the New Year in, with the inscription in Old English style type "Happy New Year." Green holly leaves with red berries and a Christmas wreath decorate the front cover. Heavy white linen book paper gives tone and eliminates the need for a cover of different weight. Accompanying the program is a Christmas Greeting card, on good grade of bristol stock, also in the two colors neatly printed and happily worded. The text of the greeting is given here:

GOOD CHEER AND TIDINGS

For 1917 we want to do more than wish you a Prosperous New Year. We want, so far as it lies in our power, to assure you a full year of good entertainment and joy.

To this end we have decked our tree with the fullest fruits of honesty of purpose and have arranged with five of the largest film producers, viz.: Greater Vitagraph, Fox, Paramount, Metro, Clara Kimball Young Company, and many others besides, to serve those who are co-operating with us in the march onward to success.

Take the Elmwood's next two weeks' program herewith enclosed, and let it bring you pleasure.

THE ELMWOOD THEATRE MANAGEMENT.

We Would Like to Hear What Others Think of This

A. G. SCHUBERT of the Arcadia theatre, Gooding, Idaho, recently conceived a very novel idea for the projection of pictures which he claims adds greatly to the attractiveness of the Paramount features shown on his screen, a wonderful effect being produced by the simple usage of green, red and amber lights backed with reflectors, thrown on the screen with the picture.

He says, "We use red, green and amber lights with a reflector above and below the screen, sitting out about ten feet, and throwing the light directly on the screen as evenly as possible. The picture positively cannot be compared with a picture projected without lights. The light gives a wonderful effect, and upon demonstrating it to a number of fellow exhibitors, they all remarked upon the amazing improvement.

Will some of you live wires kindly try this out and see if Brother Schubert has hit on a permanent improvement for the wideawake ones to adopt immediately, and if found O. K., don't fail to report back for the benefit of the other brethren.

Smoking Room and Other Comforts Costing Little to Provide Are Much Worth While

Absolute comfort has been the watchword in rearranging the Starland theatre, Ninth and Wabasha streets, St. Paul, and this theatre has become one of the meeting places of persons who have downtown appointments in that city.

As far as is known the Starland has the only smoking room in any St. Paul film theatre. The room is in the basement. It is plain, but the man who is waiting on a cold night for a certain time to roll around may step down and enjoy himself until that time arrives. The men's dressing room is also in the basement.

M. S. Nathan, the manager, has covered the back of the seats with white laundered slips, which give an air of cleanliness that can be obtained in no other way. These slips are changed and the theatre is just as clean as it looks.

In practically all theatres the view from the seats at the extreme sides of the house is hampered by the patrons who are going up and down the aisles. To obviate this, the Starland management has raised the outside section and divided it into boxes. There is no aisle next to the wall. The boxes permit four persons to sit abreast and are sufficiently elevated to allow the patrons to look over the heads of those who are passing down the aisles.

Careful selection of the program in the open market, the best projection possible, good music, uniformed girl ushers, an illuminated clock, marking lights in the floor and hidden illumination throughout the house are some of the other things that keep the Starland's seats occupied at all performances.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

MISS EVELYN GREELEY will make her debut as a World-Brady actress in a very important role in "Glass Houses," just completed in the Peerless studio, Fort Lee. Miss Greeley comes of a distinguished Kentucky family, and is a graduate of one of the most noted Southern colleges.

Her first experience was with Essanay. Then followed a short engagement with Francis X. Bushman, for Metro, and from there she went to the Dixie Film Corporation.

Here Miss Greeley created the principal feminine roles in "Tempest and Sunshine" and "Just a Song at Twilight," and her acting was so exceptional that it attracted the attention of World Film scouts.

ALICE JOYCE was saved from drowning in the East River last week by Harry Morey, who was playing with her in the Vitagraph film, "Within the Law." A company, under direction of W. P. S. Earle, was working at the New York Dock Company's wharves at the foot of Fulton street, in a scene in which Alice Joyce was supposed to commit suicide. The water was cold; Miss Joyce became exhausted, and Harry Morey pulled her out.

ANDERS RANDOLF, a heavy at the Vitagraph Brooklyn studios, spends his idle time painting portraits. He plays Wildresse in "The Girl Phillipa," in which Anita Stewart is featured. He played Duke Katoff in "The Suspect."

ORA CAREW, leading lady in the Keystone Comedy Company, has been presented with a cub bear. She had a wooden sign made, in the shape of the state of California and had the slogan "I love you, California" painted upon it. Then she had a photograph of herself, the bear and the sign taken. The photograph, autographed, was mailed to President Wilson.

WITH the beginning of the New Year New York patrons of the photoplay will, no doubt, welcome the appearance of William R. Dunn in "The Secret Kingdom." He portrays the part of Juan Lopez in the story of the fall of "The Kingdom of Alania" by the assassination of the King and Queen, and the attempt on the life of the Crown Prince Philip. The play will have its initial production in Loew's Bijou theatre, Brooklyn, New Year's night, and also in the New York theatres.

Mr. Dunn has a large Brooklyn following. During seven years in Vitagraph productions he has played more than one thousand different characters.

SALLY CRUTE plays the part of a half-breed girl of the great Canadian Northwest in the Kleine-Edison production, "The Law of the North," which features Shirley Mason.

Hobart Henley (Universal)

ANOTHER picture star to forsake the California atmosphere for Eastern climate is Hobart Henley, the Universal director and leading man who has left Universal City for the exclusive movie circle at Leonia, N. J. Mr. Henley is at present selecting members of the feature company which he will direct. He will produce five-act features in which he will also play the leading roles.

EDWIN CAREWE is now with A. H. Jacobs, directing Jane Grey in subjects for International release.

KATE PRICE, star of Amber Star comedies, remembered all the stage employes at the Garrick studios Christmas with handsome presents. In appreciation for the gifts, the men presented Miss Price with a beautiful bunch of Poinsettas, the Florida flower, each flower representing a donor and bearing his card. There were fifty-one flowers in the bunch. Billy Ruge, star of Amber Star; Billy Ruge Comedies, under the direction of Bill Louis, entertained his company to a delightful Christmas dinner at the Hotel Mason, at which little favors representing "Amber Star's" were distributed.

ROY C. SHELTON, assistant to Herbert Brenon in producing "The Eternal Sin," was formerly manager of the Strand theatre, Nashville, Tenn., being one of the few film men to enter the producing ranks from the exhibiting end. A contrast is presented in the case of C. W. Magee, manager of the Majestic theatre, Detroit, who was for many years prominent as a leading man with Pathe, being one of the first actors of the speaking stage to take up the silent drama.

IN addition to the large number of producing companies on the Pacific Coast. William Fox now has a formidable list of directors working in Eastern studios. The roster includes Carl Harbaugh, J. Gordon Edwards, Kenean Buel, James Vincent. John Adolfi and William Nigh, the latter recently signed.

FLORENCE CRAWFORD, whose most recent screen work in the East, was done for Universal, has been added to the Fox forces, and will make her debut under that banner in the June Caprice feature now nearing completion.

IN AND OUT OF WEST COAST STUDIOS

By J. C. JESSEN

FUTURE plans made by President S. S. Hutchinson of the American Company with studios at Santa Barbara, provide for five organizations, each headed by a star of national reputation for the completion of super pictures of five reels or more, which will become effective about January 1. For the past several weeks the American studio staff has been undergoing a radical reorganization in every department. Changes have been effected in practically the head of every section from the office of general manager throughout the entire studio. Mr. Hutchinson is now in the East where additional stars and proper directors will be engaged.

WM. RUSSELL, first starred in the "Diamond From the Sky," serial of sixty reels, and later selected for stellar roles in Mutual Masterpictures of five reels or more, is to continue at the head of one company. Francelia Billington, for three years lead in subjects made at west coast studios and most recently featured in Bluebird releases, has been engaged to play opposite Mr. Russell, and with Edward Sloman as director, is now appearing in "A Son of Battle," a costume play of the Reconstruction period in which Russel takes the name part. Jack Vosgburg, a new member of the American stock company, is playing heavy for this film. Director Sloman has been with the American for the past year, and has many good releases to his credit including the sequel to the "Diamond From the Sky."

ANOTHER star to continue is Mary Miles Minter, who, under the direction of James Kirkwood has begun work in "The Gentle Intruder." Franklyn Richie takes an important role in this production. Director Kirkwood has just completed assembling and editing "The Innocencee of Lizette," spoken of as a delightful story of a young girl's whimsies.

The sixth and last of the Kolb and Dill productions is now being assembled by Director Al. Santell, who also prepared the scenario. The title of this is "Beloved Rogues."

JAMES M. COLWELL has been engaged by the American Film Company to direct publicity at the studio. The American has made a change with respect to its former policy, and in the future stories concerning the activities of the plant will be sent out direct from the studio publicity department instead of being relayed through the Chicago office of the American, or the Mutual Film Corporation publicity department.

Three new photoplays were put into production last week at the Ince Triangle studios, Culver City. J. C. Hawks is the author of one spoken of as a rollicking romance of the Balkan States with an Irish newspaper reporter representing a London paper playing the leading role. This part is taken by Bill Desmond, and opposite him will be Mary Mac Ivor, who has just completed her first leading woman role in a William S. Hart production. Others in the cast are Fannie Midgley, Joseph J. Dowling, Thomas S. Guise and Wm. H. Bray. Walter Edwards has the direction of this photoplay.

JANUARY 1 will see the Signal Company offices in a new location on Pasadena Avenue immediately in front of the studio. A large residence on the same property with the producing plant has been leased, and will serve for offices. It is being remodeled in the inside, and will be made in readiness with the beginning of the new year.

Plans have been made by Director J. P. McGowan for the entire Signal Company to go to Tia Juana race course on New Year's Day where the company will make a large number of scenes for the fourteenth episode of the "Lass of the Lumberlands" serial.

Hollywood Hookum

Jan. 13, 1917 NEWS MORE NEWS

Bob Kane has beat it back toward the other Broadway after four weeks hobnobbing with stars in our midst.

Harry Rattenberry has bought a vicious-looking bulldog. The other day he overheard two negroes talking just outside his chicken yard, one asking the other if the man who lived there kept chickens. The reply was, "Well, suh, he don't zackly keep 'em, but he sho' try hard 'nuff."

Lois Weber is reported to have appeared at Universal City with her face in a sling, all because she mistook a bottle of cleaning fluid for cold cream.

Confidential stuff. Helen Holmes may appear in her "bare-skin" some of these days to help advertise the summer climate in Los Angeles during the winter. An old hunter she made a "hit" with in Yosemite Valley, sent her a beautiful big black bear pelt.

Troubles never end for the conscientious hard-working publicity directors, W. E. Keete, who wields the big pen at Fine Arts studio, is burning the midnight oil in an effort to get the names of mere men into newspapers, and sends out a wail that editors will use anything about a woman, but never a line concerning the man.

The Consolidated Crepe Hair Corp. directors will consider closing down the factory until spring, at its next meeting. Because of the cold weather only red hair is available and it won't photograph.

An innocent love bird caused a riot at Signal Station when it escaped from the cage just when its owner, Helen Holmes, was about to depart on the movie special. Every attache of the studio mutually took part in a Universal-Keystone chase that continued General for two hours. It was not very Metro-politan, but proved the Paramount event of the day.

Society note: Gladys Brockwell gave her bull pup Yum-Yum a Christmas tree.

Staging a jail break scene in a winery building because it had heavy doors, caused a pre-New Year celebration by the several players and American director, Al Santell, could not herd them out of the place, for the scene he needed for "Beloved Rogues."

M. M. Minter's Persian cat, it has been discovered by American studio sleuths after a week of pussy-footing, dines on goldfish from the studio fountain.

The week's mistaken identity stories: Wadsworth Harris Uite was thought to be a decrepit old soldier. Enid Bennett was ejected from the ladies' section of a cafe because she was wearing boy's clothes.

Conventionalities have been given a black eye. Balboa used wall paper for Christmas greetings because of the war time price on print.

Jim Crosby has found the industry's greatest need is a camera that will take pictures at night without artificial lights, and so he is putting in all his spare time perfecting such a device at the Rolin studio. When he has this job finished he is going to give his attention to perpetual motion.

Dick Bennett was in our town, having completed his work at the American. His last play was "The Gilded Youth."

A fresh supply of emerald green paint was received at the Fine Arts studio, which points to the conclusion that other improvements are to be made there. The painters' contracts provide their jobs shall be finished March 17.

Harry Leonhardt Christmas carded us from Chicago with good wishes. Harry's card looks prosperous and smelled pretty.

There was quite a flurry on the street when rumor had it that "The Tale of Two Cities" was to be filmed by Fox. Consolidated crepe hair jumped twenty-three points, and all the barbers sharpened their shears. Lynn Reynolds, Eddie Lyons and Franklyn Farnum all gave themselves a hair cut for Christmas.

Our town was without police protection one day this week for nearly two hours, when the cops composing the Keystone Band were delegated by Mack Sennett to play a farewell dirge at the Santa Fe station. It was a sad moment for every one. Doug Fairbanks, John Emerson, Raymond Wells, Joe de Grasse, Anita Loos, B. Ziedman, John Ince, and a number of others totalling thirteen in all, left on that day to spend the holidays with loved ones across the Continent. Doug, to get his name in the papers, took a letter of felicitations from the Los Angeles mayor to the mayor of New York.

Sammy Goldfish is in town.

Jack Dean, while waiting for sunlight in the vicinity of Tia Juana race course, overheard a tip: "Czczczcz Czczczcz (that means business of whispering) will have a two-pound saddle and win in a walk." Jack found the odds good and hung $2 on the nag numbered fifteen. Two hours later he came to the conclusion there ain't no such a thing as a two-pound saddle. Friends fear he will buy the Woolworth tower if he ever gets back to America.

Kenneth O'Hara insists he is not an ingenue, for he has quit biting his finger-nails.

Carlyle Robinson, who has just returned from Gwa-wa-ta-mala, is to be publicity representative for J. Kerrigan during the photo-actor's personal appearance tour over the country, and is on his way to tell the Texans all about our Jack.

Gard Sullivan is home from New York. Every newspaperman between the coasts now claims intimate acquaintance with this former journalist. Gard was just a copy desk man before he met Miss Muse. Since he has written so many flicker stories he's really a credit to the newspaper profession. It's nice to have a man from newspaperdom make good, as reflections on the rest of us are elevating.

Charley Miller, who makes Ince photoplays for a living, permitted his poor little Mercer to overwork itself, and finally a speed-cop caught up with him. When the copy wanted to know why he was in such a hurry, Charley just told him he was trying to get to a gasoline station before the price was increased again. Not even the law had any argument against that statement.

Editorial note: Owing to the heavy mail occasioned by a veritable shower of Christmas and New Year's postcards, an avalanche of greetings, the exceptional size of the contemporary sheets who put out boost "additions" on the first day of the year, and the arrival of the 1917 almanacs, all of which caused the editorial staff to keep their specs well cleaned, it has been impossible to give the editorial column the attention it required. Therefore, there is no editorial in this issue.

NO photograph or series of photographs in this department would give the reader an iota of an idea of the action now on at Lasky studio—a multiple reel might serve fairly well. The contractors and building force numbering several hundred skilled carpenters and blacksmiths are worrying every occupant, for it seems that but two buildings—the concrete and steel laboratory and the glass inclosed stage composed principally of structural steel and anchored four feet under ground, have permanent locations.

All the others have been juggled about and the list should include the private dressing room of Theodore Roberts which has been billowed about as though it were Noah's ark. The scenario—or to use Lasky studio vernacular, the continuity—department was jacked up bodily without notice to the numerous occupants, moved about seven hundred feet, and there left on pegs, that further moving could be accomplished with the minimum labor. Reports have it that not even a comma was misplaced because of the change.

ALL of the change has been made necessary to find room for the administration building site, facing Gower street. The last of the building now near this spot—the old garage and sub-property room—will be taken away almost before this copy is written, and in twenty-four hours or forty-eight at the most, it is expected the new edifice will be in place.

All of the reconstruction work is being carried on in addition to preparation of sets for the eight producing companies, all of which are actively engaged.

SELIG players are enjoying a rest, as the production of the society crook story, "Beware of Strangers," has been completed and several days will be required for editing the film. This will in all probability consist of eight reels, and is a notable production because of the large number of well-known players appearing in it, the list including Bessie Eyton, Fritzi Brunette, Tom Santschi, Vivian Rich, Ed Coxen, Al Filson, Harry L. Lonsdale, Eugenia Bresserer, George Fields, Jack Richardson, Frank Clark and others.

While the production department is not active, the zoological is just the opposite, for it has been necessary to prepare quarters for a carload of Australian animals and birds which arrived recently. The collection includes kangaroos, foxes, and other animals found only on the Southern Continent, as well as many specimens of cranes, parrots, and other birds.

PREPARATIONS are being made at the Christie studio and offices for the introduction of a series of two-reel comedies of the parlor variety, and announcement will shortly be made to the trade concerning these. The Christie Company officers state the reception tendered the one-reel comedies with snappy plots and no slapstick, by independent exchangemen and exhibitors, have aided them is adopting a policy with respect to the longer subjects. There has been a marked improvement in the sets used for the new series, and the producers have in every way improved upon the subjects.

New Light Studio for Triangle-Fine Arts Under Construction at Los Angeles

ALL L-Ko companies are busy with new subjects of thrills and slapstick, Phil Dunham and Lucille Hutton are playing in "Air Currents and Currency." A new company has been organized, with Dick Smith as director and Sammy Burns as the featured comedian.

While taking a scene of a house being blown into a police court by an explosion, a rope of unusual proportions snapped and dashed the aerial performing building toward several L-Ko Players, who were fortunate in being so located they could escape. The director, Jack Blystone, and cameraman were on a twenty-foot tower when it was hit by a portion of the falling building. The tower wabbled about for almost a minute like a buoy in a high sea, and the two occupants escaped with slight sea-sickness.

THE Ford Company of Cow Punchers working in a Stern Film Company, Western, appeared on a downtown location, and entertained the holiday shoppers of Los Angeles' business section for several hours.

The Universal City staff of directors has been increased by the addition of George Sargent and Thomas N. Heffron, both formerly with the American at Santa Barbara. Sargent came to the Coast more than a year ago, and first made the battle scenes for "The Fall of a Nation," for the National Drama Corporation. Heffron's first work on the Coast was for the Selig Company. Casts for the new directors have not been named.

WILLIAM PARKER has prepared the screen version of the Frank Spearman railroad detective novel, "A Night with Whispering Smith," which has been assigned to Henry McRae for production. Mary McLaren and Alfred Vosburg will play the leads. Vosburg makes his debut in Universal programs with the subject. Prior to this time he was with Vitagraph, American, and Thomas H. Ince.

Director Raymond Wells has been granted three weeks' vacation, and he will spend the holidays in New York City. During his absence, H. de Elba, his assistant, will direct the production of several two-reel subjects, which will feature Jack Mulhall.

CHESTER CLAPP has left the Universal scenario department where he served as writer, for a position at the Fox plant, and Douglas Bronson has returned to Pathe from the Universal, where he will write serials. Bronson is the author of "Neal of the Navy," "The Grip of Evil," and other Pathe releases.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran are playing in "Where is My Husband?" a one-reel farce, being directed by Louis Chaudet. It is a college hazing story, in which Newlywed on his honeymoon, after a strenuous elopment is thought to be a freshman, and is given the hazing. The real freshman comes face to face with the irate father of the bride, and his fate is equally as painful.

CHARLES MURRAY and Guy Woodward, of Keystone aggregation of comedians, are the most popular masters-of-ceremony of Los Angeles, and never a week passes but one serves in this capacity during the hours the camera is not working. This week Murray was in charge of a Christmas benefit staged by Los Angeles Examiner, in which Mrs. Vernon Castle, Madame Schumann-Heink, Signor Florencio Constantino, Douglas Fairbanks and many other notables took part.

THE current episode of the Yorke Norroy series, "The Adventure of the Poison Dagger," is now holding the attention of Kingsley Benedict and company which includes Roberta Wilson. The photoplay is being directed by the author George Bronson Howard.

The cast has been selected for a five reel photoplay "Seething Humanity" which includes Wedgewood Nowell, Millard K. Wilson, Molly Malone, Nicholas Duneaw, and others.

THE Hollywood studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been supplied with garage for the fourteen cars and completely equipped work shop where all necessary repairs may be made. With this addition to the plant completed attention of the construction staff has been turned to the building of fifty more dressing-rooms to be used by extra players and those taking minor parts. The plumbers are now working in the eighteen aerial dressing-rooms to be occupied by male principals. Entrance to these quarters will be made by means of a swinging stairway, and General Manager Milton E. Hoffman has let it be known that stairway will be raised at 8.30 each morning, making climbing a telephone pole necessary for those who are late. Wally Reid and Ray Hatton accepted carbon copies of the order without replies.

MAUDE FEALY has been engaged as leading woman to play opposite Theodore Roberts in a Lasky subject now being made by Director R. S. Sturgeon. Miss Fealy has had many years' experience on the legitimate stage, and has to her credit a long list of successful starring engagements.

George Melford, Lasky director, with a company including Fannie Ward and Jack Dean, last week went to San Diego, to spend several days securing scenes at the Tia Juana race course. Many of the scenes require a large number of people, and residents of San Diego and the Mexican City were given an opportunity to work before the camera.

A STORY is now being prepared for Howard Estebrook, stage and screen actor, who arrived at the Morosco studio last week from the east, and will direct Vivian Martin. Colin Chase will play the male lead in this subject as yet unnamed.

Miss Myrtle Steadman, Pallas star, has accepted an invitation of the Rocky Mountain Screen Club, to lead the grand march at their ball on Christmas evening.

Finding the present leased quarters inadequate for the filming of Metro-Yorke subjects starring Harold Lockwood and May Allison, the company has leased a tract of land centrally located in Hollywood, and the erection of a studio will be commenced immediately.

Plans call for inclosed and open air stages, and the latter to be equipped with portable roof that may be placed in position during the rainy season. The new plant will be finished in time for the filming of the next subject. Oscar Apfel, recently engaged to direct future productions of this organization, was last week tendered a welcome luncheon at Hollywood Hotel by Mr. Lockwood, to which all members of the producing company were invited.

THE Helen Holmes Signal Company is home from the sixth visit to Yosemite Valley, and have but one more trip to make to the forest country before the completion of the serial "The Lass of the Lumberlands." The entire organization will remain in Los Angeles until all interiors for the thirteenth, fourteenth and fifteenth episodes are shot, and will then go to the lumber camp in the recently purchased private car "Signal." In appreciation of the co-operation from every member of the company in the making of the serial Director J. P. McGowan has announced all will receive a week's vacation upon the completion of the picture.

TO make possible the continuation of filming interior scenes during the rainy season the artificially lighted studio of the Signal plant is being enlarged, and needed additional scene docks are being built.

THE Ham Comedy company have finished the filming of "The Chicken Hunters" without the loss of life, but for a time the players themselves feared soft music and flowers would be needed. To start a chase Henry Murdoch, taking the part of a king who desired a wife weighing exactly 140 pounds and measuring five feet six inches, was thrown into a specially constructed trunk and skidded down five flights of concrete steps leading from a popular residential section on top of one of the seventy hills about the Rome of America. He is still alive. Ham and Bud act as the king's agents in this search and have many mishaps because of their daring in trying to find one of the exact size.

Douglas Fairbanks' Smile Ready for Use in His Next Triangle-Fine Arts Picture

THE company is now working on a fight story, "A Million Dollars or Bust," which requires the services of four ex-pugilists. Ham and Bud appear as the village blacksmiths, Ethel Teare as the village belle and Jimmie Gibson, Fred Fralick and Henry Murdock make up the cast.

Helen Gibson, in the current Kalem-made Hazard, "A Daughter of Daring," took a ride on a steam shovel and was dropped into a moving string of dump cars just as they started down a grade. The chase ended when the girl leaped from the train to a cross arm of a telegraph pole and turning a switch cleared the main track to prevent a collision with the fast train. The runaway freight train dashed into the old Kalem station at Lone Point and it was completely demolished.

WILLIAM WRIGHT, vice president and general manager of the Kalem Company, is in Los Angeles, spending a week or more with the three producing companies here and supervising the consolidation of the three units at one studio. The location of the new plant has not been selected, but it is believed it will be in Hollywood. Plans call for an enclosed glass studio, new laboratory, and other improvements that will be beneficial to the productions and add efficiency to the three companies.

DARIO RESTA, the auto racer, and Sophie Tucker, ragtime star of comic opera and vaudeville, were guests at the Keystone studio during the past week, and given first-hand information concerning the making of Sennett Laugh Tablets.

Reggie Lyons, former cameraman for Vitagraph Eastern companies, where he served for four years and recently with the Christie Comedy Film Company, has been engaged by the Keystone Film Company.

ADVANCE OFFERINGS OF THE PROGRAMS

Three January Releases from Selznick Ready

"Panthea," the First, Is from Talmadge Studios, and the Second Is "The Argyle Case," with Robert Warwick

THE first month of the new year will see the completion of three new Selznick-Pictures. The first is from the Norma Talmadge Film Corporation, an adaptation of the drama "Panthea" by Monckton Hoffe, which was originally played on the stage in this country by Mme. Olga Petrova. This picture was produced under the direction of Allan Dwan. "Panthea" will be given its pre-release showings in New York next week and be released immediately after for the entire country.

Following "Panthea" will come the first of the Robert Warwick features, presenting this star in a film version of "The Argyle Case." This play was the joint work of the two dramatists, Harvey J. O'Higgins and Harriet Ford, who, for the sake of fidelity to details called in as a third collaborator the famous detective, William J. Burns, to supervise the use of modern scientific instruments of detection such as the dictograph and the finger-print process. All details are accurate.

"The Argyle Case" has just been finished under the direction of Ralph W. Ince. Elaine Hammerstein is the leading woman.

The third Selznick-Picture that is expected to be released by the end of the month is Herbert Brenon's second production under the Selznick banner, a picture starring Florence Reed. It is entitled "The Eternal Sin," an adaptation from Victor Hugo.

"The Price She Paid," with Clara Kimball Young, an adaptation of David Graham Phillips' novel of the same name produced under the direction of Charles Giblyn, late of the Triangle forces, will be released in February.

Following "The Price She Paid" Miss Young will appear in March in "The Easiest Way," Eugene Walter's Belasco drama. Albert Capellani, who directed the Common Law" and "The Foolish Virgin," will produce "The Easiest Way."

As a play, "The Easiest Way" with Frances Starr as the star, was a successful drama of modern American life.

Norma Talmadge, who has been spending a month's vacation in Los Angeles on a wedding tour with her husband, Joseph M. Schenck, general manager of the Marcus Loew offices, will soon return to New York to begin work on her second Selznick-Picture. The choice of subjects has narrowed down to two widely known stories and will be definitely decided before Mr. and Mrs. Schenck reach the East. Harry Rapf, president of the Robert Warwick Film Corporation, is also contemplating a number of the best known novels of recent years by way of choosing a subject for his star's second production.

Gaumont's "See America First," No. 71, Shows Mt. Lowe

A popular trip made by many who visit Los Angeles, Cal., is the climb up Mt. Lowe, situated twenty miles from the city. Its summit is reached by first taking an incline cable railway, an electric railway and then transferring to the back of a burro. Pictures of the trip are shown in Gaumont's "See America First" No. 71, released through Mutual January 17.

On the same reel is an animated drawing in the Gaumont Kartoon Komic series by Harry Palmer. Its title, "Mr. Common Peepul Investigates," more than hints at the humorous search by the consumer for the reasons for the high cost of living.

"Unmasking" Is Ready for Exhibitors

"The Unmasking," the sixteenth and final episode of "The Crimson Stain Mystery," Consolidated Film Corporation, is ready for exhibitors. Photoplay fans who have been following Maurice Costello, Ethel Grandin, Olga Olonova, Thomas J. McGrane, Eugene Strong and others in their adventures with the mysterious Crimson Stain through fifteen episodes, will learn in this final episode who is Pierre La Rue, the implacable.

Coburn-Fox Play on Jan. 22

According to William Fox's present plans, Gladys Coburn's second photoplay, will be released for the week of January 22. Fritz Leiber, the Shakespearian actor, plays opposite Miss Coburn in this film.

Mabel Trunnelle (Kleine-Edison)

"A Modern Cinderella" from Fox on the 8th

June Caprice is said to be more charming than ever in the "neglected sister" role which she plays in "A Modern Cinderella," anounced by William Fox for release on January 8. She is supported by Frank Morgan.

It is Mr. Morgan's first Fox film.

The rest of the cast is made up of Betty Prendergast, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Grace Stevens and Tom Brooke.

John G. Adolfi, who completes his first year with Fox Film Corporation's productions, directed the picture. It was for this screen play that the Caprice company was sent to Florida on new locations.

Miss Caprice has the role of Joyce, a younger daughter, who is humbled and pushed into the background so that her big sister, Polly, may shine. With her sense of deeper love, Joyce cannot understand Polly's heartless flirtations, and falls in love with Tom, her sister's favorite.

When the family goes South for the winter, Polly jilts Tom for another suitor, in jest. Joyce consoles Tom and tells him to woo her to make Polly jealous.

Tom agrees half-heartedly, but soon becomes captivated by Joyce herself, and when he saves her from drowning she decides that Tom is really her "Prince Charming," and Polly acts as bridesmaid.

K-E-S-E Announces Second Release List

K-E-S-E has just announced its second group of ten releases, beginning January 8, and including April 1. They follow:

January 8, Edison, "The Master Passion," Mabel Trunelle and Robert Conness; January 15, Essanay, "Little Shoes," Henry B. Walthall and Mary Charleson; January 22, Selig, "Little Lost Sister"; February 5, Essanay, "Skinner's Dress Suit," Bryant Washburn; February 12, Edison, "The Royal Pauper," Francine Larrimore; February 19, Selig, "Princess of Patches"; March 4, Essanay, "The Silent Partners"; March 11, Edison, "Builder of Castles," Marc MacDermott and Miriam Nesbitt; March 18, Essanay, "Burning the Candle," Henry B. Walthall; and April 1, Edison, "Law of the North," Shirley Mason.

Anita Stewart Shows Versatility

In the Vitagraph V-L-S-E release, "The Glory of Yolande," which is released on January 15, Anita Stewart will be seen in the role of a peasant girl who lifts herself from her hereditary environment to become the premier danseuse of the empire. It is seldom that Miss Stewart appears in rags and tatters, but the manner in which she adapts herself to such a part as is hers in "The Glory of Yolande" lays additional stress on her versatility.

Characteristic Scenes from Lynn Reynolds' Latest Bluebird, "God's Crucible," Released on January 22

"Princess of Patches" Made from Whole Cloth

"The Princess of Patches" is the title of a Selig Red Seal Play soon to be released by the Selig Company through the K-E-S-E. The play was written by Mark Swan and was adapted for screen purposes by Gilson Willets. Director Al Green directed the production.

"The Princess of Patches" presents Vivian Reed, Charles Le Moyne, Frank Weed, R. H. Kelly and others. A special company was sent to Mississippi to film plantation scenes called for in the story. A houseboat blown to atoms by dynamite is one of the episodes announced by the company.

The Lewises Join Fox

Ralph Lewis and Vera Lewis, the latter known in private life as Mrs. Ralph Lewis, have joined William Fox's photoplay forces after having done long service for D. W. Griffith. Both are character players, and will shortly be seen in Fox pictures.

Ralph Lewis' most notable performance was as Stoneman, the Northern politician who ruled the South in "The Birth of a Nation." His dramatic career commenced in Chicago in vaudeville and stock. Among others he has supported Wilton Lackaye, James K. Hackett, Henry Miller, Julia Marlowe and Margaret Anglin. His picture work started with Griffith's Reliance Company in 1913. He remained with Griffith in all his various enterprises up until a week ago.

Vera Lewis will be seen in the same Fox pictures as her husband. As the selfish philanthropist in "Intolerance" she scores a decided character success. During the last season she has been a member of the Morosco Stock Company in Los Angeles. Her career on the legitimate embraces engagements with Hackett in "The Walls of Jericho," with Margaret Wycherly in "The Primrose Path," and with Katherine Kidder in "Mme. Sans Gene."

"Gilded Youth" Is Fifth Bennett Film for Mutual

In the fifth of his series, produced by the American Film Company, "The Gilded Youth," which will be released in the week of January 1, Richard Bennett plays the role of a fallen son of the idle rich, shiftless and almost good for nothing.

Universal for the Week of January 8

"Fighting for Love" Is the First Release, Followed by "One Thousand Miles an Hour"

THE first Universal for the week of January 8 is the five act Red Feather, "Fighting for Love," which makes its appearance on Monday, January 8. Ruth Stonehouse and Jack Mulhall are in the leading roles. The story is by Raymond Wells, who directed the production. The scenario is by Fred Myton. In the cast are Jean Hersholt, Noble Johnson, J. F. Briscoe and Ruby Marshall.

Under the Nestor brand, the one-act comedy, "One Thousand Miles an Hour," featuring Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts, will appear on the same day. This is a comedy written by Bess Meredyth and produced by L. W. Chaudet.

During the week the third episode of "The Purple Mask," entitled "The Capture," will be released.

On Tuesday, January 9, the Gold Seal three-act drama, "The Mystery of My Lady's Boudoir," featuring Violet Mersereau, will be released. The story is by Harry Ditmar and the production was made under the direction of Francis Grandon. Carter De Haven will be seen in the one-act comedy, "A Gentleman of Nerve," on the same date.

The chief offering on Wednesday, January 10, is the two-part L-Ko comedy, "A Limburger Cyclone," with Phil Dunham. "The Face Downstairs," a one-act drama under the Laemmle brand, featuring Lois Weber and Val Paul and the regular issue of the Universal Animated Weekly with the newest pictorial events, will also appear on Wednesday.

"When Damon Fell for Pythias," with Gale Henry and William Franey as chief funmakers, is announced for Thursday, January 11. The Big U Western drama, "Shattered Ideals," is scheduled for release on the same day.

Three photodramas are offered Friday, January 12. The first is an Imp one-act drama, "Honorably Discharged," with L. C. Shumway, written by L. Bliss, scenarioized by G. B. Anderson and produced by F. A. Kelsey. Under the Rex brand will appear "The Whispered Name," in two acts, featuring Lois Wilson and Lee Hill. The Victor release is "The Wrong Mary Wright," with M. K. Wilson and Edith Roberts.

The feature release for Saturday, January 13, is the two-act Bison drama, "The Bad Man of Cheyenne," with Harry Carey and Priscilla Dean in the principal roles. The Joker comedy, "Mines and Matrimony," with Gale Henry and William Franey, and the Imp drama, "John Bates' Secret," appear on the same day. Pauline Bush and Murdock MacQuarrie are the featured players.

"Midnight," an Imp drama, with Allen Holubar and Zoe Rae, the child actress, will be released Sunday, January 14. The Big U two-act mining drama, "The Call for Help," with Marie Walcamp, and the Powers split reel, "Mr. Fuller Pep" and "Wonders of the Orient," as seen by Dr. Dorsey, round out the program.

"Builders of Castles" Ready March 12

Edison's offering through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service for the week of March 12, will be the five-part feature "Builders of Castles," in which Marc MacDermott and Miriam Nesbitt are co starred in the leading roles. "Builders of Castles" is said to be a ruthless expose of the methods employed by grafters who prey upon the home-loving working classes by offering cheaply built cottages and bungalows at fancy prices, to be paid for on the installment plan. The story is from the pen of Henry Albert Phillips, and the production was staged under the direction of Ben Turbett.

"The Terrible Wedding" from Mutual January 18

"The Terrible Wedding," the final episode of "The Vampires," will be released on January 18 through Mutual. "The reviewers of the trade papers have been a unit in voicing their appreciation of its thrilling episodes, and exhibitors have written that it is a box-office bonanza, a success attributable in the earlier episodes, before its strength could be generally known to skilful advertising aids provided by Mutual," says a Gaumont official. These are still to be had for those who are only beginning to show these blood-curdling pictures.

Mutual Will Release "The Butterfly Girl"

Picture, Featuring Margarita Fischer, Is Set for Exhibitor Use on January 8—Other New Year Offerings

"THE Butterfly Girl," the third of the Margarita Fischer series of Mutual Star productions, produced at the California studios of the Pollard Picture Plays Company, will be released by the Mutual Film Corporation the week of January 8. In this production, which was directed by Henry Otto, Miss Fischer appears as a ragged little urchin, who is set adrift on the amusement streets of a fair. Here she wins the hearts of all she comes in contact with, from the ballyhooers and side show freaks to the interested promenaders.

"The Butterfly Girl" shows scenes taken on the "Isthmus" of the Panama-California International Exposition at San Diego, Cal. The Exposition furnished just the proper environment for the story of the production.

John Steppling is cast as "Heinie, the Weinie Man," Jack Mower as the Hawaiian entertainer, who sings the popular Hawaiian love song, "Aloaha-Oe," to Miss Fischer. Marie Kiernan plays the baby sister of the Butterfly Girl.

The climax of "The Butterfly Girl" is enacted at the Hawaiian Village at the San Diego Exposition. In this scene Miss Fischer, with Baby Marie in her arms climbs to the summit of the volcano, which is a replica of the world-famous "Kileaua," and jumps in.

"When Hands Are Idle," a two-reel drama, will be released on Monday, January 8. "Tours Around the World," from Gaumont, picturing beautiful and interesting scenes in the Pyrenees Mountains, along the Egyptian rivers and in Budapest, capital of Hungary, will be released on January 9.

"Mutual Weekly," No. 105, issued by the Gaumont Company, and screening the world's latest and most important happenings, is scheduled for release on Wednesday, January 9, together with "See America First," which takes you through the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, and is on the same reel with "Kartoon Komics" by Harry Palmer.

On Thursday, January 10, George Ovey will appear in the second of the Cub Comedies to be released on the new contract, recently signed with David Horsley. This is one of the regular Ovey comedies, in which George turns many new stunts as a starter for the New Year.

"Our Boys at the Border," the second of the "Uncle Sam's Preparedness" series, is scheduled for release Friday, January 11. This reel pictures the activities of the soldiers on the Mexican border during the past year.

On Saturday, January 12, George Derr will appear in a one-reel Star comedy, entitled "The Honeymooners."

A two-reel Vogue comedy, featuring Rube Miller, will be shown with "Reel Life," on Sunday, January 13.

Costume Plays Include Biggest Hits, Says Brenon

"If the story is strong enough, it makes no difference whether a photodrama is a so-called costume play, or in modern clothes, or dressed in the garb, or absence of garb," says Herbert Brenon, in reply to numerous inquiries he has received concerning his production, "The Eternal Sin," in which Florence Reed will make her first appearance in Selznick-Pictures as the notorious Lucretia Borgia.

"I appreciate the fact that there is a strong superstition, or rather prejudice, current among many exhibitors, against costume plays, and yet if you ask these exhibitors to define specifically what they mean by the term they are at a loss to explain. Usually they will reply by citing instances of expensive productions, principally Shakespearean plays.

"Looking into the history of the motion picture, we recall that the first big production came from Europe. The French and Italian producers had a natural leaning toward extreme decoration, and as the medieval period was ideally adapted to decoration, the majority of the early productions were of this class. With the development of the art in America came the depiction of modern life on the screen, and as the stories were so much more interesting, the costume plays were soon superseded by the more vital offerings.

"Yet in the face of all this it is interesting to note that not one of the motion picture successes—the milestones in the art—has been a story of our own times. From 'Cabiria' down, the photodramas which have set the world talking, have been costume plays invariably. Even Mr. Griffith's masterpiece, 'The Birth of a Nation,' goes back more than half a century for its period to the days of the Civil War."

Wallace Coburn in "The Sunset Princess" (Great Western)

"Ham" Comedies Expected to Take the "Bacon" for Kalem

The second Ham Comedy of 1917 is entitled "Rival Romeos." Ham and Bud are the rivals. Ethel Teare is the Girl and Henry Murdoch plays a matrimonial agent. The picture is set for release on January 9 through General.

Readers of The Saturday Evening Post will recall Charles Van Loan's articles about the lost mining towns of the West. In "The Resurrection of Gold Bar," the latest episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco," one of these deserted mining towns furnishes the locale for most of the action of the two reels. Marin Sais, True Boardman, Ronald Bradbury, Frank Jonasson and Edward Clisbee comprise the cast. The story was written by Robert Welles Ritchie. The release date is January 10.

"The Trail of Graft," the episode of "Grant, Police Reporter," released January 12, is enlivened with thrills by George Larkin. In this episode he shares the suspense with Ollie Kirkby who is said to exhibit considerable nerve for one whose parts rarely call for anything more dangerous than horseback riding.

On the General program for the second Saturday of the New Year will be another "Hazards of Helen," with Helen Gibson heading the cast. Helen's particular stunt for this week is the overtaking of a runaway engine and a chance leap for a rope that is dangling out of the engineer's window. The title of this "Hazard" is "The Fireman's Nemesis."

This comprises the five reels that the Kalem Company will release through the General Film Company the second week in January. An assortment of lithographs for these releases is available.

"Little Shoes" from Essanay on January 15

"LITTLE SHOES" is the title of the next Henry B. Walthall feature to be offered by President George K. Spoor of Essanay.

It will be produced for a screen time of approximately one hour and fifteen minutes and will be released on January 15 through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay.

The plot is taken from "The House of the Little Shoes," a widely read romantic novel by Eleanor M. Ingram.

Mr. Walthall has begun work on this feature and will be supported by Mary Charleson. Patrick Calhoun, who played the heavy in "The Truant Soul," will also appear in the cast. Arthur Berthelet is directing the play.

Bryant Washburn will be the star in the feature following "Little Shoes," "Skinner's Dress Suit," from Henry Irving Dodge's story which appeared in The Saturday Evening Post. This play will be released on February 5 through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service. Harry Beaumont will direct the picture.

It is probable that one of three Cohan and Harris successes just purchased by Mr. Spoor will be Essanay's March 4 release. These plays are "On Trial," "Hawthorne of the U. S. A." and "Young America."

Scenes from "The Bitter Truth," Fox Production with Virginia Pearson

"Price of Silence" from Fox January 8

A plea for the little slaves of the factory, is the theme of "The Price of Silence," William Fox's newest photodrama with William Farnum playing the leading role, directed by Frank Lloyd. Supporting Mr. Farnum are Vivian Rich, Charles Clary, Frank Clark, Brooklyn Kellar, Ray Hanford and Gordon Griffith. The picture will be released on January 8.

The story revolves around Senator Deering (William Farnum), who has devoted his life to alleviate the misery caused by child labor.

His friend Judge Vernon (Frank Clark), has helped the Senator in his fight. Judge Vernon has a charming daughter Grace (Vivian Rich), whom the Senator loves. Later Senator Deering discovers that his friend, Judge Vernon, has been bribed by Henry McCarthy (Charles Clary), to defeat child labor legislation. McCarthy demands the hand of Judge Vernon's daughter, Grace. The Judge is stricken with heart disease, but before he dies, he tells Deering of his secret shame. To keep Vernon's name unsullied, the Senator makes a deal with McCarthy, and votes against the child labor bill, while the world knows nothing of the great sacrifice made by the Senator.

The Gaumont Company sent a cameraman through one of the finest French glove factories, and what his lens caught has been introduced into "Reel Life" No. 37, released through Mutual January 14.

Another section shows how pickles are prepared for market in one of America's biggest plants. Everything is shown from the picking of the cucumbers to the labeling of the jars.

Both models and graphic drawings have been employed in the section of this reel showing how to preserve the teeth. There are pictures of the proper way to brush the teeth, as well as cross-sections of a tooth which show how decay makes its insidious attack. The pictures close with a pledge for school children which is calculated to have them cleanse their teeth twice daily.

"One of Many" for Release by Metro Feb. 12

Arthur James Presents the Feature Which Cabanne Wrote and Directed—Stars Frances Nelson, with Niles Welch in the Cast

ONE of the most important Metro releases of the year will be the five-part feature picture drama, "One of Many," written and directed by William Christy Cabanne, and presented by Arthur James. Columbia Pictures Corporation has produced this picture, which will be released on the Metro program February 12.

With the presentation of "One of Many," Arthur James, head of the scenario, publicity and advertising departments of Metro Pictures Corporation, makes his bow as a producer of feature pictures.

William Christy Cabanne, who wrote and directed the photoplay, is a disciple of D. W. Griffith, having worked side by side with that master, learning the art under his direct instruction, and evolving many ideas and methods of his own.

Frances Nelson, the star of the production, is at the height of her power. She is beautiful, of the brunette type, and is noted for her ability in playing emotional roles. In the part of Shirley Bryson, the girl in "One of Many," she is said to have the greatest opportunity of her career, realizing the young employed girl, struggling with a problem too great for her to solve.

"One of Many" deals with the life problems of a manicure girl. The heroine, Shirley Bryson, is tortured by the mental conflict caused by the knowledge that her mother is dying for want of the ordinary comforts of life. She is thrown into contact with a wealthy man. For her mother's sake she accepts the bounty which he showers upon her. And then she falls in love with the rich man's son, not realizing his relationship to her wolfish benefactor.

In support of Miss Nelson is Niles Welch. He was featured with Mary Miles Minter in "Emmy of Stork's Nest." For a time he played leads with Mary Fuller, Violet Mersereau, Kitty Gordon and Pearl White, for other motion picture producing companies.

Others in the cast are Adella Barker, seen as the nurse in Metro's "Romeo and Juliet," starring Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, Harold Entwhistle, Richard Dix, Mary Mersch, Caroline Harris and Walter Norden.

Four Months of Gold Roosters from Thanhouser

WITH its quota of Gold Rooster Plays for February, March and April either entirely completed or well under way, the Thanhouser Company is in the position of not having to work against time in order to have its pictures ready for release by the Pathe Exchanges. A director's best work can only be done when he is unhurried and free from the worry that delays of several days would otherwise cause him.

In February will be released "A Modern Monte Cristo," an original play of love and adventure, written by Philip Lonergan, directed by Eugene Moore and with Vincent Serrano, the well-known star, in the lead.

The second Thanhouser release for February is "The Girl Who Wanted to Live," a play by Philip Lonergan, staged by Frederick Sullivan and with the popular Florence La Badie as the star.

In March comes "The Vicar of Wakefield," Oliver Goldsmith's immortal book brought to the screen. Frederick Warde has the title role, and the play is staged by Ernest Warde. Emmet Mix adapted the story. Everyone has read "The Vicar of Wakefield," and remembers its strong heart interest, its pathos and its humor.

The second Thanhouser release for March is "Her Beloved Enemy," with Doris Grey and Wayne Arey as the stars. The play is by Lloyd Lonergan and it is staged by Ernest Warde. Miss Grey was the beauty prize winner at last year's Boston Exhibitors' Ball, and Mr. Arey is in the cast of "The Shine Girl."

In April comes "Peggie o' the Pots and Pans," another Agnes C. Johnston play, which will be ranked with "Her New York," "The Shine Girl" and "Prudence the Pirate," all written by her. Gladys Hulette is featured in this play, which is staged by Eugene Moore.

The second April release is "Mary Lamson's Secret," in which Charlotte Walker, star of the spoken drama, is featured.

"Gallagher" Is Early Edison Release

ONE of the early releases on the Edison Conquest Pictures progam will be a two-reel dramatization of "Gallagher," the famous story that brought the late Richard Harding Davis to the attention of the literary world. This is one of the few great newspaper stories ever written, and it lends itself admirably to screen production. While the story of a young man, it universally is admired as a classic by readers of all ages. It is a story typical of the kind that will be used extensively on the new Edison program offering. Two Ralph Henry Barbour stories also will be among the early Conquest Pictures to be released, according to present plans. They are, "For the Honor of the School" and "The Half-Back." Barbour is recognized as being one of the foremost writers of exciting tales of adventurous young manhood, and the two stories that thus far have been chosen for production are conceded to be among the best he has written.

Some other stories that will be released on the Conquest Pictures program are: "Barnaby Lee," by John Bennett; "Shut Out in the Ninth," and "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp." The latter, by Albert Stearns, is a very clever and entertaining comedy, and is an exceptionally good story for a general program. It tells how a modern boy finds and uses the magic lamp that Alladin used so effectively in Arabia in the good old times of long ago.

Stories by Ellis Parker Butler and Rex Beach also have been made available for production for the Conquest Pictures program, and the literary works of many other authors of established renown are under consideration at the present time.

"Jerry's Double Header" First of New Mutual-Cub Releases

The new series of Cub Comedies which David Horsley is to release through the Mutual Film Corporation under a new contract just signed is now ready for exhibitors. The first subject, "Jerry's Double Header," is scheduled for release January 4.

In this as in the other pictures in the series George Ovey appears as Jerry, a character which he originated over a year ago, and in which he has appeared in nearly seventy Cub Comedies released through the Mutual.

While Ovey retains his old character of Jerry, the new series is original in many ways. Milton H. Fahrney, who has written the scenarios and also directed the company, has brought out numerous new ideas both in theme and staging which are sure to make the pictures more interesting.

In "Jerry's Double Header," Jerry finds himself hopelessly in love with a pretty girl but with her family set against him. When the family takes a spin through the country in their automobile, Jerry conveniently conceals himself in a trunk which is strapped to the back of the machine. The party presently comes in contact with a band of bandits, and this, of course, leads to complications, out of which Jerry, as the hero of the hour, rescues the excited family as well as the cherished object of his attentions and courageous undertakings —the girl.

In this picture George Ovey has the support of Claire Alexander, George George, M. J. McCarty, Helen Gilmore and the entire Cub Comedy force.

"The Poison Man" on Jan. 11

On January 11, through Mutual, the eighth episode of "The Vampires," "The Poison Man," will be released by Gaumont. Venenos, who made his first appearance in the preceeding chapter, now takes the center of the stage with the other favorites. Charles Moriss, who has the part, practically dominates this and the following chapters.

The story of "The Poison Man" recites the efforts of the Vampires to revenge themselves upon Philip Guard and the girl he is to marry.

Kolb and Dill Complete Series

C. William Kolb and Max Dill have completed the last of their series of Mutual Star productions at the studios of the American Film Corporation at Santa Barbara, Cal.

The subject is "Beloved Rogues," an adaptation from a story by Aaron Hoffman made by Al Santell, the American Company scenario writer, who also directed the pair in this production. It will be released January 15.

May Cloy will appear as the ingenue and Tom Chatterton as the hero. In other roles Harry von Meter and Clarence Burton will be seen.

Over one hundred extras take part in this production.

George Ovey (Cub-Mutual)

"The Glory of Yolanda" Will Be Released on Jan. 15

"The Glory of Yolanda," from the story by Maibelle Heikes Justice, which was directed for the Vitagraph Company by Marguerite Bertsch with Anita Stewart as Yolanda, is the Blue Ribbon offering through Vitagraph V-L-S-E on January 15.

The story tells about a little Russian peasant girl, Yolanda, who loves to dance. Day in and day out she dances among the trees and ferns of the forest, but her father has no patience with her hopes and desires and sternly bids her to forget a career as a ballet dancer and content herself with the man he has choosen for her to marry.

The Crown Prince, in passing through the forest, sees Yolanda dancing and tells her that if she will come to Petrograd he will see that she is given the proper ballet training.

While Yolanda is learning ballet dancing, she meets and loves a young American artist. But the duke forbids their friendship and, heartbroken over the death of her mother, and the loss of the artist's friendship, she scores her great success as premiere danseuse.

Her brother coming from the country enters her house just in time to prevent the crafty duke from winning his prize, for he has coveted Yolanda all the time and waited only until she became successful before carrying out his intentions. The brother kills him, but Yolanda refuses to allow him to suffer for his act, taking the blame herself.

Unity Announces Plans

In discussing Unity plans for the coming year, Charles W. Allen, president of the company, has issued the following statement:

"When Mr. Cobe, Mr. Rosenbach and I organized our company, six months ago, we realized that the first and most important work in hand was to ally ourselves with strong independent exchanges the country over upon whom we could depend to successfully handle the very best type of productions which we knew we could deliver to them. We are more than gratified to announce that in so short a time we have formed definite working arrangements with a complete chain of offices covering the entire country and we are thus enabled to buy only the very best features that are presented for our consideration.

"The development of the business seems all toward giving the exchange and the exhibitor the right to choose what shall be offered the public, and this development gives us the encouragement and the support to cull from the independent markets only pictures of known quality and attractiveness. And all indications are that there will be more of this kind the coming year than ever before.

"We will offer at least one special feature each month that will be worthy of the name and within a short time we will doubtless release a new serial if we can buy one which we feel sure will prove advantageous to our exchanges. In addition we will continue to offer Tweedledum in one and two-reel comedies and other short releases.

IN THE STATE RIGHTS FIELD

"Libertine" Is Ready for New England States

F. E. Backer, president of the Mammoth Film Corporation of 729 Seventh avenue, New York City, has acquired the rights to "The Libertine."

This photodrama features John Mason and Alma Hanlon.

Mr. Backer is ready to release "The Libertine" throughout the New England cities, beginning with such central points as Boston and Providence, where it will be shown for a run.

To augment his forces, L. Lawrence Baren, formerly with the Ivan Film Corporation, has been especially engaged to tour the New England cities.

Exhibitors throughout this territory can arrange to meet Mr. Baren at any of the cities, if they will write direct to the office in New York City, where information can be obtained as to where he can be reached.

Foster Moore, formerly connected with George Kleine, has been engaged by Mr. Backer to handle this film in the State of New York and Northern New Jersey, and arrangements have already been made by him, whereby "The Libertine" will be exhibited at the Goodwin theatre, Newark, N. J., commencing Sunday, December 31 for a period of a week, and at the Family theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., commencing January 7 for a period of two weeks.

Levy Now with Masterpiece

Joe Levy, who has been at the head of the Fox exchange in St. Louis at 3632 Olive street, turned in his resignation as manager last week, and has accepted the position of assistant manager to H. P. Wolfberg, general manager of the Masterpiece Film Corporation, which was organized in St. Louis recently for the purpose of exploiting states right features.

Sam Shurman, who has been appointed manager of the Fox branch in St. Louis to take Levy's place, is a young man in years, but a pioneer in the picture industry. Mr. Shurman was an exhibitor of pictures at Moberly, Mo., for a time, and from that drifted into the distributing end of the business. He has been with the Fox exchange for some time and was traveling representative from the St. Louis office when the promotion to manager came to him.

S. J. Baker, manager of the Bluebird Photoplays exchange at 2116 Locust street, St. Louis, has been the object of much congratulation and felicitation along Film Row recently, and it was not because of any specially big contract for Bluebirds—although it is a contract, and probably a long-term one at that—that he has undertaken, to provide for the little daughter that arrived at his home on Thanksgiving Day.

Levy Controls "Crisis" in Seven States

Well Known Louisville Business Man Has Sprung Into Prominence as a State Rights Buyer in a Few Short Months—Energetic Organization

COL. FRED LEVY, of Louisville, who paid $50,000 cash to the Sherman-Elliott Company for "The Crisis" for seven states, after five minutes consumed in negotiating, became a new figure in the film world.

Although Col. Levy has been actively identified with the theatrical end of the business for the past five years through his association with the B. F. Keith interests, he has only been in the picture business a little over a year, but during this brief period his purchases of territorial rights include such features as "The Battle Cry of Peace," "The Little Girl Next Door," "Marvelous Maciste," and others.

Col. Levy's film company is known as "The Big Feature Rights Corporation." The organization is large, comprising men who have had actual experience as theatre managers, advertising writers, and booking agents, respectively.

Two newspapers, "The Battle Cry News," exploiting "The Battle Cry of Peace" and "The Daily Truth," exploiting "The Little Girl Next Door," published by the company, caused comment both in film circles and the public. A special newspaper will be published to exploit "The Crisis."

Col. Levy expects to have a dozen road shows touring his territory on "The Crisis" which comprises Indiana, Kentucky, Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Col. Levy's association with the theatrical business began when, as a director of the National theatre, Louisville's independent vaudeville house, he effected a merger with the B. F. Keith house. Since the merger, Col. Levy has been B. F. Keith's managerial director for their vaudeville and picture theatres in that vicinity.

Fred Levy

Col. Levy has many varied interests and is rated as not only one of Louisville's foremost business men, but of Kentucky and the South as well. He is senior member of the well-known men's department store of Levy Brothers, the biggest concern of its kind south of the Ohio River. He is president of the Kentucky Retail Merchants Association, and is prominent in the council boards of the National Clothiers' Association. Col. Levy is also president of a big printing establishment and head of a leading automobile supply house.

Two Governors of Kentucky have honored Col. Levy with positions, Gov. (now Senator) Beckham, ten years ago putting him on his staff, while Gov. Stanley, the present incumbent, made him a Colonel for the second time.

As a Park Board Commissioner, a public office carrying no salary, and to which he was elected by a vote considerably leading the entire ticket, Col. Levy proved his business qualities in administering Louisville's famous park system and boulevards.

Col. Levy also made an enviable record as President of the Commercial Club, Louisville's leading public welfare organization. He is well known as a business man throughout the south.

Crist Is Successful with New Company

R. T. Crist, owner and manager of the Mountain States Feature Film Company, Denver, reports success in booking "The Little Girl Next Door." Out of the first thirty-five days the film was in Mr. Crist's hands, it was booked thirty-two days and run on one of the three remaining days at a private showing.

The concern has also taken over the rights in that territory for "The Unborn," another picture.

Eleanor Black Appears in "Ignorance"

When "Ignorance" makes its long heralded bow Eleanor Black will be seen in the leading feminine role opposite Earl Metcalfe. Miss Black is not new to the screen and by reason of her past performances has created for herself quite a following. In "Ignorance," produced by the Private Feature Film Company, she carries the role of Laura, a girl who takes the wrong road because she doesn't know. It is said to be excellent.

Dixie Film Company Will Produce Twelve Pictures Yearly

ANOTHER producing concern to enter the state rights field is the Dixie Film Company of Chicago, which has two productions to its credit and contemplates at least twelve a year.

The two completed productions, "Tempest and Sunshine," and "Just a Song at Twilight," have been sold to Tandy & Lynch for Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma.

Evelyn Greeley and Pedro de Cordoba are co-starred in the latest feature, with Miss Greeley going it alone in "Tempest and Sunshine."

A most attractive and unusual line of novelty advertising accessories have been gotten up, and it is thought that before the present year ends most of the American territory will have been disposed of and options granted on forthcoming features.

Miss Greeley is vacationing from Dixie pictures and is appearing in "Glass Houses" for the World Film Corporation. She will, in all likelihood, rejoin the Dixie concern at the expiration of her present activities under the Direction of William Brady.

The British and Australian rights to "Tempest and Sunshine" and "Just a Song at Twilight" have already been optioned. John W. Heney, of Heney & Hawkins, is the central distributing headquarters for the Dixie products.

"Crisis" Opens in St. Louis

"The Crisis" opened at the new Grand Central theatre in St. Louis December 24 to an audience that filled the theatre at both matinee and night.

An elaborate stage setting was provided by Manager Sievers, including several patriotic drops, which ascended one by one, following the overture, and concluding with a tableau in which two men, dressed as Confederate and Union soldiers, advanced to the center of the stage, clasped hands and marched off arm in arm, while "The Dove of Peace" flew overhead. The ushers were garbed as soldiers of the opposing sides, and the lady attaches of the house were attired in costumes of the "sixties."

Captain Stanley Huntley Lewis (who has charge of the publicity for "The Crisis" for the State of Missouri under Mr. Sievers) addressed during the past three weeks the students of the various high and graded schools of St. Louis, his subject being "Abraham Lincoln" and "The Crisis," and his lectures being illustrated by rapid blackboard sketches.

Captain Lewis is the originator of this style of work, having used it successfully with "The Battle Cry of Peace" in Michigan last winter and with "The Fall of a Nation" throughout Ohio.

He has also been engaged to address the Federation of Women's Clubs of St. Louis and the various branches of the Y. M. C. A. on "Lincoln," and has also decorated the plate glass mirrors in the lobbies of the Planters, American, Laclede and other leading hotels, and the windows of various local business houses with large water color pictures of Lincoln, accompanied by appropriate lettering.

His automobile, equipped with a rapid-fire machine gun, a military bugle blown by the exhaust of the engine, and bearing the portrait of Lincoln and the advertisement of "The Crisis," is also the center of attention on the streets.

Iowa Sold for Argosy Comedy

The Super-Feature Film Company of Iowa has taken over the Argosy five-reel comedy, "Where D'ye Get That Stuff?" for Iowa and Nebraska. The Super-Feature Film Company is composed of a number of Iowans, who contemplate securing Iowa and Nebraska rights for a number of good attractions.

"Civilization" in the South

The one remaining territory which has not been invaded by "Civilization" is the South.

E. R. Champion who is in charge of the spectacle for the South, has gone to Florida in which state the picture will have its first showing. St. Augustine, Miami, Jacksonville. Ormond and Daytona are among some of the cities that will show the picture.

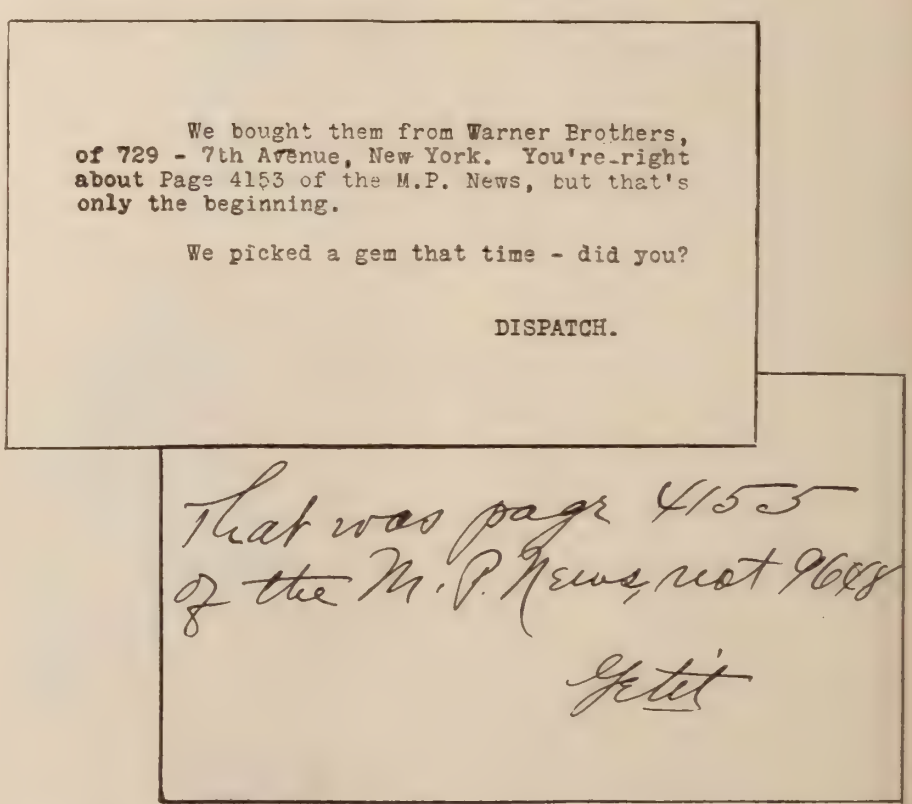
Mr. Champion is well-known in the commercial world and will probably make a record with "Civilization" in the southern states.

"Witching Hour" for Michigan

Harry I. Garson, of the Broadway Feature Film Company, Broadway Market Building, Detroit, Mich., has purchased "The Witching Hour" for Michigan.

Novel and Film Should Agree, Says Sherman

There is a tendency at the present time to reproduce famous novels on film. H. A. Sherman, of the Sherman-Elliot Company, believes that the public is often misled by the impression that the film is just like the book.



"Time and time again," said Mr. Sherman, "we see motion pictures advertised as founded on some famous literary work of art. Outside of the title and the author's name, there is absolutely no similarity, you might say, between the original and the film version. Scenes are changed, characters added; scenes left out and characters done away with, until the author can hardly recognize his own work after the scenario writer is through with it.

"When I buy the rights for a feature founded on a book written by a famous novelist, I read the book first. The fact that the visualization in moving pictures follows the book closely aids materially, in my judgment, as to the value of the screen version. The immense popularity of the book means crowded houses to satisfy the interest created by the horde of readers.

Proctor Buys Rights to "Witching Hour"

R. O. Proctor, general manager of the Van Dyke Amusement Enterprises, which controls the Art Dramas Service in Illinois, Indiana, and southern Wisconsin, announces that his company has obtained the rights in that territory for "The Witching Hour," the special release feature produced by the Frohman Amusement Corporation.

Mr. Proctor negotiated the deal with William L. Sherrill.

HOW PICTURES ARE BOOKING

Mutual Orders Extra Prints of "Vampires"

Despite the fact that the Gaumont Company has nearly finished releasing "The Vampires," the Mutual Film Corporation—through which the French photo-novel is distributed—is still ordering extra prints. A renewed interest is being taken by exhibitors in "Fantomas." The latter photo-novel was released in five chapters by Gaumont through Mutual, and was used by many as an introduction to "The Vampires." A great number who did not book "Fantomas" at that time are now using it to follow up the adventures of the arch criminals of Paris.

"It gives us great pleasure to write you," said a recent letter from the Mutual to the Gaumont Company, "that the increase in interest in 'The Vampires,' as the value of the series as a box-office business builder becomes better known, is also increasing business for our 'Fantomas' prints. The business is not to be judged entirely by the satisfactory showing the prints are now making, but by the contracts for future releases in those houses where 'Fantomas' will follow the present run of 'The Vampires.' We believe that 'Fantomas' will do as well for a number of weeks after 'The Vampires' has been completed as it did when first released. Spectators have been educated to enjoy these episodes and 'Fantomas' will satisfy this demand."

"War Brides" Runs Two Weeks at Denver Theatre

The Rialto theatre, Denver's newest picture theatre, has just closed a two-week engagement of "War Brides," with Nazimova. It has played "Less Than the Dust," the first of Artcraft's Pickford releases, and "The Common Law," with Clara Kimball Young. The Rialto is owned by Brown and Meghan, who also own and operate the Strand theatre in Denver. They have purchased the state rights for all of the Selznick productions and expect to open an exchange in connection with their theatre enterprises.

Detroit House Plays "Gods" to High Prices

The Washington theatre, Detroit, is now operating under its changed policy of big features, big prices and only two shows daily. The first picture to be shown under this policy is "A Daughter of the Gods," which started a four-weeks' engagement on Sunday, Dec. 24. The theatre has been sold out for every performance up to the time of writing. Prices are twenty-five cents to one dollar at matinees, and $1.50 high at night. All seats are reserved. "Civilization" is the next big feature to be shown at the Washington.

Heavy Booking of "Secret Kingdom" by Loew

New York Theatre Manager Places It in His Twenty-four Houses for Sixty-four Days

MARCUS LOEW, after an examination of "The Secret Kingdom," Greater Vitagraph's fifteen episode adventure serial, has booked it in his twenty-four houses for sixty-four days for every episode.

In addition to booking "The Secret Kingdom" solid in all his Greater New York theaters, Mr. Loew also has leased it for his Newark, Hoboken, and New Rochelle houses.

As an advance advertising campaign on "The Secret Kingdom," which begins its Loew theater run on January 5 in the New York, Mr. Loew will distribute more than half a million post-cards, two pages of which will be devoted solely to "The Secret Kingdom." In addition, Mr. Loew will use his large electric theater signs, and in Brooklyn two hundred billposting stands will be used.

George Baldson, manager of the New York office of Vitagraph V. L. S. E., closed the contract with Mr. Loew.

Eleven of the Loew houses will run all of the fifteen episodes for three days each and six Loew theatres will run each episode four days. For only seven of his twenty-four houses has Mr. Loew booked the serial for less than three days to an episode.

"'The Secret Kingdom' has been inaugurated, so far as the general public is concerned, with one of the largest advertising campaigns ever used for a serial," said a Vitagraph official. "Mr. Loew recognized this, and his splendid business judgment told him it was necessary only for him to couple up his theaters with this advance and continuous 'Secret Kingdom' advertising for a big box-office clean-up."

Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., is in receipt of commendatory notices and messages from exhibitors all over the country. Many theaters which have not heretofore exhibited serials have signed up for "The Secret Kingdom," and Mr. Irwin says that the advance bookings on this feature serial indicate that the million dollar collection mark will be passed before June 1.

"Prudence, the Pirate," Appeals to Strand Audiences in Omaha

IN view of the coming release by Pathe on January 7 of "Her New York," a Gold Rooster feature starring Gladys Hulette, the advertisement of H. M. Thomas, manager of the Strand theatre of Omaha, is of interest.

Mr. Thomas, like many of the exhibitors, believes in pictures of a sunshiny character. He announced "Prudence, the Pirate," in which Gladys Hulette starred, as follows:

"I am changing another picture for you. The one I had booked was too full of gloom. You can get gloomy enough at home figuring why eggs cost so much per dozen, or any of the other eatables or wearables that seem to be affected by the H. C. L., so when you go to a show you want to be amused. I have just screened Gladys Hulette in "Prudence, the Pirate," and let me tell you something—it is one of the most delightful comedies I have ever seen.

"We have had some delightful pictures recently, such as 'The Shine Girl.' Well, here is another one I am hoping will be just as pleasing, and I am sure that when you leave the theatre, you will come up and thank me for presenting you with this picture, instead of the one advertised which was just one 'Gloomy Gus' after another for over an hour and a half.

Probably this feeling of distaste for morbid and heavy drama which Mr. Thomas indicates, is responsible for the very heavy bookings by the Pathe Exchanges on "The Shine Girl," "Prudence, the Pirate," "Little Mary Sunshine," "Shadows and Sunshine," and "Joy and the Dragon," in the latter three of which Baby Marie Osborne stars.

Vitagraph Furnishes Free Advance One-Sheet Posters on "Secret Kingdom"

"Panthea," "The Argyle Case" and "The Eternal Sin," a Trio of Selznick Pictures from Alan Dwan, Ralph Ince and Herbert Brenon

"Pearl of the Army" Plays to Capacity in Portland, Me.

The great success of Pathe's patriotic serial, "Pearl of the Army," is indicated by the hundreds of letters that have poured in from exhibitors in all parts of the country, says an official of the company. "In a number of instances exhibitors have found it necessary to repeat the early episodes because it was impossible to accommodate the crowds at the time of the first showing."

The manager reports that he showed to capacity business both in the afternoon and evening; in fact, turned away several thousand people. This house has a seating capacity of two thousand.

The management of the Hippodrome took full advantage of the advertising possibilities of "Pearl of the Army." In addition to the newspaper campaign, they made use of 24-sheet posters, three-sheets and six-sheets in advance of the release. The day before the showing of the first episode a "Spirit of '76" parade was arranged. This consisted of the Sons of the Spanish War Veterans' Fife and Drum Corps.

The parade took place at the noon hour and attracted much attention.

"Civilization" Booked for Denver

"Civilization" has been booked for an indefinite run at the new America theatre, Denver, Colo. This theatre is one of the largest in Denver. Mr. Talbot, the manager of the theatre, when he saw the picture in Chicago, booked it months ahead, although his theatre had then barely risen above the ground.

The Mid-West Civilization Company, which is handling "Civilization" in this territory, is making its headquarters in new offices at 763-764 Gas and Electric Building, Denver, Colo. This concern is booking "Civilization" in the States of Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico, and Nebraska, as well as in Colorado. The general manager of the Mid-West Civilization Company is Max Schubach.

School After "King Lear"

Widespread interest is shown by clubs and educational institutions in the Pathe Gold Rooster Play, "King Lear," produced by Thanhouser, with Frederick Warde in the title role.

Pearce McMullen, superintendent of schools in Hillsboro, Ohio, writes:

"I learn that your new photoplay of 'King Lear' has been completed. Frederick Warde was in our town for one week last school year, and as he represented King Lear in this photoplay, we are anxious to show this film in Hillsboro some time this winter.

"Will you kindly inform me if it is possible for us to have the film this year, and if so, at what time and on what terms?"

V. L. Roy, president of the Louisiana State Normal School, says:

"I am very much interested in your production of 'King Lear.' Please let me know what the rental of this film is."

Rochester Exhibitors Endorse "The Secret Kingdom"

F. F. Hartich, manager of the Syracuse branch of Vitagraph V. L. S. E., has received a number of unsolicited endorsements of "The Secret Kingdom" from Rochester, N. Y., exhibitors. Among them are the following:

B. Munk, proprietor of the Park theatre, writes Mr. Hartich as follows:

"I had the pleasure of viewing 'The Secret Kingdom' when screened in Rochester, and I feel in duty bound to state that I consider the episodes which I saw the cleanest, strongest, and most thrilling serial that I have ever seen. The acting, photography, story and settings leave nothing to be desired."

Another letter was one received from Harry E. Rose, manager of the Flash theatre, Tonawanda, N. Y., who says:

"I wish to offer my comments on 'The Secret Kingdom,' which I saw screened in Buffalo recently. The cast was well chosen; the photography very good, and Richman's acting is superb.

Paramount Signs 19 Theatres in Detroit Territory

A special salesman's drive on Paramount Pictures was recently made in Detroit, and the vicinity by the Famous Players Film Service, Inc., of Detroit, Mich., distributors of Paramount Pictures in that district, resulting in signing up seven new theatres in Detroit, and twelve new theatres in the vicinity. At the same time the Exhibitors Aids Department of this exchange conducted a strenuous publicity campaign, and have distributed to the Paramount exhibitors many thousands of dollars' worth of accessories and aids.

The new theatres signed were the Regent, Countess, Vendome, Gratiot, Jewel, Baker and Fine Arts, all in Detroit; the Apollo of Hudson, Mich.; Rex, of Three Rivers, Mich.; Gem, of St. John's, Mich.; Royal, of Calumet, Mich.; Garden, of Marshall, Mich.; Garrick, of Milan, Mich.; Monarch, of Midland, Mich.; Gero, of Manistique, Mich.; Princess, of Clare, Mich.; Gem, of Morenci, Mich., and Community Playhouse, of Centerville.

Minter Pictures Popular, Says Hancock

According to H. C. Hancock, manager of the New York Exchange, exhibitors of the territory are doing record breaking business with the Minter productions.

Marcus Loew has them booked for his New York theatre, Broadway and Forty-fifth street, his Avenue B and Broadway houses, and the Royal theatre in Brooklyn. The William Fox Amusement Company has them booked for the Riverside and Washington theatres. Among the other New York City theatres booked up on "Youth's Endearing Charm" and its successors are the Majestic, University, Bunny, Apollo, Manhattan, and Seventy-second Street playhouse.

The Carlton, Peerless, Regent, Classic, Sunset, Parkside, Linden, Penn and Central are among the Brooklyn houses; the Crescent of Jersey City, the Bijou of Orange, the Garden of Richmond Hill, and the Strand at Hempstead, Long Island, are among the other theatres.

LIVE NEWS FROM THE PRODUCERS

First Linder Comedy Nearly Ready

Max Linder's first "made in America" comedy is rapidly nearing completion. With conditions normal, the European comedian's initial mirth-making under Essanay's banner should be ready for announcement to exhibitors before very long. The series of twelve productions for which Linder has contracted with President George K. Spoor of Essanay, will be released through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service.

The comedy has to do with Linder's trip across the Atlantic aboard the steamship Espagne when the liner was rammed in mid-ocean. His contract stipulates that he shall turn out one film every month for the next twelve months. The comedian estimates that a month's time will be required in the actual filming of each of his comedies.

Mary Nash Is World Star

Mary Nash is the latest addition to the rapidly increasing group of feminine stars engaged by the World Film Corporation, in line with the recent announcement of Director General William A. Brady. The future releases of this company now include plays, the central figures in which are in the hands of Alice Brady, Ethel Clayton, Kitty Gordon, Gail Kane, Marie Dressler and Miss Nash.

Miss Nash is at present playing the featured role in "The Man Who Came Back," the current all-season attraction at the Playhouse, New York. Mr. Brady has engaged Jules Eckert Goodman to write the World Film play for Miss Nash. Mr. Goodman is the author of "The Man Who Came Back."

Miss Nash created the principal female personages in "The Woman," "The Lure," "The City," and other stage plays of far more than ordinary interest and importance. Last season she was the leading lady of Grace George's company at the Playhouse.

Angelic Margarita Begins "The Devil's Assistant"

With an entirely new wardrobe, consisting of twenty-one separate and distinct gowns, all designed by her own fair hand, with as many hats, surrounded by settings and of exceptional beauty and splendor, Margarita Fischer, the charming Mutual star, has commenced work on the fourth of her Mutual-Star productions, "The Devil's Assistant." The plot of this drama is founded on the subject of birth control.

"The Devil's Assistant" is to take the place of the drama, "The Light of Heaven," which was formerly announced as one of the series of six pictures featuring Miss Fischer to be released by the Mutual. It will be released fourth in the series in the place formerly accorded "A Knight at Tarquizzi," which will now be released fifth in order.

Margaret Illington Leaves Stage for Screen

Well-Known Actress Will Appear in Adaptation of "The Inner Shrine" for Lasky

JESSE L. LASKY has signed a long-term contract with Margaret Illington by the terms of which the stage celebrity abandons the stage to become a star on the Paramount Program.

Among Miss Illington's greatest successes have been "A Japanese Nightingale," in which she scored a tremendous hit; Henriette in the all-star cast of "The Two Orphans," Mrs. Leffingwell in "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," "The Lion and the Mouse," in which she made her first London appearance at the Duke of York's; "Kindling," Juliet in "Romeo and Juliet" and "The Lie."

An adaptation of Basil King's celebrated novel, "The Inner Shrine," has been chosen by Mr. Lasky as the vehicle of Miss Illington's photoplay debut. It is one of the most widely read novels of the day and has proven a success in dramatic form. Following "The Inner Shrine" Miss Illington will star in a production which is being written especially for her by Charles Kenyon, author of "Kindling," in which she made one of her greatest stage successes.

Miss Illington departs for the Lasky studio in Hollywood in the middle of January and arrangements have already been completed whereby she will occupy the same bungalow which housed Geraldine Farrar during her stay in California.

"There is a very significant fact in connection with the recent engagement of Mme. Petrova and the present decision of Margaret Illington to become a permanent photoplay star," declared Mr. Lasky with reference to the announcement. "That is the fact that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation intends to concentrate its attentions upon the strengthening of the Paramount Program.

"We are determined that the Paramount Program shall stop at no attainments, however great, and we believe that, with these new stars added to a list that already comprises such names as Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Marie Doro, Fannie Ward, Vivian Martin, Lenore Ulrich, Mae Murray and others of equal prominence, and with the combined resources of our Eastern and Western studios, there is no room for doubt that the Paramount Program will even surpass its present record of achievement.

"As for the debut of Miss Illington as a motion picture star, there is every reason to anticipate a tremendous success for her. Every photoplay in which she appears will have been carefully chosen for her and will have been prepared by the staff of experts which comprises our scenario department. In the actual staging of her photoplays there will be employed the very latest devices in the way of lighting effects and every means be taken to obtain the fullest measure of dramatic value from every scene.

"Couple these factors with the great artistic genius of Miss Illington and it is easy to foresee a most successful debut for this distinguished star."

Margaret Illington (Lasky)

Hearst Signs Anna Held for Fashion Poses

An addition to the list of stars in the "Footlights and Fashions" series of the Hearst International News Pictorial is Anna Held, the famous French actress. Mme. Held will appear on the screen in her peacock gown of white chenille. The gown is so arranged that Mme. Held, by pulling on silken ropes over her shoulders raises the train of the dress high in the air so that it looks exactly like the feathery tail of a huge white peacock.

Besides the gown, Mme. Held appears in close-ups showing nearly $250,000 worth of jewels, consisting of pearls, diamonds, rubies and sapphires, the company announces. It is estimated by an International official that the gowns and jewels shown by Mme. Held on the screen represent an outlay of $475,000.

Mme. Held appears under the direction of H. E. Hancock, of the International's force of directors. Other stars who have recently posed for the "Footlights and Fashions" series of the Hearst International News Pictorial are Adele Rowland of "Her Soldier Boy," Marilynn Miller of "The Winter Garden," Edyth Latimer, Adele Blood and Gail Kane.

"Easy Street" to Be Next Chaplin Comedy

Picture Is Scheduled for Release on January 22—Chaplins Will Appear at Six-Week Intervals

"EASY STREET" is the next of the Charlie Chaplin comedies, produced under Chaplin's $670,000 contract with the Mutual Film Corporation. It will be released on January 22, six weeks from the date of previous releases, and this signalizes a new departure with regard to Chaplin features, decided on after a conference between the comedian and President John R. Freuler.

During rehearsals Mr. Chaplin notified Mr. Freuler that owing to the large amount of extra work and the great volume of material involved in the making of this picture, he favored extension of production time to six weeks, adding that as all future productions were to be on a similarly enlarged scale, he felt it advisable to make the intervening time between releases six weeks instead of four weeks as hitherto and his request was complied with.

"Easy Street" will be completed as soon as Mr. Chaplin recovers from a slight accident that took place during the filming of the piece last week. A property lamppost fell on the comedian, inflicting slight contusions from which he has now practically recovered.

Tom Mix Is With Fox Comedy Company

TOM MIX, cowboy, Rough Rider, motion picture actor, scenario writer and director, has signed with the William Fox forces and will immediately begin work on a series of Western comedies for the Foxfilm comedy program.

The engagement of Mr. Mix for Foxfilm comedies marks the first change in his picture career. For eight years he was leading man with Selig, and his followers are numbered by the hundreds of thousands in all parts of the world.

For staging Mix subjects Mr. Fox has leased a large tract of land on the Winna Brown ranch near Los Angeles, erected a complete Western city, from dance hall to undertaking establishment, and arranged for the maintenance of a large stock farm to furnish horses and cattle for the films.

Opposite Mr. Mix when he begins work for Foxfilm comedies will be Victoria Ford, who has played his female leads ever since he has been in pictures. Mr. Mix has unlimited authority to produce whatever he wishes.

Tom Mix is one of the most picturesque figures on the Pacific Coast. He is typically a Westerner and unmistakably a cowboy, always wearing a sombrero which fits exactly with his rugged, virile features. He is a familiar character in and about Los Angeles, driving his large red Cadillac, on the front of which is mounted a pair of horns from one of the famous Texas short-horn breed. Incidentally, the car bears on its side the name "Vicky." This is the owner's tribute to the woman who plays opposite him.

The career of Tom Mix is fully as picturesque and romantic as the man himself. It began in the Western country, not the West as it is today, but the West as it was. He was a cowpuncher and could ride anything of the horse breed. He later enlisted in the Rough Riders and then became one of the best known exponents of the silent drama.

Big Set Built for "Luke" Comedy

Hal Roach and Dwight Whiting of the Rolin Company, makers of Pathe's "Luke" comedies, breathed a sigh of relief last week and for the first time in days were able to stick their heads outside of the studio. The cause of it all was a gigantic oriental set which towers far above the street and runs back nearly a full block.

In building it they were able to make use of some massive stone steps, the former entrance to a large private house, which burned down years ago. The set required carloads of lumber and now that it is built would make a good Billy Sunday tabernacle. Harold Lloyd stars in the comedy, a two reeler.

Shirley Mason, McClure Pictures, Is Tiny Star

Shirley Mason, one of the seven stars of "Seven Deadly Sins," the McClure series of five-reel features, is only sixteen years old and she is the tiniest star in picturedom—with one exception. Marguerite Clark is the exception and Shirley, standing fifty-nine inches in her bathing suit, tops Miss Clark by one inch.

Viola Dana is Shirley Mason's older sister—older by about a year—and the competition between the two young actresses has been keen. Miss Mason, until she joined McClure Pictures, was with Edison, playing leading parts under her own name—Leonie Flugrath.

Shirley Mason was born in Brooklyn and has been on the stage since she was four years old when she appeared on Broadway in a part that she created all by herself. She was "Little Hal" in "The Squaw Man," in which William Faversham starred. She played "Little Meenie" in "Rip Van Winkle," and was "Peter" in "Passers-By."

Miss Mason played ingenue roles while with the Edison Company. She was in "Mary Had a Little Lamb," "Vanity Fair," "The Littlest Magdalene," "Lucia," and other successful Edison Photoplays.

In "The Seven Deadly Sins," Miss Mason is the girl around whom the stories revolve. She is tempted by the seven sins, one after the other, and with George Le Guere, who is the youth who loves her and wants to protect her from temptation, she appears in all seven features.

Miss Mason is a great favorite with all the other McClure stars—Nance O'Neil, Ann Murdock, Charlotte Walker, Holbrook Blinn, H. B. Warner and George Le Guere all watched over her during the making of the series, helping her in her eager desire to learn every angle of her profession.

Coast Player for Years Goes East

Charlotte Burton, well-known leading woman in many feature productions, has joined Essanay, and is now in Chicago to start in her first play by that company. Miss Burton has been in pictures for the past three years, before that having played on the stage since she was a small child. She is best known, perhaps, by her work in heavy leads, or adventurous types.

Richard Bennett in Mutual's Star Production, "The Gilded Youth"

Oscar Apfel Joins Yorke-Metro Studios

Oscar Apfel, who until recently was directing William Farnum at the Fox studios, has migrated to the studios of the Yorke-Metro at Hollywood, California.

He will direct Harold Lockwood and May Allison, alternating productions with Jay Hunt. This method has been found both economical and productive of better productions by several companies.

Oscar Apfel made his first picture with the Edison company and remained with that concern for one and one half years. Followed the same length of time with the Reliance and Majestic companies, and a similar period with Lasky, with whom he directed "The Squaw Man," "Cameo Kirby," "The Circus Man," "Brewster's Millions" and other features.

He directed "The Wild Olive," "Peer Gynt," "Kilmeny," and "The Little Gypsy" for the Pallas-Morosco concerns and then went to Fox, where he produced nine pictures with William Farnum as his star, and other features.

Mr. Apfel looks forward to turning out some notable films with his handsome young stars, and is now preparing his first script.

Public Likes Costume Play, Says Rothapfel

Manager S. L. Rothapfel, of the Rialto theatre, New York, is of the belief that the alleged antipathy of the exhibitors toward the costume picture is entertained merely because the exhibitor has inspired it himself, or because he has failed to give it proper presentation. This statement was made after the showing of the Vitagraph feature, starring E. H. Sothern, "An Enemy to the King," was shown at his house. It proved a splendid success there, and did $13,700 gross business.

In part Mr. Rothapfel says, "To say that the public does not want the costume drama, is the same as to say that the public does not want the masterpieces of literature. In the case of 'An Enemy to the King,' a costume picture was applauded as much as any modern drama in our house ever has been. It lent itself splendidly to public presentation, and diffused its charm through the entire theatre at every showing."

Gail Kane Is a Mutual Star

GAIL KANE has signed a long term contract to appear in American Film Company productions for Mutual distribution.

Miss Kane is now preparing for her departure for Santa Barbara where she will begin work at the American's western studios about January 22. She is now appearing in "The Harp of Life" at the Globe theatre in New York.

"We are selecting for Miss Kane dramatic vehicles of the type which have constituted her great successes," said Mr. Hutchinson. "Also our whole staff is devoting its efforts toward the selection of the proper supporting casts for each of the Kane productions."

Gail Kane is the third important star announced for Mutual productions for 1917. Marjorie Rambeau and Nance O'Neil, both now at work before the camera at the Powell Producing Corporation's studios in New York, were the first announced following President John R. Freuler's declaration of policy. "Only big stars for the Mutual."

Gail Kane is one of the most beautiful women known to the screen.

Miss Kane's career began under Charles Frohman six years ago, in "Decorating Clementine." Later she was presented in "As a Man Thinks," by Augustus Thomas, at the Thirty-ninth Street theatre in New York. She was picked by Mr. Thomas to star in "The Model," and later appeared in "Anatol" at the Little theatre. After that Miss Kane became Chauncey Olcott's leading lady in "Macushla." The next big Broadway hit of Miss Kane was "Seven Keys to Baldpate."

Miss Kane followed this by appearances in "The Miracle Man" and "The Hyphen."

"Law of the North" Completed

From the Edison Studios comes the word that the final scenes of the Kleine-Edison feature "The Law of the North" have been completed, and that the production will be ready for release on the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay program, April 2. The story is a tale of the Canadian woods, written by Edward H. Griffith. Shirley Mason, younger sister of Viola Dana and herself an actress of unusual prominence and ability, is featured in "The Law of the North."

Campbell Completes Another Multiple

The final scenes of Colin Campbell's latest feature have been filmed at the Selig studios, Los Angeles. The title of the feature will be announced soon.

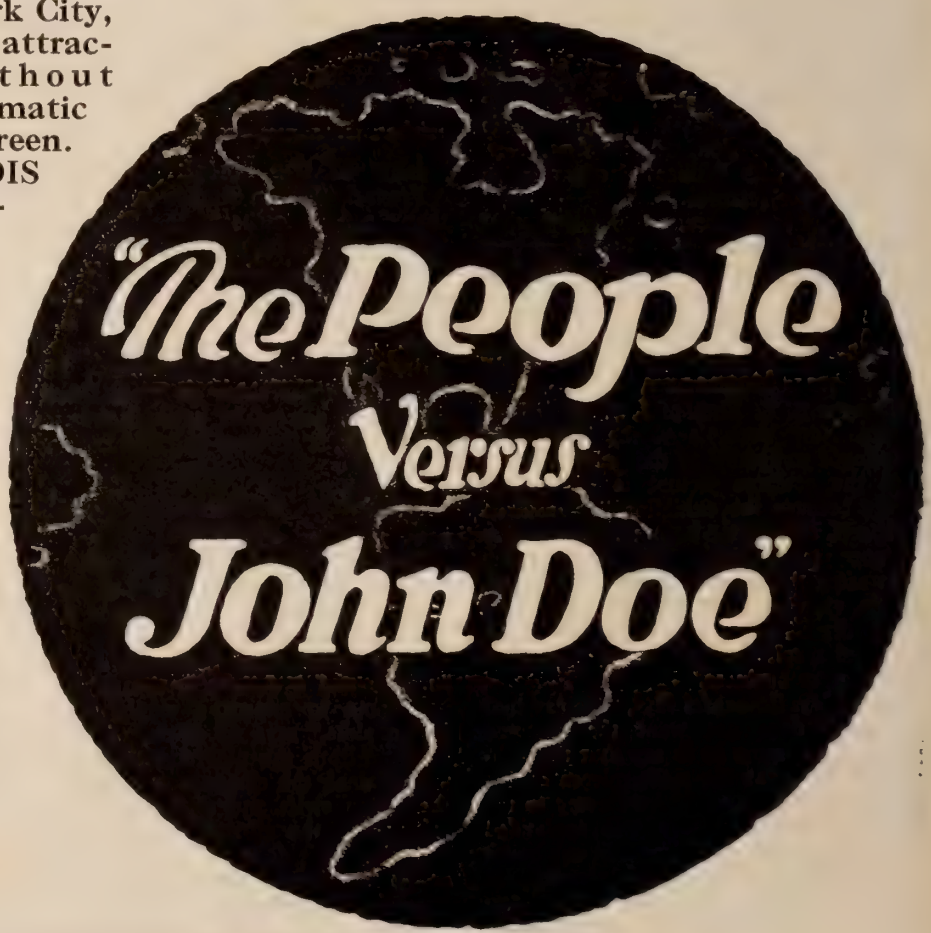
"The latest Selig feature will prove a surprise and a delight to the patron who has come to expect a similarity in all screen plots," says an official of the company. "Both the plot and the treatment are original, the climaxes unexpected, and the action swift and absorbing. The excellence of the all-star cast is a feature, including as it does such well-known players as Fritzi Brunette, Bessie Eyton, Tom Santschi, Edward Coxen, Jack Richardson, Eugenie Besserer, Harry Lonsdale, Frank Clark and others."

"The Vicar of Wakefield's" Grand Support

Supporting Frederick Warde in the Thanhouser edition of "The Vicar of Wakefield" will be Carey Hastings, Kathryn Adams, Gladys Leslie, Boyd Marshall, William Park, Jr., Arthur Bauer, Grace De Carlton, Thomas A. Curran, Robert Vaughn, Morgan Jones and Barbara Howard and Tula Belle.

One of Gladys Hulette's most fetching scenes in the Thanhouser-Pathe "'Her' New York," to be released January 7, shows the little star as the country girl wife of a city boy and about to sit down with him to eat her roasted pet chicken whose generous egg production had made possible her flight to New York.

Of course, she had a good crying spell and makes a good many delightfully rueful faces before she starts to take a bite of the cooked pet, "her best friend," and then nearly chokes on a bite from a drum stick.



Agnes C. Johnston, who wrote "'Her' New York," as well as other comedy dramas in Miss Hulette's "lovely girl" series, got the idea for this situation from her own life, when as a little girl her heart was broken over the loss of her pet chicken, which during a meat famine was sacrificed for the family table.

HERE'S A SMASHING BIG STATE RIGHTS PRODUCTION THAT WILL COVER THE WORLD

"The People against John Doe" played to capacity houses at the Broadway Theatre in New York City, testimony to its power as an attraction extraordinary. It is without question the most powerful dramatic story ever shown on any screen. Written and directed by LOIS WEBER, producer of such successes as "Where Are My Children" and other big winners. State Rights now selling. Special advertising matter for State Rights buyers on this production,—Ad matter that will help you get the business.

"Perils of Girl Reporters" Gives Promise of Action

"PERILS OF OUR GIRL REPORTERS," the new series of fifteen complete newspaper adventure stories, first of which, "The Jade Necklace," will be released on December 28, by the Mutual Film Corporation, gives promise of being popular with a public that loves action and mystery, and is ever curious to learn the secrets of newspaper offices and the methods by which news is obtained. For the first time, in this series by Edith Sessions Tupper, a real insight into the work of the newspaper woman is given. This series is made by the Niagara Film Studios.

The release of the series, in two-reel installments complete in plot, is accompanied by a comprehensive advertising campaign which includes poster and magazine publicity as well as a unique campaign conducted through the publicity facilities of the Mutual Film Corporation. The advance advertising given this series of stories should insure a wide public interest in them prior to the time of the first release.

Edith Sessions Tupper, author of "Perils of Our Girl Reporters," is one of the best known newspaper and magazine writers in this country. Her intimate acquaintance with newspaper women and the interior workings of newspaper offices has qualified her to place before the motion picture public some of the most thrilling episodes in the lives of girl reporters on metropolitan newspapers.

"The Jade Necklace," for instance, is based on an absolute happening to one of the best known girls in newspaper work in the United States—a star special writer on one of the New York newspapers.

Every one of these fifteen stories has been based by the author on some actual happening in which a real working newspaper woman has been involved. This is true of "The Black Door," a most gruesome drama, recalling Poe's "Murders of the Rue Morgue," and also of "The Meeting," which displays the determination of a brave girl to make her own way after discovering that she is wedded to a rascal.

Some of the best known artists and artistes in America are starred in "Perils of Our Girl Reporters." Helen Greene, known for her work in "The Uplift" and Heartaches," stars jointly in the leading roles with Zena Keefe, famous for her work in "Life's Yesterdays," "The Estabrook Case" and "Cupid and the Scrub Lady." Miss Keefe was also starred in "Her Maternal Right" and "La Vie de Boheme."

Earl Metcalfe, leading man of the series, is known for his work with the Lubin Company, his principal success having been in "The Moonshiner's Wife."

William H. Turner, the leading heavy played principal parts with "Held by the Enemy," "The Fatal Card," "Sowing the Wind," and "Alias Jimmy Valentine," by Paul Armstrong.

Improvements at Triangle Studios Cost $10,000

When improvements now under construction are completed, the Triangle-Fine Arts studio in Los Angeles will be one of the most complete and splendidly equipped motion picture plants in the country.

To make room for a greatly increased volume of production and in anticipation of a winter season that is expected to be one of the busiest and most prosperous in the history of the studio, a gigantic new light studio and elaborate scene docks are being built, in addition to two new stages. The property rooms also are being remodeled and the old light studio greatly enlarged.

With these facilities it will be possible for more than a score of companies to work at the plant simultaneously. The improvements are listing approximately $10,000.

Enforced Motherhood Is Theme of "A Son of Strife"

Paul Trinchera has just finished another five-reel feature, "A Son of Strife," which deals with one of the most terrible problems of the war—Enforced Motherhood, but likewise portrays most realistically, how the maternal instinct—the most divine emotion of womankind—rises superior to all else.

The new production is based upon a war-drama, produced with great success in Europe. Picturization was made by Frederick H. James, formerly of the Vitagraph staff.

Burlesque on "Damon and Pythias" from "U"

The Universal Film Company releases the early part of January "When Damon Slipped Something Over on Pythias," a comedy directed by W. W. Beaudine with William Franey, "Heine" Conklin, Milburn Moranti and Lydia Titus in the cast. A feature of the comedy is the sub-titles which are couched in present-day vernacular.

Dorothea Farley Appearing in "Are Passions Inherited?" With William Conklin (Warner Brothers, State Rights Picture)

Brady Signs Kitty Gordon for Three Plays

William A. Brady, director general of the World Film Corporation, has engaged Kitty Gordon as the star of at least three motion picture plays to be produced during the next six months.

Mr. Brady and his associates hold a further option upon Miss Gordon's services as a motion picture star for the next eighteen months following the expiration of the original contract, so that the document virtually covers a two years' period.

The present engagement follows Mr. Brady's recent announcement that the company of which he is the head would turn its attention more directly than heretofore to the exploitation of women stars in response to the increasing public demand.

Miss Gordon may be regarded as a distinctly important addition to a list which also includes Alice Brady, Ethel Clayton and Gail Kane.

This is not Miss Gordon's first appearance as a World-Brady attraction. Several months ago she played the star roles in "Her Maternal Right" and "The Crucial Test" for this corporation, and in the interval she has devoted much of her time to screen personations for other photoplay producers.

"Are Passions Inherited?" Marketed by the Warners

After weeks of careful preparation which included trimming the film and laying out a most exhaustive line of advertising matter Warner Brothers are selling the state rights on "Are Passions Inherited?" This is a seven-reel picture in which Dorothea Farley is featured, supported by William Conklin. Besides lithographs up to 24 sheets, real booking material makes up the equipment of advertising matter which is of wide assortment and embodies new features.

Dorothea Farley plays the part of a girl with two personalities. At times, she is a gentle, lovable person, but at others she is a depraved, immoral creature, yet both beings are logical and according to actual cases of medical record.

"Are Passions Inherited?" runs the gamut of atmosphere, from the big city dive to a series of scenes of life on the plains incidental to the story. The producer is Gilbert P. Hamilton.

Masters Becomes "Musical Critic"

E. Lanning Masters, advertising manager of Vitagraph-V-L-S-E, has taken up the additional duties of musical critic and claims that with a dozen or so more jobs he might have his hands full. It all came about through the desire of several music publishers to issue a song named "The Secret Kingdom" after the Vitagraph serial.

S. M. Berg acted as judge of the various pieces, but insisted that Masters act as head of a jury composed of all departments. Four songs were finally selected from the many submitted, but neither Berg nor Masters has yet had the nerve to taboo three of them.

Washington, D. C., Correspondents See "Joan"

In the midst of a day's work filled with tense international news events more than two hundred of the best known Washington press correspondents and writers of national affairs stopped for a while last Thursday to view Jesse L. Lasky's production of "Joan the Woman." The showing took place at the National Press Club. Also present were representatives of every branch of official Washington, the diplomatic corps and the two arms of the national service.

Mr. Lasky and Mr. De Mille went to Washington for the occasion, accompanied by the authoress of the script, Jeanie Macpherson.

The arrangements at the club were in charge of George Mann, Paramount representative at Washington; Carl Pierce and Allan Rock of the Lasky staff, New York.

"Ignorance" Expected to Bring Knowledge

A new feature, "Ignorance," which has just been completed by the Private Feature Film Company, Cleveland, in association with the Young Women's Protective League, is looked upon by the producers as a strong preachment against vice and a sincere effort to abolish it. The Young Women's Protective League aims to extend this work to all large cities, and so combined efforts with the Private Feature Film Company, believing that the picture would prove unusually helpful to them.

The cast is headed by Earl Metcalfe and Eleanor Mack, while the direction was in charge of James A. Fitzgerald.

"Oliver Twist" Receives Praise

The Lasky adaptation of Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist," which has just been released on the Paramount program, has proven one of the greatest photoplay successes of the year now closing. In it Miss Doro has scored a personal triumph.

Numerous congratulatory messages have been received by Jesse L. Lasky and the sentiment of all has been one of thanks to Miss Doro and all who had anything to do with the production of "Oliver Twist."

"Great Secret," Story of New York Life

ON New Year's day the first chapter of "The Great Secret," Metro's serial, featuring Francis Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be seen. It is a story of New York life, written by Fred de Gresac, and was adapted for the screen and directed by William Christy Cabanne.

The basic action of the story centered in and around the operations of a band of unscrupulous men, known as the Secret Seven, who operate in all avenues of human endeavor to further their ends. Into their net falls Beverly Clarke (Beverly Bayne) whose possession of a mysterious casket containing a mighty secret serves as the incentive to much plotting. William Montgomery Strong, a young man of wealth and social prominence, at first unwittingly enlisted in her defence, later becomes deeply interested in her future.

Throughout "The Great Secret" abundant thrills are promised. There is a rescue of Beverly Clarke from in front of a train by William Strong who leans down from the running board of an automobile and lifts her to safety as the locomotive grazes the rear wheels of the machine. There is the blowing up of a house with dynamite, and a spectacular raid on the headquarters of an underworld gang in which more than fifty policemen take part.

For the first time in his career, Mr. Bushman assumes a variety of roles. He is seen as the wealthy man-about-town, the trained athlete, disguised as a gangster, an East Side Italian, a longshoreman and a Chinaman. He is supported by a specially chosen cast containing such names as Edward Connelly, Fred Stanton, Helen Dunbar, Belle Bruce, Dorothy Hydell, Sue Balfour, Tammany Young, Ed. Lawrence, Chas. Ripley, Art Ortego, John Leach, Baron Wenther, William J. Calhoun, Fred Roberts, Robert Carson, Tom Blake, W. J. Butler, Charles Fang, Lillian Sullivan, Marie de Chett and others.

California Motion in Market for Original Script

The California Motion Picture Corporation, which has heretofore limited its producing activities to adaptations from celebrated fiction, has just announced itself now on the market for original manuscripts. While the firm at present is producing only plays of five parts or over, it is ready, in anticipation of an early expansion into other fields, to consider unusual stories of any length.

The scenario staff of the California concern asks for comprehensive synopsis giving the complete development of the story in its different phases, with particular attention to the suspense and climaxes to be obtained. Where the author has any particular technical effect in mind for any of his scenes, he may use a marginal note. It is not desired, however, that he develop the scenario beyond the synopsis. Stories of modern American life are asked for. Comedies, depending on "slapstick" for their humor will not be considered.

In making his announcement, the California scenario editor has to say, "This decision to enter the market for original manuscripts is prompted by plans for an early expansion and the consequent necessity of getting a stock of manuscripts ahead in anticipation thereof.

"When suitable material is available, we shall continue to secure and make adaptations from celebrated copyrights, but we are at the same time convinced that photoplay writing has now developed to that pitch where authors, writing with the possibilities of the camera in mind, often offer better material than is to be found in stories written primarily for the magazines or the stage."

Minister Uses Twenty-four Sheets

For a number of years the Rev. Christian Reisner, pastor of the Grace M. E. Church at 104th street, New York City, has booked Kalem's biblical picture, "From the Manger to the Cross," at Christmas time. This production is always in demand during the holiday season.

Besides making announcements from his pulpit, Mr. Reisner secured in advance six twenty-four sheets and other advertising matter and set out to billboard the neighborhood of his church.

Rhea Mitchell to Have Own Company

The latest film favorite to achieve the honor of having a producing company organized for the exclusive purpose of presenting her as the star in a series of big productions is Rhea Mitchell, whose recent work under the direction of Thomas H. Ince attracted such wide attention.

Harry I. Garson, who represents one of the biggest exchange and exhibiting interests in Michigan, has promoted the company that is to present Miss Mitchell, and while in New York last week made arrangements for the use of one of the big studios in Fort Lee.

The first picture in which Miss Mitchell is to appear under her new auspices will be adapted from a powerful and widely known novel, the name of which is being withheld for the present.

Miss Mitchell had considerable stage experience prior to her advent to the screen, beginning her career in Western stock companies, from which she graduated to the leading part in a dramatic sketch that played the Orpheum circuit. Her most important screen appearances were with the New York Motion Picture Company under Mr. Ince's direction, where she was featured in a number of big pictures as well as playing leading roles opposite such stars as William Hart, Henry Woodruff, De Wolfe Hopper, Orrin Johnson, Robert Edeson, Richard Bennett and others.

American Buys Rights to Shipman Script

A check received by Nell Shipman from the American Film Company in payment of the motion picture rights for "My Fighting Gentleman" makes the seventh photodrama disposed of by this writer since coming to New York in November, and the third purchased by the American Film Company.

"My Fighting Gentleman" will also be issued in book form by one of the leading publishers.

A three-act comedy nearly completed and two more photodramas ready for release make the sum total of Nell Shipman's literary activities during the past six months, during which time she also managed to play the leading role opposite Lou Tellegen for the Lasky Company in "The Black Wolf," which will be released on February 12. She also played a number of weeks in connection with the Vitagraph exchanges on the bookings of "God's Country and the Woman."

"Capt. Jinks" Series May Reach Fifteen

The "Capt. Jinks'" series of Vitagraph comedies, in which Frank Daniels, the noted stage comedian, is starred, has been extended. The exact total of comedies in this series has not yet been determined, but there probably will be fifteen in all.

In the meantime, the following releases have been added to the series: February 5, "Capt. Jinks' Wife's Husband"; February 12, "Capt. Jinks' Love Letters"; and February 19, "Capt. Jinks' Cure."

Tourneur Stages Next Pickford Subject

For the past few weeks the Mary Pickford studio in Fort Lee, N. J., has been in charge of the carpenters and mechanics in connection with the construction of big sets for the new Mary Pickford subject, "A Poor Little Rich Girl," the famous Eleanor Gates novel, which also enjoyed a big run as a play. Immediately upon completing the final preparation of the script early last week, the actual staging of the new subject was commenced under the direction of Maurice Tourneur, who recently produced the second Pickford-Artcraft picture, "The Pride of the Clan," to be released January 8.

Mr. Tourneur's work in connection with "The Pride of the Clan" was completed several weeks ago, when he was engaged to produce the next Pickford film. He immediately began his plans for "A Poor Little Rich Girl," although the actual staging of the film has only just started, this being in accordance with the Artcraft policy of allowing its directors ample time to thoroughly study and plan their forthcoming subjects before commencing the actual production.

"Man Who Forgot" Is Brady Made

"The Man Who Forgot," the newest of World pictures, Brady-made, carries a story with a psychological background, and is said to have a large number of novel and striking complications. The play, directed by Emile Chautard, had its origin in a novel by James Hay, Jr., occupying a position well up among the "best sellers" of its time.

"It was for the final scenes in this World-Brady picture that many Washington clergymen on a recent Sunday urged their congregations to participate before the camera," says a World Film official, "with the result that some 5,000 church members assembled for the parade. The meeting was on the steps of the Capitol, and the subsequent rush upon the Senate Chamber makes a remarkable episode."

Powell Picks Cast for O'Neil Picture

Nance O'Neil, recently placed under contract by the Mutual Film Corporation to appear in Gertrude Atherton's novel, "Mrs. Balfame," under the direction of Frank Powell, has begun rehearsals at the studios in College Point, Long Island.

In the company are Alfred Hickman, the original Little Billie in "Trilby"; Agnes Eyre, a screen actress who has played a wide range of parts; Robert Elliott, late leading man for Margaret Illington in "Within the Law"; Frank Belcher, an actor of considerable distinction, and Anna Raines, a clever actress of the younger set.

Miss O'Neil will be Mrs. Balfame, Mr. Hickman will play Roderick, the newspaper man; Miss Eyre will be Alys Crumley; Mr. Elliott is cast for Dwight Rush; Mr. Belcher is to be Mr. Balfame, and Miss Raines will be Dr. Steurer.

Miss O'Neil took an active part in the selection of her company.

Chicago Daily News Is Enthusiastic Over "Glory"

The following remarks on "Glory," the seven-reel picture soon to be released through the Unity exchanges, from the pen of Amy Leslie, special writer for The Chicago Daily News, will prove of interest to those who value the expression of newspaper views on pictures.

Miss Leslie wrote as follows: "Abruptly entering the lists with the august managers and producers of the cinema craft comes Maude Lillian Berri, unannounced, but with as charming, cleanly and stirring a picture as any of the great spenders among the film kings could have inspired and financed. Miss Berri, entirely alone, produced this delightful work of shadow art at the net expenditure of over fifty thousand dollars. The scenario is done by Aaron Hoffman and is the best thing he has done for the films. It is called "Glory" and is a tenderly recited story in silhouette of a little child, a big romance, and the wide wanderings of the good of heart and pleasant people."

Two Roles for Valkyrien in "Image Maker"

Valkyrien, the Danish actress, stars in the forthcoming Pathe Gold Rooster Play, "The Image Maker." This picture deals with pre-existence and tells of a love that lasted through the centuries. Valkyrien plays two parts—a beautiful Egyptian girl of low degree who wins the love of a great noble, and then the incarnation of the girl in modern life in America. The picture was produced by Thanhouser.

Stahl Directs "What Becomes of the Children?"

Walter R. Stahl has been engaged to direct "What Has Become of the Children?" It features Corra Beach and Walter Shumway.

The company is at present in Jacksonville, Fla., where the first scenes are being made.

Besides Corra Beach and Walter Shumway the cast includes Gladys Dore, Morgan Jones and William Sullivan.

"God of Little Children" Is Not Religious Picture

Harry R. Raver, president of Apollo Pictures, Inc., is at a loss to understand why the use of a name to signify The Almighty in the title of a picture should create the impression instantly that a religious theme is involved in the story. Many inquiries from exhibitors and exchanges interested in the new Art Dramas program have been sent to the Apollo offices seeking information as to the character of Mr. Raver's first production. One exhibitor from Canada advised that on account of a recent ruling no picture could be shown in the Dominion if the title included the word God.

The head of the Apollo corporation immediately advised its customers that "God of Little Children" was a drama of today having to do with the trials and tribulations of a beautiful girl-crook who fell in love with the man she intended to rob and succeeded in thwarting the plans of a band of thieves with whom she was forced to associate, at the risk of her life.

Maude Lillian Berri Produces Pictures for Unity

To Maude Lillian Berri, a comic opera star of former days and a prima donna of considerable note, belongs the distinction of being one of the very first women to produce a moving picture feature with stars in the cast. Women directors there have been and are—good ones too—but women producers—not many.

Miss Berri's last appearance on the stage was as the leading lady with Kolb and Dill in their comic opera success, "Peck o' Pickles" which ran during the entire year of 1914. She will bring out "Glory," a seven-reel photoplay, with Juanita Hansen and Kolb and Dill. Miss Berri selected the story, arranged for the locations in the homes and gardens of her California friends, chose the cast, and had entire charge of the making of the picture from beginning to end.

Aaron Hoffman arranged the scenario and Francis Grandon was associated in the producing end. "Glory" will be released the middle of January through the Unity exchanges.

"Kick In," for January 14, a Stage Success

When "Kick In" is released by Pathe on January 14 exhibitors will be able to show on their screens a version of one of the most successful plays ever produced on the stage. It played to big and long business in New York during the 1914-15 season and was followed by equally successful runs in Chicago and other large cities, including London, where critics, usually inclined to look with disfavor on an American production, greeted it with superlatives.

It was written by Willard Mack and produced by A. H. Woods for the speaking stage. George Fitzmaurice was entrusted to turn it into celluloid form and selected a cast headed by William Courtenay as Chick, Mollie King as Molly, and Richard Clugston, Suzanne Willa, John Boyle and Richard Tabor.

Marguerite Snow Signed for an Artcraft

She Is Cast for Role Opposite George Cohan in Screen Version of "Broadway Jones"

MARGUERITE SNOW has been engaged by the Artcraft Pictures Corporation to appear opposite George M. Cohan in his initial film subject, "Broadway Jones."

Miss Snow will portray on the screen, the part of Josie Richards, the pretty stenographer at the Jones gun factory, who shows the wild "Broadway Jones" the right path. In the original play, at the Cohan theatre, New York city, Myrtle Tannehill interpreted the role of Josie. This part is second in importance only to the stellar role of "Broadway Jones."

Marguerite Snow (Cohan-Artcraft)

Born in Savannah, Ga., and educated at the Loretta Heights Academy, Denver, Colo., Marguerite Snow made her debut as an actress at an early age and after five years behind the footlights, entered the motion picture field. On the stage she appeared in "The College Widow," the original company of "The Devil," with Thomas Jefferson in "The Other Fellow," "The Road to Yesterday," "Old Heidelberg," "Peter Pan" and many others of equal prominence.

Miss Snow played the Countess Zudora in "The Million Dollar Mystery," the Thanhouser serial. Among her other portrayals on the screen are those displayed in "Rosemary," "The Upstart," "Corner in Cotton," "The Second in Command," "The Silent Mystery" and "The Turmoil."

The rest of the cast for "Broadway Jones" is now being assembled and work has already been begun at the studio in New York on some of the big sets to be used in the first Cohan film. The actual production will start immediately after the holidays.

Ralph W. Ince Joins Goldwyn Pictures

Former Vitagraph and Selznick Director Will Begin Work in About a Fortnight

RALPH W. INCE is announced as the first of the directors to be engaged by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. He will begin work for the new company on its first production within a fortnight.

Mr. Ince comes to Goldwyn Pictures from the Selznick organization, where he has just finished making the Warwick picture, "The Argyle Case." Prior to the Selznick connection Mr. Ince was for many years with the Vitagraph Company.

Born in 1887 in Boston, young Ince followed in his parents' footsteps and went on the stage. Entering Richard Mansfield's company he received splendid training under that great actor and learned stage direction that has influenced his entire career as a director of motion pictures.

Mr. Ince has been a prominent factor in the development of the cinema. Under his direction the first two, three and five-reel picture plays were produced. In many of these—notably in "The Man Who Knew Lincoln," "Gettysburg," "Lincoln the Lover" and "The Seventh Son"—he played the leading roles, besides writing or assisting in the writing of the scenarios and supervising the entire effort. His impersonations of Abraham Lincoln have been pronounced by men who knew the martyred Chief Executive to be accurate.

Among the Vitagraph successes which Mr. Ince supervised and directed during his ten years' connection with that company were the following: "A Million Bid," "The Juggernaut," "The Goddess," "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," "The Mills of the Gods," "The Sins of the Mothers," "My Lady's Slipper," "The Destroyers," "The Conflict," "His Wife's Good Name," "The Ninety and Nine," "The Strength of Men," "Shadows of the Past," "A Painted World," "The Awakening," "Back to Broadway," "The Freshet," "Four-Thirteen," "The Vengeance of Durand," "The Wreck," "He Never Knew," "A Regiment of Two," "The Boob," "Mockery," "The Wood Violet," and the "Fatty" series featuring Hughie Mack.

"Cinderella" Deserts Vaudeville

After a tour of nearly a year on the Keith Circuit of Vaudeville theatres, Violet MacMillan has returned to Universal City to resume her film work for a month.

While there Miss MacMillan also will have several new films made for use during her coming vaudeville tour. By means of a cleverly constructed vaudeville act, Miss MacMillan has been able to show many of her screen successes by intermingling them through her regular act and the combination of the two has resulted in making her a "drawing card" in vaudeville.

Marie Walcamp Will Support Mrs. Vernon Castle

MARIE WALCAMP, star in the serial "Liberty," who has played important parts in other serials and leads in many features, has been engaged to support Mrs. Vernon Castle in several of the later episodes of "Patria," the International's serial. In the cast she appears prominently in three episodes as Bess Morgan, the sister of the Channing ranch manager.

Several other stars have been engaged for the concluding episodes. Among them is Arthur Tavarez, who recently appeared in "The Eyes of the World." He will play the part of Nogi, the commander-in-chief of the Japanese-Mexican forces.

Wallace Beery is another addition to the cast supporting Mrs. Vernon Castle. He impersonates Villa.

William Nye, who played in "Liberty," takes the part of Rodman Pillsbury, superintendent of the Channing ranch and Patria's childhood sweetheart.

In addition to these players are Milton Sills, Warner Oland, Dorothy Green, and George Majeroni. The company is now in California.

Winifred Kingston in Support of Dustin Farnum

Winifred Kingston, who has appeared in support of Dustin Farnum for the last three years, goes with him to the William Fox banner and will appear opposite him in his forthcoming Fox features. The first picture Miss Kingston did with Mr. Farnum was "The Squaw Man" in 1913. Another was "The Virginian." She has had a varied career on the stage, beginning in England, the land of her birth, and came to this country about three years before making her motion picture bow.

Kenneth Casey Returns to Screen

After an absence of almost three years, in vaudeville, Kenneth Casey returns to the screen as Louis Broulette, in Madame Petrova's latest Metro production now being made at the Popular Plays and Players studio under the direction of Burton L. King.

Casey appears as a nineteen-year-old cripple, with an inventive turn of mind, who is robbed of the children of his brain and hands. His role takes him through the entire play. Mahlon Hamilton is the leading man and H. Cooper Cliffe plays the heavy role.

Casey left the Vitagraph forces in 1913, having been with them for almost five years. Because of his youth he was not permitted to appear in vaudeville here, so he went to England, whence, after a successful tour, he returned in November, 1914. His first appearance on the speaking stage was at Hammerstein's Victoria theatre in February, 1915.

Lincoln to Buy Dogs Abroad

E. K. Lincoln, who is being featured by the Monmouth Film Corporation in the "Jimmie Dale" series, will as soon as the final episode in the present series is completed, take the first steamer for England and purchase more dogs for his Greenacre kennels. He already owns over two hundred prize winners, it is said, and at the various shows held in the East in the past year the Lincoln entries have won high awards. Lincoln has already begun negotiations for purchasing several of the best known and highest priced spaniels in England.

The trip abroad will be a hurried one and upon his return Lincoln, with two of the members of the "Jimmie Dale" company and three other friends, will tour to Los Angeles in a motor car that Lincoln is now having especially built for the trip.

Critics Praise Mae Marsh

The work of Mae Marsh, the first star announced for Goldwyn Pictures, the new alliance formed by Samuel Goldfish, Edgar and Archibald Selwyn and Arthur Hopkins, has been the subject of comment by the critics of many large daily newspapers.

Ashton Stevens, Chicago Examiner says: "The most wonderful of Griffith's women stars is not beautiful at all. She is Mae Marsh and as monkeyish as Maude Adams. She is the first actress in my experience to possess a mental magnetism translatable to celluloid."

Kitty Kelly, Chicago Tribune says: Mae Marsh is one of the sort who give us hope that brains, not beauty, will be the acid test of the future in establishing screen stars."

Charles Darnton, N. Y. Evening World says: "Mae Marsh is a vivid, electric actress."

Louella Parsons, Chicago Herald says: "Mae Marsh is the best actress on the screen."

William Hardy, Boston Post says: "Mae Marsh is a girl of smiles and tears—a remarkable screen figure."

R. G. McCoy, Pittsburgh Leader says: "Mae Marsh's ever-changing, mood-adapting face is the most valuable in all the long list of film favorites. She is the girl of a thousand faces.

Marie Walcamp in "Patria" (International)

Mignon Anderson Joins Universal

Mignon Anderson, formerly with Thanhouser, has joined the acting forces of Lois Weber at Universal City and is playing opposite Ben Wilson in a five-reel current production.

Miss Anderson is a native of Baltimore and six months after her birth in 1894 began her stage career by being carried before the footlights by Margaret Mather. Her parents were well known professionals and with them the little girl played in "Rip Van Winkle" with Joseph Jefferson and later in repertoire with Richard Mansfield.

Her father finally abandoned the stage and she was educated at the Brooklyn Model School and finished in a seminary on Long Island. Later she returned to the stage and was finally drawn to the pictures. Among her notable screen successes are "Mill on the Floss," "The Price of Her Silence," "The Substitute," "Her Menacing Past," "The Tin Soldier and the Doll" and "The City of Illusion."

Mary Pickford's Picture in Historical Collection

Mary Pickford's picture is to adorn the exclusive walls of the Carnegie Institute at Pittsburgh. The largest collection of autographed pictures of stage celebrities in the world has just been presented to the institution and Mary Pickford's picture will be in the center of this extraordinary exhibit. The donor is Tunis F. Dean, long prominently identified with theatrical activities, who is now associated with the amusement enterprises of Harry Davis in Pittsburgh.

For a quarter of a century Mr. Dean has been making this collection, which is of great value and of sentimental interest because of the personal allusion in all of the autographed inscriptions. Nearly every prominent player who has illumined stage history in this period is included.

E. I. S. Company Plans "Black Hussars" for New Year

THE latest entrant into the production field is the E. I. S. Motion Picture Corporation, of which Dixon Boardman is president and director general. Hitherto known as producers of high-class educational pictures, the E. I. S. concern now intends aggressively to enter the production field and put out big features.

June Daye as Ruth Morland

The first big production under the new policy of E. I. S. is entitled "Trooper 44," and is now in the process of making in the coal and iron regions of Pennsylvania.

An unique feature of this first five-reeler to be made under the E. I. S. auspices is the fact that, for the first time in the history of that force, it enlists the services upon the screen, of the mounted Pennsylvania State Police. "The Black Hussars" rank with the celebrated Canadian Northwest Mounted.

The E. I. S. Players are now working on outside locations at Greensburg, Westmoreland County, Pa., where are situated the barracks of Troop A, the largest and most important of the mounted police garrisons.

The picture is being directed by Roy Gahris, under the general supervision of Mr. Boardman, the leading role, that of Jack, otherwise Trooper 44, is played by George Soule Spencer, who, besides his stage triumphs, will be recalled for his screen work in Selig's "Your Girl and Mine," Triangle's "The Winged Idol," and Equitable's "Idols," "The Clarion," etc. W. D. Black, known for his work in featured roles with Fox and numerous other prominent producers, is intrusted with the heavy character of Ian Sanford, leader of a band of miscreants whose outrages have terrorized the country. June Daye, known for her creation of stellar roles for several picture concerns and for the stage work with "Ben Hur" and "The Clansman," is seen as Ruth Moreland, a true daughter of the mountains, who loves Trooper Jack, and Betty Dodridge enacts the character of Cora Watson, the beautiful, but sinister influence that guides the gang's destinies and threatens Jack's life.

Also included in the long cast are: Walter Lewis, as Dave Moreland, Ruth's father, a tool of Sanford's; and Roy Sheldon, as Arnold Davis, keeper of a roadhouse upon which the Black Hussars have their eyes.

The camera work is directed by Fred Armitage, with whom is associated Charles Charlton. They have three assistants.

"Trooper 44" will in all probability be released early in the New Year.

Dailies Praise Pathe Military Serial

Newspapers in New Orleans, Dayton, Ohio, and many other cities praise "Pearl of the Army," Pathe's military-mystery serial, featuring Pearl White.

The New Orleans Item states:

"There are thrills in every foot of 'Pearl of the Army.' With a dramatic story of love, mystery and adventure, and an all-star cast supporting her, Miss White is certain to achieve the greatest success of her career.

"'Pearl of the Army' lacks none of the essentials of a successful serial. It has a strong love interest, the development of which starts with the first episode. There is mystery, adventure and suspense. Every reel is replete with thrills of the kind that bring audiences back week after week."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer says: "Pearl of the Army, starring Pearl White and featuring Ralph Kellard, is the newest serial from the house of Pathe, and if the first three episodes may be considered as a criterion, it should prove as popular as 'The Shielding Shadow,' which is rapidly drawing to a satisfactory close.

"When it comes to injecting real mystery into serials, Pathe walks away with the blue ribbon every time.

"After sitting through the first three episodes, the audiences would have willingly sat through the whole fifteen, so mysterious is the action of not only one person, but two.

"The picture promises to be a Pathe winner, and Pearl White and Ralph Kellard will no doubt make many more friends."

The Dayton Daily News in its issue of December 7, stated that several hundred patrons of the Ideal theatre were unable to see the first episode, and it was necessary for Manager Rawson to arrange to bring back the first episode which was shown the following week together with the second episode.

Hundreds of other newspapers have proclaimed "Pearl of the Army" a bigger Pearl White success than the "Iron Claw."

First Art Drama Well Received

Coincident with the receipt by the various Art Dramas exchanges of their prints of "The Lash of Destiny," that company's first release, a number of congratulatory telegrams were sent to the executive offices in New York. Telegrams were received from R. O. Proctor, the general manager of the Art Dramas Service in Chicago; Charles M. Streimer, manager of the Modern Feature Photoplays, Inc., the New York exchange; Meyer Silverman, manager of the Liberty Film Renting Company, the Pittsburgh exchange; Harry Schwalbe, manager of the Electric Theatre Supply Co., the Philadelphia exchange; Edw. A. Golden, the manager of the Art Dramas Service of New England; A. W. Blankmeyer, manager of the Detroit branch of the Art Dramas exchange; Julian S. Jossey, manager of the Tri State exchange, the Northern Ohio branch; Ralph E. Pecham, manager of the Tri State exchange, the Southern Ohio and Kentucky branch; and Mark M. Leichter, manager of the De Luxe Lasky Corporation, the Art Dramas exchange of the Pacific coast expressing their praise of the production after the pre-release showing.

Australian Favorite Makes American Film Debut

A new actress to the American screen is seen in the person of Dorothy Cumming, in the Famous Players production of "Snow White," adapted from the stage play of the same name and featuring Marguerite Clark. Miss Cumming is seen as the wicked Queen, who, jealous of the beautiful Snow White tries in a multiplicity of ways to take her life.

Miss Cumming comes to the motion picture screen of this country fresh from unusual triumphs on the legitimate stage of Australia where she has appeared with great success for several years, playing the leading parts in some of the biggest attractions that have toured that continent.

Miss Cumming has had a most enviable record on the Australian stage appearing as Beauty with Hilda Spong in "Everywoman," as Desdemona with Walter Bentley in "Othello," and as Mrs. Ford in "The Merry Wives of Windsor," as Beatrice Dainton in "Passers By," written by Haddon Chambers, as Lady Margaret Staines in "The Awakening," also by Haddon Chambers and numerous other well remembered successes.

THE beautiful poem which appeared on this page last week concerning the correct spelling of Nance O'Neil's rear name has borne fruit. Terry Ramsaye has sent out a story to the effect that there is only one L in it, that there never was more than one L and that there never will be more than one L. You feel enlightened now, don't you? Sort of elevated so to speak.

"EVERYONE is always trying to kid me," remarked Universal Teddy as he received an order for a pair of gloves as a Christmas present from the National Board of Review. And Teddy's last name is Solomon.

LEON J. RUBENSTEIN, more generally known as Ruby, has compiled a glossary of press agent's terms and their meanings which we take great pleasure in presenting to our readers.

Masterpiece—Something in which the producer was disappointed, but it must be sold.

Tremendous Sensation—Rhode Island sold.

Emotional Climax—A dummy thrown off a bridge.

Scenic Extravaganza—Almost fifty two-dollar supers.

Colossal Cavalcade—Twenty horsemen riding in a circle, in and out of the scene.

Super-Sensational—Pretty fair.

Ultra-Spectacular—Any costume picture.

Crowning Achievement of the Screen—A film with a star.

Dramatic Thunderbolt—All but comedies or scenics.

Emotional Queen—A lady who works for less money and more advertising.

The Sterling Actor—Solid metal from the neck up.

The Triumph of the Age—Any production that cost more than calculated.

State Rights Going Fast—Ten weeks of advertising and not a bite.

Booking Like Wild-Fire—Canceled solid for four weeks.

The Idol of the Screen—An actor with long eye-lashes, a permanent wave and a good future behind him.

Absorbing Mystery—Losing the thread of the story.

Heartrending Tragedy—Most comedies.

Hilarious, Side-Splitting Comedy—Most dramas.

IN the more or less geometrical center of this page you see the likeness of Beatriz Michelena just commencing a day or so of good reading. When a pretty star like Beatriz sends us a picture such as this, it just has to be printed, even in the face of the ancient and time honored practice of the demon press agent who has pictures of his players taken reading every journal of the trade in the fond hope of getting them published. But Beatriz is an actress and not a press agent. There's the difference. Figure it out for yourself.

Beatriz Michelena Learning All About the Business

FLORENCE LAWRENCE inaugurated a house party at her home in Westwood, N. J., on December 23. Dancing parties, walking parties, skating parties and more skating parties were enjoyed by Miss Lawrence's several guests. On Christmas Day Howard Tinsley of Jacksonville acted as Santa Claus and handed out gifts to all those present. Emma R. Steiner, Charles Sewell, Florence Handy, Mrs. Marcel, Inez Marcel, Dr. and Mrs. F. W. Bradner and Margaret I. MacDonald were among the guests. As we go to press no further returns on the probable outcome of the party have arrived.

MAE MURRAY, Lasky star, was married to Jay O'Brien at the Hollywood studio of the company recently. O'Brien was not an actor, and there was no camera cranking on the scene. It was the real thing, real because "the players talked with deadly earnestness," adds the Lasky press writer. It's a serious thing, this getting married, so they tell us, but as for its being "deadly"—well perhaps the writer has had experience.

OVER a hundred and fifty employees of the Rialto theatre, New York, sat down to a holiday dinner with their wives and sweethearts, given by the Rialto Theatre Corporation last week. The tables were set up in the foyer and after a half hour's entertainment was given for the guests they partook of solid refreshment with liquid incidentals.

WE eagerly await the announcement of the second motion picture trade journal to be absorbed by The Trade Review.

EDITORIAL

The Fire Department of our great and beautiful city has been watching the tenants of the Godfrey Building with an eagle eye of late. Some summons were handed around which are calculated to lighten the pockets of many of our best citizens. As we remember it, the Godfrey Building was erected strictly as a film edifice, and those who took space therein were to have all conveniences, including the privilege of smoking in their offices at least. But the esteemed members of the Fire Department not only prohibit smoking in the projecting rooms and other places where film is close by, but go further into the matter and attempt to stop smoking in offices where there isn't a scrap of film in sight. All of which is rather peculiar. Of course, there are possibilities of a spark from a cigar or cigarette drifting from one floor to another to land in a reel of film, but lightning is liable to do the same thing if given a chance. This is not written in a fit of sour grapes, or anything like that, for they haven't caught us yet. But let us have smokes.

NEWSY REPORTS FROM ALL SECTIONS

Minneapolis Exhibitors Want "Snappy" Weather

There is such a thing as too good weather from the exhibitor's standpoint and Minneapolis is feeling keenly the effects of a prolonged summer. Just as the clothiers and drygoods merchants are having a hard time selling goods, the exhibitors are having trouble selling their seats. In Minneapolis the weather is a vital factor in the business. If the weather is perfect the people stay out of doors. When it is just cold enough to make long walks undesirable the theatres are packed and again when the sub-zero temperatures come the people stay home. Minneapolis has all the brands from 100 in the shade to many below zero and the people are as fitful as the weather. Exhibitors want about two inches of snow, 10 degrees above zero and clouds. This drives them into the theatres like sheep into a fold, the exhibitors say. There has been none of it so far, though it is long past due.

Willis Kent of Minneapolis, who was the first manager for the Bluebird Company, has arranged a tour of stars to the theatres of the Northwest and may widen the territory. He is now booking the stars for appearance in the theatres whose patrons know them. Marguerite Snow, Ormi Hawley, Mabel Trunnelle and others have been engaged and Mr. Kent is after others. Mr. Kent has opened offices at 154 West Lake street, Chicago.

Sunday Opening in Indianapolis Decided Favorably

The agitation over Sunday openings in Indianapolis has come to an end for the time being, according to a decision in the court of Justice Maholm handed down recently. A. C. Zaring, manager of the North Star theatre at Twenty-fifth street and Central avenue, was brought to trial for maintaining an open house on Sunday and violating the blue laws of the state made over sixty years ago. Stuart Coulter, deputy prosecutor, gave the picture man a hard fight, but after eleven minutes' deliberation the jury found Zaring not guilty. At this decision Coulter dismissed sixteen other cases pending on the same charge.

A strong point brought to the notice of the jury by Zaring's lawyers was the fact that a certain percentage of the profits of all Sunday picture shows in the state of Indiana went to a charitable fund. Twenty thousand dollars to $25,000 is said to have been realized for this fund since it was created.

"Patria" Is Shown in Atlanta

A private showing of "Patria," International, was given at the Georgian Terrace, Atlanta, Ga., last week before a large audience.

Business in Quaker City Takes Upward Turn

Long Runs Reported for "Crimson Stain" and Other Serials—New Quarters for Paramount

THE Paramount business handled by the Famous Players Exchange in Philadelphia is now double what it was last year at the same time. This exchange will soon move in the new Film Building being put up by C. S. Jarvis, which is nearly completed.

W. C. Smith, president of the exchange, is putting in many innovations in the new offices. Artistic mural decorations will be one of the attractive features.

The move will be effected early in the new year. The Jarvis Building is at 1219 to 1223 Vine street, one block from the present quarters occupied by Paramount. George Mann, Washington manager of Famous Players Exchange, paid a visit to Philadelphia recently, taking in the Mastbaum dinner while there.

The Consolidated Film Exchange, H. M. Smith, manager, has moved from 1126 to 1237 Vine. This exchange, while handling a few features, is principally interested in commercial films.

The Unicorn Exchange finds business on the "Billy West" comedies exceedingly good. Manager Steen is receiving daily, letters, telegrams and phone calls of inquiry about these; also the "Jimmie Dale" serial. Three reels of the latter had a private showing at the Family theatre, Market and Juniper, on a recent evening at 11:30 P. M. Many out-of-town exhibitors saw the film. Bookings were good. The "Billy West" subjects have also been shown privately at the Colonial in Atlantic City, N. J., at the Savoy in Wilkes-Barre and at the Regent in Scranton, Pa.

C. G. Powell, representing the Electric Theatre Supply Company, finds the "Yellow Menace" making a serial record in Philadelphia. Sixty-seven Quaker City houses are running it up to date.

The "Crimson Stain" is also making good. Out of nine theatres in Allentown, Pa., seven are running both serials. In Reading, Pa., seven houses are running these films.

The many friends made by J. A. Koerpel during his short stay as manager of the World Film Exchange in Philadelphia regret his transferrence to a new field of activity.

Mr. Koerpel will now make his headquarters in the Far West, where he will be engaged in special work for the World.

Edwin Meeker of the New York office of the World Corporation has become manager of the Philadelphia exchange.

Northwest League to Issue Passes for Use of Legislators

The Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation of the Northwest has taken a novel method of "having it out," with the state legislature which is soon to consider several bills affecting the motion picture industry. The corporation has printed cards which will be sent to every legislature. These cards will admit the legislators and one other to every theatre in the state, while the legislature is in session.

The issuing of the cards was voted as a means of letting every senator and representative know just what is going on. In former years statements have been made on the floor of the house and senate that were absurd. The cards will allow the members to speak from exact knowledge.

Each admission card will be accompanied by a letter asking the legislator to use it as often as he has the opportunity, to see all kinds of pictures in all kinds of theatres. If he finds a film that is objectionable from any reasonable standpoint he will be at liberty to use the fact against the industry.

The exhibitors are so confident that the films throughout the state are so clean that they have taken this stand. It was once the belief that legislators who opposed the liquor industry, naturally opposed theatres. That idea has long ago disappeared, and the motion picture is given as much credit in Minnesota as any single agency in getting the county option law. The high license bill, Sunday closing and censorship bills are the only ones so far proposed.

Three Los Angeles Producers May Locate in Jacksonville

Jacksonville, Fla., December 20.

Charles H. Weston, formerly connected with the Regent Photoplayers of Cleveland, Ohio, and a well known motion picture producer, both in the United States and England; G. Alfred Walker, business manager of the Juvenile Feature Films Company and president of the Motion Picture Exchange of Jacksonville; A. R. Robinson, a capitalist of Cleveland, and a number of Jacksonville business men, have secured a fifteen year lease on the Old Ostrich Farm at Jacksonville for the purpose of erecting five electric lighted indoor studios and three out door stages, two of which will be used by the Dominion Film Company of Vancouver, B. C., the remainder by the Juvenile Feature Films and Mr. Weston, with a dramatic company.

The Old Ostrich Farm contains forty-four acres of land, and was used by Mr. Weston several years ago for studio purposes. The land lies facing the St. Johns River, and is one of the most ideal places for this purpose in the city. Work on the stages has already begun and they will be ready for occupancy in two weeks. Mr. Walker was formerly connected with the Pathe company.

California May Have Censor Fight in January

THE California State Legislature will open its biennial session early in January and it is already being strongly hinted that the moving picture interests of the State will be compelled to fight at least three proposed laws decidedly detrimental to their welfare. Since censorship was officially abolished at San Francisco a few months ago those in favor of the censorship of motion pictures have been quietly formulating their plans for action along State-wide lines and have several measures already prepared, and every effort will be made to insure their passage.

According to present plans three bills will be introduced, one for State censorship, one for Sunday closing and the third setting an age limit, under which no child can attend motion picture entertainments unless accompanied by parent or guardian. The one for Sunday closing is being given the most attention at the present time and is the only one that is being publicly advocated. A number of labor organizations has been approached on this question and the support of several has already been secured. For instance, both the employing and journeymen barbers have gone on record as favoring a Sunday closing law and clerks in many lines of business have also enlisted their support.

The Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco is ready at a moment's notice to send a representative to Sacramento to assist in fighting any legislation along these lines and has been using its influence for months with members of the Legislature from San Francisco. The coming fight finds the distributors of film well organized, but the same cannot be said of the owners of motion pictures houses. The California State League is in existence in name only, no convention having been held during the past year. Judge A. P. Tugwell, of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, and nominally the president of the California State League, was a recent visitor in San Francisco, conferring with both film exchangemen and exhibitors and arranging for meetings calculated to create interest again in organized effort.

Washington Represented at North Carolina Convention

Tom Moore, president of the Moore Enterprises, representing a chain of theatres, including the Garden, Strand and Plaza, has returned to Washington from a business trip to New York. While there he made some important contracts for productions in his houses. He has returned with some new ideas in the presentation of motion pictures on an elaborate scale, which he will offer later in Washington.

At the recent North Carolina Exhibitors' Convention Washington was represented by several exchangemen, including F. Senning, manager of the Fox Film Corporation, and Sydney B. Lust, manager of the Selznick Productions.

Koppin Plays Santa Claus

Henry S. Koppin, president of the Woodward Theatre Company, operating a chain of five theatres in Detroit, Mich., remembered every employee, including the ushers, at holiday time with a five dollar gold piece.

Detroit Entertains Miss Young

Detroit entertained Clara Kimball Young over the Christmas holidays. Miss Young about a week ago wired to Harry I. Garsan, who controls the Young pictures for Michigan, that she would be glad to accept the invitation to go to Detroit to entertain the orphan and poor children of the city. She also wired Mr. Garson a check for $1,000 with which purchase presents, such as candy, games, toys, etc., for the kiddies. Miss Young and her secretary were met at the depot by Mr. and Mrs. Garson and escorted to the Hotel Statler. In the afternoon she personally appeared on the stage of the Broadway Strand theatre, where "The Foolish Virgin" had just started a two week engagement.

Christmas morning she acted the role of Santa Claus at the theatre. First came a motion picture show for the 1,200 kiddies who were brought to the theatre in municipal buses through the courtesy of the mayor. After the show, there was unfolded a huge Christmas tree filled to overflowing with presents. Each kid got something and went away happy.

F. I. L. M. Clubs Spreading Throughout Country

A meeting of the New York F. I. L. M. Club was held at offices of Hoy Reporting Service, 1482 Broadway last Tuesday evening. Reports were made, relating the formation of F. I. L. M. clubs in Buffalo, Albany and Pittsburgh.

Mr. Hoy, president of Hoy Reporting Service, announced that other large centres were preparing to organize clubs.

A report was made by the Transportation Committee, that all but a very few exhibitors were willing to pay expressage both ways, after January 1, 1917, which indicated that one common carrier would soon be selected.

The announcement that the Chicago F. I. L. M. Club would hold a National Convention was received with interest. All present agreed that Chicago deserved the honor of the first convention, owing to the fact that the F. I. L. M. idea was first introduced there.

Mr. Hoy introduced his new associate, Mr. John T. Cronin, who is to aid in the developing of F. I. L. M. clubs throughout the country. Mr. Cronin is at present serving his second term as mayor of Beacon, N. Y.

World Enters British Market

The World Film Corporation, under its recently adopted policy of extending its service, has just concluded arrangements with the Gaumont Company of London for the distribution of Brady-made picture plays throughout Great Britain.

Twenty advertising pages in the Cinema magazine have been used for the initial announcement.

The direct London headquarters for World-Brady pictures will be found in the premises on Water street formerly occupied by the Edison Company.

This is the first time the World Company has seriously considered the invasion of the foreign market, mainly on account of the greatly disturbed situation produced by the war.

But recent representations made to the World-Brady interests were to the effect that this very condition of disturbance had so influenced the European-made pictures themselves as to develop a market for material from this country.

Xmas Golden Eagles for Gold Eagle Employees

William Randolph Hearst and his International Film Service, Inc., have no monopoly on Golden Eagle releases. Following a custom long prevalent among successful organizations, the Burnet-Kuhn Advertising Company, 39 South LaSalle street, Chicago, distributed "golden eagles" among their employees as Christmas remembrances, each gold piece being accompanied by a letter of appreciation for services rendered and wishing each recipient a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year. Every one, from department heads down to office boys and stenographers, was remembered, and Santa Claus in his corporate guise was voted a royal good fellow.

The Burnet-Kuhn Advertising Company, during the year just past, has designed and placed advertising of a national character for George Kleine's motion picture novel, "Gloria's Romance," Pathe's "The Grip of Evil," the Chicago Tribune's German War Pictures, the Mutual Film Corporation's multiple reel features and the Mutual serials, "A Lass of the Lumberlands" and "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters."

The opening of 1917 finds the Burnet-Kuhn Advertising Company better equipped than ever before to care for an increasing volume of business, and undoubtedly the coming months will see the placing of even more distinctive copy by this live-wire Chicago concern.

McAlester, Okla., Puts Ban on Sunday Opening

The Mayor and Chief of Police have forbidden Sunday motion picture shows in McAlester, Okla., although no admission fee is charged.

The United States Circuit Court of Appeals has rendered an important decision which will effect the picketing of theatres and motion picture houses. The right of strikers to picket the establishment where they formerly were employed was upheld December 6 by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in a decision reversing the United States District Court, which had enjoined the Tri-City Central Trades Council of Madison, Ill., from picketing the American Steel Foundries. The lower court was reversed and directed to modify its decree of injunction.

The right to strike for higher wages and improved conditions of labor is too firmly established to necessitate further elucidation, the decision said. In the pursuit of a lawful purpose to secure a raise in wages picketing may be employed, as this court has held, to ascertain whom the late employer has persuaded or attempted to persuade to accept employment, and persuasion may be used to induce them to refuse or quit employment.

Undoubtedly, picketing and persuasion would interfere with the plaintiff's conduct of its business, but the lawfulness of the strike is not to be tested by such incidental effect of it.

The Sunday condition throughout the country is threatening. Exhibitors should unite to fight it.

Film Circles in Kansas City Active

Censorship Casts Its Blighting Shadow Over Exhibitors in Shape of Stringent Ordinance

AN ordinance is being prepared to provide the censor board in Kansas City with additional help, for use in case it decides to censor all films that go to Kansas City.

This step may not be taken; the head of the department, F. F. McClure, does not want to take it. But he said recently that there was no way out of it, unless the exchanges and the exhibitors would show stronger co-operation in his duties.

"The exchanges and exhibitors could help a lot if they would bring some pressure to bear on the few offenders," said Mr. McClure. "We have had very little trouble with the exchangemen who have shown a disposition to be fair, and to consider the problems that we have to face because of the ordinance as it exists.

"This surely would be a splendid time for the motion picture men to show some co-operation against the members of their industry who are muddying the waters. Certainly the way to get rid of censorship is not to get people worked up over the lack of it, as has been done in Kansas City."

Mr. McClure declared that most of the pictures that had been shown there were all right; and that his main criticism was against the advertising in lobbies and newspapers. He suggested that public sentiment could easily be turned in favor of the industry by concerted action of those who wish to build better—which favorable sentiment would be vastly preferable to the criticisms that are now heaped on the industry indiscriminately, when one factor in it is flooded with limelight.

The publicity department of the Universal Film and Supply Company at Kansas City, got out a Christmas card which was a little out of the ordinary. Instead of sending the conventional Christmas card to the exhibitors in the territory, a sixteen page booklet was used. The booklet was about three by three and a half inches. It contained a photograph of the heads of the departments in the Kansas City Universal exchange, and of the salesmen. In connection with the pictures was a characteristic saying of each one. The covers were decked out in Christmas style with a "Merry Christmas."

J. W. Hicks, Jr., manager of the General office at Kansas City, found his stock of pictures suitable to Christmas drawn upon heavily for the holiday season. But the exhibitors are hot after good features, and "Is Marriage Sacred?" has met with particularly good success. Within a few days of its release in Kansas City, it was booked in a dozen local theatres, and a large number in the country.

A showing of the new serial, featuring Bushman and Bayne will be given at the New Center theatre in Kansas City soon, and it will be released in that district on January 15. C. W. Hardin, manager of the Metro exchange at Kansas City, has returned from Chicago, where he had a conference with reference to the serial.

The new serial, "Patria," International, was shown to the Kansas City censors recently, and passed without a cut. Four feature pictures shown at the same time were equally well received.

"Civilization" is meeting an enthusiastic reception in Kansas City, with all the critics of the newspapers rather more lavish than usual, even on such a big production, in its praise. The opening was under fortunate conditions. Coming right at Christmas time, it was made the means of giving a large number of newsboys and poor children a treat, and this feature aided in the amount of space that was secured for the picture from the newspapers.

But the critics handled it, as they have handled one or two other big things in the picture line, rather as a notable event, a dramatic and theatrical climax, than as a mere incident in the course of amusement programs.

Incidentally, the showing of "Civilization" at the Grand theatre marks the return of that house, at least temporarily, to the ranks of the picture theatres.

Recent exhibitor visitors to Kansas City were J. Judge, Casino theatre, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; R. B. Christian, Orpheum theatre, Excelsior Springs, Mo.; H. O. Jones, Isis theatre, Roswell, Kansas; Charles Schnell, Harrisonville, Mo., Schnell theatre; Oscar Reinert, Elit theatre, Humbolt, Kansas; E. D. Shirley, Muse theatre, Omaha, Neb.; J. E. Foley, Ames, Iowa; Albert Kuchs, Empire theatre, Marysville, Mo.; Roy Weldon, Drexal, Mo.; C. D. Wineman, Empress, Webb City, Mo.; Mrs. J. C. Reinbold, Idle Hour, Augusta Kansas; J. F. Mullen, Electric, Falls City, Neb.; T. J. Warren, Hippodrome, Leavenworth, Kansas; J. S. Bussey, New Grand theatre, Pittsburgh, Kansas; D. Fillizola, theatrette, Fort Scott, Kansas; D. W. Tidd, superintendent, schools in Kansas, at State Normal, running pictures at the school; for benefit of students; W. Kaiser, Fourth street theatre, Moberly, Mo.; J. E. Hayes, Grand theatre, Brookfield, Kansas.

A recent visitor to Kansas City was Charles S. Stevenson, of the publicity department of the Laemmle Film Service, Des Moines. Mr. Stevenson visited a few of the exchanges in Kansas City, while recovering from an accident that brought him to his home there from Des Moines. Owing to his previous connection with MOTION PICTURE NEWS in Kansas City, Mr. Stevenson is well acquainted with many local film men.

The Electric theatre at Springfield, Mo., co-operated in an elaborate manner with the movements for providing the poor of the city with Christmas cheer. It not only allowed the use of its theatre for the presentation of amateur theatricals for a benefit, by the employees of a local dry goods store, but gave a very substantial part of the proceeds of this and other programs to the Christmas fund.

Some of the theatres in Springfield, Mo., seem to have got into a rut with respect to prize contests, that is hard to get out of. In the course of a month several have had contests, the latest being the giving away of a diamond ring by the Alhambra.

Many Alterations in Los Angeles Exchanges

Universal Takes Bigger Quarters — While "Film Row" Gains Many More New Tenants

THERE will be many changes with respect to locations of film exchanges in Los Angeles about January 1, due to the erection of a special building on Olive street. As previously stated in the NEWS, the California Universal will move to this new location at 822 South Olive street. The Metro will go from 738 South Olive to 820 South Olive, and the General Film Company, heretofore occupying the fourth floor of a Broadway building two blocks from Olive street, known as "Film Row," will take the room formerly the exchange of the Metro.

The Supreme Feature Film Company, handling state rights subjects, has left the Knickerbocker Building, at 643 South Olive, for a new location at 730 South Olive street. When these changes are made The Progressive Motion Picture Company, handling Paramount releases and the Peerless Film Company, booking state rights subjects, will be the only two exchanges off the "Row."

Manager W. J. Drummond and his assistant, Newton Levy of the Mutual exchange broke booking records for Los Angeles Broadway theatres when six houses of the nine on this thoroughfare were showing Mutual pictures, first run. Tally's Broadway had "Youth's Endearing Charms"; Chaplin's "The Rink" was on at the Garrick; the Helen Holmes serial, "A Lass of the Lumberland," made up one unit of the bill at Pantages Vaudeville; the Superba was showing "The Pearl of Paradise"; a program of short subjects was on at Clune's Comedy; and the Mutual Weekly formed a part of the program at Clune's Broadway.

Manager G. A. Atwood of the International Los Angeles exchange has excellent reports from theatres showing the feature, "The Jockey of Death." A. R. Vavaness of the Plaza at Phoenix, Ariz., according to a letter, turned hundreds away both days it was shown at his theatre. The film also played to big business at the Mason theatre, Anaheim.

All fifteen episodes of the International serial, "Patria," with Mrs. Vernon Castle, were booked and paid for in advance by Manager W. Marcus, of the Mission theatre, Santa Barbara, following the exhibitors' showing of the first four episodes by Exchange Manager G. H. Atwood. Each episode will run for four days at the Santa Barbara house. This is said to be the largest payment in advance received from an out of town exhibitor by a Los Angeles exchange.

That small city and suburban theatre managers are coming back to a program made up of short subjects is brought out by the increased business of the Los Angeles exchange of the General Film Company. An increase of twenty per cent. in the gross business is reported during the past five or six months, and such houses as the Plaza at San Deigo, Fairyland at Long Beach, Crown at Pasadena, Majestic at Riverside, Paris at Bakersfield and Lyric at Santa Ana have put in the regular program of this company as a steady diet for their patrons.

Salesman Jack Halstead is making a tour of Arizona for the All-Star Features and Selznick pictures.

Manager Irving Lesser of Los Angeles All-Star Feature Exchange is spending the holidays at San Francisco.

Sol Lesser, general manager of the All-Star Feature Distributors, is now the proud father of a baby daughter born December 1.

Graham Is Tri-State Manager

Bert M. Graham has been appointed manager at Detroit for the Tri-State Film Exchange, which controls the Michigan rights to all Art Drama productions. Mr. Graham was formerly with the Detroit Universal Film Company. At one time he was an exhibitor.

The Detroit exchange of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E has moved from the Peter Smith Building to 40-44 East Larned street, where temporary quarters have been established until the completion of the new film bulding on East Elizabeth street, which will be seven stories high and exclusively for film exchanges.

Frank H. Marshall has been appointed manager of the Detroit office of the International Film Service. He was formerly with Metro and K-E-S-E in Michigan. He states that it is the intention of the International to establish a regular exchange in Detroit about the middle of January, keeping on hand at least one print, and thus avoiding the necessity of getting shipments from Cleveland and Chicago as heretofore.

Howard A. Bauer, formerly in the motor car business, has been appointed Detroit manager for Artcraft, succeeding C. L. Peavey, who went to Minneapolis for Paramount.

Feldstein Opens Unity Branch

Harry Feldstein, formerly associated with the Vitagraph Company at their home office has arrived in Denver, and is opening an exchange for the Unity Sales Corporation of New York, which concern has taken over the United Film Service, Denver and Salt Lake offices. New quarters have been selected and the concern will soon have floor space equal to any other exchange in the city.

Meade Is Special Pathe Representative in Detroit

One of the surprises of the present week was the return to Detroit of Charles A. Meade, and the announcement of his appointment as a special representative of Pathe.

Mr. Meade states that he will remain in Detroit for several weeks, making his headquarters at the Pathe Exchange in order to become more closely identified with the Michigan territory than he has been able to with headquarters at Cleveland.

Starting as an exhibitor several years ago, after managing theatres in the West and South, Mr. Meade decided to devote his activities to the distributing end.

Beginning with the General Film Company at Kansas City, as a salesman, he soon realized the importance of an intimate knowledge of the inside workings of an exchange and to gain this experience he left the road and spent many weeks in various positions in the shipping, booking, bookkeeping and other departments.

Returning to the selling force, equipped as few salesmen have been, his rise was rapid. Later he handled the first large features released by the General, then the "Million Dollar Mystery" serial in Iowa and Nebraska, with signal success, and after completing the work of promotion, he became associated with the Mutual Film Corporation, where he remained until the organization of V-L-S-E, when he was chosen to establish the offices of that company at Dallas, Texas, covering the States of Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. He later opened the V-L-S-E offices in New Orleans, and managed the two exchanges until August of the present year, when he came North to take charge of the V-L S-E exchanges at Cleveland and Detroit, where he remained until the announcement of the present connection.

Zierler Hears from "U" Associates

Sam Zierler, of the Twenty-third street Universal exchange, New York, got a real Christmas surprise in the form of a diamond stick pin, delivered in person by his appreciative associates. Sam is known as a prince of good fellows, and took the occasion to show his idea of the Christmas spirit by setting up his friends to a long to be remembered "blow-out" at a nearby restaurant. Speeches were in evidence all around.

Johnson Is "V" Manager

J. R. Johnson is to be advanced to the position of manager of Vitagraph's Cleveland exchange. C. A. Meade, the present manager, is to go with Pathe as special representative, a new office. The changes became effective Saturday.

Important Announcement Soon from Unicorn

IT is announced by General Manager Fred B. Murphy and President Ike Schlank of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation that on or about January 15, the Unicorn concern will have an announcement to make of much interest to the film industry at large. The surprise which is in store for the managers of the twenty-eight Unicorn exchanges and for the showmen of the country consists, so far as is known, of a radical change in methods of distribution and also in the features which are to be distributed under the Unicorn's new policy.

Following the recent tour of President Schlank throughout the country, it was announced that new managers had been appointed in the Unicorn branches at Cincinnati and Buffalo.

F. L. Smith is in charge of the Cincinnati branch. He has been manager for General Film, and for the Mutual Company, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Frank H. Vine of the Buffalo exchange was formerly connected with the World Film Corporation at the Boston office of that concern, and was also manager for General in the same city.

Sherry Adopts Slide Christmas Greeting

William L. Sherry, President of the William L. Sherry Feature Film Company, distributors of Paramount Pictures in the State of New York, is issuing Christmas greetings to the Paramount users of New York State by means of a novel slide, wishing the patrons of the house as well as the exhibitor a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

This is Mr. Sherry's own idea. He wanted to reach the hundreds of thousands of people in the State who, from week to week, watch the Paramount releases in the leading theatres and he adopted this means as the quickest and best way of reaching them, not only getting direct to the people and also the manager, but supplying the latter with a slide which he would be sure to appreciate and one which would create a very delicate impression on his audience. The slide reads as follows and appears with the Sherry Feature Film Company's letter head at the top:

We wish to extend to you and the patrons of your theatre, on behalf of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, the Famous Players-Lasky Company, the Pallas-Morosco Company and ourselves, our best wishes for a very Merry Christmas and a Happy and Prosperous New Year, and sincerely hope that our future pictures will hold even more joy and happiness for you than they have in the past.

(Signed) WM. L. SHERRY,
WM. L. SHERRY, President.
Feature Film Co.

A letter also accompanied each slide and was addressed to the manager of the theatre.

Zapp Is Transferred to Chicago

Henry P. Zapp, formerly special traveling representative of the Pittsburgh Exchange, distributors of Paramount Pictures in that district, has been transferred to the Chicago office, and will devote his entire time to the Chicago city interests for Paramount.

Frank Cain, assistant shipper of the Paramount Pittsburgh Exchange, has resigned and has been succeeded by Jacob Hicks.

C. J. Kingsley, manager of Paramount's Pittsburgh Exchange, is making a tour through the State of Ohio, visiting all the Paramount exhibitors in that district. This is the first opportunity Mr. Kingsley has had to meet all Paramount exhibitors personally, as he has recently recovered from an illness.

Auger Goes to "V"

Mr. Auger, traveling supervisor of Mutual, has resigned to take up similar duties with the Vitagraph V-L-S-E. This resignation took effect on December 23. Also Mr. Beck, manager of the Twenty-third street branch of this corporation resigned on December 16, and M. F. Tobias, manager of Forty-sixth street branch resigned the same date. The Springfield branch of the Mutual has been closed beginning with December 23. This branch will take care of its affairs in future.

Nehls Reports Good Business

Ray Nehls, the new road man for the Denver office of the World Film Corporation has just returned from a most successful trip through the Black Hills district of South Dakota. Mr. Nehls reports that Colorado sunshine and balmy winter weather look especially good to him after his last trip.

Mutual Territory in Canada Divided in Two Parts

Rumor has it that the Mutual Film Company in Canada will be completely reorganized, and that the territory will be split into two parts, each under a general manager. This new arrangement follows the resignation of C. B. Price, who has been in complete charge there for some time.

Ethel Teare and Henry Murdoch as They Appear in Kalem's "Chicken Hunters"

Unity Establishes Exchange in Cleveland

Unity has added another link to its chain of exchanges, through the formation of the Unity Photoplays Company, with offices in the Columbia Building, Cleveland, Ohio. This exchange will handle all Unity features in the States of Ohio and Kentucky.

Harry Goldberg has been selected to manage the new exchange by the Unity officials, and under his leadership the business should develop well in that territory. Mr. Goldberg was formerly manager of the Atlanta branch for the World Film Company, and is an exchange man of many years' standing. Beginning with the new year, Unity will release at least one special feature a month, and the formation of the new Cleveland exchange was the result of carefully matured plans to be ready to efficiently handle these features in the Cleveland territory.

Beck Presented with Loving Cup

On Thursday, December 21, Arthur F. Beck, former manager of the Twenty-third street, New York, branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, was presented with a solid silver loving cup.

The following were present in the office of H. C. Hancock, successor to Mr. Beck at 71 West Twenty-third street: F. Goldfarb, A. J. Pincus, Murray F. Beier, C. H. Zerner, Jack Conlin, Walter Hopkins, Frank Pittman, Teddy Roosevelt, Lynn S. Card and T. Lyons.

Mr. Hancock made the presentation speech. Mr. Beck was so completely taken by surprise and deeply touched by the good will and best wishes for his future success in the film industry that he could not talk for a few moments, after which he reciprocated with similar wishes.

United in Memphis Issues Bi-monthly House Organ

The United Film Service, Memphis, Tenn., handling a variety of pictures on states right, issues bi-monthly a printed sheet concerning its activities. It is called "The Kaufman Times," and contains hints to exhibitors booking the company's pictures, news of the local trade and testimonials on the pictures.

The United Film Service handles "The Yellow Menace," "Cabiria," the Mutt and Jeff and the Hans und Fritz cartoon pictures among others.

Price Is on Vacation

Harry Price, who was in charge of the Bluebirds in the Western Provinces, has returned to Toronto and is taking a well-earned vacation while waiting for new arrangements to be made as far as the selling organization is concerned.

Lowry with Artcraft in Denver

Elmer J. Lowry, formerly associated with the Denver office of the Universal, in the publicity department, has accepted a position as traveling representative for the Artcraft Pictures Corporation and has already started on his first trip.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"Kick In"

(Astra-Pathe—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ENTER "Kick In," which is going to put the biggest kick yet in the Pathe program. It is a crook play adapted from Willard Mack's first notable stage success produced by A. H. Woods. Here at last can the hungry critic fully justify the use of the word "punch." It is all punch. Mr. Mack in his present day of feverish writing for the screen might look back on "Kick In" and take heed of the lesson he therein teaches himself in regard to the ways and means of plot-building. "Kick In" never stops moving; literally it is crammed full of the most exciting moments. When one goes another arrives.

The exhibitor may be apt to shy at the thought of a crook play. We don't blame him. They have been such aggravating things with their reformed criminals ever being unbalanced from their precarious positions on the straight and narrow by some hounding and merciless detective. "This guy is an ex-convict," says the detective to the foreman and straightway the poor ex-convict is discharged.

Only one of the surprises of "Kick In" comes when Chick's employer is told this over the 'phone. And then Chick turns to the commissioner and calmly announces that he told his boss that when he went to work for him. But the real strength of "Kick In" lies not in Chick's efforts to keep straight, but his challenge to the police to put him back in the "coop." They almost get him, to be sure, and up to the last few feet you wonder whether Mr. Happy Ending is coming. You haven't seen him in the distance and you begin to feel worried. But he arrives when the commissioner's telephone rings and he learns he's a father. And he wouldn't have Chick's baby grow up to be the son of a convict. No. And so Chick and his little wife, Molly, go free.

Working on a scenario furnished by Ouida Bergere, George Fitzmaurice produced the picture. His work is so well known as to defy more praise. The masterly way in which he has handled his scenes serves further to emphasize their strength. Realism there is aplenty. Nothing is false. Miss Bergere's scenario was equally worthy. The contrasts are admirable. The comedy introduced is genuine and flavors the dramatic action delightfully.

Chick Puts One Over on the Detective

William Courtenay makes a truly heroic and admirable figure of Chick, and plays with a deftness and surety that makes for conviction in every scene. Mollie King is a fine Molly. Robert Clugston as Benny, Chick's old pal, does some sterling work as does John Boyle as the hard old commissioner. Suzanne Willa and Richard Tabor do some excellent acting in parts of little less importance while the types chosen for the minor roles are quite perfect.

As for the story of "Kick In," suffice it to say that from the time Chick starts straight until he finally untangles himself from the mesh of his accusation of being allied with his old pal Benny, there is not a single dull moment. It will give offence to none, for in its entirety it is clean. Judging it on a hundred per cent. basis we would not puzzle long over a rating.

"The Iced Bullet"

(Triangle-Ince—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

C. GARDNER SULLIVAN, after conceiving a highly colored mystery story in "The Iced Bullet," evidently thought it too lurid to pass as altogether serious. So he attached a prologue and epilogue. When the picture opens William Desmond, disguised as an ambitious scenario writer, visits the Ince studio and clamors for admittance thereto. Eventually he has to climb over the wall. Once in, he succeeds in bothering Director Reginald Barker and no less a celebrity than C. Gardner himself. He wanders into Mr. Sullivan's sanctum sanctorum, carefully covers up a huge bust of William Hart and then sits down to read.

The story he reads is an excellent one of the mystery type. The suspense is carried straight through to the end. In a lonely hunting lodge, Richard Deering is strangely shot at. He hovers near death for several days while Horace Lee (Mr. Desmond again) goes about solving the mystery. He finally discovers that a contrivance was placed in the wall of Deering's room. It consists of a tank of water and a pistol. A string, tied to an end of the tank, is stretched taunt to the trigger. When the water freezes, the side of the tank is pushed out, the trigger is sprung and presto, the man is killed. Rather a far fetched piece of mechanism, but nevertheless no one would ever guess it. It was placed there by Donald Greene, the ward of Deering, who wanted to marry Evelyn the daughter. The old man objected because there was a streak of insanity in Donald's family.

The story told, we discover that Desmond has been asleep and not reading. He awakes to find the studio closed, and in making his exit he is discovered and pursued by the night watchman. Desmond scurries hither and yon all over the Ince lot, losing pieces of his precious manuscript the while. The last scene shows him streaking down the road. The scenes of the prologue and epilogue are vastly interesting in the side lights they throw on studio life, and they are humorous besides. So funny are they, that one wishes Mr. Sullivan would turn his hand to comedy oftener than he does.

"Whoso Taketh a Wife"

(Art Drama—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY F. G. SPENCER

HAD this picture borne the title "Whose Buyeth A Wife" it would have come very much nearer portraying the theme, for Elizabeth Ferris (Jean Sothern) is positively sold for one million dollars to retrieve her father's depleted fortune, and her mother reminds her of the financial services she will be enabled to render St. Nicholas nursery, in which she (the daughter) is so interested.

It's just the same old question of a marriage of convenience, and the husband, Ralph Dunham (Leo Delaney), who has always believed that every man and every woman can be bought, assures himself that he can compel the love which is not his when he marries.

A Plea for a Marriage of Love—Not Convenience

The film is adapted from J. Wesley Putnam's novel of the same name, which was written as an answer to Hall Caine's "The Woman Thou Gavest Me," refuting Caine's argument that a married woman has the right to "live her own life," regardless of the consequences.

There are several tense dramatic situations, in which Jean Sothern has grand opportunities for the display of her abilities, and she lets not one escape her. In the first place, although she accepts the dictum of her parents and marries the man she does not love—and there's no rival in the field, she is heart free, sincere and ardent in her charitable work—she assures him there can be no offspring.

With no love, then, on the one side relations naturally become more strained daily, and when finally Elizabeth does fall in love with Craig Clifton, a young lawyer, and her husband learns of it, he decides to leave home to afford her the grounds for divorce he knows she wants. Just at this stage Elizabeth confides to Rev. Thomas Cartwright, who has christened her, confirmed her and married her, that her marriage was a mockery and divorce was the only solution of the tangle. In a few kindly words he impresses upon her the sanctity of the marriage vows and of the home, and prevails upon her to start anew. She therefore meets her husband as he is about to depart for parts unknown, and makes known her desire to commence a married life of love and not one of convenience, and so a reunion is effected.

The church scene where Elizabeth, the bride, enters on the arm of her father, and the equestrian paths in the park are fine specimens of photography, and the several parts are all in capable hands. Others in the cast are Kirk Brown as Jack Leedy, William O'Neil as Craig Clifton, Ina Brooks as Margaret Ferris, and George Henry Trader as Stephen Ferris.

"The Americano"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE producers had a wonderful idea when they thought of putting Douglas Fairbanks in a tottering republic of South or Central America. Such a redoubtable hero as Doug has a fertile field there. He can fall in love with the president's daughter, rescue her father from jail, defeat the plans of the crafty war minister, do battle with half a dozen soldiers at once and come out of the melee just a little mussed. He can, and he does it all in "The Americano," which is as good a picture as the star ever had.

Many of his pictures have been just straight comedy. Take the last one, for instance, "The Matrimaniac." There was just a long chase, funny indeed, but rather circular in its movement. There was no suspense of any account. Here, however, the element of danger surrounds the dashing hero the minute he sets foot in the republic. He has to put very wicked villains to rout. And they don't want to be routed either. And so with all that conflict there is a world of suspense in the bargain. The combination is very seldom obtained.

Anita Loos and John Emerson worked on the scenario together. It shows intelligent work. While Miss Loos did not happen to strike as many humorous notes in her subtitles as usual, there are some really funny ones, and all of them are well written. Mr. Emerson selected most of his locations in the exposition grounds. Dressed up with a few properties and peopled with studio folk in picturesque costumes, they make ideal settings for the story.

Fairbanks brings his store of athletic stunts into play once again. When a high wall is shown and you see Fairbanks approaching, you know very well he is going over it, probably in one spring. It makes you marvel every time. He does other things in "The Americano." One of his feats is to jump from a high balcony to a tree not so conveniently near and slide down it. He makes his fights original to a degree. Not content with the usual method of getting a stranglehold on his opponent, he takes to using his feet and legs as hands and arms. And through it all runs his sunny disposition. Fairbanks never seriously frowns. One of his biggest assets lies in the lack of the frown, just as another lies in his smile.

His support in "The Americano" is headed by Alma Reubens as the president's daughter. The rest of the cast presents a number of good types and an equal number of good players.

"Fighting for Love"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is probably the best Red Feather release of the last half dozen weeks. It makes a worthy feature to inaugurate the Universal program for the coming year. In the houses wherein it will be booked it stands a great chance of sweeping the collective audiences off their feet for its thrills and romance are genuinely fine, highly imaginative, and while the action progresses with some hesitation in certain phases its character will doubtless be appreciated. Jack Mulhall has the most important role. His

is something of a Douglas Fairbanks part, and although Mulhall hasn't the wonderful personality of Fairbanks his performance is so sincere and so attractive in its simplicity and more brilliant moments that he will certainly captivate all those who watch him.

The action of the picture, which was written and directed by Raymond Wells, takes place in Bewaria and Sylvia or Saxonberg. They are mythical kingdoms, naturally. Mulhall is the cowboy from Arizona who arrives in the queen's kingdom at a critical moment and bands his cowboys together to defeat the forces of the reprobate king of the other principality. This he does with a good many thrills and when it is all over he claims the queen as his own and she condescends very gracefully.

Mr. Wells' direction is something to look upon with a deal of amazement. The neutralization of his mythical countries is assured. He has represented every nationality in the mob and fight scenes. The extras render something of a kaleidoscopic effect. Some of the scenes have been directed without much regard for realism, but they can be forgiven when the character of the production is considered. It is imaginary, so the scenes have a right to be. Some of Mr. Wells' subtitles attempt humor rather unsuccessfully, but in the face of it they are vastly better worded than the majority of inserts.

Ruth Stonehouse is featured as the queen and Noble Johnson has the part of an Indian, which he carries ever so successfully by reason of his appearance. The supporting cast from Fred Burns, the leader of the cowboys, to the most insignificant extra do highly acceptable work.

"On Dangerous Ground"

(Peerless-World—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS picture, the story written by Burton E. Stevenson, depicts the adventures of an American gentleman in Germany at the outbreak of the war. He has a high old time of it. A beautiful young lady suddenly bursts into his room, embraces him and calls him her dear husband. The American gentleman is rather stunned. What must he do but pose as the lady's husband so that she may be successful in delivering "the papers" at French headquarters. The road to French headquarters is something like the one to Dublin. Besides being rocky, it is lined and paved with adventure and romance, something of a long cut to love and happiness, but it gets there, too, as well as to headquarters.

A highly exciting story was Mr. Stevenson's, we hazard a guess. One might almost feel safe in predicting as successful a career for it and its companion pieces in the future as pictures of the "mythical kingdom" class, enjoyed by the public for a good many years. It is not a story to be taken in all seriousness, to be sure. There are plenty of chances for humor, and the author has taken advantage of them in this case. But the trouble with "On Dangerous Ground" is that Director Robert Thornby has added more comedy, and it is not the sort you laugh with but laugh at. One can excuse a German captain looking like a twin to one in a musical comedy. He will be the cause of much merriment. But the rest of the war stuff is misplaced and unintentional burlesque. And in passing neither have the players, stars or extras, been directed with average care. This fact seems to stand out from every scene.

Mr. Thornby's locations smack delightfully of our own New Jersey Palisades. The Hudson doesn't make a good substitute for the Rhine. Perhaps in other localities than New York these scenes will pass as realistic, but we think not. There is something strictly domestic about them which can hardly be effaced by unfamiliarity. The photography is poor in a good many scenes.

But, after all, there are Gail Kane and Carlyle Blackwell in the romantic principal parts. Their performances are sincere and sometimes show real ability. However, don't attempt to make your audience take "On Dangerous Ground" seriously. Bill it as a comedy and trust to the audiences' sense of humor to let the discrepancies slide.

"Pidgin Island"

(Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THIS picture has all kinds of talking points in its favor, for it is quite off the old lines and a refreshing change from the eternal love, sin, and be-forgiven stuff we have seen too much of lately.

Harold Lockwood and May Allison in "Pidgin Island" (Metro-Yorke)

The stories of Harold McGrath can be depended on to offer good material to build picture novels on, and Director Fred Balshofer has shown an aptness in getting genuine atmosphere into the telling of this one.

The main theme is built on the coincidence of John Cranford, a secret agent of the United States Customs service, uncovering a big smuggling plot that leads him to Pidgin Island, and "the girl," Diana Wynne, also joining the secret service and working on the same clue leading to the same spot.

The smugglers "Cran" is tracing are Diana's father and his confederates, and when he tells Diana he knows her father she suspects him of being in league with this gang. As a matter of fact she is trying to atone for her father's misdeeds by this service to the government. A curious conception, but not too strained to get by nicely, and when it all comes out that they can love one another, because they are both seeking to do good in the way they think right, it is a happy solution.

Harold Lockwood as John Cranford does some of the best work we have seen him do. He has a difficult character role in addition to the romantic lovemaking, at which he is letter perfect. The scenes throughout are beautiful beyond description, and when the plot calls for the girl to get wrecked in a storm, the director uses the roughness of breakers in mid-ocean surging over reefs to full advantage and a real thrill is registered.

Light comedy is interspersed very pleasingly, when a big wave, earlier in the story, washes the absorbed lovers and almost "cools the ardor" which such a material shock makes hard to maintain.

Scenes in Chinatown and the raiding of the saloon and opium joint are done in a way worthy of special notice, for there are enough police used to give real appearance of naturalness to the action, and human struggle registers more forcibly than the usual smashing of furniture and breaking up of everything in sight, which is the usually accepted manner of impressing such an event.

"The Last Sentence"

(Edison-K-E-S-E—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

"THE Last Sentence," a picturization of Maxwell Gray's story of that title, is genuine melodrama of the sort one need not feel ashamed to admit that he likes. It is well directed by Ben Turbett and has for its leads Miriam Nesbitt and Marc MacDermott. Grace Williams and Elaine Ivans also add to their reputations as film artists in this excellent picture.

"The Last Sentence" will particularly appeal to women because it is the women who do the things you remember best in the play. They are the "Mark Tapleys" who "come out strong under difficulties." There are plenty of good situations where contrast in strength and weakness keep the subject continuously engrossing. The whole picture just bubbles over with unusual incidents and there is a real surprise cleverly concealed all through a long trial where a young girl is tried for the murder of her infant.

The Sacred Promise Made

In this scene a father, because he lacks the courage to acknowledge her, sentences his daughter to death. The daughter, on the other hand, is led to the execution room, because she has given a sacred promise to her husband not to disclose their marriage until he says she may.

George Crosby meets Renee Kerouac on the shores of Brittany. While painting her portrait he arouses the jealousy of a poisonous looking peasant, Hoel Calloc, who attacks Renee viciously and forbids her to talk with Crosby. Sympathy rather than love for the girl causes Crosby to drift into marriage with her. He leaves her in Europe to be educated and promptly tries to forget her.

In time he hears of the birth of a daughter, and still later that his wife and baby have perished in a fire. Crosby marries Cynthia Ford. Renee surprises her husband with a visit, leaving her baby in a furnished room. Crosby denies that she is his wife. Her body is found in the snow outside his door. Hoping that his secret is safe, Crosby pays for the care of his little daughter, Georgette. When the child is four years old she strays away from her caretaker and is found by the wife of a barge captain.

Georgette appears again some years later as maid in a family where a pampered son has secretly married her. Mrs. Lewis, the young man's mother, to cure her son of the drink habit, sends him to the Maine woods. Val's last words to Georgette are to keep their secret.

George Crosby, now a judge, is called upon to try a young woman for the murder of her baby. Georgette is the woman, and during the trial the judge discovers her identity. Georgette is a splendid martyr in this strong scene. Mrs. Crosby gets a clue from Val's mother and wires to Val. Far away from newspapers, Val has not heard of his wife's trouble. He does some fine riding to get home in time to save the loyal little soul. Val's message, to say the baby is safe with him, arrives just as Georgette, with no idea of disobeying her husband, is led to the place of execution.

"The Last Sentence" will take well with all picture lovers. It is from first to last a good healthy story.

"Hearts Afire"

(Clara Kimball Young Re-Issue-World—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THIS picture under the name of "Hearts in Exile" has always been regarded as one of Clara Kimball Young's greatest successes. It was directed by James Young, from the story by John Oxenham and Owen Davis. Vernon Steele and Claude Fleming play opposite Miss Young as lover and husband in this very different kind of plot from the usual.

In brief, the story tells of the love of Hope Ivanovna, a Russian girl of great beauty, for Paul Pavloff, a young doctor of great skill and promise, but poor; and of her marriage to Serge Palma, good fellow and wealthy, in order that she might carry on her charities among the poor and destitute, to whom she is a living angel. In her charity work she enlists both Paul and Serge, and in befriending a poor Nihilist, Paul is caught in a raid and threatened with exile to Siberia.

Hope and Serge come to his aid, and the villainous Nicolai, head of the secret service, covets Hope for her beauty and sends both lover and husband to a living death. Paul, whose chance for escape is easiest, changes names with Serge, that he may escape and return to his wife. In fact, Serge attempts escape and is caught and shot. Paul, under the name of Serge, goes to Siberia and there is followed by Hope, who leaves Russia to elude Nicolai.

Explanations follow and Hope and Paul are forced to live under the same roof as supposed man and wife. Their hearts beat as one still, in spite of Hope's marriage ties, but are "hearts in exile" because of Hope's marriage vows. News of Serge's death reaches these two, who solemnly perform their own marriage rites and regard themselves as now man and wife, when Serge returns. A terrible situation faces these three, who however believe in one another, and attempt to escape together from Siberia. Paul and Hope escape, and Serge loses his life in defense of the little party.

This story is classic. The great scenes are the marriage by the Russian ceremony; the first realization of the awful wall between these two "hearts in exile," and the marriage by themselves under the laws of God without man or priest for a witness.

The new sub-titles, each expressing the thought of the scenes to follow, added very greatly to the enjoyment of the picture. We have not seen titles we liked nearly so well as these.

"The False Prophet"

(Kalem—Girl from 'Frisco Series—Two Parts)
REVIEWED BY F. G. SPENCER

HOW the ignorant love to be humbugged and how readily the cloak of religion lends itself to the purpose, is the theme amply dwelt upon in this, the twenty-second episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco." The self-styled Daniel II (Ronald Bradbury)

Scene from "The Girl from Frisco" (Kalem)

in flowing gown and grizzled beard appears in Santa Loma with three confederates and by announcing the coming of the end of the world on a specific date and urging, too successfully, that all believers divest themselves of their earthly belongings and follow him, accumulates unto himself a goodly number of shekels of silver. Ronald Bradbury really makes a good evangelist of the ranting order, and his schemes would doubtless not have miscarried had not Barbara Brent (Marin Sais) camped on his trail.

Her outspoken denunciation of the faker brings down the wrath of the "believers" upon her head, and when Daniel exhorts his followers to stone the unbelievers, they do so in vigorous fashion. Undaunted, however, she persuades John Wallace (True Boardman) and her father Ace Brent (Frank Jonasson) to take steps to expose the fraud. In the meantime Daniel and one of his assistants plans to "double cross" the other two of the evangelistic quartet and make a getaway with the money.

This would have succeeded too, but for the timely arrival from San Francisco of John Wallace, whither he had gone to secure advice and aid from the States' Attorney. It is on the day designated for the earth's revolutions to cease that Barbara springs her coup. Armed with a warrant for Daniel's arrest, he having forfeited a bond sometime previously, she makes a record-breaking auto trip, overtakes and boards the limited on which Daniel and his one partner are speeding away from the scenes of their most recent activities, has the train brought to a stop and at the point of a revolver forces the religious villains to detrain, where they are taken in charge by the Sheriff.

On the hilltop where the other two are still exhorting their followers to "give up," and incidentally wondering why Daniel does not appear to save the day, an automobile loaded with several men and one woman appears upon the scene. One of the men Daniel, is now informed by Barbara Brent that he is "in the lion's den." Consequently upon the exposure, Daniel & Co. narrowly escape being mobbed by the crowd they had so successfully duped.

The pictures are good, the theme, one that has not been overworked, and all the artists in "The Girl from 'Frisco" thoroughly maintain the enviable records they have made for themselves.

"The Man of Mystery"

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THIS is a truly remarkable picture, with E. H. Sothern and Charlotte Ives in the roles of husband and wife, and Vilda Varesi as the mother-in-law. The plot is a bit improbable, but not more so than many a "best seller" among novels, and our judgment is that this picture is in the big class, for several reasons.

Mr. Sothern's quiet but forceful portrayal of the dual role he is called upon to make real is all that could be asked. First he is a bent, deformed, prematurely aged old man whose wife loves his good character but not much else, and his mother-in-law makes life a literal hell at every turn by her domineering control.

Then comes the accident that furnishes the big idea of the plot. Scathingly rebuked by the older woman for presuming that her daughter could really love him, he is ready to commit suicide, and settles his affairs pending his decision what he will do, when he is caught in an eruption of Mount Vesuvius, and a miracle is wrought. The intense heat, and sulphur fumes, instead of causing his death, make him a new man, twenty years younger, and he is cured entirely of his deformity and his rheumatism.

Incognito he returns to his wife and wins her real love, at the same time uncovering a plot to betray Italy, his native country, hatched in his own home by the vicious mother-in-law. Then he admits his identity and love comes into his home in real earnest, with the villainess resting behind prison bars.

There will not in a long time be shown any better thrills than the eruption of Vesuvius and the seething flames and steam, lava, and other terrifying details. This is not overdone, and does not use the time-honored few barrels of tar or oil smoke. I believe this is as close as such a cataclysm of nature can be pictured, barring the falling flakes of fine lava dust which would give a yellow atmosphere, and could not well be photographed.

The character dual role is wonderfully handled by Mr. Sothern, and support, photography, and direction are Vitagraph's best.

"The Slave Market"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

PAULINE FREDERICK at her best. That is all one need to say to guarantee the box-office value of any picture. We have never seen Miss Frederick in a role where she appeared more attractive, or that gave her more opportunity to display her ability as an emotional actress. True, we have admired the delicacy with which she has been able to beautify some roles, in the past, which in other hands would appear entirely different, and she is not called upon in "The Slave Market" to display other than serious emotion and the distress of a good woman under most harrowing circumstances, so that perhaps we cannot say she is called upon here to do her greatest work, which is along the lines above noted. But she has a splendid role, and will more than please her friends and followers, who are legion. That the story is good to start with, and therefore Miss Frederick could not help making a fine production, will not be counted against Miss Frederick's glory.

Scene from "The Slave Market" (Famous Players-Paramount)

The theme of "The Slave Market" is a rough pirate bandit, who as he says, "masters woman, then demands her love." He masters her with the lash. Only this girl does not respond to the treatment, and the pirate is baffled and cannot gain his fiendish desire.

Thomas Meighan, as John Barton, soldier of fortune, but in the best meaning of this much abused expression, measures up to requirements opposite Miss Frederick. He learns of the pirate's buried treasure, and is on hand to ransom Ramona when she is to be auctioned off as a slave to the paramour of her pirate master, whose death leaves her at the mercy of the other woman.

The story allows some wonderfully attractive and forceful scenes to be pictured, for the glamour of the pirate crew sailing the Spanish main is fully brought out. As a Spanish beauty, Miss Frederick is a huge success. The picture was actually staged in Cuba, the land of nature's most lavish settings.

"The Little Yank"

(Triangle-Fine Arts—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

DOROTHY GISH as a pert little maid of ante-bellum days, clad in hoops and pantalets is indeed an attractive figure in this Fine Arts subject. Her admirers will find much to revel in her characterization of Sally Castleton, who contrary to all prejudice, indulges in a romance with a northern Captain despite antagonisms of principle. What matters the impossibility of the situation when little Sally, the battle halted for her special purpose, skips over from the northern lines to those of the south to nurse her wounded brother. When the soldiers of both armies stand up and cheer the charming girl you don't blame them at all. Perhaps though when Mose, the colored servant, persists in carrying messages back and forth from one side to another without interference you will be inclined to doubt the probability of the situation. The civil war is brought in as only secondary to the principals of the story. When they want it to stop it stops ever so conveniently, and when they say "Ready, get set," it goes on. If war were only fought with such consideration for individuals in these present days!

But after all, however improbable the temporary truces of the story, no one can deny the fascination of the romance so delightfully interwoven. Miss Gish rises to the requirements of her role sincerely and competently, and in the love making scenes makes the spectator feel it all the way through. In realism of production the picture abounds save for the rather strained facts already alluded to. The actual battle scenes are well pictured and the scenes are well chosen in every instance. The picture is an excellent box office attraction considering the star, and the topic that will entertain, if the audience be not too critical.

The story elaborates on the romance of Sally and her Captain Johnnie to a great extent. There is a northern villain, a personage that can probably be always found in Griffith's civil war pictures who manages to create a lot of trouble and a corresponding supply of suspense. In the end, of course, Captain Johnnie wins out, and has Sally for his own—lucky fellow, he is more to be envied and praised than the scenario writer.

Frank Bennett carries the role of Captain Johnnie and fairs rather below average. He seems to know he's a hero all the time. A. D. Sears is the northern villain, typically such from actions to looks. Hal Wilson has the role of the colored servant, Mose, while others are Robert Burns, Fred Turner, Kate Toncray and Alberta Lee. Roy Somerville wrote the scenario and George Siegmann produced the picture.

"The Island of Desire"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WILLIAM FOX'S enthusiasts will no doubt wax eloquent over this, the latest of his efforts which features George Walsh in a photoplay of many sensations. There is a volcano so skilfully manipulated by smoke and fire-pots that it looks very realistic. And afterwards the island so disturbed by the eruption sinks beneath the very waves rather surprisingly steadily for a perfectly real island, but it makes one marvel at the director's ingenuity. Mr. Walsh is an athletic addition to our ranks of long haired heroes. A superb physique is his and a manner entirely sincere. Why he was so weary of the barber before appearing in "The Island of Desire" is not altogether clear. He plays a literary man—a magazine editor to be precise. Perhaps such artists have long locks. But some of his scenes in which his lengthy coiffure is so pronounced are somewhat lessened in realism by this very fact. We think a hero must not be long haired to be romantic.

All of which is perhaps only a minor detail in the picture. As for action there is plenty of it from commencement to finale. No one can ever accuse Mr. Fox of being shy on this score. There are fights, there is the volcano, the sinking of the island, there are dance-hall scenes, shipboard scenes, fighting scenes—a wide variety of everything. Every scene with the exception of the one in which the volcano is engulfed by the briny waves, is vividly realistic. The characters are precisely drawn. The villains are vile, the hero is heroic, the heroine is fetching. There is a scene in which she swims minus the conventional bathing suit, which we feel obliged to mention in justice to her.

Bruce Chalmers is the magazine editor who goes to a South Sea island, and finds diamonds and a girl and puts to rout a scheming Chinaman and his partner in crime. He uses his fists many times, and in the end the two villains are destroyed and the lovers sail away to more peaceful climes. The story is credited to J. Allen Dunn, who as hinted at before, has put just about everything in his plot. Otis Turner saw to the direction.

Mr. Walsh appears most of the time stripped to the waist. He has muscles and shows them. Margaret Gibson is a pretty heroine, Herschel Mayall and William Buress are the villains. Anna Luther, William Clifford, Sam Searles, Hector Sarno, Marie McKeen, Willard Louis and Don, one of those intelligent dogs, complete the cast.

Making the Best of a Scanty Situation

"The Piper's Price"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A WELL treated domestic drama is "The Piper's Price," quite conventional when you get down to the bottom of things, but original on the surface, due to a few new twists. The eternal triangle is dealt with—two women and a man. There is the happy couple at the start, but the foolish husband has to go and fall in love with his first wife all over again, despite the divorce. There is something of an original situation. The story was written by Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, the scenario done by Ida May Park and the direction was in charge of Joseph De Grasse.

Ralph Hadley is thrown in with his divorced wife Jessica on various occasions when stocks, in which they are both interested, have to be attended to. Ralph's second wife, Amy, who is about to become a mother, hears through gossips that Ralph has become more than friendly with Jessica. She refuses to tell him of her secret, but when things go from bad to worse she goes to Jessica herself and pleads with her. Jessica's better self is aroused and to put an end to Ralph's attentions she marries an old admirer. At this Ralph is so broken up that he goes home intending to kill himself, but at the psychological moment the doctor interrupts and tells him he is a father. And then he sees the folly of his infatuation for Jessica and resolves to attempt to win back Amy's love.

Bruce Displays His Trophy

Dorothy Phillips, as Amy, gives an emotional performance, and manages to create a deal of sympathy for herself. Maud George is the relenting Jessica, William Stowell is Ralph while Lon Chaney has the only other part of importance.

"The Girl Philippa"

(Vitagraph Special—Eight Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE Girl Philippa," with Anita Stewart as the girl, was considered worthy enough to inaugurate the 1917 bill at the Rialto. The picturization of the Robert W. Chambers' novel is, indeed, a piece of work ranking with the best that Vitagraph has offered, while the musical setting provided it by Mr. Rothapfel did much to create additional thrills. "The Marseillaise" provoked applause. At times the manner in which "The Girl Philippa" unfolded seemed to point to Mr. Rothapfel again as the final editor of the picture, although as we never looked upon it elsewhere than in the Rialto this is only a hazard. Certain it is, though, that intelligent presentation never did so much toward putting a picture over, so to speak, as that which "The Girl Philippa" received at its premiere exhibition.

The Chambers' play abounds in intrigue, which is duly made clear through lengthy subtitles. Miss Stewart's is not a meaty part. She is alternately called upon to look soulful and kittenishly receives the love of her American artist. She does both these duties delightfully, particularly the latter, and we for one wish she had more to do. Director Rankin Drew has the opposite role. Mr. Chambers' American artist is never a real hero. In truth, he is more to be laughed at than applauded. He frowns on the pretty cabaret cashier, because he believes her of low birth, and then apologizes for his frowns when he discovers her to be a long-lost princess. Not very heroic-like is that.

The action of the story is laid largely in France just prior to the outbreak of the war. The cabaret cashier and the American artist besides indulging in their romance assist an English secret service agent to deliver his valuable papers to his country, all the while combatting the German agents, and the proprietor of the cabaret who plays on the side that offers the most money. The last reel brings in the war itself, and there are several battle scenes staged that set the thrills a-chasing. The battle of wits, fists and pistols—chiefly pistols—that wages between the agents of the English and the Germans comprises the body of the picture. There is a little too much of it when all is said and done, and there is too much shooting. And, by the way, no one else in the town seems to notice the shooting except the principals of the story.

On the whole, "The Girl Philippa" should make a good attraction. The combined drawing power of Miss Stewart and Mr. Chambers should work wonders on the box office. The supporting cast, headed by Frank Morgan as the Englishman, and Anders Randolph as the cabaret proprietor, does pleasing work.

"Redeeming Love"

(Morosco-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THIS is Kathlyn Williams' first appearance under the Paramount banner, and Thomas Holding's first appearance for Morosco, but both stars are too well known to make this an important point, except that the combination of these two stars in the leading roles is very satisfactory. The picture is a playing together of opposite types, the man of God and the woman of the world, who is redeemed, being in startling contrast as characters.

Whether the picture will be accepted as a big offering will depend entirely upon the character of audiences receiving it. The role of a minister of the gospel is always a difficult one to make perfectly natural in pictures, and one the sympathy with which will vary. That the audience will sympathize with the heroine, which role is capitally handled by Miss Williams, there can be no doubt. She is wronged, and rather than take the usual way of correcting her past error, according to story books, and bearing the woman's burden for wrong done, she takes the advice of a haggard derelict who warns her to live fast and accumulate money, for her beauty will soon fade. She accumulates money by her wits and beauty, and when she has framed the lover of her girlish days into leaving unguarded a hundred thousand dollar fund in his personal care, she repents, and uses her own ill-gotten wealth to replace the fund stolen by her confederates. This is the redeeming love, and she is washed of her sins by it.

The story is impressive, but except in the detail of the working out, is not new. There is hardly a really novel idea used, so that it depends entirely on the pleasing work of Miss Williams and Mr. Holding to get it over. It may or may not appeal to audiences, according to the class of patronage to which it is shown. The big theme, which of course can be used ten thousand times and not lose its effectiveness in story or picture, is the religious one. But the "best sellers" among novels are not those with religious theme, and we doubt if this picture will prove a box-office success.

LATE NEWS

National Association Reviews Past Achievements

Many Things of Importance Have Been Accomplished in the Four Months Since Its Organization—Parcel Post for Films Is Latest

IN the four months of its existence, the National Association of Motion Picture Industry has made a number of praiseworthy accomplishments. Its record, tabulated briefly, is as follows:

September 1, 1916. Organization perfected and offices opened in Times Building, New York.

September—Majority of members vote against any form of censorship and powerful interests which were formerly in favor of federal censorship join with complete whole-heartedness in the fight against any form of federal, state or local censorship.

September—A nation-wide railway strike threatening the distributor and exchange members agree to co-ordinated action looking to distribution of film by automobile. Had the strike occurred, the saving to the industry by this co-operation instead of individual companies running their own delivery systems would have been thousands of dollars.

October—Delegations from National Association meet President Wilson and Ex-Justice Hughes and receive from both unequivocal announcements of their stand against federal censorship.

October—Steps are taken to keep watch on censorship legislation in forty-eight state legislatures and in congress.

October—Candidates for Governor, legislatures and Congress are asked to state their views on censorship, and those who are against it are supported in local theatres throughout the country as a result of the activity of the National Association.

November—First Advisory Committee is organized in Chicago—organization also begun in California, Wisconsin and New England.

November—Committee on Childrens' Programs is appointed and folder issued embodying the recommendations of the individual companies.

November—Representatives of National Association attend meeting of New York State Federation of Womens' Clubs at Rochester, and prevent passage of resolution favoring censorship.

November—Plans are set under way to issue, early in 1917 at intervals of one month, five single reels of a Review of the great motion pictures of the past year. The subjects of the five reels to be "How the Great Stars Make Love," "Great Fights of Film Stars," "Funny Scenes with the Funny Stars," "Movie Stunts and Daredevil Feats," "Great Thrills from the Films."

November—Producers pass a resolution providing for a bureau of information to gather and distribute themselves confidential data regarding stars and other matters which will protect the industry against individual difficulties and aid to efficiency in all branches.

December—Committee on Fire Prevention Regulations and Insurance issues its first Fire Prevention Bulletin, containing ten rules to "prevent fires before they start."

December — Transportation Committee takes up complaints against express companies and finds traffic managers interested in working with a central body of the industry, and promising action on specific complaints, and radical changes in express procedure regarding films if this seems necessary.

December—Representatives of National Association of the Motion Picture Industry attend Safety First Convention in Baltimore and prevent passage of resolutions endorsing self-raising theatre seats and double systems of exit lights.

December—Gets under the load of the fight to save Sunday performances of motion pictures in New York State, assuming legal contest and if necessary the fight on the legislature to revise Sunday law.

December—Obtains, from Postmaster General, ruling opening the mails to motion picture film under the same conditions as Inter-state Commerce Commission imposes on express shipments.

L-Ko Announces Comedy Releases

The L-Ko Komedy Kompany will release on January 3: "On the Trail of a Lonesome Pill," with Phil Dunham in the lead, supported by Lucille Hutton and Vim Moore.

This release is followed by another two-reeler with Phil Dunham leading, assisted by Lucille Hutton, Myrtle Sterling and Charles Inslee, entitled "A Limburger Cyclone."

Other releases on the January program are "Heartsick at Sea," with Dan Russell playing the lead with Katherine Griffith and William Irving in the cast.

"Shot in the Excitement," with a cast consisting of Dan Russell in the lead, supported by Majorie Ray, Vim Moore, William Irving and E. Leserani, will follow. The next release is "Faking the Fakirs," with Phil Dunham, supported by Lucille Hutton, Myrtle Sterling and Vim Moore.

The L-Ko studios on the Coast are scenes of activity. J. C. Blystone, who is directing Alice Howell, is also supervising all other comedy companies working under the directions of Craig Hutchinson, J. Howe, R. Smith and Sammy Burns. The Ford-Cunard Company is busy putting the finishing touches on the final episodes of "The Purple Mask." Abe Stern and Louis Jacobs are handling the executive affairs of the company at the Coast studios, while Julius Stern, the president, is making his headquarters in New York.

Aid for Exhibitors is Planned by Paramount

Lasky Asks Theatres Taking Its Service to Make Known Their Service Needs

JESSE L. LASKY, vice-president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has issued a statement to all Paramount exhibitors through the exchange centers, calling upon them to make known their every want in the coming year. In reality a special service department has been organized for the purpose of handling the exhibitors' requisitions and suggestions, which will be in charge of Carl H. Pierce, special representative of Paramount.

Mary Miles Minter (American-Mutual)

As Mr. Pierce has recently been traveling through the country, visiting exhibitors, he is equipped with a full knowledge of their business. Communications relative to this new plan are to be addressed to Mr. Pierce at Paramount headquarters, 485 Fifth Avenue, New York City.

This increased exhibitor service is to consist of furnishing the applicant with every possible means of advertising his shows and suggestions as to the proper manner of presentation. To facilitate the move the Exhibitors Aid Department and the publicity and advertising departments in all of the Paramount exchanges will be enlarged, beginning with the new season.

Mr. Lasky in his letter urges the exhibitor to write in regarding Paramount pictures, to suggest, to praise or to criticise, so that the service department may fulfill its mission.

Rolfe Gives Some Figures on Film Cost

Metro Producer Sponsors Interesting Tables Showing How Hard Film Makers Have Been Hit by War Prices—"No Outlook for Reduction," He Says

"THERE seems to be no outlook for a reduction in cost of materials, declared B. A. Rolfe, one of the biggest producers for the Metro Pictures Corporation, in an interesting interview in which figures on increases were quoted that are without equal in the history of the motion picture industry.

"In every department and every branch of the business, the cost of production has advanced," said Mr. Rolfe. "Unquestionably this advance is a result of the great demand made upon the manufacturers because of the European war. Paints, chemicals and all gear and apparatus needed about the studio have steadily gone upward in price, and it seems that the present scale of prices has not yet reached its limit.

"From heads of departments in my studios, I have gathered some astonishing figures, which apply not only to the Rolfe studios but to every studio in the motion picture industry. Items that seem trivial in themselves mean, because of the vast amounts we use, an outlay of thousands and thousands of dollars more than was necessary two years ago.

"The high cost of living for the actors has compelled us to increase their salaries. Rentals of properties that are necessary in the making of a picture are higher. Food that we have to buy for our extra people, has advanced tremendously. Necessary compliance with recent building laws and labor laws have added materially to the cost of production. Chemicals that we must use are now costing prices that are almost prohibitive.

"Think of having to pay $5 a pound for material that cost 10 cents a pound two years ago! That is true of oxalic acid. Developer that we paid 90 cents a pound for in 1914 is now about $7.50 a pound and we have paid $9 a pound for it. Here is a table of figures that I have gathered. You can see what fancy climbing the prices have done."

Mr. Rolfe then showed the following table:

Material.	Price in 1914, Per Lb.	Present Price.
Hydroquinone developer	$.90	$7.50 to $9.00
Metol	4.50	75.00 to 100.00
Hyposulphite of Soda	.02¼	.05
Bromide of Potassium	.65	9.50
Magnesium Flash-light Powder	2.40	12.00
Chrome Alum	.30	.60
Oxalic Acid	.10	5.00

Ferro-Cyanide of Potassium has increased 300 per cent.

Aniline dyes, used for tinting have increased about 500 per cent.

Photographic printing paper has increased from 15 per cent. to 20 per cent.

Cameras have increased about 15 per cent.

Dry plates, on account of scarcity of Belgian glass have gone up 25 per cent.

"Those are just a few of the items that we have the data handy on," said Mr. Rolfe. "We use all the above in great bulk and you can readily see that the high cost of production is not a myth. Now look at the figures that come from the properties department."

Here Mr. Rolfe handed the interviewer the list which follows:

Material.	Cost in 1915.	Cost at Present.
Glue	$.20	$.50
Vermillion	.65	4.10
Golden Ochre	.05	.10
Green	.12	.22
Ultra-Marine Blue	.10	.25
Black	.08	.20
Whiting	.01	.02
Rose Pink	.12	.60
Putty	.01½	.03¾
Shellac	1.25 per gal.	2.25

"We use great quantities of paints and other material that is not shown on this list," continued Mr. Rolfe. "But I have just given you these figures so that it can be seen what we, in the producing of photo plays, are up against. All of my friends in the same line of business are burdened with the sale increases and these figures that I have quoted are figures on great quantities.

"It must stop somewhere and in all probability will—this price boosting—but we can see no promise of it now. I doubt, seriously, if any other industry has been harder hit than ours. We must have things and quickly when we need them. Consequently we can do nothing but pay, and we surely are paying."

Speaker Pays Compliment to Monmouth

At a meeting recently held at the Boston City Club, Boston, Mass., the speaker of the evening was Cranston Brenton. During the course of his talk before that body, he brought up the different phases of censorship as applied to motion pictures, and when requested as to what action the National Board of Censorship took in regard to pictures showing crime in any form, he described how the National Board eliminated criminal acts without injuring the continuity of the story of the photoplay.

He gave a concrete example (failing, however, to mention the name) of a certain sixteen serial or series wherein the hero is a millionaire, who commits criminal acts by stealing from the rich and turning it over to the poor, or to those who have been deprived of their rightful property; the rich in this instance being thieves themselves. He described the man as being a sort of Raffles, Arsene Lupin and Robin Hood combined, and stated that it was one of the greatest serials he had ever seen.

"The suspense," said Mr. Brenton, "was wonderfully worked up in each episode." He was of the further opinion that it was so cleverly executed in each episode, that he did not see any reason why any ordinary person would not be only too eager to see the following episodes as they were released.

While Mr. Brenton made no mention of the name of the serial, his description and the use of the phrase that it was a combination of Raffles, Arsene Lupin and Robin Hood, this being the slogan of the Monmouth Film Corporation, producers of "Jimmie Dale, Alias The Grey Seal," is proof conclusive that he meant none other than "Jimmie Dale," declares an official of Monmouth.

Alaskan Film Offered on State Rights

Smith Films, of 303 South Hill street, Los Angeles, report that considerable interest is being shown by buyers in "Alaskan Wonders in Motion," the five-reel feature which that organization is now offering on state rights. The picture met with a warm reception at the first showing in Los Angeles and has been unusually successful in securing big newspaper space.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR BUSY EXHIBITORS

General Film Service

"The House of Secrets." (Kalem. "Grant, Police Reporter," Series. One reel. Drama.)—A remarkably up-to-date picture is this, in that it deals with the submarine issues of today, and just "East of Noriches," supposedly off the Long Island Coast a submarine commander is notified by wireless to make a rapid landing for petrol, etc. Faithfully depicted are all the incidents surrounding the plot, down to the boat manned by six sailors leaving the undersea craft and heading for the supply base. And all might have gone well, but for the fact that the ubiquitous Grant, police reporter on the Chronicle, now on his vacation, which he is occupying in hunting, fires at a bird and so arouses the suspicion of four men on a motor truck bearing a mysterious load.

Taking his cue from their apparent discomfiture he decides to follow the trail and here again as in all preceding episodes of this remarkable series, events of a stirring nature follow each other in gatling-gun rapidity. First Grant is overpowered, then he overpowers the wireless operator and just to show his versatility he manipulates the telegraph key to get in touch with the Federal authorities. He then cuts a strand of the wireless apparatus and swings a fearful distance through air into the branches of a big tree and again gets on the trail of the violators of Uncle Sam's neutrality, who eventually are rounded up by a squad of soldiers.

If there is any feat too hazardous for George Larkin to undertake, the facile mind of Robert Welles Ritchie, the author of the Series, has so far failed to evolve it.

"The Fireman's Nemesis." (Kalem. "Hazards of Helen" Series. One reel. Drama. Sat., Jan. 13.)—A Sicilian vendetta reaches its crux at Lone Point, and but for the ready resources of Helen (Helen Gibson) the operator at Lone Point would have ended disastrously for many disinterested persons. The marked person, Joe Cordova (Richard Johnston), evinces every fear for his own safety when he realizes that his arch-enemy of Sicily, Scarlotta (George Routh), appears on the scene just as he (Cordova) has been appointed a fireman on the railroad, where he was formerly employed as an engine wiper. Cordova carries off his part in good manner, but of course all the honors of the film fall to Helen. Again she has recourse to her motorcycle to overtake a runaway engine on which Cordova has been bound after the engineer was thrown off. Helen switches the engine onto a siding and throws back the switch, just as the Limited thunders by. Scarlotta, who bound the youth, and opened wide the throttle, leaps from the engine to his death, so the Fireman's "Nemesis" did not prove to be his Nemesis after all.

It is, however, a worthy picture and as brimful of thrills and exciting incidents as one reel of a thousand feet can well be without overdoing it. Admirers of this series will find this episode quite up to the standard and one well worth seeing.

"The Golden Thought." (Selig. Two reels. Mon., Dec. 25.)—This latest Tom Mix Western has a weak plot, but one that makes possible the inimitable Mix riding and shooting specialties. These latter are spectacular enough to make most audiences forget the colorless episodes that intervene between the feats. Supporting Tom Mix are Victoria Forde. Sid Jordan, Pat Chrisman, Barney Furey and Lilly Clark. Tom Dayton, a deputy marshal, is ordered to round up a gang of desperadoes who have been terrorizing the county. This gang resents his efforts, and plan to murder him. They shoot at him through a window when he is watching a faro game, making it appear that the act was committed by Hammond, a wealthy mining man. By mistake the bullet kills one of the gang and not Tom. Hammond is tried and is about to be convicted, when Tom, by a ruse, obtains a confession from one of the gang. Hearing the result of the trial, the desperadoes flee, but Tom, after an exciting chase, overtakes and kills them. Then Tom asks Bess, a simpering faro dealeress, to be his wife.

Mutual Program

Mutual Weekly, No. 104. (Gaumont.)—Vivid war pictures punctuated with terse extracts from a soldier's letter are informing. A close view of some aviators shows that they have played out their part in the Great Adventure. The Atlantic Squadron shows President Wilson greeting the sailors. The oldest and the youngest Jackie is seen. A sham battle between the Army and the Navy is exciting. "Gifts to the Poor." Olive May Wilson, the girl Santa Claus, who has tied up many thousands of packages, is shown still tying and wrapping gifts. Charitable concerns are seen giving freely. A thirty-two feet letter box should stimulate letter writing in its neighborhood. "Skating in Boston" looks exhilarating and novel in a restaurant setting. Designs for the Edith Cavell statue show that great artists have competed for the honor of commemorating a noble woman. "Launching the Destroyer Shaw" is a patriotic scene and may always be sure of a warm welcome.

Tours Around the World, No. 9. (Gaumont.)—Rio de Janeiro, the capital of Brazil, is visited in this number. Its wide streets and electric light posts running down the middle look very modern. By far the handsomest building shown is the municipal theatre. Luchon, a little village in the Pyrenees, is prettily situated and makes a charming picture. An electric railroad is shown writhing its way to the peaks of the mountains. This trip revives pleasant recollections to the traveler and is satisfying to those who are too busy to travel or others looking forward to trips to the famous places shown.

Pathe Exchange

"Pathe News, No. 101." (Pathe. One reel. Top.)—Synopsis—A huge Christmas tree arrives to adorn Grant Park, Chicago, and a detachment of the National Guard escort the tree to the Park; Bethlehem Steel employes dynamite the side of a large mountain to obtain additional material; Princess Henry of Battenberg presents the Union Jack and Silver Shield to the first Newfoundland Regiment of Canadian troops; cross country race at Paris, France; the Allied Fleet arrives off the port of Athens, Vice-Admiral Du Fournet in personal charge, French flag raised on German merchantmen seized in the harbor of Piraeus Greece; blizzard strikes New York City; the using of all kinds of scrap metal to make munitions of war at Lebanon, Pa.; American soldiers and sailors participate in the opening of the Eighth Annual Convention of the Southern Commercial Congress and Motion Picture Exhibitors of the Michigan League gather for their semi-annual convention.

"Pathe News, No. 102." (Pathe. One reel. Top.)—This picture shows ex-Ambassador to Turkey, Henry M. Morgenthau, wishing godspeed to the Christmas boat on its leaving New York harbor; war manoeuvres with marines of the Pacific fleet at the Exposition grounds at San Diego, Cal.; Joie Ray covering the icy six-mile course in the competition of the Central Association of Harriers at Chicago in zero weather; a military guard of honor preceding the President of the Argentine Republic at Buenos Aires; scenes on the Russian front; the return of King Alphonso and his Queen to Madrid, Spain, after a long absence; an animated cartoon by H. M. Shields; presentation of a "fiery steed" to "Baby" Sayre, grandchild of President Wilson at Winchendon, Mass.; the launching of the U. S. destroyer Shaw at Mare Island, Cal.; the great demand for Wisconsin fox skins; the return of the Third Infantry Wisconsin National Guard from the Sunny South to "frost bitten" Fort Sheridan, Ill.

"Something New." (Florence Rose Fashions. Number Fourteen. Split Reel. Week of Jan. 14.)—This shows something entirely startling in hats. Convertible things. First they have a brim and look fine; then the brim is removed and they look great. Two hats in one! It can't be beaten. Also there are some boudoir caps that do just as well as sewing bags or something like that.

"Shadows of Shame." (Reissue. Week of Jan. 14.)—The sheriff of the country can't tolerate his ex-convict father in the least until the old man captures an escaped prisoner and saves the snob's life. This is something of a novelty owing to the absence of a love story. It is produced fairly well, while the leads are handled by Crane Wilbur and the late Francis Carlyle.

Universal Program

"Practice What You Preach." (Nestor. Mon., Jan. 1.)—Only a fair comedy considering the fact that it was made by the competent Nestor aggregation headed by Eddie Lyons and Edith Roberts. Perhaps the picture suffers from the enforced absence of Lee Moran. At any rate the trite quarrels of a matinee idol and his reasonably jealous wife don't make much laughter until the very final scene, when a good piece of comedy is sprung. T. Shelley Sutton is the author.

"An Old Soldier's Romance." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Jan. 2.)—A homely comedy-drama that might benefit if cut. An old veteran of the Civil War suddenly comes into a fortune and with his comrade he sets up in style on his estate. He's lonely though, and nothing will suffice until he has adopted a house full of babies. The authors, Arthur Maude and Constance Crawley, have gotten a good bit of humor and pathos from this story and as interpreted with William V. Mong and Harry Holden in the leading roles it makes an acceptable offering.

"Bombs and Banknotes." (Victor. Tues., Jan. 2.)—An amusing release in which all honors are carried away by Wallace Beery in the eccentric role of janitor for a bank. The picture is a burlesque on the melodramatic stuff in which the villainous creditor demands the daughter's hand, etc. Beery puts the entire thing over with some original gags and excellent business.

"On the Trail of the Lonesome Pill." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., Jan. 3.)—A radical departure in L-Ko's is this two-reel offering with Phil Dunham and Lucille Hutton in the principal parts. The body of the picture is a dream indulged in by Phil, who while under the influence of dope, sees himself as the hero in a Chinese harem (if they have such things), and as the rescuer of the charming little prisoner. The picture is notable for its excellent light effects and picturesque settings rather than its comedy, although Dunham is constantly on hand with his comical makeup and a number of unconventional tricks.

"The Red Stain." (Rex. Two reels. Thurs., Jan. 4.)—This is rather a crude and impossible melodrama that gets over simply by reason of its conventional lurid situations which follow one another in rapid succession. The father of a society bud wants to get some plans from a younger business rival and commissions the daughter to do it. On the verge of success, their plot is shattered by the interference of the other daughter, who really loves the man. Jack Nelson, Mollie Malone and Annette DeFoe have the leads in this picture, which is on the whole, rather poor from an artistic standpoint, but average from the box office point of view.

"The Moral Right." (Imp. Two reels. Fri., Jan. 5.)—A fairly convincing release of an immigrant girl who comes to America and misses her lover. She is forced into a life of immorality by an artist and when at last she meets her countryman and tells her story he feels justified in killing the artist. And the jury justifies him too. Francelia Billington and Douglas Gerrard have the leads in this subject, which was written by Harry Mann and produced by Gerrard.

"How to be Happy Though Married." (Victor. Fri., Jan. 5.)—An unusual little comedy of human interest pointing a moral to young husbands—admire your wife or someone else will. Millard Wilson, Jay Belasco and Agnes Vernon do such capable work in the leading parts that the story gets over very well indeed. A welcome addition to any program. Harvey Gates wrote it.

"Bloody Money." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Jan. 6.)—Something of a inexcusable western melodrama in which a bandit is glorified for no reason whatever. Harry Carey is the bandit and brings to the role the usual amount of western lawlessness so well flavored with romance that he manages to make his uncongenial role half-way sympathetic, at least. Louise Lovely is again all that her name implies, while others are Bill Gettinger, Jack Richardson and Vester Pegg or Perry.

"Love in Suspense." (Joker. Sat., Jan. 6.)—Rube comedy in which Gale Henry is rolled down a mountainside inside a trunk. Other familiar rustic characters with whiskers and bereft of teeth, slouch about in a series of misdirected efforts to create laughter. The plot is sacrificed to celluloid and capers throughout William Franey appears.

"The Whelp." (Imp. Sun., Jan. 7.)—A fair portion of suspense is gotten from this rather trite plot by Harvey Gates. A little girl is a crook against her will and one of the detectives is bent on arresting her while the other wants to reform her, and, of course, he succeeds. Edith Roberts, Millard Wilson and Malcolm Blevins have the principal roles.

"Liberty." (Universal Special, Number 20. Two reels. Week of Dec. 25.)—Liberty Horton, impersonated by Marie Walcamp is awarded the fifty thousand dollars for the death of Lopez, the Mexican outlaw, who for a long time had terroized the American border. A noteworthy scene in this picture is a sharp interview between Captain Rutledge and the Secretary of State. The captain urges relief for the Americans in Mexico. The reply to his pleading is several scenes showing commercial prosperity, men leaving their homes to go to war and a battlefield indicating that many do not return. The captain is also reminded that Americans have been warned to stay out of Mexico. There are lots of thrills and shooting galore in "Liberty," but the sombreros seem to make it quite in keeping with the time, the place and the characters.

"The Trials of Willie Winks." (Universal. Comedy cartoon; Educational, title not decided. Split reel.)—Synopsis: Willie Winks has an unfortunate experience with a goat and goes for his dog to chase the goat. The goat, however, chases the dog and Willie, therefore tries to escape from the scene, but he and his friend Sammie Johnsin are not quick enough and the goat plays havoc with them. Released Sunday, Jan. 7, 1917.

"Universal Screen Magazine." (Universal. One reel magazine.)—Synopsis: Issue No. 4 showed a new mail handling device by which mail bags are collected and delivered automatically, eight at a time on the fastest trains; modern methods of dealing with accidents to horses on our streets as employed by the New York S. P. C. A.; the method of making biscuits "just like mother used to make"; the Venus fly trap, whereby flies are lured by the sweet odor of deadly leaves, and finally a screen novelty in animated sculpture by Willie Hopkins called "Birds of a Feather."

"One Thousand Miles an Hour." (Nestor. Mon., Jan. 8.)—Burlesque melodrama presented with an average degree of humor. There are some automobile racing scenes that are startling as well as funny in their helter-skelter action. Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts are the principals. Bess Meredyth wrote the scenario.

"The Mystery of My Lady's Boudoir." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Jan. 9.)—Violet Mersereau has a congenial role in this picture. She appears as the maid of the house who likes finery to such a degree that she tries on her mistress' gowns on the sly. She has to admit a visitor on one of these occasions and there the romance starts. The mystery comes in when the maid is accused of stealing some jewels. There were some crooks that did this trick. An entirely agreeable picture is this with a good many of typical Mersereau moments. Johnnie Walker and Fred Hearn are among the support. Harry Dittmar wrote and Francis Grandon produced.

"A Gentleman of Nerve." (Victor. Tues., Jan. 9.)—If Carter De Haven has proved a box office asset he should pull in this one. It is typical De Haven comedy with the usual amount of grimaces from the star. There are also a number of risque little situations that fit in very well. Harry Wulze wrote the scenario.

"A Limburger Cyclone." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., Jan. 10.)—Phil Dunham, the company's latest star, performs some diverting antics in this release, such as chasing limburger around the floor and playing checkers with the bartender, using glasses of whiskey and gin as men. Dunham is the waiter and does some great work of his own particular kind. The business of the other players and some of the tricks inserted by the director go to form an excellent comedy. Lucille Hutton is in it too and looks very pretty.

"When Damon Fell for Pythias." (Joker. Two reels. Thurs., Jan. 11.)—Gale Henry, William Franey, Charles Conklin and the usual Joker cast appear in this highly amusing burlesque, containing many ludicrous situations, Damon eventually preferring prison to the company of Pythias after the latter had discovered him flirting with a "skinny Jane."

"The Whispered Name." (Rex. Two reels. Fri., Jan. 12.)—This picture was recently run as a feature story in one of the widely circulated national magazines, and in that form it was much more entertaining than as picturized. The spectator of average intelligence will be as much mystified by the various plot-capers unfolded before him, as the hero apparently is, when he becomes an innocent member of a gang distinguished by its peculiar taste in jewelry. At no time is the motivation clear, nor is one able to state wtih any degree of certainty that this is intended as drama or comedy.

"Honorably Discharged." (Imp. Fri., Jan. 12.)—A human interest picture dealing with the great affection of an army officer for his horse. After the man has left the army he comes upon the horse, now laboring before a shabby old truck. He is beaten by the driver and the officer, unable to bear the cruel sight, proceeds to beat up the beater. The court decides in favor of the officer. L. C. Shumway is the lead.

Metro

"He Wouldn't Wear Glasses." (Rolma. One reel. Dec. 25.)—Max Figman and Lolita Robertson make a reel of refined comedy out of the idea of a near-sighted man attending dances and taking his girl out in an auto, and mistaking another man's wife for his own beloved. It is all the girl's fault, of course, for she thinks he does not look nice in the glasses. And when he kisses the other man's wife as a climax, and is discovered simultaneously by his girl and by the wrathy husband, his girl jumps into the breach and defends him, explaining that it was all her fault. Amusing, but not excruciatingly hilarious.

"Their Matinees Idol." (Rolma. One reel.)—Ralph Hertz takes the role of "Edwin Garrick, Matinee Idol," in this rather amusing short comedy in which the advantage of being an actor is played up with several side-lights on the profession. Edwin finds himself hugging a lamp-post, and the young ladies of a fashionable boarding school take the "poor sick man" in charge. They conceal him in their room, where the scrublady finds him. He is her idol, too, and she comes to his rescue when he wants to escape by furnishing a disguise. There then follows some chase stuff and finally the big laugh, when the schoolma'am herself recognizes him and it is discovered that although she has lectured the girls on the wickedness of actors, Edwin is her idol, too, and so everything is fixed up.

Everything for Theatre, Exchange and Studio

IS THE SHOE ON THE WRONG FOOT?

NOT a voice from the dead, but merely one from the struggling—another appeal for the exhibitor. It's a good one, too—an expression which we believe is pent up in the minds of many a participant in the industry. Let the source of the income upon which the industry feasts have a chance, for if the source is dammed up, there is no use of that which it feeds striving for further sustenance:

MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York City.

GENTLEMEN:

I want to express to you my appreciation of your Holiday Number and the great amount of editorial matter, which should be gone over carefully by every picture theatre man in the country. We all know more or less about the various men with whom you had interviews, and have greater or less respect for their ideas as to open bookings and programs, but there were two interviews in the issue which I think should be emphasized.

FIRST in importance to the theatre man is the statement by Mr. S. L. Rothapfel—"I pounded this theory of individuality of the theatre as an institution, not as a mere show place of films." Here, to my mind, is the secret of the picture theatre.

The actual pictures should, and can, be the "best possible" either by open booking or program, providing the program is absolutely known to be of a good average, but the reputation the house must make is not on the trademark of the films shown, but on its comfort, appearance, courtesy, projection, taste of decoration, ventilation, music, etc. Make people say—"Go to the ——; you're sure to see a very good show, well put on, fine music, well ventilated house, most courteous ushers; in fact, the —— is the best house in town." The seating capacity of the house does not make any difference; if it is two hundred and fifty seats it can be just as well run, except on a smaller scale, as though it were two thousand seats.

In other words, appeal to the personal comforts of the people you cater to. Build up the theatre name as a trademark of excellency, so if you lose a given service or line of film your theatre will go right along, and you, because of your reputation, are none the less well off.

SECOND in importance to my mind is the interview of W. R. Rothacker, though this is more theory on my part than actual knowledge. We have lately seen in exchanges and theatres pictures which are said to be "brand new prints," yet they appear to be foggy and rainy. This was not the case formerly and is probably due to the war cutting off our chemical importations, yet, as Mr. Rothacker points out, during all this trouble the film producers are trying to beat the laboratories down in price till now inferior work is admitted. Is this fair to the exhibitor?

CAN he hope to draw the crowds when the story on the screen is blurred and faulty because of poor developing and printing? Is it fair to the stockholders of the film companies, thus driving patrons from the theatres which pay the rentals on the film? With prices of materials so high, how can the laboratory man turn out a high class product? He can't, unless the film producer will pay the increased cost of materials instead of trying to beat down the price.

IT seems to me that the producers are not aware that picture audiences are extremely critical of the photography of a picture. The spectator may not be exactly aware of the reason for his dissatisfaction, he may blame the projection or just complain in general that "pictures hurt his eyes," but in any event the producer must realize that poor laboratory work brings its penalty. Perhaps the picture producer who would not hesitate at the expenditure of many additional thousands of dollars in the studio to secure a desired effect, thinks it is good business to be able to bargain and shave a few hundreds off his laboratory bill.

TO my way of thinking, the extravagance is at the wrong end of the line. Let the producers cut down their production overhead, salaries, etc.; let them have less luxurious offices; let them co-operate with the exhibitors through their exchanges, where real men of business should always be employed, and let the real exhibitor be the man to put on the front and give the service, for he is the man who collects the money and makes the wheels go around. He is the foundation of the industry. If he can't make the people of his town pay the price to see the pictures, then the picture industry must shut down or find a new audience other than a critical public.

I hope this letter is not too long and I thank you for your willingness to publish outside ideas.

Very truly yours,

JOHN DOE.

THERE is no need of trying to make excuses for conditions—they just exist, and it is no wonder when we consider the rapidity with which the industry has grown. As history has proven, conditions of this general nature are gradually righted, though it may take a comparatively long time. We know that the small house is the backbone of the industry, but if it is not helped its strength will be broken. The strength of the picture is that it is an amusement or entertainment within the reach of all—average prices must be kept down.

THE theatre man must have the best quality of goods which can possibly be delivered to him at the price he can afford to pay, which naturally depends upon the age of the film and the size of the house. He must have a decent margin of profit over and above the cost of running a house to which the people desire to come. This means a working together and a closer contact between the theatre man and the producer, and not the old line squeeze method which ignores the welfare of other branches of the industry to which a given individual happens not to belong.

EQUIPMENT OPERATING

PROJECTION

By I. G. SHERMAN

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

An Ideal Operating Room

THE accompanying photograph shows the operating room of the Sun theatre, Fifteenth and Farnum streets, Omaha, Neb. It is one of the most up-to-date projection rooms in the Middle West. The equipment which consists of two Type S. Simplex machines, one Kliegel spotlight, one double dissolver, and two transverters: one a double arc 75 ampere machine, the other a 35 ampere double arc machine. The motion picture arcs are controlled by the American Auto-Arc, which was described in the department some time ago. The room has a perfect system of ventilation, and the projection on the Minusa screen is the pride of the proprietors and the envy of all other exhibitors and operators. The entire equipment was furnished by the Western Supply Company, and is in charge of Brothers Otto Hansen and Glen White, both members of Local 343 and who claim that they feel like "bugs in a rug." The management of the Sun theatre rests upon the shoulders of F. A. Van Husan, who has his own ideas as to how a modern motion picture theatre should be run and puts these ideas into practice.

The Edison Super-Kinetoscope

TO those of my readers who have written, saying that they had heard it rumored that the Edison Super-Kinetoscope was to be taken off the market, the following letter from Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Orange, N. J., is submitted:

"We have not as yet gone out of the projection business. In fact, we have had one of the improved Super-Kinetoscopes in operation at the Strand theatre in Orange, N. J., since last August, and the manager wouldn't part with it for twice the cost of it. In fact, he intends installing another one after the first of the year. All the machines in the Middle West are running as heretofore, and in most cases we have changed the mechanism to the later improvements and also arranged for high speed. We haven't attempted to do anything in New York lately, being content to satisfy ourselves that the improvements we have made on it will do all that we expect of it."

This will probably set at rest the unfounded rumors that the Edison Company was to discontinue the manufacture of projection machines, and there is no doubt but what the new year will bring forth a machine from this company that will satisfy even the most confirmed "speed demon," but their tribe is fast decreasing, I am happy to say. And manufacturers of projection machines are putting more effort into the making of a machine that can be run under any condition, by any type of operator. The machines of the future will cost a great deal more but the increase in cost will enable the manufacturer to use better material, higher class workmanship, if that is possible, and thus will the machine be worth the increased cost to the exhibitor.

Projection Editor Honored

Will J. Fallon, chief operator, Plaza Theatre, Sioux City, Ia., sends in a most interesting letter, parts of which follow: I think it is an honor to you when I tell you that Bro. Bateman has taken your "A. B. C. of the Motion Picture Operating Room" for his text and from what Brother Bateman says he is going to start on your first article and follow it right through. Believe me, I consider it an honor to have you and your valuable paper help our cause along.

Now, Brother Sherman, I don't want you to think that I am the originator of the idea and I am not one of the instructors, for I have found out that I don't know anything. Brother Bateman is the boy to whom all the credit is due. Now my real reason for writing you is this: I have seen so much in regards to punch marks in films that I thought possibly I could interest you in a little idea of mine that might help to eliminate these punch marks, and I think that by the co-operation of the operators in the different parts of the country working to the same end it would only be a short time when this practice would be stopped entirely.

Enclosed you will find what I call a "change over cuesheet," one of which I enclose in each show that I run when I ship it back to the exchange, I have received several letters from managers of exchanges endorsing my idea, as well as from operators who think it great. Hoping that you will give my idea the once over and let me know what you think of it, and wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Answer: The Brother Bateman referred to in the above, is the sponsor for a school of instruction among the members of the local, whereby the men are to be examined from time to time on the points wherein they are weak and so fit themselves to hold any position in any theatre, no matter what equipment is used. As Brother Bateman is a member of the City Examining Board he knows wherein the members are weak, and can help them over the rough spots. I do consider it an honor to have my poor efforts used for the instruction of the members, and will bend every effort toward making the "ABC" something that will be worthy of the honor did it and me.

The following is the change over cue sheet originated by Brother Fallon and used by himself and Carl Gilbert, relief operator of the Plaza theatre, Sioux City, Ia.

CUE SHEET FOR "DIPLOMATIC SERVICE"

Reel 1. Last Title—"At the Finley Harrison's reception tonight let's make a note of all the interesting people we meet. Invite them down for a week-end." Last Scene—Close up of two ladies, one Miss Bayne. (Change over.)

Reel 2. Last Title—"I am forced to make an unusual request, let my servant be the only one to enter my room." Last Scene—View of three men in room. (Change over.)

Reel 3. Last Scene—View of Miss Bayne, after scene showing Bushman going down hall and into room. (Change over.)

Reel 4. Last Scene—Close up view of two men (one Bushman). After they close door to switch box. (Change over.)

This is undoubtedly one of the best schemes we have yet seen, and if the operator would co-operate there would be a more artistic touch givn to the projection of multiple reel pictures. The manufacturers of film would do well to adopt this scheme of Brother Fallon's, and thus obviate the necessity for punch marks which are most annoying to an audience, and an abomination to the operator who is looking to secure the best results on his screen. Music cues are arranged for the orchestra leader at great expense, why not arrange at practically no expense such a cue sheet as Brother Fallon has originated, for the operator.

Another Solution Regarding Noisy Gears

C. V. Miles, Charlevoix, Michigan, writes: "It was with interest I read your answer to the query about noisy gears. I have had the same trouble as our brother and think that I have solved the trouble, but first let me tell you what I did. I bought first a new idler gear and my trouble was greater than before, then I got a new fly-wheel gear and finally the drive gear. The results were the same, only worse, if anything. I then commenced to wonder why and investigate. I took off the fly-wheel and found that the idler gear did not set up close to the drive gear at any time during the shifting of the framing lever and that when I turned the crank there was no "grind" at all. I then made up my mind that the castings on the framing device must be the cause. You will readily see that the wear on the castings and the tightening of the tension screws would tend to crowd the idler gear against the fly-wheel gear, thus causing the trouble. I loosened the screws that held the framing device to the frame, crowding the lower part of the casting to the front of the machine and set the screw tight, the upper part was shoved to the back and set tight. I then tried it out and found that the grind had almost disappeared. I don't mean to be impertinent, or to try and tell you about your own business, but thought that perhaps you had never gone into this particular part of the machine as I have. I am a manager and do quite a bit of my own operating. I take pride in my projection and keep in close touch with the projection departments of the various trade papers.

Answer: No, my brother, you have not bored me, neither do I think you impertinent. The Projection Department is here for the purpose of being a medium whereby operators and managers can set forth their views in regard to the different questions that crop up from time to time, and by this exchange of ideas help themselves as well as one another. We are all in a position to learn, none of us are so thoroughly up on all matters pertaining to projection that we cannot be helped by some one else, and that is why I am publishing your letter; in the hope that it will be of service to some other operator, and bring forth other ideas from other operators, and so give us all a common ground on which to meet—the Projection Department. You are to be commended for taking pride in your work, and in keeping in touch with topics pertaining to projection, as well as reading good books on electricity there is no doubt but what you will benefit greatly by it. Keep up the good work, and let us hear from you again.

Recent Minusa Screen Installations

THE Brown Amusement Company, Middlesboro, Kentucky, operating the "Brownie" theatre, which was described in the December 23rd issue of the NEWS on page 4068 as being a most successful theatre, has purchased a Minusa Gold Fibre screen. This theatre has the most modern and highest class of equipment to be found anywhere. The success of this house is no doubt due to the fact that they have always been thoroughly progressive in every way.

The Sun theatre, which is Omaha's latest and finest house, has also purchased a Minusa Gold Fibre screen from the Western Supply Company. This theatre too was described in the December 23rd issue of the NEWS on page 4070.

Address Supplied

R. W. Horner, Alpaugh, Cal., writes: "In your department I find you are asking the address of Preddy, who manufactures a condenser mount for the elimination of condenser breakage. I have received so much good from your columns that I am very glad indeed to be able to furnish you with this information. His address is as follows: Walter G. Preddy, 158 Eddy street, San Francisco, Cal. While I have never used his condenser mount, I have every reason to believe they will do what he claims for them, since they are highly recommended by operators with whom I am acquainted.

Answer: The above is submitted to my readers for their consideration. I am very glad that you have found the department of some value, and thank you for the interest you have taken in furnishing me with Mr. Preddy's address. All the reports that I have had on this condenser mount have been along the same lines, and I think it would be to the manufacturer's advantage to send a set of his mounts in to the department.

Leonard's Motor Grease O. K.

Leonard A. Ruess

LEONARD A. RUESS, the electrician whose experiments brought out a new motor grease to be used on small motors and fans, and whose photograph appears herewith, announces that the sales of his preparation have more than exceeded his expectations.

Since writing my previous article on this, which appeared in the December 23rd issue of the NEWS, I have submitted several samples to operators of my acquaintance, and they report that this new grease is everything the maker claims for it; in other words, Leonard's grease is O. K., and all predict a record breaking market for the product.

Another Good Suggestion

M. L. Sanders, operator, Empress Theatre, Sapulpa, Okla., writes: "While I am a constant reader of your section in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS, I have never had the pleasure of writing you before. I am lucky, we'll both have to admit, as I have never had any serious trouble with my equipment since being an operator. What few troubles I have had were little ones and I have fought them out myself. Now, my excuse for troubling you (no trouble at all.—Ed.) is only a suggestion for operators who are fighting the old dissolving effect when operating two arcs on a single arc D. C. machine (Transverter, Converter, or Rectifier). Just before striking the arc, take a pair of pliers and bite off the little tip formed on the lower carbon, then when the arc is struck the light will be almost perfect instantaneously, while on the other hand it would take from one to two minutes and sometimes longer to get the crater formed for a perfect and steady light. If the above interests you enough, you have my permission to use it in the columns of the department. In conclusion, would like to say that I introduced the Gelatine Typewriter slide in this city two years ago, and would have patented it but did not think it worth while. But I notice in an issue or two back where a lady has patented it.

Answer: "I am lucky." It is indeed a pleasure to receive a letter from an operator who as clearly sets forth his ideas as you have done, and I am passing your suggestion along for the benefit of the readers of the department who may wish to try it. However, there should not be any tip to bite off, if the arc was properly handled. This tip is formed by reason of the fact that too many operators burn a short arc, whereas, if the arc were longer and the carbons set with the upper a trifle behind the lower, there would be a perfect crater formation at all times and there would be no difficulty in getting a perfect light instantaneously. Nevertheless, the fact remains that in only a few cases is the arc properly handled, therefore, your suggestion should be of value to operators who are having this difficulty. Regarding the Gelatine slide, the old adage, "The early bird catches the worm," seems to fit your case exactly. Now, in conclusion let me say that if you deem it a "pleasure" to write me, the pleasure is mutual, so come again.

Operator Who Wants to Learn

H. G. Hibbard, Pony, Mont., writes: "Have been running a machine here for a short time, but would like to learn operating more fully. What is the best way to learn?"

Answer: Study, study and more study. The best way to learn operating would be for you to serve an apprenticeship under some competent operator, if that is practicable where you are, if not, then you would have to study such books on projection as are available, as well as electrical books, such as published by Theo. Audel, New York, thus gaining a theoretical knowledge which you could later put into practice, by making experiments in the operating room with the projection machine, if you could find an employer willing to let you do so. If you have sufficient determination, as your letter leads me to believe, you will undoubtedly overcome the seeming obstacles in your way, and become a worthy member of the craft.

Precision, the Dominant Factor in Motion Picture Machines

W. B. Wescott

The following speech was delivered at the meeting of the SOCIETY OF MOTION PICTURE ENGINEERS held at the Hotel Astor, New York City, October 2-3.

MR. CHAIRMAN—GENTLEMEN:

We, in this body, will undoubtedly spend much time and thought on standards, and it seems to me that a cursory survey of the most important of these standards would be pertinent at this time—especially in their relation to each other, and the allowable departure from the standard; that is, in the precision measure of the standard.

I think that you will agree that the final criterion of all motion picture standards is to be found in the Picture on the Screen. Hence, we may confine our efforts at standardization to those elements in which departures from a precise standard affect, directly or indirectly, our clear, steady picture on the screen. For instance, let us examine whether or not we shall consider for standardization the projector-magazine-reel spindle. Certainly; because after all the evils of spindles, such as being out of true, too small, etc., are lightly passed over, and if I am not mistaken there are those of us who have something definite to say about this same reel-bearing-spindle; there may be seen on the screen the effects of a wabbling, heavy reel—the vertical vibration of the picture may be due in part to this,—the lateral vibration due to damage to the film edge by the unsteady reel,—scratches due to ripping when toward the last of the reel, there are sudden and violent changes in an already high angular velocity. Therefore, this spindle is worthy of a standard and the list of vital parts to be standardized is a long one.

We will find as we go down the list of elements that function toward the final picture, that most of them should conform to some standard—that there is one shape, size, position, relation or speed which results in least action; that is, produces the desired effect with satisfactory precision at a minimum expense of energy, material, space or wear.

But we will find that the precision measure of the standards will vary probably from element to element. For instance, our taking lenses should have at full aperture as high a resolving power as possible, but not less than the lower limit of our standard; while with our present condenser systems a more highly corrected lens than the usual projection objective will not show a marked improvement in definition on the screen. Then, for our taking lens, the standard must have much narrower limits than those permissible for our standard of projection objective.

And again, it is obvious that in the matter of projection machine aperture we have much greater latitude than we have in, say, the intermittent mechanism which positions, at this aperture, the image to be projected. But inasmuch as these various standards will all come up for our consideration, each in its own good time, I need not enlarge further along this line.

Some of these standards will be found to be determined by custom, economy, or any of the many obvious considerations, while others will not be matters of choice at all, but will be derived from other standards.

Those standards which are matters of choice may be anything you please; such as three sprocket holes to the picture if you wish, and think you can make the innovation attractive to the majority. This is purely a matter of expediency. But the precision limits of these sprocket holes is not a matter of choice. Their size, shape and position in relation of the dividing line—choice again, but not the amount of vibration in the size, shape or position.

The variations in size may have a certain precision limit along one axis, and a precision limit of a whole order higher along the other—the length of the sprocket hole might vary by as much as plus or minus 1/1,000th of an inch; while plus or minus variation of 1/10,000th of an inch in the width of the sprocket hole might produce a disturbing effect on the screen. And then again there are important and involved relationships which will prove to be of more moment in the determination of precision limits. For instance, take the case of a mechanic's scale as a standard of linear measure, and even though it has suffered abuse it is still good enough as a standard with which to measure, say, a few lengths of gas pipe—a low order of precision is perfectly satisfactory here; but if this same scale were to be used to measure the change in length of a short piece of film, with the change in grains of water per cubic foot of air, then it would be necessary to know at what temperature the scale was standard; and if used at any other temperature, its coefficient expansion, that corrections could be made to compensate for the scale's departure from standard. It is important that this involved relationship should be borne in mind when considering the precision limits of standards.

But who, then, is to determine these important precision limits and how? I do not mean the standards—some are still matters of choice—others are irrevocably fixed by custom, while still others will be found to be fixed by the requirements of their precision limits.

Gentlemen, there is one standard of transcendental importance, and when we have once defined it then any of us can satisfy himself as to the precision limits of any other standard suggested, by the mere expedient of performing a few simple sums in arithmetic. But until this supreme standard is defined, no concordant precision relationship between such standards as there may be can be hoped for.

Take the matter of projection speed—in any terms you like, such as pictures per second, feet per minute—intermittent R. P. M. —they may all be converted into the number of phase pictures presented to the eye in unit time. If there is no phase difference, that is, no motion of the object photographed, then so far as the spectator is concerned, the projection speed may be zero, for he sees a still, anyway.

A standard of projection speed, it is perfectly obvious, must depend, in general, on the average angular speed by the lens of subjects photographed; and this angular speed by the lens will depend on the length of exposure and on the standard of definition—circle of confusion—which, like the house that Jack built, will depend on one of the limits of our supreme standard—The Picture on the Screen.

Set a standard for the picture on the screen, and the precision limits of all your important standards are determined.

For some of the defining terms of our standard picture on the screen it would seem necessary to consult individual opinion, but fortunately, for a few only.

From an extended statistical study it may be possible to ascertain to the satisfaction of the majority, the most important factor of all. The position of the standard spectator in relation to the screen. And our standard picture on the screen must be defined for the satisfaction of our standard spectator. For instance, it is more important that we know the angle subtended by the picture at the eye of the standard spectator than that we know the size of the picture in feet, or even in projection aperture diameters, or the angle subtended by the picture at the projection objective; for whether or not lack of precision anywhere in the system will be apparent—not on the screen—but to the standard spectator, will depend in the main on the angle of the spectator's view subtended by the picture on the screen. A moment's consideration will show that the same limits hold whatever the spectator's angular view of the screen picture is the same. This is to say that the same percentage change will produce the same effect where the picture is small and the spectator near, or the picture large and the spectator at a distance, so long as the picture occupies the same fraction of the spectator's field of view. And this will hold for any factor when the other factors are a constant.

Therefore, in order to build up a system of standards for the Motion Picture industry which shall be concordant, we must define and limit our standards, however they may be determined, in terms of precision measure—a percentage allowable variation. And to determine this all-important precision measure for any standard, we must refer to the picture on the screen as viewed by a standard spectator.

Only One Union

CLARENCE L. TOWER, secretary of the Moving Picture Operators' Union, Knights of Labor, Inc., Boston, Mass., sends in the following letter regarding an article which appeared in the department in the August 19 issue. Here is the letter:

MANAGING EDITOR MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
729 SEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK:

DEAR SIR.—Several of the members of the above-named organization have called my attention to an item appearing in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, under date of August 19, 1916, in the Projection Department.

The item referred to is a statement of Harry S. E Richards, Boston, Mass., which reads as follows: "There are a few operators here who call themselves the Knights of Labor; they are connected with a school that teaches for an operators' license with an old out-of-date Edison machine. Is there a recognized operators' union throughout the United States?"

Also beg to call your attention to the editor's note, which reads as follows: "The organization you mention is not a recognized operators' union."

For the information of MOTION PICTURE NEWS I wish to state that there is an organization of Moving Picture Operators in the City of Boston connected with the Knights of Labor and is known as Local Assembly, No. 3030, organized December 28, 1913.

Beg to advise further that they are not connected in any way with any school, and do no teaching for any purpose, as the organization will not take any one for membership who has not had actual training as an operator and can furnish the best of references as to ability and character.

Enclosed please find clipping from Boston Herald under date of October 18, 1916, which should prove to you the existence of the organization referred to.

Members of the above-mentioned organization feel that an injustice has been done them through the publication of Mr. Richards' statement.

We are therefore making request that you have published at an early date a statement to cover the facts as stated in this letter.

Hoping you will take this matter under early consideration, I am,

Respectfully yours,
CLARENCE L. TOWER, Secretary.

The editor of this department has nothing to apologize for. The question of Mr. Richards was answered in the only way possible, and even though the operators or, I should say, members of this so-called "operators' union" feel peeved. They are not recognized as a "union" throughout the United States. Boston is only a very small part of these United States, and even though this organization flourishes or exists there it can hardly claim that it is an international organization. And I repeat: The only recognized operators' union in the United States is the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Operators of the United States and Canada, of which Charles C. Shay is president, and whose general offices are located at 107 West Forty-sixth street, New York. The clipping referred to in the above letter, which is reproduced exactly as it was written, relates that Judge Jenny issued a restraining order enjoining William C. Francke and other officers and members of Local 182, I. A. T. S. E., from displaying banners, etc., declaring that certain houses were "unfair" which refused to employ members of the union, Local 182, which is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, and is the only organization entitled to be called an operators' union.

The members of the local assembly, No. 3030, should get together and affiliate with local No. 182, unless there should be some reason whereby they are not eligible for membership in a real union.

Annual Ball of Local 306

Local 306, I. A. T. S. E. & M. P. M. O. of Greater New York, the progressive Motion Picture Operators' Union, have completed their arrangements for the fourth annual ball and reception, to be given by that organization on Sunday evening, January 14, at the Central Opera House, 205-23 East Sixty-seventh street.

The Urban-Joy Process of Color Cinematography

OF all the facts revealed by a historical survey of natural color cinematography, the most remarkable perhaps is that up to the present time but one process of photographing and projecting motion pictures in Nature's hues has ever arrived at the stage of commercial possibility and been utilized in theatres as an entertainment feature.

We refer, of course, to the Kinemacolor process and in mentioning this universally known system of color cinematography the name of Mr. Charles Urban instantly comes to mind. He it was who sponsored and encouraged the experiments of that talented scientist, G. Albert Smith, which resulted in the first practicable and readily reproducible cinematographic results in natural colors.

It is not our purpose to enlarge upon the Kinemacolor system here; that has been fully dealt with in our former articles "Color Cinematography" (Camera Department, November 4th, 1916—Pages 2887 and 2894; November 11—Page 3047), but it is interesting to note that Mr. Urban, the father of the Kinemacolor process, has introduced still another process of color cinematography, the principles and performance of which we shall consider in this article.

As all readers of the Camera Department must be aware, our hobby is natural color cinematography. We are ever keen to see a new process demonstrated and have witnessed many an interesting trial exhibition.

But of all the photographic (or cinematographic) color feasts which we ever attended, none will remain longer in our memory than the demonstration given by Charles Urban and his associates at Wurlitzer Hall, New York City, on the evening of November 16, 1916. There we were shown—not a few thousand feet of imperfect laboratory tests and experimental samples—but a lengthy, artistic and instructive program of "Colorfilms" studiously selected to show the applicability of the Urban-Joy color process to every branch of cinematographic work.

In the course of this article we will set forth the characteristics and qualities of the results shown, but our chief concern is the methods by which the inventor of the process, Mr. Henry W. Joy, has improved upon some existing practices, and the means by which his highly effective results are attained.

The Urban-Joy color process is frankly a modification of Kinemacolor, and in his experiments Mr. Joy has endeavored to eliminate the alternate red and green color fringes which always accompany rapid movements in Kinemacolor subjects, and also to minimize the eye fatigue incident to viewing screen images of vivid and rapidly alternating color. Since a marked improvement along these lines is evident in the results under consideration, it will prove interesting to consider the methods and mechanisms by which Mr. Joy has secured these effects. As will shortly be apparent, up-to-date mechanical principles and a studious regard for the scientific aspects of additive color synthesis are the principal factors utilized.

It is generally known that when using the customary Kinemacolor camera, red and green sensation negative images are recorded in alternate succession upon the film strip through red-orange and blue-green color filters, the downward travel of the film between exposures being masked by a revolving shutter having an opaque section equal to approximately half its area (or circumference). This extensive shutter area is necessary by reason of the fact that an intermittent of the claw type is employed. It will also be recalled that the rotary color filter of a Kinemacolor projector contains red and green gelatine segments of equal area, a neutral white screen illumination being secured by the adjustment of an extra piece of green gelatine over the green filter element.

Mr. Joy's method of improving the customary Kinemacolor results may be briefly summed up as follows:

Each pair of color sensation images (a red and a green) is termed a "color cycle" or group. It is proposed to photograph each group of sensation images with as short a space of time as possible between the two exposures—but it is further proposed to allow as long an interval as possible to elapse before the exposure of the first image of the next color group commences.

According to the Joy patent (U. S. Patent No. 1,202,724), this is accomplished as follows:

The taking camera is provided with a Maltese cross (star and cam) intermittent having a frequency of 8 to 1. The use of this type of intermittent movement in cameras for color cinematography was recommended in our previous article on the subject (Camera Department—November 18, 1916—Page 3202), and its value for such work will be readily apparent. By the use of an 8 to 1 intermittent, it is possible to reduce the opaque area of the shutter necessary to cover the travel of the film between exposures to one-eighth of the shutter's circumference, or 45 degrees, as is shown by A, Fig. 1. It is to be borne in mind that this combined camera shutter and filter (Fig. 1) only makes one complete revolution for each two images photographed.

Fig. 1.

The red-orange and blue-green taking filters indicated by R. O. and B. G., respectively, in Fig. 1 are each seen to occupy an area of 90 degrees, or one-fourth of the circle, and are capable of giving ample exposure to their respective sensation images by reason of the increased efficiency of the 8 to 1 Maltese cross movement over that of the claw type intermittent. After exposure through the red-orange filter, R. O. comes a quick shift of the film covered by the shutter A (Fig. 1), then an exposure through the blue-green filter B. G., and a complete "color cycle" has been recorded with a very short interval between its component images, and consequently very little difference in the relative positions of any moving objects in the two images.

Since it is desired after photographing the two images of each color cycle to allow as long an interval as possible before the commencement of the first exposure of the succeeding color cycle, the entire remainder of the shutter disc (amounting to 135 degrees) is an opaque segment, whereas it would only require a 45 degree segment (one-eighth of the circumference) to obscure the film during the action of the intermittent. By the use of this shutter segment of 135-degree extent the change from the last exposure of one color group (2 images) to the first exposure of the ensuing group is overmasked. This procedure contributes to the improvement in the projected results, for Mr. Joy has found that differences in color (as exemplified by color fringing) are more readily detected by the eye than are differences in movement when viewing pictures projectd alternately through filters of different colors.

The 135-degree circumferential extent of this large shutter segment (B, Fig. 1) is not a fixed constant in the Joy camera, however, for the red or the green color filter may be extended to embrace part of its area should this be necessary in order to fulfill the "ratio condition," which requires that when a grey object is photographed it shall be represented, upon development, by a deposit of equal density in both the red and the green sensation negative images. The spectral transmissions of the red-orange and the blue-green taking filters employed in this process are such that, combined, they transmit the entire spectrum with no unrecorded gaps and the filters are complementary to each other in hue.

Mr. Joy's departure from former practice in color cinematography by the alternate process does not rely solely on the photographic procedure outlined, for an improvement in the method of projecting the positive has also been achieved.

The Urban-Joy Colorfilms are projected on a machine similar or identical in design and principle to a regulation Kinemacolor projector. As a matter of fact the projector used is the extremely effective Simplex-Kinemacolor machine, this being the well-known Simplex mechanism altered somewhat as to its gearing and provided with an extra spindle for the color filters which extends toward the rear of the mechanism, and is driven (at half the speed of the shutter spindle) by the same gears as is the revolving shutter.

The color filter used on the projecting machine is shown in Fig. 2, and is designed to produce perfect color fusion on an observer's retina and thus eliminate the eyestrain formerly attendant upon witnessing exhibitions of the Kinemacolor type.

Referring now to the projecting machine filter, Fig. 2, we will assume, firstly, that the projector has a fast intermittent of the Maltese cross type. Bearing in mind that the color filter only makes one complete revolution for each two images projected, the filter disc is provided with two opaque segments, D and E (Fig. 2), which obscure the light during the downward travel of the film. It is not found necessary in projecting alternate color sensation records by the Joy process to overmask the period of change between the last image of one "color cycle" and the first image of the succeeding cycle, since the advantages of such procedure have been utilized in producing the negative.

The improvement in the projected results is secured by taking into consideration the fact, well known to advanced workers, that the interval during which a light impulse will be retained by the eye varies for light of different colors. A blue impulse will be retained longer on the retina than will that of any other color, while the red visual sensation is of shorter duration than the impulses produced by other colors.

Accordingly, the red-orange segment of the projecting filter (R. O. 2, Fig. 2) is of greater extent than in the blue-green segment (B. G. 2, B. G. 3, Fig. 2), which latter is interrupted by an opaque segment, F.

In addition to thus equalizing the difference in the retinal retention values of the red-orange and blue-green light impulses, the fulfillment of the "neutrality" or "first black condition" is likewise accomplished. The first black condition for additive color synthesis was explained in our former article (Camera Department, November 18, 1916—Page 3207) and is fulfilled by so adjusting the areas (or sometimes the intensities) of the respective color filters that when the projector light is thrown upon the screen and the filter rotated at projecting speed, the screen illumination will be neutral white and without a predominance of either of the colored elements contained in the filter disc. As will be readily apparent, this condition must be attained by trial and consequent alteration of the area of the opaque segment F (Fig. 2).

It will be noted that in describing the projecting filter, Fig. 2, we have not particularized concerning the angular (or circumferential) extent of the various sections of the filter disc, nor is it necessary that we do so, for in color projection by this process the shutter segments D and E are practically inoperative, since the substitution of the successive images is masked by the customary three wing shutter of the projector and the color filter merely functions to alternately color the light orange-red and blue-green during the periods at which the respective positive sensation images are before the exposure aperture of the projector.

From both practical and theoretical viewpoints, it would appear that color records photographed and projected in the manner described should exhibit a marked improvement over former exhibitions by the alternate process, and, after witnessing an exhaustive demonstration, we can affirm that such is the case.

One of the most readily apparent advantages of Mr. Joy's process is that the projecting speed is considerably decreased. Subjects are well reproduced on the screen at a projecting rate of 30 pictures per second, while we can state from experience that 40 per second was frequently resorted to when projecting Kinemacolor in order to secure satisfactory color fusion. The principal point of improvement, however, is the reduction in the amount of fringe generally noticeable in rapidly moving objects.

That color fringing is at a minimum in the film subjects photographed with the improved Urban-Joy color camera is beyond question; in fact, it can be proven by a simple mathematical deduction. Since the period between the two exposures of a "color cycle" can be masked by a 45-degree shutter sector in the Urban-Joy camera, as against a 180-degree sector in the Kinemacolor camera, we should expect to see a 300 per cent. improvement in results without even taking into consideration the additional artifice of overmasking the change between the successive color groups. While we do not go on record as stating that color fringing is reduced 300 per cent., we concede that a vast improvement is attained in this direction.

If, however, a subject photographed with a Kinemacolor camera is projected by means of the improved projecting filter, the color fringing is still in evidence, although the color rendition is considerably improved. This serves to show that the color fringing is reduced in the photographic operation when practising the Urban-Joy method. As stated in our former article, color fringes can never be entirely eliminated, however, in a process in which the respective sensation images, photographed through different colored filters, are projected so that they alternate upon the screen and are combined upon the observer's retina by persistence of vision, and the same will hold true in the case of subtractively prepared films bearing superimposed sensation images photographed successively one after the other.

The most important feature of a colorfilm demonstration must always be the approximation to nature's hues which a process presents, and in this respect Mr. Urban's show was an eye opener. The limits of space prevent us from particularizing on this point, but it may be said that in addition to the more vivid colors being well reproduced, the more subdued shades were likewise faithfully preserved. In common with all two-color cinematographic processes so far exhibited, the green of trees and foliage is not perfectly reproduced, being rather too bluish in hue. This argues for the use of special filters when photographing scenes in which grass and trees predominate, and is a point worthy of consideration by all those working two-color processes of natural color cinematography.

In conclusion, the Urban-Joy process has the merits of being commercially reproducible and simple in operation.

Special Camera Announcement

THE color photography articles which have been appearing in MOTION PICTURE NEWS for the past few months are at the present time in the process of enlargement and amplification, preparatory to being published in book or pamphlet form. When this work is completed and ready for publication, an announcement to that effect will be made in these pages.

As the issue is to be very limited, we would suggest that all those who are interested in the subject and who are desirous of obtaining a complete and concise description of all the various processes which have been and are being tried out to produce color in motion pictures send in their order for a copy of the book at once. The price of this will be one dollar, postpaid. Money, however, should not be remitted until the book is actually ready for distribution.

Don't Neglect the Field of Picture Music

A VERY interesting letter has been received by this department from Earl S. Rogers, organist, Luna theatre, Lafayette, Ind., in which attention is called to the importance of providing suitable music for moving pictures and offering suggestions as to what kind of music to play. The letter reads as follows:

Lafayette, Ind., December 16.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
New York City.

GENTLEMEN:

Some few months ago I wrote you, giving some of my views on appropriate music for the silent drama.

I am writing the following, trusting that probably some of my views will help some one who, like myself, does not know it all, but who profits daily by reading of the experience of other organists and musical directors over the country.

The first important point that I wish to express my views upon is this:

Nine years ago I started to play in a five-cent picture theatre. Don't misunderstand me. I did not play pictures. I banged away and made a noise—first a waltz, then a march, a "rag," and so on, until the whole show, which consisted of one reel, was over. After a rest, I would play one of those sob-starting illustrated songs, and then would come the task of tearing up a few more artistic rags as music for the one-reel feature. Did I get by with it? Yes, I did, because in those days the public at large did not criticise the music nor the detail of the picture as they do today.

It used to be that all you had to play in any death scene was a few measures from "Hearts and Flowers," and you could see the good patrons sobbing all over the house, but try to use the same line of ideas now, and some one in the house will get tickled at the expression on the face of the dying one and laugh. What does it all go to show? Simply this, that the public in general is becoming educated to the better class of pictures, and if the public is becoming educated, doesn't it stand to reason that the organist or musical director must study and broaden himself so as to be able to compile, arrange or render on the organ the better class of music that fits?

We often hear various types of people say that they are very fond of "popular music," and what they term "classical music" is too "dry," and does not fill them with pep. They say this as if it were the fault of the music, and their state of mind couldn't have anything to do with it. The only reason that their ears can grasp the lively march tune and the swaying waltz is because they are not as yet trained to grasp the more delicate melody by Chopin or Schumann and other great masters.

I do not mean for any musician that has charge of the music in a first-class picture house to play these higher class numbers when they conflict with the picture, but you will have many a chance to use the better class of music. Instead of detracting the attention of the audience from the picture, you will do just the opposite. You will carry them deeper into the plot, and hence you have helped to make them enjoy the picture, and they will go out talking. Whereas if you had not played the right number at the right time, you would draw their attention from the picture, to the music. If this is done daily, the manager might as well stick out a sign that reads "Concert Hall," and quit lying awake nights trying to dope out the right kind of pictures, and a thousand other problems in an effort to get the public interested enough to pay a moderate admission fee.

Another point in conclusion is this: There are thousands of chances to use old songs and old melodies, and get a nice little laugh. "Every one counts."

One night recently I had a chance to use several numbers. Probably some of the younger generation did not get them, but the chances are that they did. The picture showed Robert Warwick in "All Man." I compiled and arranged the various numbers that I would have to use, then when the time came to play these old numbers I ran them in. The picture was a comedy drama, and there were several extreme changes. One minute the scene would be all Western exteriors, and then a cut back showed a drawing-room. I used these accidental numbers when they would bring out some little point that left an impression on the minds of the audience.

One number I used was when Warwick goes out to his father's ranch. The scene showed a little old ranch shack ready to fall down. He asks where the ranch house is; the attendant points to this shack. I opened up the organ and played "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home," very staccato; in fact, I burlesqued the number. Result—big laugh. Then when he opens the door it showed everything in disorder and an old broken chair. I used just a few strains of the "Vacant Chair." Result—laugh. Then he sits down and has a vision of Broadway. I run in just a little of "East Side, West Side, All Around the Town." As this was not a comical situation there was not a laugh, but I could hear the remarks going over the house. Then on the finish of the picture it showed the girl's father, who had opposed Warwick's attentions to his daughter. He comes to take his daughter home, but, after considering things, he tells Warwick that he likes him because he is all man, and starts to shake hands with him. I then opened up very staccato "If a body meets a body"; then on the finish, when everything was settled and the father had relented, grand organ, "What's the matter with father? He's all right," and also played it for a chaser.

Very truly yours "for better music,"

EARL S. ROGERS,
Organist Luna Theatre.

This letter is certainly interesting, relative to many points concerning the better class of music with pictures.

I have found that a majority of musicians throughout the country have an erroneous impression about the class of music required, thinking that the public is not educated up to the best. As Mr. Rogers comments, "Let's advance with the pictures, because if we don't some one else will—and then?" Mr. Rogers has not answered this question, "and then?" Mr. E. Luz, musical director of all Loew theatres, has recently, in an editorial, correctly answered this question, "Do not neglect the field of picture music for it will be the means of creating much needed prosperity in the professional life of music." This plainly means—your award is just as your service. The musician who will not wake up in time, who will not progress with the class of pictures and demand of the public, will be soon forced out of his position, and then? I think this question most anybody can answer. I congratulate Earl S. Rogers on his advanced ideas of playing pictures, and would greatly appreciate to hear from him again.

Can't Understand Use of Same Number Through Five Reels

L. Arons, musical director of the Majestic theatre, writes that he has been particularly interested in the music suggested for various productions, but one thing he cannot understand is how the same number is to be used all through a four or five-reel picture. He seems to think that it will not sound well to an audience to hear the same melody repeatedly, and thinks it would look as though the repertoire of that leader might be very small. He says, among other things, "there isn't a musical number used for any picture that cannot be duplicated by another musical number with about the same general rythm and tempo."

Mr. Arons also says he is the leader of a seven-piece orchestra and claims he would find it quite inconvenient to have to go back to a certain number and play it over for each reel and that his audience would get very tired of such a proceeding.

Answer: I'm sure that there are more musical directors and musicians playing for pictures, of the same opinion as Mr. Arons, but in my opinion, the only correct way to represent a large feature in musical language is to use a musical theme, to give the man or woman playing the title role a melody which accompanies them wherever and however they appear.

This theme must always be a composition which can be played any tempo. It must be a number which sounds well, no matter how it is played—adagio, presto, pp or ff. It should represent the title role of the story in music.

Why always show the audience the same man or woman in a title role? Why not do the same thing musically? All grand operas, operettas, symphonies, etc., are stories, having title roles. It is not the case of a woman or a man, like Hobart Bosworth in "Colorado," or Mary Fuller in "Under Southern Skies," but a "motive" theme; a melody representing the foundation of the entire musical story, being phrased and brought out, wherever necessary. We can't use, say "After Sunset" by Pryor, in "The Frame Up," just as well as "George Fawcett," because most musicians playing for pictures do not know their trade as well as George Fawcett. Yet, I'm not hesitating for a moment to repeat the above statement. Playing for pictures does not, in most cases, mean playing music. As far as the turning back of pages is concerned I wish to say the following:

Lay your musical program in the same rotation as the cue sheet, with the exception of the theme, which must be kept on the side so it can be reached quickly whenever it is needed. It is most natural that this theme idea can be only brought out effectively in larger features; in smaller pictures (short stories) the leading lady or man is seen too often, and I admit we would have nothing else but "theme." In such case, we simply must select music to fit the action of the picture. A number selected for a theme must be in the strict sense of the word—a composition which will bear continued repetition with ever-increasing good effect. It must, in most cases, be a delicious slow movement, remarkably expressive and very melodious.

Condensers, Their Contour, Size, Location and Support

An Address Delivered at the Meeting of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, Held at the Hotel Astor, October 2-3

By C. Francis Jenkins

SURPRISINGLY little literature has been written on the subject of condensing lenses, and none at all with regard to their use in motion picture projecting machines. Investigators outside our own art have so far failed to observe that the problem is not the same as in a motion picture projecting machine that it is in a stereopticon lantern, a difference resulting from the necessity for the use of a shutter with the motion picture projector.

I shall confine my remarks practically wholly to the problems of the illumination of the picture aperture of a motion picture projecting machine, and its result on the canvas, rather than to the subject generally.

Condensing lenses are employed because it is practically impossible to illuminate the film directly. When we get a cold light it may perhaps be feasible, though this is debatable. But for the present, condenser lenses, for gathering the diverging rays of the luminant and converging them on the picture aperture, continue to be used.

Two lenses are usually employed in combination for the reason that to get the same gathering power with the same convergence in a single lens there would be too great a loss of light by reflection from the curved surfaces. So lantern makers usually take two plano-convex lenses and mount them with the curved surfaces together, which puts a flat side next the light source.

As a simple but rather interesting experiment showing the loss of light by reflection, hold up your next glass of water and try to look upward through the surface of the water at about 45° angle. You will not be able to see anything above the water until it actually touches the surface.

This total reflection phenomena is usefully employed in many ways, e. g., in engraving plants to reverse the picture for etching; in binoculars to give a large field and long-range telescope in short, compact form; in periscopes to see without being seen; in the Graphoscope for mechanical simplicity and convenient operation.

But this same reflection when from the surface of a single condenser, is a very decided loss. For this reason it is usual to employ two lenses in a condenser system. The first lens, the lens next the source of light, an electric arc usually is popularly described as gathering the diverging rays and paralleling them, the second lens then converging them on the aperture plate. Lenses of 6½ and 7½-inch focus are usually employed for short projection distances, with the arc lamp 2½ to 3 inches from the surface of the arc lens.

To parallel the light rays with these two lenses the arc should theoretically be 6½ inches from the lens. But this is not best, for at the closer position more than four times as much light at the aperture results. If the rays could be paralleled by the first lens, the arc lens, then the converging lens might be any distance away Because the arc lens cannot do this, the second lens, the converging lens, is brought up close to the arc lens in order to catch as large a portion of the rays as possible and concentrate them on the picture aperture.

Authorities on lenses have heretofore recommended that these converging light rays cross in the center of the projecting lens, but their conclusions have been based upon the old lantern slide assembly which had the pictures just in front of the converging lens, and did not employ a shutter at all. Their recommendations are not, therefore, wholly applicable, nor is the arrangement proposed for the lantern the best for motion picture projecting machines.

It might be nearer right if we could get lenses made so that the shutter could cut across the rays at the narrowest part, that is, at the diaphragm location in the lens. But this is not practical, because, among other things, a variety of focal lengths of projecting lenses are required for different projection distances, or "throw" as the operator usually terms it. The preferable arrangement is, therefore, to put the shutter in front of the lens, and then to have the rays of light cross at that point.

The principal reason for having the shutter at the narrowest part of the projected light-beam is that the obscuring blade may be as narrow as possible, so that when the other two blades, the flicker blades, are added they may each approximate the width of the obscuring blade and yet give a fifty-fifty ratio of light to darkness, which is the ideal arrangement for a flickerless picture today.

To readily determine where the light beam is narrowest is not always easy, for the light cone is not readily discernible. If, however, a card is passed vertically through the light just in front of the lens, a shadow will cross the screen, say, from top to bottom; with the card farther out the shadow will cross from bottom to top; but at a medium position the passing of the card causes a shadow to cover the whole screen at once. That is the proper location for the shutter. One should remember, however, that a shutter that is just right, that is, most efficient, at this point will show halation or streamers both above and below the letters of a title, if the arc is moved very much either toward or away from the condensers.

There are other factors also which have a bearing on the location of the various elements of the projection system. For example, a longer projection for the same size picture requires a projection lens of longer back focus. This again requires a longer cone of light from the converging lens. This lens must, therefore, be changed for one having less curvature. But when this is done the light spot on the aperture is too large, and the lamp house must be moved back. This draws the apex of the light cone back within the projecting lens barrel, so that another change is required. By repeated trials one would probably find the proper lens and best lamp-house position, but the easier plan is to advance the arc a little when an approximately correct lens and lamp-house position is found, and this is usually done.

When the lamp-house is moved back for the long "throw" it is not unusual to change the arc lens to a 7½ lens, making the combination two 7½ lenses. The resultant light loss is considerable, however, 50 per cent., perhaps. This loss of light has given rise to an erroneous idea that the longer throw requires a corresponding greater amount of current for a given size screen. Another plan is to let the 6½ arc lens alone, and substitute an 8½ lens for the 7½ converging lens. This will give the same amount of light on the same screen at the longer distance, without increasing the current consumption. A 6½-inch and 8½-inch lens combination has practically the same equivalent focus as two 7½" lenses, though the reciprocals are not exactly identical in both cases. However, the distortion of poor lenses sometimes prevent getting an even white-lighted screen.

This brings us very naturally to the consideration of a better lens arrangement for the lens next the arc, for, if this can be made a fixed factor, then the matter of adjustment for different lengths of throw is simplified.

Taking up the consideration of the arc and the theoretically best adjacent lens-surface it is at once apparent that if a curved surface could be employed, the same safe distance might be maintained between the arc and the lens at its center, while the outer edge of the lens, by reason of its enveloping curvature, would gather very much more light. But to make a single lens of this conformation having the same 6½-inch focal length as the plano-convex usually employed gives the opposite or convex surface of the lens a disastrous curvature. A better plan is, not to attempt the total light refraction with the one lens, but set another close thereto having such a curvature that the sum of the two will give the focus desired. A lens of — 1½ and + 6½ (dioptric measurement), say 8" focus, in combination with a 10-inch, either bi-convex or a plano-convex, is about correct for a three-inch arc location and is an ideal arrangement, but unfortunately, it is only ideal. A meniscus of six-inch focus would have to be about a + 7 which, obviously, is not practical. The use of a — 1½ and + 5½ lens, about 10" focus, in combination with either a bi-convex or plano-convex lens of 10-inch focus, is good, being approximately the equivalent of a 5" lens. This combination used with a 7½, 8 or 8½-inch plano-convex, seems to make a very satisfactory three-lens meniscus set.

There is still another factor to be taken into consideration—namely, the liability of condenser breakage. But, as has been explained, if the arc can be kept close to the lens very much less current is required for the same screen illumination. And right here a Kelvin law helps us very materially, i. e., "the light of an arc lamp increases directly as the increase in current, while the heat increases as the square." Obviously, therefore, if we can employ such an arrangement as will require but half as much current as another we get but one-fourth as much heat.

But at best the heat is such that the condenser gets very hot though the heat of itself alone does not crack lenses. In actual practice I have found that if the arc lens is held in a non-conduc-

BUILDING AND FURNISHING

Plaza of White Sulphur Springs Doing Big Business

THE Plaza, which was completed in July, 1915, threw open its doors to the public shortly after. This theatre, although it is a community house in a comparatively small town, is doing a big business.

The theatre is a two-story structure, having stores on the ground floor, measures 25 feet by 111 feet. The building is very simple, but still is worthy of comment. The structure is painted white and stands out in clear and strong relief in contrast to its other surroundings. The front of the theatre simple in design like the rest of the house was laid out by the Decorators Supply Company of Chicago. A large electric sign adorns the front and can be seen from a great distance at night.

The lobby, located between the two stores, is exceptionally large for a small house. It is 15 feet wide by 28 feet deep. The walls are of Crilboard, Circassian walnut finish with Circassian walnut trimmings. The box-office contains an automatic ticket selling machine. There are also a number of display frames in lobby taking one- and three-sheet posters and stills of current and coming attractions. These all match the wood work in the lobby and were furnished by the Picture Theatre Equipment Company of New York city.

The interior of the theatre, which is finished the same as the lobby, has a seating capacity of three hundred and two (302) persons, two hundred and fifty-two on the main floor and fifty on the balcony. The opera chairs finished in Circassian walnut were furnished by the Atlas Seating Company, New York. The ceilings throughout the building are of steel and lend a very rich effect to the lobby and the interior theatre. The Berger Manufacturing Company of Canton, Ohio, furnished these and deserve a bit of credit.

The theatre is equipped for vaudeville performnaces and has a stage 15 feet 6 inches deep by 24 feet 10 inches wide. The proscenium opening is 10 feet high by 14 feet 3 inches wide. The proscenium arch is also of metal and was furnished by the same company that furnished the metal ceilings.

The house is heated by steam and ventilators are used in conjunction with it in order to keep the auditorium well heated and ventilated. The Royal ventilating system being used, installed by the Royal Ventilator Company of Philadelphia, Pa.

Semi-indirect lighting system is used. The lights are set into the ceiling and a translucent amber glass covers them.

The projection room on the balcony in the rear contains a Simplex and an Edison machine. The throw is 65 feet onto a plain canvas screen.

A pianist furnishes the music for the pictures and a Stodart piano is used. The program for the week is divided between the Mutual and World pictures, of which five reels are shown at each performance, there being two daily.

The Attractive Interior of the Plaza

The theatre advertises its attractions by distributing hand bills among its patrons, who come from many miles around to witness the performance.

The Plaza is owned and operated by Mr. W. B. Hines, to whom we wish continued success.

An Exterior That Is Out of the Ordinary

DIRECTORY OF NEW THEATRES

IOWA

A moving picture theatre with the operating booth on the main floor is the most novel feature of the New Willard theatre at Creston, Iowa, recently opened. At the rear of the theatre in the shape of a tiny brick cottage is this unique projecting room. Thirteen-inch walls eliminate the fire hazard, so say the builders of the theatre. A brick chimney, extending to the roof, is used to carry off the gases and foul air of the booth. The sides are partly covered with trellis work, over which are imitation vines and flowers. Two 50 ampere transverters supply direct current to two new Powers 6B machines. Extraordinary projection is a hobby of Messrs. Rosenfield and Samish, proprietors.

The building is L-shaped, the lobby being at right angles to the theatre proper. Two lobbies are another feature of this house. The outer one is similar to the lobby of the average theatre, with the box office and entrance and exit doors. The inner lobby is devoted to tables for refreshments, with railings dividing the exit and entrance doors. The seating capacity is 750.

Messrs. Rosenfield and Samish, proprietors of the Temple Grand in Creston and the Family in Clinton, are in complete charge of the house. The opening night was a gala occasion for the citizens of Creston and a very favorable opening was held. Special music and flowers were features.

MICHIGAN

The Rialto theatre, Detroit's second amphitheatre, opened to the public Thursday, December 21, with a complimentary matinee. The Rialto seats 1,600, and is situated at the corner of Gratiot and Mt. Elliott avenues. The Rialto Theatre Company was the inspiration of James C. Ritter, who has successfully managed the Boulevard theatre, Detroit, for the past four years. The building cost $200,000. It is a two-story structure with a frontage of 107 feet on Gratiot avenue. The front is of white terra cotta, elaborated with a marquise extending to the curb. Most of the furniture in the lobby and rest rooms is of wicker, even to wicker bird cages. A feature of the Rialto is the smoking boxes. There are four of them in the rear of the auditorium. "Shadows and Sunshine," a Pathe feature, was the opening attraction. The Rialto policy is two shows at night and one in the afternoon. Prices range from 10 to 25 cents. In every respect the Rialto is a handsome and commodious playhouse, modern and up-to-date to the letter. C. Howard Crane was the architect.

On December 24 the Del-The theatre, Mack and Holcomb avenues, Detroit, was opened by Fred DeLodder. It seats 1,100. The house is elaborately decorated in Adams style, with blue and ivory for the color scheme. The policy will be daily change with two evening performances and matinees on holidays, Sundays and Saturdays. "War Brides" was the opening attraction.

MINNESOTA

H. E. Poole opened his new theatre this week in Staples, Minn., having christened it the New Palace theatre, in which he will run Paramount Pictures exclusively.

NEW YORK

A motion picture theatre to cost approximately $200,000 and having a seating capacity of 1,600, is to be erected on the lower East Side as the result of a deal just concluded. It is to go up at 135 to 145 East Houston street, between Forsyth and Eldridge streets, New York City, and will replace two tenements and an old Evangelical church, which was converted into a motion picture place a few years ago, but which has been closed for some time. This site, measuring 100 feet front, has been leased for a period of forty-two years by Max D. Steuer to Charles Steiner, who conducts a theatre on East Third street.

15 NO. SEVENTH ST. MINNEAPOLIS, U.S.A.

Lorenz F. Weiher, and will be fireproof. It is to be handsomely decorated and will compare very favorably with some of the large uptown houses. It is to be ready in the fall.

A theatre with 850 seats, only one balcony and no posts to interfere with the vision of spectators, will be put up on the property from Nos. 148 to 154 West Forty-eighth street, adjoining the Cort theatre and opposite the Playhouse. Edward F. Rush and Lyle D. Andrews, theatrical producers of 1482 Broadway, announced yesterday they have just taken title to the property and will begin building in March. They said their plans have been accepted by the Building Department. The theatre's architectural style will be modern French Renaissance.

WASHINGTON

T. R. Eastman has announced that he will shortly commence the construction of a new theatre building on East Main street, Walla Walla, to be used by A. W. Eiler, who owns the Bijou Grand directly across the street. The theatre will be called the American and will cost about $30,000. About $10,000 additional will be spent for furnishings.

WEST VIRGINIA

James Velas, owner of the Lyric theatre at Wheeling, W. Va., is having plans drawn for one of the largest and finest exclusive motion picture theatres in that part of the country. The work is soon to start and it is expected that the house will be completed by the middle of next Summer.

The new theater will be located on property 60 by 150 feet, at present occupied by storerooms. These will be razed and the new structure started shortly. The new building will be up to date in every particular and will be the finest one of its kind in the state.

The estimated cost of the plant will be, when complete, $125,000, and the seating capacity will be 2,500. It will be an exclusive picture house and will run the biggest productions on the market.

WISCONSIN

The People's theatre, of Superior, Wis., managed by L. N. Page, opened its doors on Christmas Day as an exclusive Paramount theatre. The theatre will run the two regular releases of each week, two days each, and Thursdays and Fridays rebook a back picture. This is the leading theatre in Superior, and the management in connection with the Exhibitors' Aids Department of the Famous Players Star Feature Film Service, of Minneapolis, Minn., distributors of Paramount pictures in that section, have inaugurated an advertising and publicity campaign in Superior and the surrounding districts for the promotion of the popularity of Paramount pictures.

IOWA

G. C. Clemmer has leased the Rex theatre at Manley, Ia., to Pinta & Slobelick.

Tom Arthur, manager of the Cecil theatre at Mason City, Ia., is showing features and playing vaudeville in his house.

Secor & Hewitt have taken over the Park theatre at Forest City, Ia.

A. W. McIntosh has sold the Crystal theatre at Waterloo, Ia., to J. E. Hostettler.

M. C. Crutchfield has opened the Colonial theatre at Grinnell, Ia.

Julius & Awe have opened the Strand theatre at Fort Dodge, Ia., one of the best houses in Iowa. They are making a splendid success, according to reports.

H. C. Dugan has opened the Princess theatre at Ida Grove, Ia. It had been closed.

SOUTH DAKOTA

Leigh Jeckyll has bought the Fad at Parker, S. D.

James Dundas, formerly proprietor of the Maynard at Mitchell, S. D., has opened the Strand, a fine, modern, new house at Sioux Falls, S. D.

TENNESSEE

A contract was recently closed in Clarksville, Tenn., between Joe Goldberg, manager of the Lillian Theatre Company, and the Crescent Amusement Company of Nashville, by which the Lillian company takes over the ten-year lease on the building now nearing completion on Third street. The Crescent Amusement Company had secured a lease on the property from the owner, W. M. Daniels, Sr., for a term of ten years, for the purpose of operating a moving picture show, and the house was expected to have been opened about Christmas. Mr. Goldberg has stated that the Lillian company had not yet decided what the new building would be used for, but whatever amusements will be exhibited will be under the management of the Lillian company. This deal will eliminate competition in the picture show business, and the local company will have control for some time at least.

Condensers—By C. Francis Jenkins

tive ring it will never break no matter how hot it gets. Lenses crack because of unequal stress in the glass, and this comes about because something has carried away heat from a limited area and not from the whole mass evenly. Thus, if one should touch a very hot lens with a piece of metal, say, a screw driver, the lens will crack, because the metal being a better conductor of heat than the glass robs the glass of its heat at the point of contact and the equilibrium of stress is disturbed and the glass cracks. I have had the glass crack across between my thumb and finger when I attempted to pick up a hot lens by its edge (without knowing before that it was hot). If the lens is heated evenly and remains so, that is, is not robbed of any part of its heat by a conducting or convecting medium, it will never break. A complete understanding of this phenomena and its proper recognition by the operator would enable him to get a much more brilliant screen picture with much less current consumption.

It is exactly the same with many other improvements which might be attempted if we had graduate engineer operators to handle our machines. So the best we can do is to make a compromise machine and wait until the public grows up to our ideals. In this category is an adjustible shutter, and the three-lens condenser system I've just been talking about; and, to come closer home, a multiple-negative carbon arc with its single unshadowed crater in the exact axis of the optical system, an ideal arrangement which we had to give up because we couldn't take the time to teach each operator where such a lamp was installed, if, indeed, he were teachable.

Much of what is here explained could be calculated with exactness and applied by rule if the source of light were an infinitely small point, and condensers were as carefully grounded and annealed as projection lenses, which, however, isn't the case. Also the condensers and light source area have a definite bearing on the sharpness and brilliance of the screen picture aside from the question of illumination. The optical system of motion picture machines is a makeshift, and I hope that some of us will undertake a systematic investigation of it looking to a more definite knowledge and resultant improvement.

In conducting experiment with motion picture machines it is desirable, on occasions, to take the heat out of the light so that the light may shine on the film continuously for an indefinite time without igniting or puckering the film. The usual plan is a tank of water, located between the condensers and the picture aperture, through which the light must pass. This is a help, perhaps, but not wholly effective. Alum is sometimes added to the water, but, so far as my experiments go, adds nothing to its heat absorbing property.

After repeated trials and finding that the water cell did not furnish the required protection, I set about to find our what would, and developed some surprises. Our first surprise was the discovery that ice water was less effective than warm water. Next I found that a plurality of thin glass plates, spaced apart, served the purpose admirably. The only trouble encountered was the breaking of the plates through which the light first passed. This, because the plates were heated in the region of the light spot faster than the glass could conduct it to the parts of the plate lying outside the path of the light.

To overcome this difficulty, a water cell was made into which glass plates were put, the water serving the purpose of equalizing the heat over the whole surface of each plate. No more breakage was then encountered. In order to dispel any doubt in your mind about the true reason for the results, I might add that after the cell was filled with water, but before the spaced glass plates were put in, the film ignited in from 32 to 35 seconds, but that after eight or ten plates were put in, the film was not ignited, or even puckered, after repeated tests of 25 to 30 minutes duration. This device cuts off some light—I have not yet had time to measure the loss—but a 50 per cent. loss is permissible and still have as much screen illumination as results from the running of the machine without it, but with the usual 50-50 shutter.

In this connection it may not be amiss to caution any of you who may wish to construct such a cell, that the cell must be not less than about three times the width of the beam of light. I am not yet ready to say just why a narrow cell is not as good as a wide one in preventing the ignition of the film, and so will reserve a positive statement until from experiments I can be certain.

Another thing which is interesting is that the same number of plates in surface contact with each other will not prevent ignition. A mica cell with spaced sheets is also effective, but the color of the mica and the flimsy, thin sheets are objectionable.

Another observed phenomena which gives further evidence of the complexity of the projecter light is that:

There is a point between the condensers and the aperture plate at which a pencil, screw driver or other slender object held in the cone of light does not cast a shadow on the screen.

This seems incredible, but comes about probably because the heat rays, the light rays, and the color rays, which had, therefore, been more or less separated, so criss-cross and mix-up at this point that there are not enough directed rays to carry a definite image.

Further investigation of the light in this region is being made and will perhaps be presented in another paper following this primer presentation of the subject of condensers in motion picture projecting machines.

In concluding, let me encourage you to original research, for the field is full of opportunity for profitable investigation. Stop a moment and think of it; no material change has been made in the mechanism, and no change whatever in the principle involved in projecting machines since the first projecting machine was deposited in the U. S. National Museum twenty odd years ago. It had the same arc lamp used today, the same two condenser lenses, the same aperture with tension plate, the same upper and lower sprockets, the same left-handed construction, and the same noise of an intermittently-moved film. Here is abundant opportunity for original research work and improvement.

Take Temptation Out of Your Ticket Booth

Every ticket seller wants to be honest. And she will be if you don't put temptation in her way. Remember she's human and the control which every human being has over his or her will power varies. When you allow temptation to inhabit your ticket booth, you are inviting losses. You can guard against them—you can save money—you can remove temptation from your ticket booth by installing

CAILLE
Ticket Office Devices

The Caille Ticket seller automatically registers every ticket sold. This register is under lock and key. The theatre owner holds the key. There is no way that the ticket seller can get at the register. Every ticket sold is accounted for. It removes temptation and discourages dishonest efforts between the party in the booth and the ticket taker.

A Battery of Two Ticket Sellers

Delivers Tickets Separately

Whether a patron buys one ticket or five the Caille Ticket Seller delivers them to him cut off separately, but stacked together like a deck of cards. Tickets delivered in this way cannot lay across the knives in the chopper. They will drop through instantly.

Handles Tickets of Different Denominations

The Caille Ticket Seller is built in sections. When it is desired to sell tickets of different denominations, additional sections are added. Each section has its individual motor for direct or alternating current.

Caille Ticket Choppers

They tear tickets to shreds. There is no possible chance to use them again. These machines are built for foot, hand or electric operation.

All Motion Picture Box Office Records Broken at The Rialto, New York

By

ANITA STEWART

in "The Girl Philippa"

Manager Rothapfel says:

"'The Girl Philippa,' in its first two days alone, played to more money than any motion picture house in the world ever took in."

More than 24,000 people paid high prices and waited hours to see "The Girl Philippa" on December 31st and January 1st. The second day the crowd was so enormous, that the lobby doors were torn from their hinges.

The greatest testimonial is public approval, and the veritable hurricane of enthusiasm that is sweeping New York marks "The Girl Philippa" as a bonanza for exhibitors.

A Reflection of the Press Reviews of

"THE GIRL PHILIPPA"

Robert W. Chambers' Greatest Story

An Eight Part Special Blue Ribbon Feature

Directed by S. Rankin Drew

The New York Herald:

"They really should have had an overflow meeting at the Rialto Theatre yesterday, with a screen hung outside to show Miss Anita Stewart in 'The Girl Philippa' to the throngs that went to see this new motion picture drama by the Greater Vitagraph Company. It was a triumph for both star and producing company."

The New York American:

"There is no one too young or too old to be charmed by 'The Girl Philippa.' The picture means two hours of delight. You can no more afford to miss it than you could the Statue of Liberty or Central Park if you were making your first visit to New York."

The New York Sun:

" 'The Girl Philippa' needs no particular introduction to the public as she is already known to a large portion through the medium of a serial in one of the magazines and a 'best seller.' But her possibilities as a screen heroine were only revealed yesterday by the delicately beautiful Anita Stewart. The showing yesterday was in the nature of a 'first night' and the picture scored."

"Zit" in The N. Y. Evening Journal:

"The eagerly looked for event exceeded anticipations. 'The Girl Philippa' won instant favor with the enormous audiences that greeted, applauded and cheered her."

And Every Other Review Welcomed "Philippa" with the Same Enthusiasm

In reviewing "Blind Justice," "Wid" said:

"This production is not only distinctive, but is well nigh perfect as to story construction, artistry of direction, and mastery of characterization.

"This film justifies your standing on your hind legs and making a lot of noise. I can absolutely guarantee to you that you are safe in doing it. Explain that it is a human drama with a fine element of suspense in an artistic atmosphere, with a wonderfully appealing central characterization. Play up Mr. Christie. "Blind Justice" is a Picture Without a Flaw—So Says Every Reviewer in the Country

W. Stephen Bush in The Moving Picture World said:

"Mr. Christie, the director, rivals in fertility of invention and in talent for expression, with Mr. Christie, the actor. The acting throughout the play is of uncommonly high character, even in the minor parts. The artistic touch of the director is everywhere."

The Exhibitors' Herald said:

"Benjamin Christie is destined to become a mighty force in the motion picture world. His work in 'Blind Justice' is literally magnificent."

Variety said:

" 'Blind Justice' is in many respects an even greater picture than 'Sealed Orders.' The remarkable acting of Benjamin Christie makes it a masterpiece of motion photography."

The Motion Picture News said:

"Benjamin Christie is to be congratulated upon the creation of an epoch-making picture."

Motography said:

"It is a genuinely fine screen drama, remarkable for the absence of a single false note."

"What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

JANUARY 20, 1917

"BELOVED ROGUES" OFFERED THIS WEEK WITH KOLB & DILL

"BELOVED ROGUES," sixth of the Kolb & Dill-Mutual Photoplays, is ready this week. It is five reels in length. It was produced by the American Film Company, Inc. It gives the famous stars, Kolb & Dill, further opportunity for the display of their talent.

Is Intensely Dramatic.

This Kolb & Dill-Mutual Photoplay is intensely dramatic. It tells a story of real heart interest. Despite their roguery both Kolb & Dill will win a warm place in the hearts of photoplay fans. They are steadily growing in drawing power at theaters the country over. Photoplay critics go out of their way to praise the Kolb & Dill-Mutual Photoplays. "Few in the history of the stage have enjoyed the success attained by Kolb & Dill," says the Lawrence (Mass.) Tribune. "Their names are linked with Montgomery & Stone, and Weber & Fields as constituting the three great 'teams' of the stage." The Tacoma (Wash.) Ledger writes: "Critics who assert character men cannot get their personalities across in pictures have a surprise in store for them when they see Kolb & Dill. The picture starring them, just released by Mutual, is in such tremendous demand that Manager Summerville of the Melbourne theater was only able to book it for two days." Bookings on "A Million for Mary," "Bluffs," "The Three Pals," "A Peck O' Pickles," "Lonesome Town" and "Beloved Rogues"—all Kolb & Dill-Mutual Photoplays—can be secured now at any Mutual Film Exchange.

Crowds Wait in Rain to See "Lumberlands"

That the new Mutual chapter play, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," produced by Signal Film Corporation and starring Helen Holmes, is a box-office magnet of unusual power is being proved more conclusively every week. W. Hider, manager of the Hider Theater, Binghamton, N. Y., writes: "Permit me to congratulate you on your wonderful serial, 'A Lass of the Lumberlands.' Our usual time for opening is 7 o'clock, but with this picture we were compelled to open at 6:30. The house was packed to capacity at 7:10 and as many outside blocking the sidewalk, waiting in the rain to get in. All previous records for box office receipts have been shattered by this serial and exhibitors will surely find it a money-getting picture." This is but one of hundreds of similar testimonials received by the Mutual Film corporation. Booking on this phenomenal chapter play can be made at any of the 68 Mutual exchanges.

MARGARITA FISCHER

Begins Work on Her Newest Five Reeler, "THE DEVIL'S ASSISTANT"

Harry Pollard and Margarita Fischer are at work on the next Fischer-Mutual Photoplay. Its title is "The Devil's Assistant." It is five reels in length. This production is a feature of a highly dramatic sort, affording the star unusual opportunity for emotional acting. In "The Devil's Assistant" Miss Fischer will display an unusually elaborate wardrobe. Double and triple exposures—a kind of camera work for which Director Pollard is famous—may also be expected. Specially engaged for Miss Fischer's support in this picture are Monroe Salisbury, who played the leading man in "Ramona," and Miss Kathleen Kirkham, who appeared opposite George Beban in several productions. Upon its completion by the Pollard Picture Plays Company. "The Devil's Assistant" will be released through the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges. Bookings can now be made.

First Rambeau-Mutual Photoplay Interesting

Work on "The Greater Woman," first of the Marjorie Rambeau-Mutual Photoplays, is progressing rapidly. Miss Rambeau's expressive eyes, curly hair and mobile features "register" every emotion perfectly. Still pictures of the first few scenes, now in the Mutual offices, offer proof that the Frank Powell Producing Corporation is staging the picture without regard to expense. Though no release date has yet been set for this first of the Marjorie Rambeau-Mutual Photoplays, bookings can now be made at any of the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges.

EDNA GOODRICH IS LATEST STAR TO SIGN MUTUAL CONTRACT

STILL another celebrated star has been added to the Mutual roster. Edna Goodrich, world-famous beauty, is the latest actress to affix her signature to a Mutual contract. In the very near future a series of Goodrich-Mutual Photoplays will be released through the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges. For years the public in general has paid homage to the beauty of this fascinating star. Poets have been inspired by her classic features. Dramatic critics have searched their dictionaries for adjectives to describe fittingly her face and form.

Her Widened Field.

The beautiful Miss Goodrich has appeared in many successful attractions and is well known in the field of amusements. On the speaking stage she has only played the biggest theatres in the largest cities and her film appearances have been so few that it can scarcely be said she is known to film fans everywhere, but now through the medium of Goodrich-Mutual Photoplays she will appear in every village and hamlet. The masses will have an opportunity of beholding her art. The most notable authors are supplying the manuscripts from which Miss Goodrich's plays will be prepared. Every opportunity will be afforded her for the display of her remarkable talent. The title of the first Goodrich-Mutual Photoplay will be announced shortly. This production and those which are to follow are sure to be in tremendous demand. For this reason many exhibitors are even now making reservations. Any of the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges are prepared to receive reservations.

Fourth "Reporters" Release Really Weird

Decidedly weird is the story told by chapter four of the new Mutual serial, "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters." As the story runs, he was a doctor. Shortly before midnight a bearded individual called on him and insisted that he go to attend a patient. Before he left his office his eyes were blindfolded. After being driven about the streets for hours he reached a palatial mansion. The blindfold was removed. His patient was a beautiful girl. She was speechless. This is but the beginning of the fourth episode of this new Mutual serial. It is startling all by its novelty. Theatres showing it are packed to the doors. Bookings can now be made at your nearest Mutual exchange. It's in fifteen chapters. A new chapter each week. Each chapter complete in itself.

Another New Mutual Star
The Fascinating Beauty

EDNA GOODRICH

IN ACCORDANCE with its policy of "Only Big Stars For Mutual"—the Mutual Film Corporation has signed still another celebrated actress—the fascinating beauty Edna Goodrich. Since the day of her debut in "Floradora" and up to the present, the public has paid homage to the beauty of this charming star. Her ability to portray difficult roles conclusively proves that her claim to fame rests not on beauty alone. Some of the most famous authors are supplying the manuscripts from which Miss Goodrich's plays will be prepared. The star will be afforded every opportunity for the display of her remarkable talent. The same "quality" atmosphere that has made "Tiffany's" unique, will mark each Goodrich production—causing it to stand out supreme and unequalled amid all other photoplay offerings. The title and release date of the first Edna Goodrich Mutual Star Production will be announced soon. Exhibitors are invited to confer with Mutual Exchange managers for complete information regarding the new Mutual Policy for 1917—"America's greatest stars in the world's greatest plays."

Unusual Lighting Effects In "A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS"

In lighting effects, the new Mutual chapterplay, "A Lass of the Lumberlands," is as unusual and superior to other serials as it is in plot, action and enactment. Some of the wonderful night "effects" are positively startling. It is almost uncanny to behold flashing headlights, brilliantly lighted Pullmans and tremendous bonfires, depicted on the screen with such reality. VOGUE FILMS, Inc., Presents—

"A LISLE BANK"

TWO REELS RELEASED JANUARY 14th

FEATURING PADDY McQUIRE

Directed by Robin Williamson

UNUSUAL thrills and sensational feats of daring are mingled with the laughs in this Vogue Comedy. Two of the characters make a hair-raising leap from the topmost point of a 175 ft. jack-knife bridge into a stream below. The story has to do with a looted bank and the concealment of the plunder in an old sock. Paddy, turned out of his boarding house, finds the sock and has a merry time eluding the police. The sock and its contents pass from hand to hand, always keeping just ahead of the pursuing detective. At the finish, Paddy, the real burglar, the girl Paddy loves, and the young man with whom she is eloping, are all cornered at the foot of the raised bridge. And then comes the biggest sensation of all. Pack YOUR theatre with this Vogue Comedy. Now booking at all Mutual Film Exchanges.

A Problem Solved

Selecting a comedy production to round out a day's program presents a problem to the discriminating exhibitor.

Yet it is a problem that may readily be solved, at least for one day of each week.

The solution is Cub Comedies.

Cub Comedies meet every requirement of the discriminating exhibitor. They offer a popular comedian in George Ovey. They offer one thousand feet of rapid comedy action, founded on wholesome comedy situations, well played, well staged and well photographed.

And they are consistently good.

A new series of Cub Comedies is now being released through the Mutual Film Corporation. This new series represents the best of all Cub releases and the best of all comedies made by David Horsley.

Current productions are: "Jerry's Big Doings," released January 18th; "Jerry and the Outlaws," released January 25th.

A new subject is released every Thursday. Book through any one of the 68 Mutual exchanges.

There are thrills in every foot of Pearl of the Army says a big newspaper. Read what it says:

"There are thrills in every foot of 'Pearl of the Army.' With a dramatic story of love, mystery, and adventure and an all-star cast supporting her, Miss White is certain to achieve the greatest success of her career. It is doubtful if any star in the work has as great box-office pulling power. Pathe's name on a serial is a guarantee of its high quality. 'Pearl of the Army' lacks none of the essentials of a successful serial. It has a strong love-interest, the development of which starts with the first episode. There is mystery, adventure and suspense. Every reel is replete with thrills of the kind that bring audiences back week after week."

Geraldine Farrar in "Joan the Woman"

Now playing to capacity audiences at the 44th Street Theatre, New York

Cecil B. De Mille's Marvellous Production

CARDINAL FILM CORPORATION, 485 Fifth Ave., New York

Audiences Shout and Cheer Stirring Scenes

Twice daily for the past two weeks since the premiere of "Joan the Woman" capacity audiences in the 44th Street Theatre, New York, have cheered the exciting scenes of battle and pageantry. Spellbound and enthralled they sit, taking part in one of the world's most stirring dramas.

Countless thousands of horsemen, myriads of spears flashing in the bright sunlight, the clashing of swords, the rush of charges, the oncoming host and the deep pathos of the story of a peasant girl who crowned the King to be sacrificed on the altar of freedom—no parallel in cinema history can be offered to "Joan the Woman."

"More Than a Motion Picture"

—N. Y. Herald

Cecil B. De Mille has accomplished in "Joan the Woman," with the assistance of the most interesting personality in pictures to-day—Geraldine Farrar—what the critics have deemed impossible. He has actually revealed on the screen one of the world's greatest episodes of all history. Millions of persons throughout the world to-day have been waiting the advent of a motion picture that possesses reality—of the shadows that live.

WHAT WE THINK THE CRITICS WILL SAY:

"The most exquisite screen characterization ever created."

"Mary Pickford never reaches the limit of her artistic possibilities. Every time we think she has, she surpasses all her previous efforts. This she does in 'The Pride of the Clan.'"

"'America's Sweetheart' in the sweetest story ever screened, produced by a master."

"A Mary Pickford picture that more than ever crystallizes for all time not only the wonderful charm of the most popular girl in the world, but affords her opportunity to display a dramatic finesse of rare merit."

"With her golden curls, her sweet smile and a charming art that is universally admired, Mary Pickford in 'The Pride of the Clan' will gladden the heart of the world."

Every Critic Calls "The Truant Soul" Walthall's Greatest

"In 'The Truant Soul' Henry B. Walthall has been given a part to play that calls forth every bit of his talent and he has done nothing better during his career. . . . The picture is stirring from start to finish, and will hold audiences both for its story and the complete and effectual way in which it is produced."

Dickson G. Watts, New York Telegraph.

"In 'The Truant Soul' we have again the genius Walthall . . . the biggest man in pictures. . . . As the reels unfold you find yourself shaken by pity, fear, horror, repulsion and finally joy. The interest you have in the unfolding of the tale is the same absorbing interest you have felt 'while reading the novel you simply couldn't lay down.' . . . There is not one moment during the entire picture when the suspense slackens."

Mae Tinee, Chicago Tribune.

"Not since Walthall made 'Ghosts,' 'The Avenging Conscience' and other plotful features has he given us such a character as Dr. John Lancaster in 'The Truant Soul.' . . . Walthall does some wonderful pantomimic work. His two contrasting characters and his portrayal of each have never been excelled on the screen."

Louella O. Parsons, Chicago Herald.

"The combined efforts of the star, Henry B. Walthall, and the producer, Harry Beaumont, augmented by the personal charm and manner of Mary Charleson have given Essanay one of the most artistic plays . . . and one of the most absorbing productions of the day. Truly it eclipses any current effort. . . . It contains the best and most essential ingredients which go to make ideal cinematic melodrama. The photoplay is excellent. . . . Essanay might well be proud of 'The Truant Soul' and Mr. Walthall has every reason to believe it his best achievement."

W. K. Hollander, Chicago Daily News.

THE DEADLY MOVIE FAN

TO question the "movie" fan as an asset to this business may be shocking to some.

To state that this individual is a positive blight upon the motion picture—upon its true development as an art and industry—may sound like rank heresy.

But let us see.

We'll start right in with the daily change of program.

We are all pretty well agreed that the daily change is bad—bad clear through—so bad indeed that it probably stands out today as one of the few great fundamental faults of this business.

THE insatiable demand of the senseless daily change makes poor pictures—for the very simple reason that enough good pictures can't possibly be produced to fill the daily change demand.

The daily change blocks advertising; hence the good pictures fare like the poor. You cannot tell the public how good they are.

The daily change raises rental prices, because it won't let pictures earn what they should—and the negative cost must be applied to fewer rentals. The daily change increases the production of negatives and diminishes the production of positives. It is the main contributory cause today to the broad economic fault of this industry—namely too much negative and too few positive prints.

THERE'S the matter in a nut shell. It is not all by any means that might be said against the daily change.

We are, as has been stated, pretty well agreed on this subject.

Then why don't we banish the daily change?

The answer comes from the theatres—thousands of theatres all over the country: "Our audiences won't let us. We don't dare stop. We couldn't fill our seats," etc.

Who make up your audiences? You'll have to ask yourself that question, Mr. Exhibitor, and give yourself a thoughtful, honest answer. Your prosperity and the industry's will have a lot to do with what you say.

DO your audiences include all the people in your locality—all the people who read—newspapers, books, magazines, who like good stories, good acting, who even appreciate art—and who therefore discriminate about where they shall be instructed and amused?

Are you in close touch with all these people?

Or are you principally dependent upon that small—though very faithful—minority known as the "fans," the movie fans.

Which have you got—the motion picture public or the movie fans?

The difference is mighty big—and the question, to you, is mighty big. Investigate it!

IF you've got the fans—principally—then this weird individual is running your business and your industry—running both into the ground.

He—generally it's she—is a wild-eyed crank and a glutton, a person who wallows in quantity and cares nothing for quality so long as the excitement be there and so long as brown-eyed Archie and blue-eyed Lucy flit across the screen.

He is the omnivorous person who yells to you to clear the table and bring him more. He's the direct cause of the deadly daily change.

This person must be put where he belongs. This industry demands—and you too must have your share of—the motion picture public. Otherwise good pictures cannot be made at a profit.

We like to regard the motion picture as the Fifth Estate; so it is—the newest and greatest of all publishing mediums.

But consider its parallel—the Fourth Estate. Suppose our great Metropolitan dailies were published for fans only—for baseball fans, for instance.

What would become of the power and profit of the press?

BUT if there were no other factor at all, one alone utterly damns the daily change; and that is its nullification of advertising effort.

Advertising is the great economizer.

To the motion picture, a commodity, if you please, of appeal to and within the reach of all the public, a commodity constantly and appealingly new, advertising is the great fundamental force for profit and growth.

Advertising, in some form or other, is every theatre's greatest opportunity.

But the daily change balks and blanks advertising.

IT is one-time advertising, which is nine-tenths waste.

Before you can get your advertising felt your product is gone. The daily change won't let all your public hear about and see your pictures. It chases the pictures away and into quick obscurity. It is for the fan only; it is his delight and your destruction.

Think it over—Mr. Exhibitor and think hard. Estimate your possible—all your possible motion picture public. Forget your fans. Make your plans now—through pictures and advertising—to please all your public with—fewer pictures, better pictures and longer runs.

VOL. XV January 20, 1917 No. 3

Steve Talbot

IT is with deep regret that the News announces the death of Steve Talbot, who for many years was a well known figure on newspapers and trade journals connected with the motion picture industry. The end came at quarter to five Sunday morning, January 7, in St. Vincent's Hospital, New York City. Mr. Talbot had been sick three weeks with heart trouble and this was later complicated by pleurisy.

Mr. Talbot was the Philadelphia representative of the "Billboard" for a number of years. Later he edited the Question and Answer departments of several prominent photoplay publications. His articles in the several fan publications were also well known. Accompanied by his bride, he came to New York City slightly over two months ago to fill an editorial position on the staff of Motion Picture News.

An Exchange of Jests

THE "Morning Telegraph" on December 31 credited us with a sense of humor, which, they explain, was probably due to holiday hilarity. They object to our modest assertion that "You don't get the news unless you read the News." They claim they get it first!

It may have been the holiday spirit of indiscretion which caused the "Morning Telegraph" to make a comparison between a New York morning newspaper and a motion picture trade publication with a national and specific circulation.

The Canadian Vision Widens

ROAD mindedness has unfurled its banner in Canada! Geraldine Farrar, whose films were barred from Canada because she once sang in grand opera in Berlin, is now persona grata. The Canadian censors have decided to lift the embargo on Farrar films, and we heartily congratulate whoever led these gentlemen to the light.

The War and the Picture

"JOAN the Woman" is a great picture. Many authorities say that it reaches the high-water mark of picture production. As such we delight to point to the artistic recognition it so plainly deserves.

But we believe it greater in one other respect than faultless production. The producer has hit upon a theme of tremendous timeliness. This picture may, in brief, become a great shaping force in this remarkable era of the world's civilization.

We know here, if only faintly, of war-racked Europe and we can surmise what must inevitably follow this terrible human cataclysm. Dr. John Mott, lately returned, puts the situation in a nut shell when he says: "Today there isn't a selfish man in all Europe."

Patriotism and religious fervor—a great coupled wave of twofold emotion—will sweep all Europe after the war. Its reflection will be had here—inevitably. Such a force is too elementally great to be confined by continents.

It is just this great human emotion that "Joan the Woman" splendidly, powerfully, thrillingly typifies. This picture will fire, ennoble and sway multitudes; it should exert its influence in no unlimited way; if it does the motion picture will outdo the mightiest work ever accomplished by a free press.

After the War—What?

OUR Paris correspondent tells us that France has almost reversed its taste for pictures and is calling for sentimental, up-lifting, soothing themes.

Wherein lies a commercial warning and a lesson which the American producer will do well to heed—now.

What France wants, all Europe will want: and our own home markets will also partake of the same demand. Indeed these manifestations are already clearly before us.

As usual we are still producing heavily for a demand that is gone—if indeed it ever greatly existed.

The redly sensational, the morbid and depressing, the problem, the sex picture—Europe will not tolerate these pictures—nor does America want them.

If European and British colonial rights mean anything and if a staggering home market has any weight the handwriting is very clear.

The Threatened Tax

IT is difficult to understand what motive is at work behind the effort at Albany to lay further taxes on New York State motion picture theatres. These theatres are already burdened by local and national taxes, and many of the men who own them are bearing the additional levy of the tax on incomes.

The only possible reason we can see for an increased tax burden on motion picture theatres is a mistaken one. Legislators who approve of such measures must believe one of two things, either that the motion picture industry is an immoral thing, and a growth that should be discouraged and hampered because it perverts the morals of the public, or else these law making gentlemen believe that the industry is "rolling in money."

To argue against either of these beliefs would be a waste of time. Men who presume to put film theatres and saloons in one class are lacking tremendously in judgment and observation.

As for the notion that exhibitors are "rolling in money," we respectfully refer them to the stock ledger of the average theatre owner.

The industry is having enough troubles of its own without further discouragement and handicap from the outside.

To Remain Open Sunday—Give Us "Sunday Pictures"

Frank Rembusch Writes One of the Most Remarkable Letters We Have Ever Received—One of His Suggestions to Be Adopted by the News

Editor's Note.—We realize that the important point brought out by this letter will be seized upon immediately by Wilbur Crafts, the censorship propagandist. We hope he will note that it comes from within the industry, where, alone, such questions should be thrashed out. It in nowise affects the argument against legalized censorship.

AN exhibitor traveled by automobile from Austin, Tex., to Chicago, calling in his two months tour on over five hundred exhibitors. Out of that number he found that only two were making money. On my own initiative, I sent out several thousand cards, bearing queries, to exhibitors. Ninety per cent. of the answers said that the business is growing stale. From a competent source the statement came recently that nearly 4,000 motion picture theatres have closed their doors permanently since May 1, 1916.

What is the matter?

The president of the largest educational institution in Indiana requested the exhibitor of that city to eliminate as far as possible all pictures of vampires and sex type, and of infidelity of husband and wife. He stated that the strong sex picture interfered with the work of the students. Clean and wholesome pictures, he said, were beneficial.

This exhibitor asked me how he could regulate his program to fit his conditions in view of the advance deposits he has paid and the noncancellation clause in his contracts. Business was so poor for him that it was out of the question to lay a bad program picture on the shelf.

Let me quote the comments of a Baptist minister and a Catholic priest. The minister was asked why he did not attend film theatres as he had in the past. His reply was a scriptural quotation: "Thou art neither hot nor cold; therefore I will begin by spitting thee out of my mouth." He meant that pictures often have a dirty strain and a moral strain so thoroughly intermingled that he could hardly commend or condemn; so he remained away.

The Catholic priest said: "Your pictures are degenerating into modern refined morality." He meant that pictures aren't bad enough for legal action, so he merely advised his people to be careful, which means stay away.

A lady and gentleman left a theatre after two reels had been shown. The exhibitor asked why. They explained that the picture was so gruesome it would be sure to make the lady so nervous that she could not sleep. They preferred not to see it.

The Holiday Number of MOTION PICTURE NEWS was superb, but look it through from cover to cover. In all of those wonderful full page advertisements there is but one that says: "YOU DON'T KNOW HOW PROFITABLE CLEAN PICTURES ARE IN PLEASED PATRONS AND BOX OFFICE RECEIPTS." These words are hard to find because the space they take up can be covered by a thin dime.

An exhibitor asked me to tell him of a good Sunday picture. That is a good expression—Sunday picture! Please, Mr. Film Producer, many of us would like to be open Sunday that are not open. Most of the people would like to have us open on Sunday, and we will all be open on Sunday when we show pictures suitable for Sunday.

I DARE THE NEWS TO PUBLISH EVERY WORD OF THIS LETTER!

Since May, 4,000 film theatres have closed.

Before I told my wife the plot of a picture I waited until my young daughter left the room.

We want pictures that are happy; that people will come to see every day.

Exhibitors, you refuse to join an organization and pay five dollars a year dues; yet the expositions cost each of you $50 yearly.

Manufacturers won't do business with a small crowd.

What has the League done in its seven years existence?

Many, lovely, sweet, good, wholesome pictures are produced, pictures pleasant to look upon and happy and uplifting throughout.

Mr. Publicity Man!—will you let me make a suggestion? When your advertisement of a particularly clean picture is ready for the press, slip us a little tip at the bottom, thus: (Suitable for Sunday showing).

The other morning my wife asked me what the picture would be for that day. I started telling her the plot, but had to wait until my fifteen year old daughter left the room, because the supreme moment of that picture was the giving of a wife's honor to save her husband's life. Nothing unusual as plots go nowadays, was it? But I could not talk about it before the little girl.

Answer this: Is a picture the right kind when you cannot discuss it at home with your family?

Two months ago I had an "almost purple" picture. There was more paper, more heralds, more advertising of all sorts than there had been for any show in town for the past ten years, including three ring circuses. I looked up the same week seven years ago. We showed to more people and only had out a one-sheet!

To the exhibitor who says we need the slightly purple picture to stimulate interest, I say: "You are wrong." With that picture you arouse interest for the moment. But it is like strong liquor, with its morning after effect. Pictures that are happy and full of fun are the kind that people will come to see every day.

Let's turn the proposition up side down and ask what would give the industry greater prosperity, pictures which are wholesome, or those which are bumping the line of propriety. Year by year, there is being developed a higher public conscience. Will it be better for us to foster or oppose it?

If we intend to get anywhere we must do something. The remedy is ever and ever the same—organization. At the last meeting of the directors of the National Association of M.P.I., President Brady said to me: "I don't hear any complaints except from you." President Brady wants to know what is best for the whole industry, but he cannot find out. As far as the exhibitors of the country as a whole are concerned they don't know and they don't care whether or not the National Association exists.

You want Sunday shows, and you haven't enough enterprise to spend a two cent postage stamp writing a letter and saying so to the National Association. Why don't you move?

Exhibitors, you are to blame for all your troubles. During the last six months I have met with all the big producers and manufacturers at our directors' meetings and otherwise. I found every one of these men very anxious to know the real conditions under which the exhibitors are working. These men all want to see the exhibitor prosper because they realize that our interests are the same. They are not the terrible turks that some exhibitors believe they are. At the same time there is hardly one that really appreciates the conditions under which the exhibitor is working. They don't know that we are handicapped and unable to make more business for them and for us, on account of arbitrary methods that have crept into this industry.

I asked Messrs. Laemmle and Powers why they did not go out and meet with the exhibitors and find out for themselves. They showed me, however, where they have their noses down to the grindstone and

Producers Willing to Discard Deposit System

New York Endeavors to Start the Ball Rolling—Sidney Cohen's New Organization Gaining—Producers Want Guaranty Protection

ACCORDING to Samuel Trigger, president of the New York Local No. 1, the following concerns have signified their willingness to meet exhibitors in conference, with a view to discarding the advance deposit system, if a means is provided whereby the manufacturer will be sure of his rental money: Metro, Artcraft, Paramount and World.

Sidney Cohen, president of the newly organized New York Exhibitors Board of Trade, told a representative from the NEWS that he had been in consultation with Sam Trigger on the question, and that Mr. Trigger desires to arrange a means of cooperation between the New York local and the Board of Trade.

Mr. Cohen said that all of the manufacturers he had spoken to concerning the abandonment of the advance deposit system had signified their willingness to work with him toward that end.

"I had a talk with Mr. Gradwell, manager of the World Film Corporation," said Mr. Cohen, "and, while it is generally understood that Mr. Gradwell strongly advocates the advance deposit, he told me frankly that he would gladly do away with it, if some means of protection could be afforded him."

The protection which Mr. Cohen proposes was explained in last week's issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Briefly, he has organized a board of trade, each member of which deposits money for a general fund which will be drawn upon in case any member defrauds a manufacturer.

The obstacles which hinder the first actions of any new organization prevent Mr. Cohen from expressing his hopes for the future significance of the New York Exhibitors Board of Trade. Many exhibitors expect that the organization will soon have state-wide scope, and in view of the similar movements in other parts of the country, it is the opinion of a few that a national guaranty organization may soon come into existence.

"Dupe" Film Case Is Brought Into Court

Bartlett, English Producer, Claims That Duplicate Positives Should Be Taxed One Cent, Not Three—Decision Probably in March

THE case of R. K. Bartlett, an English film producer, who objects to paying income duties of three cents a foot for duplicate negative, claiming that his "dupes" come under the one-cent clause relating to positives, has been brought before the Board of United States General Appraisers.

This case, which is a test case standing in the name of R. K. Bartlett, an English cinema producer, has been brought before the Board of United States General Appraisers owing to Collector Malone's refusal to permit the entry at a low duty rate of duplicate films, depicting among other things, "The Fanatical Bedouins of Mesopotamia."

It was said at the hearing that the motion picture industry had suffered of late through the action of persons in bringing into the United States quantities of duplicate negatives of plays or other moving effects, which infringed upon the rights of productions already held here by authorized representatives.

Among the representatives of moving picture concerns testifying before the General Customs Board in behalf of the Government's contention for a high duty on the "dupe" negatives, were Lawrence Trimble, president of the Turner Films Corporation of New York, and managing director of the Turner Films, Ltd., of London; Reginald Ward, foreign representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and Albert Dorris, formerly with the Universal, Fox, World, and Vitagraph film interests.

Collector Malone held that the duplicate negatives would have to stand a customs tax of 3 cents a linear foot under Paragraph 380 in the Tariff act of 1913 for "photographic film negatives imported in any form for use in any way in connection with moving picture exhibits or for making or reproducing pictures for such exhibits, if exposed and developed." The understanding was that Mr. Bartlett's case simply afforded an opportunity for a thorough test of the revenue law, and there was no desire to impugn his acts.

Sunday Pictures

where every film manufacturer and producer has his business cares so multiplied and expense so high that they can't afford to leave their desks for a minute.

Every big manufacturer and producer is working every hour in the day because he is compelled to. Besides when a big manufacturer says anything we always think he has an axe to grind.

Mr. Exhibitor, many of you refuse to join an organization and pay five dollars a year dues. Let me jolt you with some facts. There have been three national organizations in the field this year. What is the result? Only one concrete thing has been done, and that has been done by the National Association.

Don't forget that there were also three big expositions, some balls, and other diversions. Were you financially concerned? Will you deny that every penny of the overhead in this industry comes from your pockets? Those expositions cost altogether $500,000. There are 10,000 exhibitors which means that each of you pay $50 toward these entertainments. Think that over.

Joe Brandt said in Chicago: "These expositions are terrible. We come through for everything. But remember, boys, we don't pay for it in the long run. It is tackled to the film service."

Mr. Walter W Irwin is still on the job trying to get a little light through the fog. Let's all help the Chairman of the Executive Committee. I dare you to ask him whether you can do anything to help. I asked Mr. Zukor recently why he didn't put some big stars in two or three reelers. He said he would if he thought he wanted them. Wouldn't it be a good idea to mix them up a little and not always have the program just exactly a mile long?

To convince you that a desire for cooperation does exist, I will recount an experience of my own. I sent a circular letter to all important film producers, asking them if they were willing to eliminate the advance deposit.

I received answers from V-L-S-E, Universal, Bluebird, Metro, Kalem, World Film Corporation, Fox Film Corporation, Gaumont Company, General Film, Consolidated Film Corporation, Educational Films Corporation, Exclusive Features, and Mutt and Jeff.

All but one agreed, if the marketing of the film was to be put on a cash basis, to eliminate the advance deposit. The one was not a refusal. Here is what he said: "We are not interested at the present time." Paragraphs from these letters were published in the NEWS some six weeks ago. Mr. Selznick has openly declared for the elimination of the Advance Deposit System. I have been condemning him for using it, but now I say "Hurrah for Selznick."

The manufacturers don't want to do business with a small crowd. The Exhibitors League has never given a list of its members to the National Association. Nobody seems to know whether we have 20,000 members or 200. It is the same old story. Every year we get the skeleton of the League together, rattle its bones in a big exposition and that is all. We organize and reorganize.

An exhibitor told me the League asked him to resign several years ago because he advertised in newspapers. (If you don't believe that send me a stamp for his name and address!) I consoled him by telling him that I was asked to resign recently because I criticized the dear old League for doing nothing. I said it was always running balls or trade shows or starting trade papers instead of attending to the business of the League. They abused me, said I was crazy. It made me hot at the time, but I have laughed a lot over it since.

In the seven years of its existence, what has the league done for you or for this industry as a whole?

Things are going to come out all right because the exhibitors are beginning to say something. The NEWS is helping us. Keep the Ball Rolling, is the thing. If all of you will raise as much thunder as I have during the past year we will soon get somewhere.

I dare the NEWS to print every word of this communication and I dare the exhibitors of this country to raise a finger in the aid or defense of this business!

F. J. REMBUSCH.

Mr. Rembusch's suggestion that pictures suitable for Sunday showing be indicated as such will in the future be incorporated in MOTION PICTURE NEWS' reviews.

Direct Tax on Motion Picture Theatres is Threatened

Committee Appointed in Senate and Assembly of New York Legislature to Investigate—Locals Throughout State Meeting to Send Delegates to Albany to Fight Measure

AN effort is being made in Albany to bring about the passage of a bill for taxing motion picture theatres in New York State, the amount to be raised, it is said, approximating $2,000,000.

In order to determine whether or not the motion picture industry is a proper source of taxation by the State, the kind and the amount, a joint committee consisting of three senators and five assemblymen have been appointed to investigate the subject. Only three are named: Senator John Knight of Wyoming, Chairman; James W. Yelverton of Schenectady, a Republican and first term member, and James J. Walker of New York City, a Democrat.

The committeemen from the Senate will meet early this week with their colleagues from the Assembly, who will be appointed on Monday, and will begin work at once. The committee is to report back to the Legislature by the fifteenth of next month with the results of their investigation and the proposed legislation.

To a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Senator Elon R. Brown, of Watertown, leader of the Senate and introducer of the resolution, said: "We need more revenue for the State. We are facing a direct state tax of from $9,000 to $12,000, and we must have more money.

"I am told that there is about $120,000 from the secured debt tax, but we must have more than that. Before we tax motion picture theatres, however, I believe the proper procedure is first to investigate the whole subject. That is the purpose of my resolution."

The committee which will be named when the committees of finance in the Senate and Ways and Means in the Assembly report out the resolution, will have $5,000 with which to work. This amount will be paid out of the contingent fund.

The new committee will have all of the powers of a legislative investigating committee, the power to subpoena books and papers and call upon witnesses. It is to have its report ready for inspection by the Legislature on February 15.

For the purpose of preventing the passage of a bill of direct taxation on New York State exhibitors, a convention will be held January 23, 24 and 25, at the Hotel Ten Eyck, Albany.

Sam Trigger, president of New York Local No. 1, has issued a stirring plea to Manhattan exhibitors, requesting their appearance at a meeting at 218 West 42d street on Wednesday, January 10, for the purpose of electing delegates for the Albany convention and instilling a spirit of cooperation into the local members.

Similar meetings are being held in other parts of the State. The election of New York State League officers will take place during the convention.

At a meeting of the Council of the Author's League of America last Thursday, resolutions were adopted opposing a tax upon either film or motion picture exhibitors.

Rex Beach and other prominent members of the Author's League will speak before the Manhattan Local meeting on Wednesday.

The movement for direct tax on motion picture theatres is gaining headway. What are YOU doing about it?

Walter Greene, President of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, speaking of the injustice of the proposed tax, said:

"I feel confident that every fair minded person will look with disfavor upon the contemplation of this latest infliction upon the motion picture industry regardless of whether or not he is connected with the film interests.

"It is difficult to understand just why the discrimination is evidenced in this matter of taxation. If a general taxation of industries were contemplated for some specific purpose, I am sure the motion picture business would stand ready to bear its share of the burden to as great an extent and in proportion with any other enterprise. The claim might be made that our business is a prosperous one but there are many other industries, especially those affecting the war in Europe which are reaping far greater harvests than the film interests.

"As a general rule the motion picture producer is putting forth his very best efforts in the advancement of an art for the benefit of the public. His returns only measure up to the success he attains in thus constantly improving his art in the eye of the public. Everyone knows that the motion picture is beneficial to both masses and classes, that it educates as well as entertains. It is not a vice, a drug, a liquor or a tobacco that may be taxed with the idea of discouraging its circulation among the public. The motion picture should be encouraged and not handicapped by taxation.

"Even narrowing the matter down to one field a great discrimination is evidenced. Why should the motion picture be selected from the field of amusements as a means of taxation? Many motion picture theatres are operating under as great—and in some cases greater—overhead expenses than the regular 'legitimate' theatres. The exhibitor gets 'motion picture prices' in the way of admissions; the manager of the 'legit' house gets as high as $2.50 a seat. Yet the motion picture theatre manager is expected to give up part of his limited revenues while the man who gets $2.50 for a seat is not taxed. Taxation of the motion picture industry seems unfair.

Federal Tax on Exhibitors Extended Indefinitely

"War Tax," Which Was Originally Intended to Extend Only to December 31, 1916, Was Extended Indefinitely by Congress on September 8

THE "War Tax" imposed by the Federal Government on motion picture theatres was extended on September 8, 1916. When this measure was first drawn up the tax was intended only to exist until December 31, 1916. Now it has been extended indefinitely.

Under the title, "Miscellaneous Taxes," in the income tax pamphlet (Public—No. 271—64th Congress) the levies upon places of amusement, which include motion picture theatres, are stated as follows:

Proprietors of theatres, museums, , and concert halls, where a charge for admission is made, having a seating capacity of not more than two hundred and fifty, shall pay $25; having a seating capacity of more than two hundred and fifty and not exceeding five hundred, shall pay $50; having a seating capacity exceeding five hundred and not exceeding eight hundred, shall pay $75; having a seating capacity of more than eight hundred, shall pay $100. Every edifice used for the purpose of dramatic or operatic or other representations, plays, or performances, for admission to which entrance money is received, not including halls or armories rented or used occasionally for concerts or theatrical representations, shall be regarded as a theater: Provided, That in cities, towns, or villages of five thousand inhabitants or less the amount of such payment shall be one-half of that above stated: Provided further, That whenever any such edifice is under lease at the passage of this Act, the tax shall be paid by the lessee, unless otherwise stipulated between the parties to said lease.

Pittsburgh Uses Parcel Post

Pittsburgh film men are taking advantage of the order of the Post Office Department at Washington, D. C., which went into effect on January 1 to the effect that films could be sent through the mails.

The parcels post has been kept busy in this section delivering films from the exchanges and the regular mails have also been taken advantage of to the extent that the express companies in this section have been hard hit as a result.

The motion picture exchanges in this section state that they will save hundreds of dollars by the use of the mails over that of the express companies, and the service will be greatly improved by this method of transporting films.

G. L. McCOY, JR.

Elizabeth, N. J., Appoints 50 Censors

Exhibitors Amazed at Action as City Has Been Singularly Free from Objectionable Films

MAYOR VICTOR MRAVLAG of Elizabeth, N. J., has amazed motion picture fans and exhibitors in that city by the announcement of the appointment of a permanent committee of fifty to act during the coming year as a board of censors there. The action was wholly unexpected by exhibitors as it was generally understood and officially announced during the past few months that Elizabeth was especially free of the charge that its exhibitors had offended by the showing of objectionable films. Up to the present time there has been no censorship of the official kind and in the absence of complaints it was felt by exhibitors that there was little need of such a body in the city.

Exhibitors view the newly appointed censors with scant approval and have little sympathy for the announced plans of the organization. Its membership of fifty is considered by them as too unwieldy for practical work. The composition of the censorship board is also one that does not instill confidence in its undertakings. Twenty-four are women and of the men, five are lawyers, two are contractors, one a minister, one an undertaker, and two are merchants.

The fifty members are divided into sub-committees, each of the sub-committees empowered to "regularly visit and inspect the motion picture exhibitions" in a certain district of the city. When something objectionable is found it is reported to a "reviewing committee" of fourteen. They in return report their findings to the mayor for final action. Should a sub-committee believe immediate action necessary for the suppression of a film it is given the right to report direct to the mayor. The new board of censors began its duties at the beginning of the year.

"Why doesn't the Mayor include vaudeville and the legitimate in his program of censorship?" inquired one exhibitor. "The local public will agree on one point, at least, and that is that of the three forms of entertainment in Elizabeth, motion pictures need censorship less than any of the others. I have been a local exhibitor for five years and during that time not a single picture shown here has been suppressed or barred. Only once in those five years has an advertised picture been the object of attack. Then the local exhibitor volunteered to withdraw his announced program for the week. With such a record it is little wonder exhibitors feel that the present program is uncalled for—meddling interference, that is unjustified and impractical."

National Association Active in Sunday Fight

Petitions from All Over State Are Pouring In—Every Theatre Busy—At Luncheon Association Members Speak on Question

REPORTS are coming in to the offices of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry on the signatures to the petitions against Sunday closing. These petitions are now being signed in virtually every motion picture theatre in New York State, where the slide sent out by the Sunday Closing Committee is being displayed at all performances.

The returns of the first day of reports by a return postal card sent out last week, were 15,000 with less than half a per cent of the theatres heard from.

The exhibitors of the state are rising to the situation with enthusiasm. Hundreds of them are having special cards printed embodying the petition suggested by the Sunday Closing Committee. Others are putting the petition blanks on tables in the lobby and many have attached shelves to the ticket choppers, where patrons can sign standing up, as they enter or leave the theatre.

At a luncheon given by the Sunday Closing Committee under the auspices of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry at Delmonico's in New York on January 2, the Sunday situation was explained fully by eminent lawyers and the gravity of the peril which threatens the business was brought out by Walter W. Irwin and William A. Brady. Afterwards, the practical problems were discussed.

While no definite action was decided upon, the speeches made by Judge Samuel Seabury and John B. Stanchfield, the guests of honor, indicated that the motion picture interests were likely to start some new case to present to the Court of Appeals in place of the Bender case, appealed from Albany six weeks ago.

Those present at the speakers' table were: William A. Brady, Judge Samuel Seabury, John B. Stanchfield, Louis L. Levy, Walter W. Irwin, Adolph Zukor, Lee A. Ochs, Samuel Trigger, and William M. Seabury.

Eaton, Michigan Legislator, Wants Censorship

Representative Fred Eaton, of Saginaw, Mich., has publicly declared himself in favor of state censorship of motion pictures, and is now drafting a bill which he will introduce into the legislature within the next few weeks. It calls for a board of censors to pass on all film before it is shown in the theatres—it provides for an appropriation of $1,500 to maintain the board—gives the board full rights to reject or admit film—calls for a seal to appear on all film censored—and calls for a fee to be paid by the producers to the censor board.

Exhibitors of Michigan do not intend to sit idly by and allow such unjust legislation to pass without a hot fight. A special meeting is to be held soon and the matter will then be threshed out and plans laid out for the campaign against the bill.

Canadian Censors Pass Farrar Pictures

Canadian censors have now passed all of the Geraldine Farrar films in Canada. This includes "Carmen," "Temptation" and "Maria Rosa."

This action on the part of the censors is considered most important in Toronto film circles in view of the apparent misunderstanding which arose about the time of the beginning of the war, when Miss Farrar was misunderstood to be in sympathy with Germany.

Censorship in Tennessee

Chattanooga, Tenn.—The Council of Women, an organization representing several thousand club women, has asked the Hamilton county delegation to the Tennessee legislature to stand sponsor for a bill providing for a state censorship of moving pictures. Section 2 of the bill reads in part as follows: "Be it further enacted, That the Governor shall, upon the passage of this act, appoint a board of five, two or more of whom shall be women, for the purpose of inspecting and prohibiting all objectionable moving picture plays; and, furthermore, no picture shows shall be presented or shown until approved by said board.

News Helps in Censor Fight

Thanks to the warning sounded by MOTION PICTURE NEWS last week against the proposed consorship bill which the reformers were preparing to slip over in the coming session of the Legislature, Milwaukee exhibitors are preparing to wage a hot fight against the bill and it will not have as easy sailing as its sponsors hoped for.

A meeting will be called the first of the new year and complete plans and details for the fight will be mapped out.

Local exhibitors were loud in their praise of the enterprise of THE NEWS in discovering and making known the proposed bill at this early date and before any of them were aware of its existence.

School Shows Taxed

The Decatur, Ill., Board of Education has just paid to John L. Pickering, collector of Internal revenue, for the Springfield district, $137.50, taxes on motion pictures which have been exhibited for "educational and philanthropic" purposes.

The sum pays taxes dating back to November 1, 1915, and up to December 31, 1916. The school board owns a moving picture outfit and has been giving shows in school buildings at which a charge of five cents admission was made.

The proceeds went to charity. The government rules that school house movie shows are to be taxed when admission is charged.

The Christ Episcopal church of Springfield, which has been giving children's shows on Saturdays, recently had to pay a similar tax.

Banquet of Bronx Local

The Cinema Exhibitors Association, Bronx Local No. 2, will formally install elected officers at a banquet to be held at Fleischmann's restaurant. Cabaret entertainment will be provided.

Correcting Exhibitor Faults in the Middle-West

An Interesting Letter from a Middle-West Exchange Manager Who Desires His Name to Be Withheld—The Other Side of a Timely and Important Question

WE are endeavoring to correct a great many of the abuses that prevail in this business. These abuses have, in some cases, been so nauseous that in other lines of business a customer would be considered nothing more or less than a crook if he tried to put over such stuff as we film men have tolerated. A few illustrations will suffice to demonstrate some of the things we aim to correct.

Recently an exhibitor in southern Illinois had a picture booked. His competition booked the same picture from a St. Louis exchangeman, who recognized that he had no right in this territory and booked it four days prior to the day that our exhibitor was to show the picture. The day selected was a Saturday. No previous announcement of his intentions were made, but realizing that the Courts would be closed at one o'clock on Saturday, and as a consequence no redress from this source possible, he engaged a brass band and a wagon, had a big banner painted and came out with the announcement that the picture would be shown that day only, price of admission one cent. My contention is that a man of this caliber must be driven from the business or so thoroughly disciplined that a thing of this kind cannot take place again. Single handed it is impossible to do anything. As a matter of fact in this particular case our film club was unable to do anything for the reason St. Louis is not organized and their co-operation would be necessary. It requires, in other words, the active co-operation of all exchangemen in the country to make the purpose of the F.I.L.M. Club a thorough success for in this particular case, it is a more simple matter for this man to get service from St. Louis than it is from Chicago.

Another case, which has probably been called to your attention is that of a man also down in southern Illinois, who operates a theatre. This man had an idea that because of his prominence in the town he could run things to suit himself and for quite a while he was doing this. If a film was sent to him C. O. D. it came back to the exchange C. O. D. If it went open account, the check did not come back for it and in a lot of other ways he was making himself very obnoxious. This was a case that was so flagrant that we recognized we were not taking any chances of coming in contact either with the state laws or the Interstate Commerce Laws, but our Club decided that we did not care to do business with this man excepting on conditions that would protect us from further abuses of this kind. This gentleman came to Chicago and adjusted the matter and has since been behaving very fine.

In this particular case we made a good man out of a fellow who was threatening to go bad and he has given us his promise to behave and it looks as if he would become as high grade a type as any exhibitor with whom we may do business.

Other cases with which we have to contend, are men who do not hesitate to rent a film for one house and show it in two; an exhibitor who does not hesitate to rent a film for one day and keep it for two, three or five days, as was the case down at Oconto Falls, Wis., and other abuses so numerous that it is needless for me to dwell upon them.

One of the most recent things accomplished by the Club is a case of a corporation here, who owned a theatre and who in some manner or other got into debt to the extent of $800 with the various exchanges. They subsequently sold the lease of the theatre together with all the rights to the machines, chairs, etc., in the theatre and wrote a letter, in making the sale, to the buyers in which they claimed no indebtedness. We found from our attorneys that we were within our rights to refuse to deal with the new purchaser until the old indebtedness had been paid up. We did not, however, ask the new owners to make the payment, but that they should use their influence to compel a cancellation either of the lease and the return of their money, or compel the corporation to permit the transfer of the next rentals to the film Club in liquidation of its indebtedness.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS to me is like a Dictionary to a school kid. Whenever I get stuck I go to it and generally find out what I want.

E. J. Frye, Lochran Film Corporation, Minneapolis.

An idea prevailed among the members of the Exhibitors' League that our attitude was extremely unfair. We had a meeting with them and explained to them just how we felt in the matter, and as a consequence secured their co-operation. Needless to say the claims have all been paid.

The Club has also a great many other things to take care of. For sake of illustration, legislation. Assume that the film exchanges were organized in one body. Can you question for one moment but that we could have a certain influence in a legislative way that could not help but be beneficial to the entire trade?

We have already succeeded in securing much better service from the Express Companies. We have under consideration at this time the question of a bonded pick-up service. We have recently taken action on the question of cancellation of bookings, a matter which we consider of prime importance. We have recently taken action on the question of paper, which has been a perfect nuisance, particularly to the very small exchanges. We have discontinued the use of all mounted paper, excepting at a rental price. As a matter of fact we are doing everything that we can that goes to the making of a more healthy condition in the trade.

We operate in connection with a Credit Organization to whom all matters of credit and accounts are sent.

Briefly, we have practically put an end to railroading of films; return of films C. O. D., the possibility of a man running up an account and ignoring it; the abuses in the paper line; the abuses of cancellations; the abuses of pick-up service and are striving constantly to put the business on a basis of a real business rather than "a game" as it is so frequently called.

Our name F.I.L.M. Club conveys not only the idea of a film club, but is an abbreviation of the words Film Industry Local Managers.

We are but a young organization. We have a great deal of work to do, a great many possibilities stare us in the face, and once that we get the co-operation of the trade papers and of the parent organizations in New York in the proper manner, we will be an organization that will be well worth all the recommendation that your paper may give us.

We know that we are going to face inimical legislation from time to time. We know that the question of censorship is going to be more and more severe each and every year, and if we do not take proper action we are going to find business in an awful mess. A half dozen towns in Illinois today have their own censorship and frankly I don't mind telling you that if we had the support of the big home organizations in New York City back of their local managers, giving us the financial backing that I think we are entitled to, such things could not be possible. While the so-called reformer is active and on the job getting in his work we are asleep at the switch and permitting him to get away with it.

We find a great many places where they only have six days' showing, and if the time ever comes that this becomes universal, it stands to reason that more than fifteen per cent of the volume of our business will be shot to Halifax, Nova Scotia. In every other line of business, excepting the film business, there are trade organizations, and it is pretty near time that the trade papers and the parent organizations and the

Standardizing the Abused Word "Feature"

By George K. Spoor

IN a recent editorial of the NEWS I was pleased to note a favorable comment on the abolition of the term reel by Essanay and the substitution of screen time, basing the picture not on the device on which the film is wound, but on the actual time it takes to be projected.

This as you state does away with padding and gives the story the proper length according to its merit, no matter how many feet.

The NEWS editorial also states that next in order is the proper use of the word feature. Essanay has just inaugurated a change in the use of this word also, believing that it has been misapplied to a very large extent.

In the majority of cases every film of more than three thousand feet in length has recently been termed a feature, irrespective of its merit and whether it was out of the beaten track or not. On the other hand, films of less than three thousand feet, although they may be of special merit and attractiveness, have not had this term applied to them.

Essanay's present plan for the use of this term is to base it on its original meaning, that of something of marked peculiarity or characteristic, anything especially prominent or important.

A play of five thousand feet or more may be thoroughly good and entertaining, but it is not necessarily a feature because it may lack the characteristics to lift it out of the ordinary. It may be interesting, even fascinating, and yet not be a feature, if it lacks the ingredients to make it stand out as something special.

The term, however, has been applied largely to the length regardless of merit. Many so-called features do not possess the merit or the striking qualities of the film of shorter length.

Essanay now uses the term to films of any length, if they possess the characteristics to stamp them as of special importance.

Thus the term is applied to "The Truant Soul," the screen time of which is approximately two hours, and to its "Black Cat" and "Is Marriage Sacred?," series, the screen time of which is approximately thirty minutes.

These latter two would come under the former classification of two "reels" and would not be known as features. It was Essanay's idea, however, that these two subjects were something special and out of the ordinary, and of sufficient importance to classify them as features. In accordance with this they were so termed by this company regardless of their lengths.

In respect to the application of this term feature to the short subjects, I was pleased to note that the Motion Picture Reporting Service of Chicago, an organization of exhibitors, which reviews and rates pictures "from the exhibitor's standpoint," in rating one of the "Is Marriage Sacred?" pictures at 95, stated that it was as good as a "five reel feature."

This would seem to indicate that while the term feature has been dedicated to the film of considerable length, yet the picture was really classified as a feature by the exhibitor although of only thirty minutes screen time.

I believe that the indiscriminate use of this word will gradually be dropped and its proper application given both by exhibitors and manufacturers.

Frisco to Have Films Only During Coming Week

Unique Condition in Golden Gate City Is Reported by Arthur S. Kane—All "Legitimate" Stages Replaced by Screens

A CONDITION in theatrical circles never heard of heretofore unheard of in any large cities is reported in San Francisco. In the middle of January, not one "legitimate" stage will be in use. Mr. Arthur S. Kane has written the following interesting letter to MOTION PICTURE NEWS:

I wish to call your attention to a rather curious situation which has arisen in San Francisco. The middle of January, this city of half a million persons will not have a single downtown legitimate theatre where the spoken drama can be found.

I understand "Civilization" is to open January 14 at the Cort, "War Brides" January 15 at the Alcazar, and "The Crisis" January 21 at the Columbia. The Cort and the Columbia are the $1.50 houses of San Francisco, and the Alcazar is a famous stock theatre. The condition at the Cort and Columbia will be temporary, of course, but the Alcazar is closing its stock company and pictures will be the entertainment offered.

Of course, there will be the vaudeville theatres, and out in the Mission District the Wigwam will continue stock. But it seems to me the dominance of motion pictures is pretty well illustrated by this condition, even though temporary.

The other big picture attractions at photoplay houses at the same time, will be "A Daughter of the Gods," opening tonight at the Savoy, and Mary Pickford in "The Pride of the Clan," opening January 14, at the Portola.

Ohio Passes Moss Film

Announcement is made from the B. S. Moss office that the Ohio Board of Censorship affixed its seal of approval to that concern's latest release, "The Girl Who Doesn't Know." The picture was submitted to the Ohio board last week.

Spanuth in New York

H. A. Spanuth, President of the Commonwealth Pictures Corporation of Chicago, is in New York on business in the interests of this concern. He is stopping at the Hotel Astor, and will be there until the middle of next week.

Kessel Still in Florida

JACKSONVILLE, FLA.—(Special).—A. Kessel, president of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, who has been a visitor in Jacksonville for the past week, was tendered a banquet at the Hotel Mason Friday night, at which Mayor J. E. T. Bowden and a number of prominent financiers were present.

The banquet was given Mr. Kessel by Mayor Bowden's film committee composed of J. J. Logan, president of the United States Trust and Savings Bank; Telfair Stockton, representative elect; W. R. Carter, editor The Florida Metropolis; and George H. Mason, manager of the Hotel Mason.

This committee visited New York last year in the interest of Jacksonville, to induce the motion picture producers to locate in this city, and while in the Metropolis were the guests of Mr. Kessel among others.

In a brief but convincing address Mr. Kessel thanked the committee for showing their appreciation of his efforts to entertain them while in New York, and declared that the spirit of the municipal authorities and citizens of Jacksonville would make it the greatest motion picture producing center in the United States. Among those to deliver addresses at the banquet, were C. A. (Doc) Willat, manager of production of the Technicolor Film Corporation; Mayor J. E. T. Bowden and W. R. Carter.

Triangle May Increase Capitalization

A report that the Triangle Film Corporation will increase its capitalization from $5,000,000 to $8,000,000 has come from the Richmond, Va., representative of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The Triangle offices in New York have no comment to make on the report, which follows:

The Triangle Film Corporation, which operates under a Virginia charter, are holding a stockholders' meeting in this city today. The question of increasing the capital stock from $5,000,000 to $8,000,000 will be voted upon. The principal office of the company is Room 920, Mutual Building.

The stockholders will consider the increase of the capital stock of the corporation from 1,000,000 shares of the par value of $5, to 1,600,000 shares of the same par value. The board of directors at an adjourned meeting on December 16, authorized the change.

H. E. Aitkin, president of the Triangle Film Corporation, and W. N. Saligberg, assistant secretary, signed the call for the meeting.

Adler Appointed by Hammons

Vice-President and General Manager E. W. Hammons of the Educational Films Corporation of America has appointed Bert Adler as New York manager of that concern. Mr. Adler is a pioneer in the giving of childrens' shows and has been interested in educational pictures for a number of months. He was for several years advertising and sales manager of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Griffith Attacked by the "North American"

Philadelphia Newspaper Bitterly Denounces "Intolerance" as Being Propaganda for "Liquor and Lechery"—Griffith Replies in Evening Ledger

THE North American, a newspaper published in Philadelphia, has launched a scathing attack on "Intolerance." The issue which has arisen between this newspaper and D. W. Griffith is unique and mysterious. On December 23, the North American's screen critic published a laudatory account of the picture.

On December 30, the newspaper had an editorial change of mind. In a two column editorial headed "Intolerance," the North American retracted the praise of its screen critic and bitterly condemned the picture. The attack was based upon the North American's belief that the film is propaganda for "liquor and lechery."

The editorial closed with this biting sentence: "Mr. Griffith undoubtedly put that stuff in his show because he thought that it would add to his receipts. The way to induce him to take it out is through the box office."

Mr. Griffith's reply, which appeared in the Philadelphia Evening Ledger of January 3, follows in part:

OPEN LETTER TO NORTH AMERICAN. D. W. Griffith answers its editorial attack upon "Intolerance."

To the Editor Philadelphia North American:

My Dear Sir:

With regret and profound astonishment I have read your editorial headed "Intolerance" in your issue of Saturday, December 30.

There are false statements therein concerning my production and damaging as well as false statements concerning my motives.

I have submitted to you my answer to these statements: You have said—"There is but one side to this." That is the age-old answer that has been at the bottom of every intolerant persecution and act of suppression in the history of the world.

Your refusal to print, even as paid matter, my answer to your accusations obliges me to take this course in order to dispel the misinformation which you have circulated.

On December 23 your North American printed in its review of "Intolerance" these unqualified statements—"There is no taint of a preaching mission. . . . Griffith never oversteps the bounds, his work has all the weight of teaching with none of its cant."

On December 30 your North American prints the following—"Persons who pay their money to see a show find themselves constrained to swallow insulting preachments."

On December 23 your North American had nothing but praise for my production.

On December 30 your North American had nothing but abuse.

During these seven days what was the insidious force at work that compelled the North American to change about face and to write—"We have decided to condemn unsparingly the wicked things in Mr. Griffith's show."

Your columns, in reviewing my production on December 23, stated that "its aim is to present actual conditions . . . and every situation is impartially presented."

My aim has truly been, as stated above, to transfer to the screen actual conditions as I have found them to exist—Just as your reporters daily transcribe into your columns actual conditions, be it a murder or a raid.

The fact that I show a raid is the entire basis of your charge that I am presenting an argument in favor of houses of prostitution.

MAKING THE PAPER THAT IS READ THE PAPER THAT IS EASY TO READ.

¶ This magazine is a self-indexing volume of weekly information.

¶ All trade activities are grouped in their proper departments.

¶ No matter what branch of the trade you are interested in, you can secure your information quickly, accurately, completely.

You make, further, the utterly false statement that I am attacking the entire body of social workers—this in face of a principal title, or explanatory text, appearing in the film, which reads—

"The reference herein to the uplift movement is not to worthy institutions, but to the self-styled reformers, organized not to benefit, but to be benefited by the exploitation of charity."

I repeat, what is the insidious force at work that thus moves the North American to present to its readers a statement directly contrary to the facts of my production?

Please wipe your glasses, Mr. Editor, with the white handkerchief of tolerance and see the play again as through the sweet, clean eyes of the million or more of our American people who have already seen it and have wept and loved and applauded with its joys and loves and beauties of humanity.

One of our minor titles evokes some of your most ponderous lamentations; it is a little nothing, but mirthful for many thousands of wholesome souls who have laughed with it. We sympathize with you that your lack of a sense of humor denies your enjoyment of it.

We esteem the words from Rev. A. H. Sayce, head of the Society for the Promulgation of Christian Thought throughout the World, of the Chair of Assyriology of Oxford University, England, etc., who writes:—

"'Intolerance' is astounding and it is not wonderful that it should be so successful. I do not think that anything comparable to it has ever been staged before. 'Intolerance' appeals equally to the historian, the poet and the student of modern sociology. Indeed, its appeal to the feelings is one of the most remarkable things about it."

Equally eminent in another field, David Starr Jordan, Chancellor-Emeritus of Stanford University, has written his estimate of "Intolerance":—

"A really amazing piece of work . . . the general lesson of the play, that of the evils of intolerance and of carelessness as to the feelings and rights of others, is an excellent one, a piece of work inherently great and sure to be successful with the public."

These are but two of the many notable expressions among the million voices that have gone up from the Atlantic to the Pacific in a song of praise, beside which your voice is as the tinkle of a drop of water on the kitchen sink compared to the roar of Niagara.

I ask again, in conclusion, what is this insidious force that moves the North American to disagree with this learned and universal opinion—nay, even to disagree with itself?

D. W. GRIFFITH.

Indiana League to Hold Its Annual Meeting

The Indiana Motion Picture Exhibitors' League will have their regular annual meeting on Thursday, January 18, at Indianapolis, Indiana, at the headquarters of the Indianapolis Local, on Illinois street.

They have recently moved into these headquarters and they are very convenient from the fact that they are located in the Lyric Theatre Building, which is owned by the Barton and Olson Enterprises, two of our foremost exhibitors, and directly across the street from the Interurban Station.

They anticipate a very good meeting and are not preparing any social functions at all, as it will be business from the word go. This idea is in line with what many believe to be the best plan for any Exhibitors' Convention.

"Eyes of World" Hypnotizes Los Angeles

Ten-Reel Version of Wright Novel Brings Out Crowds to Witness Clune Triumph in Picture Making

THE producers of the Helen Hunt Jackson story, "Ramona," have completed another offering of the nature of a theatrical entertainment which promises to be even more popular. This is a ten reel film version of Harold Bell Wright's story "The Eyes of the World," one of the six best sellers for many months and perhaps the most popular story from this author's pen, prepared for the producers by Mr. Wright himself, who spent weeks with the producing staff of the Clune Company. The production was given its national premier at Clune's Auditorium Theatre, Los Angeles, New Year's day.

The story has been very accurately told on the screen, and no incident in the novel of any importance has been omitted. The original version has not been followed in continuity, but instead a prologue of perhaps three reels concisely shows the incidents occuring previous to the time of the story which are referred to in the novel. This gives the opening scenes a locale of an eastern city and greatly builds up the character role of Conrad LaGrange, newspaper man and novelist, the most important of the tale.

Those who are familiar with the novel will appreciate that it lends itself well to filming. There is everything in the story to make it a very pleasing one as the great sales of the book have proven, and at the same time it is decidedly appropriate for the screen. There is a strong love interest from the very first of the prologue until its end with LaGrange and Mary Gibson as principals, and at the first of the modern story begins another romance between her son and Sybil. This continues and its happy ending serves as climax to the production.

There are numerous situations that call for action of the kind that well suits the screen and in each instance the situations are admirably staged. In the prologue there is a fierce hand-to-hand fight; in the modern story a man hunt with a decidedly western savor, which affords opportunity for unusually beautiful panoramic scenes of mountain roads and trails. A fight, staged on the edge of a high, rocky cliff, brought gasps from the awed audience at the opening showing.

The lovable character of the book, Conrad LeGrange in the screen version is the personification of the written word. This character portrayal by Monroe Salisbury, outrivals his former screen work and is indeed a convincing one. Jack Livingston, as Aaron King, jr., is an attractive hero, and Jane Novak's Sybil Andres fulfills the expectations of the admirers of the novel. A difficult character role, that of Taine, the broker, is well taken by Jack McDonald, of "Slap Jack" fame, and the vampire role of Mrs. Taine serves to introduce a new actress of this type, Kathleen Kirkham, whose work received very excellent appreciation from the audience. Edward Peil played the roles of James Rutlidge, senior and junior, two difficult parts, in a very creditable manner, and Lurline Lyons appeared as Myra Willard, the woman with the scar, to advantage. Fred and Robert Burns are responsible for the excellent horse-back riding and other important players deserving of praise are Arthur Tavares, William Machine and Katherine Miller. Lloyd Brown, general manager of the company, supervised the production, which was done under the direction of Donald Crisp. Mr. Brown also prepared the incidental musical score, a very important part of the presentation. Enrique Vallejo and F. H. Crouse were in charge of the photography.

A very unique atmosphere creating symbolical effect is given at the raising of the asbestos. The entire proscenium arch is filled with the face of a woman. Gradually the eyes are opened, and these enlarge until the face is changed into one of an owl. The two hemispheres take the place of the eyes and when these fade away a beautiful cyclorama, the largest used in a theatre west of New York, shows a panorama of California mountains, the locale of the modern story of the screen version. This is dissolved into the opening announcement of the film and the entire picture is seen through the owl's "Eyes of the World."

The Los Angeles papers were enthusiastic in their praise of "The Eyes of the World."

The Tribune said: "It makes a better photoplay than it does a novel."

Exhibitor Sentiment Swings from Sex Plays, Says Hammons

"Yes, I believe in the children's pictures," states E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager of the Educational Films Corporation of America, "because I think the wave of sex plays that hit the country recently has caused a swing-back of the popular taste to clean and simple stories.

"When you take into consideration the all important fact that the big percentage of picture audiences are women and that the mind of woman is essentially clean, you can see why the reaction has set in. And what woman wouldn't enjoy a children's story so long as it has plot?"

Giving his own answer to the query, he said: "Undoubtedly a sex story with plot is preferable to a clean story without a plot; but give the audience a hundred per cent. picture that at the same time has plot and punch and you have the ideal combination.

"Recently we offered on the open market, a production of "Snow-White" acted entirely by children and I venture to say that no rights to a sex play sold faster than those of this obviously clean story. The best states right buyers took the picture without hesitation and their customers all seemed to be glad to book it. Most of these customers, remember, were bidding high for sex plays four months ago. Perhaps censorship agitation has had something to do with the change in exhibitor sentiment, but one thing is clear: there has been a change and it is toward the clean film."

Bronx Election

The Cinema Exhibitors Association of Bronx held their annual election of officers on Thursday, December 28, 1916. President John J. Wittman was unanimously elected for his fifth consecutive term as President.

Nathan Vinegrad another staunch supporter of the Association was elected to be vice-president. Henry Cole was unanimously elected to the office of secretary. Mr. Samuel Suchman was elected treasurer. John C. Bolte was unaimously re-elected financial secretary. N. Matchet was elected to a three-year term as trustee and Mr. Dan Newman was elected sergeant at arms. Every member present went on record that they would glady pay the 3 cent assessment per seat of their respective theatres to fight the Sunday closing law.

With best wishes to you and your paper for a most prosperous year,

I am, sincerely yours.

HENRY COLE, Secretary.

Pastor Expects to Fill Church with Pictures

The board of the Kentucky avenue Presbyterian church, Paducah, Ky., upon the recommendation of the pastor, the Rev. J. D. Harley, has voted to purchase a motion picture machine and subscribe to a film service for use on Sundays at the church.

"I believe it will fill the church," said Mr. Harley, "and I consider it as legitimate as the spoken word in advancing church worship."

Famous Players-Lasky Increase Capital to $20,000,000

At a meeting of the board of directors of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation the capitalization of that concern was increased from $12,500,000 to $20,000,000. Excerpts from a statement sent out after the meeting are given below.

The fact that the increasing of the capitalization from $12,500,000 to $20,000.000 is a very conservative move will be seen from the fact that the former figures represent the capitalization of the corporation when it comprised only the Famous Players Film Company, Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, and Pallas Pictures. The capital of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, which was recently absorbed by the giant producing combine furnishing its program, was $10,000,000. Thus the new capitalization represents a reduction of two million in the combined capital.

At the meeting, William H. English, vice-president, Empire Trust Company, was added to the board of directors, and the following were re-elected for a term of four years: John F. Frederick, cashier, German-American Bank; Frederick G. Lee, president, Broadway Trust Company; William C. Demorest, president Realty Trust Company and a member of the New York Chamber of Commerce.

Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, Arthur S. Friend, Daniel Frohman, Emil E. Shauer, Albert A. Kaufman, Elik J. Ludvigh, and Cecil B. De Mille continue as members of the board.

Kellermann Artists' Studies Shown at Lunch

At a luncheon at the Hotel Astor, New York, at which Annette Kellermann was the guest of honor, a committee of judges composed of Robert Henri, John Sloan, Wallace Morgan and W. J. Glackens awarded the prizes for the best artists' studies of Miss Kellermann's diving pose in "The Daughter of the Gods."

In the luncheon room were hung the studies submitted, one hundred and two in all.

A large number of New York newspaper men were present and the following representatives of the trade press: Messrs. Hoff, Rendall, Unger, Allen, Milligan and Johnston.

N. Y. Local Wants Members

At a meeting of the Executive Board of New York Local No. 1, held at the organization rooms on Friday, December 29th, a motion was passed that the annual dues of members should be reduced to $20 beginning January 1st, 1917, and the initiation fee be waived.

All those paying $5 now will be given full membership, including initiation and other assessments. This action was taken because the organization is in a prosperous and self-sustaining condition and is no longer in a position where it requires a large membership fee to create a great fund, but is seeking to create a large membership, thus getting the moral support of every exhibitor in the City of New York.

"Family Films" Only Are Wanted by the French

News Paris Correspondent Says Crime Pictures Are in Disfavor —Clean American Films Have Re-established Our Good Standing

THE following dispatch has been received from the Paris correspondent of Motion Picture News. It is interesting to note that the main point brought out in his letter corresponds with the emphasized points of the letter published in our issue of last week from "John Film," of London, and the interview with George Loane Tucker. The Paris letter follows:

It is a great pity that American film manufacturers are not trying to find out what will best suit the French public.

I have mentioned in some of my previous letters what a success Famous Players, Lasky & Triangle films have had.

For months a campaign was carried on against imported, but especially against American films.

Immediately the above mentioned films made their appearance, a change took place, and the oppositionists changed their minds. Some of them went even so far to publish appeals to the French producers saying, "Every one of you should go and see this film; this is the sort of film the French public wants! Why should we not be able to produce such films?"

I have no doubt that such films are not scarce in the States and such films are certain of a success.

Instead of keeping up, we have again since a few weeks two American serial pictures of notorious burglar stories having very little interest. These two films have furnished our opposers with arms again against American films. Every day some of the papers are full of the most vehement articles "such pictures," they say, "are spoiling our children, 'they are teaching them how to become burglar,' they are immoral," and so on.

They blame the censors for passing them and the police for granting the permission to exhibit them.

In short there can be no doubt that such films injure the business and may lead to unpleasant restrictions.

Since last week theatres are closing every Friday, Cinemas every Tuesday.

Two American films have taken Paris by storm, one is "The Cheat" which is still running at the same theatre for the last three months, the other one is Vitagraph's "Invasion of the United States."

Rothacker Studio Ball a Big Success

The studio ball, held in the new motion picture studio of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, on the evening of December 15, will go down in history as one of the most notable events in Chicago society. The studio was beautifully decorated with southern smilax, yellow and red poppies, oak leaves, palms and roses. Music was furnished by Benson's orchestra of fifteen pieces, which was supplemented later in the evening by the famous Chicago Band. At eleven o'clock supper was served by Gaper.

There were 468 guests seated at tables around the walls, and the center of the floor was utilized for dancing. During the evening, Miss Josephine Harriman, hostess at the Congress Hotel dances, gave an exhibition in solo dancing. Josephine and Cross, of "Go To It," at the Chicago Princess Theatre, danced for the entertainment of the guests. The guest list included many names of prominence in Chicago society, and well-known film people throughout the country. The following members of the Chicago Grand Opera Company were there: Dalmores, Ruffo and Dua Scionti.

Pathe and International Weeklies Combine

Berst Organization Will Assemble, Edit, Cut and Print, While Hearst Company Will Gather the Material

THE Pathe News and the International Weekly, are to be combined under the title of the Hearst-Pathe News.

The new news reel, though it takes the place of the other two weeklies, does not mean the elimination of either. It retains the best features of each of the old weeklies. Pathe will assemble, edit, cut, and print the Hearst-Pathe News at the offices of the old Pathe News in Jersey City. The International will, however, attend to all details in connection with the gathering of the news pictures. The best cameramen of both organizations have been retained.

Pathe cameramen are officially recognized by both the French and Russian governments and have means of access to high officials in various other European countries. To this force is now added five war correspondents of the International, several of whom are on the German front and the others on the French, Russian, and Italian fronts. One of these men is Ariel Varges, a man distinguished for his news sense, his coolness, great ability and photographic skill. Mr. Varges has been appointed official cinematographer by the British Government.

In this country 35,000 miles of leased wires are at the disposal of the correspondents of the new News Weekly. A large force of newspaper photographers in all the important cities of the United States will supplement the work of the regular cameramen. In addition to these men each important city in Europe has its correspondents.

Besides the cameramen, war correspondents and newspaper photographers both here and abroad, there are a number of regular travelling correspondents like Tracy Matthewson, who was with Pershing in Mexico and is now getting material in the Danish West Indies, a section of particular importance at the present time owing to the proposed purchase of those islands by the United States.

J. A. Berst, Vice-President and General Manager of Pathe, is particularly enthusiastic over the new Weekly. The old Pathe Weekly was inaugurated by Mr. Berst some eight years ago. Mr. Berst has always been a believer in the news film first because everyone finds entertainment and instruction in it and secondly because it gives to the exhibitor a one reel picture of a quality and kind that it will be profitable for him to advertise and feature. Mr. Berst says of the Hearst-Pathe News: "The elimination of one news weekly by combining the two which are the best known in the field cannot fail to help the market and tend to stabilize conditions generally. The Pathe News could not equal Mr. Hearst's news gathering facilities. The Hearst organization could not equal Pathe's splendid factory facilities. The new Weekly, with its force of cameramen carefully selected from the best men of the two forces, thus becomes stronger and better than either of the old Weeklies. I am much gratified that through Mr. MacManus, Mr. Hearst's interests and ours in the matter of news Weeklies become identical."

The first number of the Hearst-Pathe News will be issued January 10 and will be booked through the Pathe Exchanges.

Title is Chosen for First Linder Comedy

Essanay Subject Featuring International Comedian Is Entitled "Max Comes Across"

THE first of the Max Linder comedies made by Essanay, to be released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay, has been christened "Max Comes Across," and will be released during the latter part of this month. The christening ceremony of this initial comedy of a series of twelve took place at the Essanay studio, Chicago, Friday afternoon, January 5, and was made the occasion for celebration at which Mr. Linder and members of the Essanay-Linder Stock Company served as hosts at an informal reception on the main floor of the big studio.

Kleine - Edison - Selig - Essanay offices throughout the country booked hundreds of theatres for "Max Comes Across," by telegraph within three hours after the comedy had been named and thousands of bookings are now supposed to be en route by mail, as exhibitors throughout the country had been supplied with contract forms and were holding them awaiting word that a name for the comedy had been decided upon.

The trade showing in New York will probably be made in one of the largest theatres of Manhattan.

The second Max Linder comedy will be named "Max Wants a Divorce" and will be released thirty days after "Max Comes Across."

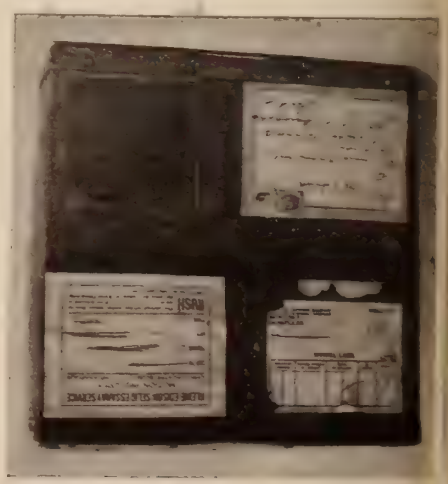
Premier of "Garden of Allah" Held in Indianapolis

Robert Lieber, exhibitor of Indianapolis, Ind., on Christmas Day, gave the premier presentation of the Selig spectacular photoplay, "The Garden of Allah," at the Circle. Mr. Lieber is the first exhibitor to present Selig's "The Garden of Allah."

The Indianapolis Times of Jan. 1, says: "The story gives a wealth of opportunity for scenic embellishment, and here Colin Campbell has scored, painting with broad strokes a remarkable series of pictures of the desert and its strange places, one of the most wonderful being a sandstorm, which leaves nothing to the imagination."

The Indianapolis Star says: "The Selig Polyscope Company has produced 'The Garden of Allah' so artistically for the screen, that it merits the highest praise that can be given to it."

The Indianapolis News says: "A remarkably large part of the story of 'The Garden of Allah' is told in the Selig production, and the book is followed much more closely than is usual in picturizations of novels. It is a notably rich and big production, full of scenes of strange and stirring picturesqueness, and with many touches of unusual beauty."



"Patria" Booked by Keith

"Patria," the International's photo-play serial of society and preparedness, will have its first New York showing in the entire B. F. Keith circuit of theatres in Greater New York, commencing Monday, January 15.

Makes First Film Shipment by Parcel Post, K-E-S-E

The ruling put into effect January 1 by the Post Office Department, allowing movinb picture film to be handled through parcel post, was first taken advantage of by W. J. Sirk, proprietor of the Gem theatre, North Manchester, Indiana.

The shipment was addressed to the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, Indianapolis, Indiana. he package was mailed early Tuesday morning and was promptly delivered on its arrival in Indianapolis at noon the same day. The postage required was twenty-three cents, two cents less than the express rate.

Laemmle Denies Twelve Million Dollar Film Deal

The Chicago Tribune, of Saturday morning, Jan. 6, under the caption "Plan Film Deal of Twelve Millions," stated that plans for a new $12,000,000 capitalization for the Universal Film Manufacturing Co. are now under way, the plan being underwritten by a Chicago banking house and involving the outright sale of the Laemmle, Powers and Cochrane stock. The proposition, according to the Tribune, calls for the election of H. O. Davis as president, and R. H. Cochrane to remain as vice-president.

The Chicago evening papers of the same date carry a flat denial of the whole story by Carl Laemmle, who arrived on the Twentieth Century Limited that afternoon. "There's not a word of truth in such a statement," declared Mr. Laemmle. "For two years I have been steadily denying rumors that I am about to sell my stock in the Universal."

President Laemmle denied that his visit at this time had anything to do with a change in the company. "It merely happens to be coincident to the story," he said. "I am here to meet the branch managers for this district and vicinity, and to discuss the company's policy in this section, and to arrange for the booking of a certain big film."

No Successor to Breitinger

No announcement has been made of the appointment of a successor to J. Louis Breitinger, the Pennsylvania censor, who has been asked by Governor Braumbaugh to resign. There are remaining two members of the board, Ellis P. Oberholtzer of Philadelphia, the secretary, a personal friend of the governor, and Mrs. E. C. Niver of Charleroi, the vice-chairman.

While the governor's letter asking for Mr. Breitinger to resign provides that he should relinquish his post on January 1, last, the time has been extended to the fifteenth, at Mr. Breitinger's request, to afford Mr. Breitinger time to straighten out matters connected with his department in Pittsburgh, Harrisburg and Philadelphia.

Film Clubs Active

The best attended meeting so far held by the New York F. I. L. M. Club was held at the headquarters of the Hoy Reporting Service, 1482 Broadway, New York City, on Tuesday evening, Jan. 2, 1917. Nearly every member of the club was present. Several applications for admission were read and referred to the proper committee.

Reports of committees in reference to transportation and other matters of importance to the trade were submitted and considered.

It was announced at the meeting that nearly all exchanges in New York State, as far west as Buffalo, were now affiliated with the club.

A communication was read from Mr. C. B. Hoy, of the Hoy Reporting Service, regarding many helpful innovations being adopted by the Chicago F. I. L. M. Club. He said that misunderstandings and disputes which were formerly a constant source of friction between exchanges and exhibitors are now being eliminated.

New Jersey Insurance Man Favors Lower Rates

Atlee Brown, Head of the New Jersey Fire Insurance Exchange, Approves of Suggestions Made by Broulatour and Kohn

ATLEE BROWN, head of the New Jersey Fire Insurance Exchange, at a meeting on Wednesday, January 3, spoke in favor of the suggestions which have been proffered by the committee appointed by the National Association of Motion Picture Industry.

Following the formal protest of Jules Broulatour, and Ralph A. Kohn, which was made previously, a committee comprising Messrs Kohn, Broulatour, P. A. Powers and W. Stephen Bush, was appointed by the National Association, with power to draw up a set of recommendations and of presenting them to the representatives of the New Jersey Insurance exchange, as representative of the attitude of the entire industry.

The committee met at once and drew up the following suggested amendments to the exchange's ruling that all negatives the positives of which have been on the market for fifteen days be valued at only one dollar per lineal foot.

First:

The value of all negatives, the subject of which have not been issued for public exhibition, or which have been issued for public exhibition for fifteen (15) days or less in any of the places hereinafter mentioned prior to any loss or damage, shall be limited in case of loss or damage to the original cost of any such negatives, but not to exceed $..... per lineal foot and that

Second:

The value of any negative, the subject of which has been issued for public exhibition for sixteen (16) days or more prior to any loss or damage in any place or places hereinafter enumerated shall be limited to the cost of said negative subject to Paragraph First hereof, less the aggregate percentages of said cost of places in which said subject has been publicly exhibited. Such percentages being hereinafter allocated.

	Per Cent.
United States	45
(1 per cent. for each state in which the same has been publicly exhibited)
England	12
Canada	5
Australia	3
Africa	2
South America	2
France	2
Norway and Sweden	3
Rest of the World	6
Residual Value	20

provided, however, that all negatives shall always have and maintain an insurable residual value of 20 per cent. of the original cost and further provided that publicly exhibited as used in this clause shall be interpreted as being shown in any place or places to which an admission fee is charged.

Third:

The value of all colored positives shall be limited in case of loss or damage to the cost of replacement to the insured not to exceed in any event 7 cents per lineal foot, and the value of all other positives shall be limited in case of damage or loss to the cost of replacement to the insured, but in no event to exceed 5 cents per lineal foot.

These suggestions were presented by the committee to Atlee Brown, head of the New Jersey Fire Insurance Exchange, at a conference on Wednesday, January 3, and after a very frank discussion of the issues at stake, Mr. Brown declared his approval of the committee's recommendations and extended great hopes that their suggestions would be adopted in whole or in part by the companies writing insurance on films in New Jersey.

Sennett Clears Triangle-Keystone Question

In Interview with Los Angeles Representative of News, Comedy Producer Explains Just How Keystones Are to Be Released

MACK SENNETT, director of the Triangle-Keystone studios, desires to announce to the readers of the MOTION PICTURE NEWS his stand on the question of Keystone comedies and the new arrangement for release through Triangle.

Misunderstanding arose several weeks ago, when the advertisement appeared in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS and other tradepapers stating that hereafter all Keystone Comedies could be had by any exhibitor. The advertisement was misunderstood by many exhibitors to mean that hereafter Keystone comedies would be booked in the open market.

In an interview with the Los Angeles representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, Mack Sennett clears up the matter entirely. All Keystone comedies will be released through Triangle, he said, and there would be only one brand, and they will bear his name.

"Comedies made by the Keystone Film Company and under my supervision are now released at the rate of one two-reeler each week through the Triangle Exchanges," said Mr. Sennett.

"That means that a Keystone comedy may be rented at any Triangle exchange by any exhibitor regardless of whether he rents any other Triangle program subjects.

"We are making only one kind of comedy and that bears the Keystone trademark. That means that they are all made under my supervision."

George F. Weaver in Charge of Ohio Office

George F. Weaver has made a new speed record in the matter of promotions, for after only six months duty as film salesman, he has been appointed assistant district manager of the World Film Corporation and will be in charge of the Cincinnati Exchange.

During his brief tenure of office he has made innumerable friends, all of whom heartily wish him a continuance of good fortune.

Revised "Damaged Goods" for February 12 Release

A new edition of "Damaged Goods," with Richard Bennett, one of the most successful photoplays in the history of the industry, is announced by the American Film Company.

This new edition will be available to exhibitors in the larger cities February 12. Arrangements for special pre-release runs will be possible through special negotiations with the Mutual Film Corporation, which will handle its distribution.

WITH THE EXHIBITOR

Co-operation of Dailies with Exhibitors

Newspapers Must Realize the Needs of Picture Theatres or They Will Lose Advertising

THE record of the Winnipeg (Canada) Tribune, which in three short years has created the largest moving picture supplement in all Canada, is one which exhibitors everywhere will want to know about. Generally speaking the American newspaper editor and owner can see the advantage of hooking up with the theatre exhibitor, encouraging him to use liberal space, and charging off a little "free space" to circulation.

But there are many who still live in the days of darkness, and who think their dignity or prestige or personal privilege entitles them to charge the theatre advertiser an extra rate, as an offset to free writeups, or limits the writeup to insignificant space, and comes at the exhibitor with the old frameup of how the writeup is chargeable at so much per line, the rate charged for patent medicine or other fake advertising where the charge is due to the selling of its space by the newspaper to fool the public for sufficient extra compensation.

The frank statement herewith from the man who gets out an eight page supplement devoted entirely to motion pictures, sometimes using colors, will interest every exhibitor. Read it, and see that your local newspaper man reads it. The day of the newspaper receiving heavy picture advertising will be over in some towns, if the papers don't wake up and come to reason. For house organs and exhibitor helps are fast displacing this costly space, where the cost is made unfairly prohibitive. Readers of these columns have noted recently the several expressions from exhibitors first in the industry who recommend seriously the curtailing of all newspaper advertising.

Here is what Mr. Marker, of the Winnipeg Tribune, has to say:

Summing up the various reasons for our supremacy in amount of motion picture advertising carried, we find that The Tribune prints more motion picture news than any other newspaper in Canada; we find that The Tribune extends to the exhibitors the regular commercial rate, the same as given to the retail stores. No high prices are charged, with the hope of offsetting the great amount of free movie publicity.

The Tribune encourages motion picture advertising and is giving the exhibitors all the assistance possible. Considering the great amount of space given away the profit on motion picture advertising is not great, but on the other hand motion picture advertisements and motion picture news are important to a newspaper. Good motion picture news is valuable, and besides being good reading, it acts as an incentive in getting motion picture advertising—a class of business that means additional revenue to the paper. After all, a newspaper, like a retail merchant, enjoys a big yearly turnover.

Motion picture advertising and motion picture news are looked upon by this paper,

FACTS ABOUT THE WINNIPEG JOURNAL AND TRIBUNE MOTION PICTURE SUPPLEMENT.

Pages carried weekly 8
Number of advertisers contributing to recent issue... 16
Display space used by these sixteen advertisers, in inches 700
Total inches of reading matter.....700

and should be looked upon by every paper, as follows: Motion picture advertisements as the regular, ordinary advertising of any merchant, with the same rates applying; motion picture news as news, the same as the other news carried throughout the paper. Of course the advertising creates the demand for motion pictures and to run the news without the advertising would not be consistent.

The great amount of space given away to the moving picture theatres is not looked upon as space wasted or space given away as a premium to the exhibitors for their display advertisements, but as space used to good advantage. A paper is edited for the benefit of the readers, and the motion picture news and cuts that are printed are considered to be the best quality of news. Of course a newspaper should choose different moving picture news—the kind that will appeal to their readers. For a newspaper to fill its columns with stories of unknown stars and films would be foolish.

Many of The Tribune subscribers take The Tribune in preference to the other papers because they enjoy moving picture news and can find in The Tribune good breezy stories on film plays, and other items concerning the screen, as well as the announcement of programs at the different theatres. In other words, motion picture advertising and motion picture news help as a circulation builder.

Three or four years ago, it would have been considered a feat for The Tribune to print a 4, 6, 8, 10 or 12 page motion picture section. Today a motion picture section is a regular feature of the Saturday issue. It is a business proposition from both sides. The Tribune encourages motion picture advertising because it means additional business while the exhibitors use the paper because they have found through steady and consistent advertising that it pays to let the public know what is being shown at their theatres. Through the columns of a newspaper the exhibitors can tell their stories, cover the field in a quick manner and at the lowest possible cost.

I remember three years ago when The Tribune printed the first motion picture page in Winnipeg. The advertising was not enough to warrant running a half page, but we foresaw the advantage in boosting the movies. Since that time the movies have netted us thousands of inches of advertising, as well as thousands of dollars. An exhibitor is a steady and regular advertiser. Every night you can find his announcement in The Tribune.

The Tribune started its movie page three years ago and from that date on has extended its regular commercial rate to the moving picture theatres. The other papers at first could not see the advantage of giving away space to the movies and yet charge their regular rate. They were willing to boost moving pictures, providing the exhibitors paid for it. A high and unreasonable rate was charged. The result is obvious. Today the others are charging their lowest commercial rate as well as giving away columns of motion picture news. In spite of the lower rate and the keener competition, The Tribune continues to print more motion picture advertising than the other two papers combined. My reasons for bringing out this point is to show that the paper that co-operates first with the movies will be the one that the exhibitors will always favor. A paper that starts to print motion picture advertisements and news first will educate the public to look to that paper for programs and news of motion pictures. It is a habit that will remain long after the other papers wake up and begin to open their columns. Winnipeg is no different from any other city—the fact that the other papers, after a year or so of experiment with a high rate, decided that the exhibitors were entitled to their best rate, should prove conclusively to other publishers that the movie men should be given a just and reasonable rate.

The support from the exhibitors at first was not great. Things are different today for the exhibitors have learned the advantage of advertising. Half pages and pages are frequent, for the exhibitor knows that large advertisements are a great deal more attractive, as well as giving him room to use a cut or two, and to tell his story in a good, bold manner.

In conclusion, I will say we made a success of motion pictures by giving the exhibitors a good rate and good support. Any publisher on the continent can do the same. The business is there. All the exhibitor wants is a rate as low as the next man, and a reasonable amount of moving picture publicity.

The Tribune selects its moving picture news from the numerous articles sent in by producers as well as news supplied by the different exhibitors. A motion picture column with small comments of pictures showing at the theatres is printed daily. Most of the cuts used are made up by the local exhibitors, as they are far superior to the cuts supplied by the producers.

I might also state that I have been connected with The Tribune for the past four years, and am the original creator of moving picture advertising in Winnipeg. Motion picture advertising is not a class of business that comes to a paper unsolicited. An exhibitor must be canvassed regularly and shown the different advantages of advertising, before his business is forthcoming.

Trusting that you may make use of these suggestions, I am,

Very truly yours,

A. B. MARKER.

People in Small Town Pay High Prices

Believing people of a small town will pay the higher prices for good attractions, Ed. Mosart, manager of the Grand theatre at Anaheim, Cal., has booked pictures under guarantee that high prices would be protected. His theatre has a seating capacity of 700, and he showed the initial Selznick production, Clara Kimball Young in "The Common Law," to good business for four nights and two matinees at fifteen and twenty-five cents. After this came showing of Clune's "Eyes of the World," one night and matinee at twenty-five, fifty and seventy-five cents, and recently he had "Intolerance," at matinee prices of twenty-five, fifty and seventy-five cents, and night at fifty, seventy-five cents and one dollar. Attractions of this kind Mr. Hosart advertises very liberally, and always gives special musical programs.

Please Children and Adults, Too, Says This Exhibitor

The question of getting the patronage of women and children for special matinees, has been the source of a great deal of discussion among exhibitors throughout the country.

R. P. Green, Paramount exhibitor at the Palace theatre in Dawson, Ga., has a very interesting angle to offer.

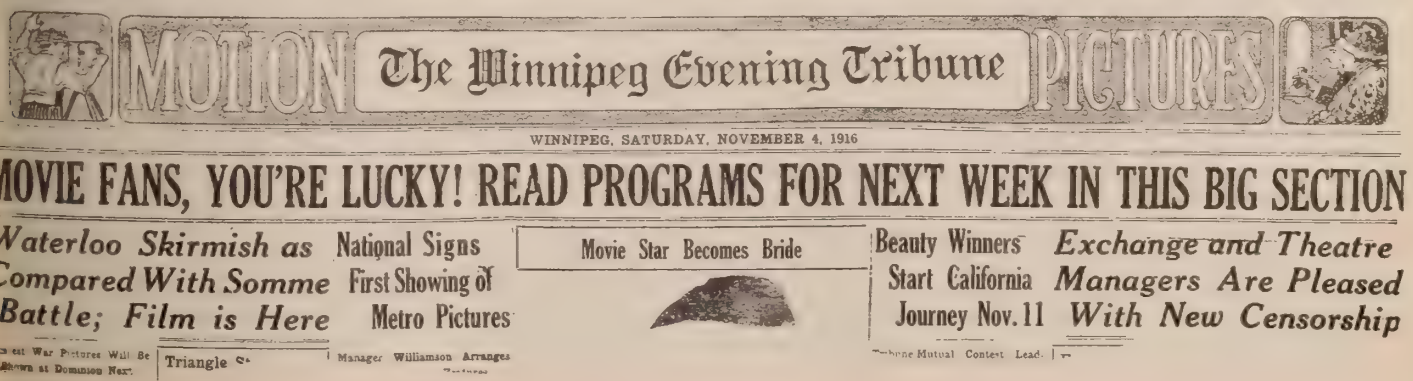
"The question involved is, 'Pictures to please children, or children's program?' Now I remember when the pictures pleased the children, and the little folks would pack the front seats of a theatre, and enjoy the pictures. But as the industry has developed, the grown-ups and the kiddies have separated, until the children no longer come in numbers, or seem to enjoy the average production. This has caused a general demand for children's programs. The average opinion is to devote Saturday morning to childrens' matinees. I have studied it in my theatre very closely."

"I watched the grown people, questioned them to find what they liked, at the same time I watched the children. I watched my ticket roll, and I would listen for the childish demonstrations of approval of each picture. So I have come to the conclusion (quite differently from the average exhibitor) that a children's program is very necessary, but it cannot successfully be separated from the regular programs, and put on Saturday morning, labeled for children only. I find that the pictures most heartily received by the children were similarly received by adults. The people have not changed in their likes and dislikes, but the pictures have changed from their general appeal, to a class appeal; an appeal that has been too deep for the mind of the little fellows, so they have been forced to stay at home. Another subject, 'the sex pictures' are so often thrown on the screen unexpectedly, that the parents keep their children away. As it is not a habit of people to attend theatres in the mornings, I cannot see the financial success of a Saturday morning matinee."

"My plan has been to bring back the old conditions, at least one day a week. That is put on a real good high type program of general appeal, and cater to the children that day. I discussed the matter with the W. C. T. U. ladies, the principals of the schools, teachers and mothers, and they were in hearty accord. I decided to make Tuesday afternoon, 'Children's Day.' I advertised my program for children at matinees and requested the mothers to send their children on that day, and at matinees only, so as not to interfere with their studies. At night I run the same program. The enthusiasm so far has surpassed my anticipations."

"In selecting these programs, I turned to the Paramount releases to begin with, and was surprised that there are so many pictures of general appeal on this list that I have not used. I opened up with 'The Patch of Oz,' a Bray cartoon, and a South American Travel Picture. My second week I used 'William Tell,' South American Travel Picture and cartoon. Next week I will use 'The Prince and the Pauper,' with the same singles. The next week, 'Good Little Devil' and so on."

"The principal of the school has each teacher read the story of the play to her class, and give a short discussion of the path of South America that will be shown that day at the Palace. This was more than I expected, but it goes to show that the educators appreciate good pictures, and an exhibitor's efforts to secure them, and are anxious to take advantage of their educational features.



"At my first matinee, my children audience was 49 more than on the Tuesday before, and the adult attendance was 2 more. The second Tuesday's matinee, the children's attendance had increased 43 over the first Tuesday, and the adult attendance the same amount.

"My idea is to have a special day of general appeal, and cater to the children then, and so far it has worked."

Good Spellers Among Pupils See Pictures Free

Motion picture shows are producing good spellers in Columbus schools and the plan has the heartiest indorsement of both pupils and teachers; in fact, it is one of the biggest boosts ever given the film shows. Pupils of the Grandview Heights school who spell correctly every word of twenty lessons receive a certificate which entitles them to admission to a special screen show in the school auditorium. Are the "kids" making good? They are. At a recent show 250 out of a possible 289 eligibles were present. The plan is being considered by other school authorities and the "Columbus idea" seems likely to spread all over Ohio.

In addition to the children's taking to the scheme with avidity, and the teachers already recognizing the impetus gained, the parents too, are unanimous in their approval of the plan and encourage it heartily.

KEEP PICTURES CLEAN

"I wandered by the river side,
To gaze upon the view,
And watched the alligator glide
After the dead Hindoo,
Who stank and sank beneath the tide,
Then rose and stank anew."

Oh, many a time at eventide
As night comes on anew
I've wandered into a picture house
And gazed upon the view
Of rank upon rank of the rankest rank
That stank worse than Kipling's Hindoo!

When an acrobatic evangelist with a good press agent starts scoring a certain class of motion pictures with vituperative function; when the women's clubs fall into line and one daily newspaper hammers away on the popular anvil of the moment something is bound to happen.

At this writing this is the stage setting in Salt Lake. The climax of the second act has been reached. An ordinance has been rushed through giving the chief of police arbitrary power to close up any show he sees fit. Friend Chief is to be the czar and the theatre manager who does not see eye to eye with him on the matter of public entertainment is open to a fine of $299 plus six months in jail!

It might be of interest to remark at this juncture that with a new and ambitious legislature coming to the bat within the next six weeks there are stormy times ahead for the exhibitor in these valleys of the mountains.

If this were not enough, four big houses in Salt Lake during the week promptly put on salacious stuff and advertised it extensively on billboards and in the newspapers. While this stuff was not as bad as they would have the public believe, it had the desired effect.

The evangelist and the newspapers all took a hand—incidentally they furnished a thousand dollars or more of free publicity, all of which makes "good business"—for the time being.

It does not take a great prophet to predict that there will be a day of reckoning when the guilty and innocent exhibitors will suffer alike and motion pictures will get a sad setback.

And all this for a little quick money!

My advice to every exhibitor is, steer clear of suggestive pictures.

No matter how raw they may be they will never satisfy your audiences. It is a losing game from whatever angle you look at it.

Look back, then name any showman who has made permanent money in this class of business.

The old time burlesque show; where is it today?

If your own self respect is nothing to you your bank balance may be a factor in keeping you decent.

If you persist in showing pictures that are off color your self-respecting patrons will shun the house and your audiences will take on the aspect of a regular prize fight assembly, made up of men and boys. Lured by "striking paper" and veiled advance notices and advertisements in the papers the male population will come expecting to see something they are eventually not shown.

They, too, will become disgusted and stay away.

Keep your pictures clean. It pays.

A good rule to follow is: "Would I like my daughter, sister, wife, or mother to see this picture?"

When in doubt throw it.

GEORGE E. CARPENTER.

Books of Strip Tickets Increase Patronage

Manager J. B. Reisman of the Dale theatre, St. Paul, Minn., placed on sale just before the Christmas holidays a book of strip tickets for his theatre to be issued by patrons to their friends.

Although the price per single ticket was in no wise lowered by the sale of the books, the idea caught readily and Manager Reisman easily disposed of his stock. Included in the book was an announcement of the coming pictures for the next few months. The Dale screens Paramount.

Winning an Exhibitor's Confidence

A recent instance of real, direct, straight-from-the-heart service came to our attention the other day, which did not come from the press agent's office. One of Pathe's tens of thousands of serial exhibitors called up the main office—the place so many exhibitors believe is the source of all things bad when trouble arises with their exchange—and he told the main office man that his local exchangeman had 'phoned and wired and done everything possible to find some way to give him an extra day's use of "Pearl of the Army" in his town, because he had a specially big picture on that day, and could get a lot of school children to come who would be patrons of his house for months afterward. He wanted that picture, wanted it bad, and he didn't care what it cost him, within reason.

Did the Pathe head office man come across with a lot of specious explanation why it was the business of the local manager to take care of his customer, and how they would do all in their power to get him the film, but it was booked solid, etc., etc., and could not be had? He did not. He got busy personally, and spent half a day getting in touch with their several exchanges, and somehow—it isn't important to this story how, and we don't know, in fact—he managed to locate a print that could be spared. Maybe it was the President's private copy. The way he treated the exhibitor, that individual got the impression he could have anything Pathe had and Pathe has reached way down deep into the confidence of that one exhibitor and that exhibitor's friends.

The obvious lesson from this occurrence is that the "House of Pathe" will be in business in years to come. As these columns are for the exhibitor, and it is fair to presume what is done for one will be done for the other, we take occasion to let this story be known, and will take equal pleasure in telling the exhibitors of any other similar occurrences extended by any other exchangeman to exhibitors, through this exhibitors' department. Give the devil his due, exhibitors, and let us hear what good deeds have been done for you.

EXHIBITOR PERSONALS

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.—Washington: The Hippodrome has recently changed management, with Norman N. and Geo. F. Stenz at the helm. This house is building its patronage on features, serials and many short reels. It is a family theatre on the edge of the down town district and fills a place of its own.

IDAHO.—Lewiston: The Star theatre of Lewiston, which has been closed for some time, was recently reopened under new management. Lyle Putman, who has had a number of years' experience in the picture game, is in charge. Extensive improvements were made in the show house before it was reopened.

ILLINOIS.—Latham: Farming and the movies don't run hand in hand. Alford G. Worth of Latham, who tried to run both businesses at the same time failed and took out bankrupt papers in the Federal Court at Springfield. Worth conducted a motion picture house in Latham. He attended his crops by day and the pictures by night.

IOWA.—Red Oak: L. M. Beardsley of the Beardsley theatre, Red Oak, has installed a new machine.

KANSAS.—Topeka: J. W. Wristen, of Kansas City, Mo., recently purchased the Iris theatre at Topeka, from H. S. Montgomery.

KENTUCKY.—Louisville: The Strand theatre, formerly known as the Masonic, has passed into the hands of the Keith interests, making the third Keith theatre in Louisville. The other two are the National, where vaudeville is presented, and the Mary Anderson theatre, a motion picture house. Pictures will also be shown at the Strand, which the Keith people took charge of December 31. Lee Goldberg, manager of the Mary Anderson theatre, will also have charge of the Strand.

MARYLAND.—Baltimore: J. B. Fields, a well-known motion picture exhibitor of Baltimore, has purchased the Royal theatre, 308 South Broadway, and will in the future conduct it as the Fields Photoplay theatre. The house was reopened on Monday, January 8th, after having been entirely improved and re-decorated. He purchased the theatre from Henry Shrentney. The consideration is withheld. Mr. Fields will install the talking picture feature in the theatre and will also have illustrated songs, a well-known local singer having been secured. For a number of years Mr. Fields was manager of the Leader theatre on Broadway and is well known in that section. He was also manager for Berman's theatre on Baltimore street and has been very active in the motion picture industry of Baltimore.

Nat B. Keen, one of the most experienced motion picture exhibitors of Baltimore, has concluded negotiations for the purchase of the Crown Motion Picture theatre at 756 Columbia avenue. The theatre was purchased from C. F. Habighurst, who has controlled the place for about a year. Mr. Keen proposes to make a number of improvements to the front as well as the auditorium and will also rearrange the program. The Crown has a seating capacity of 375 and is one of the leading motion picture theatres in Southwest Baltimore. This theatre is the second amusement proposition under Mr. Keen's control. He now conducts the Dixie theatre at 312 West Baltimore street. Prior to taking over the Dixie theatre, Mr. Keen was for some time manager of the Victoria theatre under the regime of Pearch & Scheck. He also had exclusive charge of the Leader Picture theatre on South Broadway for a number of years.

MICHIGAN.—Adrian: The Croswell Opera House, Adrian, has been taken over by E. M. Simons, proprietor of the New Family and Garden theatres in that city. He will use it for big features only.

Detroit: Earl Hennessy has taken charge of the house management of the Regent theatre, Detroit, having given up his position as assistant manager of the Majestic. Mr. Hennessy formerly was house manager of the Duplex theatre.

Jackson: The O'Mealy Amusement Co., now operating the Family theatre, Jackson, has taken over the control of the Crown theatre.

Pontiac: Harry Goldstein, of the new Oakland theatre, Pontiac, says it will be March 1st before that house is ready.

Saginaw: Joe Friedman, manager of the Franklin theatre, Saginaw, announces: "We wish to announce the entry of the Franklin theatre into the field as a Temple of the Silent Drama. The Franklin will be one of the largest, finest and most complete exclusively photoplay theatres in Michigan outside of Detroit. The building is a magnificent structure, absolutely fireproof, having a seating capacity of 1600, and no detail has been overlooked in making the theatre complete in every respect for the proper and artistic presentation of motion pictures."

MISSOURI.—Boonville: The Stevens Opera House, formerly managed by Jake Deck, was recently purchased by W. S. Merrill, who is new in the business.

Milan: A fire which started in the store building next the Emerald theatre, burned the theatre completely. Managers Schoene and Baker will rebuild immediately.

NEBRASKA.—Lexington: C. A. Mitchell, exhibitor at Lexington, has replaced his old machines with new ones.

Omaha: The Princess and Empress theatres of Omaha have installed automatic arc controls, secured from the Western Supply company. These arc controls are great favorites with operators.

Hugo Bilz is settling up the affairs of the Hipp theatre, Omaha, and plans to go to Long Beach, Calif., where he will start an amusement park. The Hipp is one of Omaha's largest houses. Mr. Bilz was recently injured in a fall and wants to go to California for his health.

A. R. Pramer has sold the Favorite theatre, Sixteenth and Vinton streets, Omaha, to S. W. Preston and will give all his time to running the Alhambra, a large theatre on North Twenty-fourth street. There will be no changes in the policy of the Favorite theatre, as the same kind of programs will be continued. Mr. Pramer has installed a Bartola in the Alhambra and is making other improvements.

OKLAHOMA.—McAlester: A. Bert Estes has resigned as manager of the Busby and Yale-Majestic theatres and is succeeded by A. C. King of Vinita, Okla. L. W. Brophy has acquired control of both the Busby and Yale-Majestic theatres and contemplates building a large airdome in McAlester, to be run in the summer time, in connection with the theatres.

PENNSYLVANIA.—Harrisburg: The Victoria Motion Picture theatre, owned and operated by James and Athens George at 221 and 223 Market street, Harrisburg, has just gone under extensive alterations and improvements. A new lobby has been built and the seating capacity has been considerably increased.

Brownsville: The Arcade theatre at Brownsville, has been changed in appearance to the extent that it appears almost as a new theatre. The building has been re-decorated inside and out and a number of improvements have been made about the place.

TENNESSEE.—Nashville: Roy C. Shelton has resigned from the management of the Strand theatre, Nashville, to associate himself with the Herbert Brenon Film Corporation, Hudson Heights, N. J. Mr. Shelton still retains a small interest in the Peerless Amusement company of Nashville.

Manager Parson Bradford of the Strand theatre, Nashville, in announcing his 1917 program declares he has selected one of the greatest feature program offerings that the motion picture enthusiasts of Nashville have ever had the opportunity of witnessing, and includes Kleine-Essanay-Selig-Edison, together with Metro and Greater Vitagraph. He further announces his 1917 slogan as "Better service and bigger productions."

WISCONSIN.—Milwaukee: E. C. Bostick, who was formerly in charge of a photoplay house in Minneapolis, has taken over the management of the Merrill theatre in this city, succeeding J. H. Rubinstein, who resigned recently. Mr. Bostick is well known in the film world in the Middle West and his advent at the Merrill has been held as an auspicious move on the part of the owners of the house by all those who know him.

Quality Is Colonial's Keynote

The Colonial theatre, Montgomery, Ala., announced its first four weeks of pictures in a fine looking house organ issued recently. The front cover has a panel cut from the middle and on the second page is mounted a picture of Clara Kimball Young which is consequently framed by the first page. The house opened its doors for the first time on December 23, 1916, with "The Common Law."

The program contains an editorial on the growth of the picture business and hastens to dedicate the Colonial to the best pictures obtainable. Follows a list of production already booked which is real proof of the Colonial's ideals. "Snow White," with Marguerite Clark, "Less Than the Dust" and "The Pride of the Clan" with Mary Pickford, "War Brides" with Nazimova, "Romeo and Juliet" with Francis Bushman, are only a few of those listed. The majority of the pictures are to run two days, the rest one.

The Colonial theatre from the appearance of its program is a high class house. As is correct the house organ proves itself a real organ. The spirit of refinement is ever present in its pages and one knows instinctively that the house is to be run on the same lines as is the program. It has no doubt gained the theatre many patrons already.

"Animated" Pictures in Lobby Are Necessary

Well Known Principles of Advertising and Psychology Apply to Theatre Front—Experience Is Training Good Men for This Field

By M. Kashin

THERE is no doubt about it. The trade is waking up to the fact that theatre lobbies are a part of the "show"; that the more people you can attract to the outside of your theatre, the more you will have inside; provided, you use the familiar and well-known principles of advertising and applied psychology.

The first principle of all advertising is to compel attention. The next principle is, assuming your advertisement has been noticed, to say something worth while, to hammer in what you have to say while you have the chance, making the very first words of your "ad" hold the attention of your subject. Then must follow the convincing argument, and finally the vital point that clinches, that makes the man buy your products.

It only takes a glance at these four cardinal principles of advertising and selling methods to see the application of them to theatre "window dressing" as I have chosen to call the theatre lobby display. The psychology of how to attract attention, how to hold attention, how to create a mental impression favorable to your purpose, and finally how to get action, how to get that nickel, dime, or quarter as the case may be laid into your theatre box office window, is not so readily apparent.

It takes much thought, and much actual experience before one can feel that he has succeeded in the meaning that success is anything like full efficiency, in this most difficult task.

The first principles are easily explainable, and any one willing to make the study along practical lines will find himself amply repaid in the end, and not financially the loser during even the early experimenting in this widely neglected field. From the theatre standpoint, the first and surest means of attracting attention is by direct application of the principle that first attracted business inside, namely motion. Anything in motion attracts attention. An "animated" lobby display is sure to do that.

The next best to actual motion is the suggestion of motion, the picking of a pose or attitude that makes the passer-by stop. The pictures of Chaplin on the stepladder accompanying this article illustrate this idea fully. Charlie, cue in hand, making "shots" at the three balls of the pawnshop, is bound to attract attention, whether his arm and cue is in motion or not. His whole attitude is "alive." There would be several ways to make such a display, very cheaply.

The display actually shown was made in my usual manner from "cutouts" pasted on cardboard. This is better as an attention compeller than it would be to hire a man to make up and impersonate Charlie, because people stop and look, and try to figure out how any kind of a "dummy" trick is accomplished. We are used to seeing real people, even in such strange make-ups, doing "stunts," and we are more attracted by mechanically done imitations than by the natural thing.

The artificial imitation, too, is the surest, for you can put him in a pose sure to be maintained whether you are watching him or not. But any exhibitor, anywhere, who would not wish to take the pains to construct a dummy like this, could produce a lobby display like this, using a man out of work to impersonate "Charlie" at trifling cost.

Displays based on Chaplin pictures well illustrate how easy it is, at least where the picture itself has action, to get an attention compelling "animation," into your lobby trimming. The detailed working out of this sample display will show how the attention is held, once the passer-by stops. The pawnshop windows are filled with oddities, furnished gratis by local merchants who receive credit for their displays, without decreasing one iota their value as a holder of the attention.

The mental impression produced by all this "junk" in the lobby front is just what is wanted in the case of this picture. Far different from the previous displays, I have from time to time illustrated, where the heart interest of the story was the compelling inducement to the giving up of the price of admission.

What passer-by will stop to look at this strange and unusual display, and look up at the funny man on the ladder, without wanting to go in and see how many other funny things he does? The natural impulse is to put down his money and walk in. The theatre entrances are not blocked, on either side, by too many small frames and posters, and any one passing this display sees an attractive lobby behind it with the cashier ready to do business, and, what is still more, of an inducement, others are already walking up to deposit their money. For there was hardly a moment during the day when one or several would not break away from the crowd on the sidewalk and start the line to the inside moving.

Two Windows, a Door and Some Borrowed Properties Form the Skeleton for a Fake Store Front Which Occupies the Center of the Lobby, Close to the Street

The psychology of attracting the people by these displays, I have gone into very thoroughly in previous articles. Experience is the great teacher, in this as in other things. You learn "what the people want," which is all we mean by "psychology," by watching the result of constant efforts to single out from many points in a picture the one or two that will "get them coming," to use a common phrase which applies here.

It will pay any theatre manager to start accumulating this experience. It will mean many, many more dollars in his pocket, if he will use the display value of his lobby to get all that is possible out of it. And even if at first his efforts barely pay the actual cost of the display, and nothing for his personal time and energy, he should feel well repaid, for who is ever able to start any business with a profit the first few months? And window-dressing the theatre lobby is a business by itself, which any wideawake theatre manager wants to learn before his competitor.

Caravan with Six Horses for Picture Advertising

There are few publicity devices in the country employed in the exploitation of motion pictures to compare with the elaborate caravan of Clune's Auditorium theatre in Los Angeles. This outfit, consisting of six horses in silver trappings and blankets of rich fabric drawing a vehicle weighing about four tons and covered with gold leaf represents an investment of several thousand dollars. At present it is being devoted to the work of promoting the Clune production of Harold Bell Wright's greatest story "The Eyes of the World," which had its national premier at that theatre on January 1.

W. H. Clune is not only a producer but is the proprietor of several theatres in Southern California and the heaviest advertiser on the Pacific Coast. Clune's outfit on wheels is so stunning in its richness, with its bas relief figures embellished with shining gold leaf, its gaily caparisoned men and its dappled gray horses from whose backs issue a chorus of silver tones from chimes, that not a person in the streets fails to have his attention arrested when it passes.

The Clune outfit "looks a million dollars" and is credited by its owner with great value in crystallizing public attention on his attractions.

Bonuses for Strand Employes

On New Year's Eve all employes of the Strand theatre, New York, were requested to remain after the final performance. After listening to speeches by Mitchell H. Mark, president of the Strand Theatre Company, and Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand, each employe received a bonus check, those receiving less than $2,000 yearly getting ten per cent of the year's salary and those receiving over $2,000 receiving five per cent. One hundred and sixteen employes were benefited through this bonus, which is now an institution at the Strand.

New Brunswick Theatre Features Single Reels

THE time has gone by when the up-to-the-minute exhibitor says to the exchangeman, "Give me a filler." New he says, "What entertaining single-reel have you?" This is because of the rise in the general tone of the business, as well as of the betterment of the single-reel itself to meet the new demand. Just how one exhibitor is impressing the value of these shorter lengths of film upon his spectators is well illustrated in the method of advertising employed by Walter Golding of the Imperial theatre, St. John, N. B.

Mr. Golding issues a special leaflet posting a list of entertaining short-reel subjects which he will show in the near future. At present he is featuring the Gaumont single-reels; "Tours Around the World," "See America First" with Gaumont Kartoon Komics on the same reel, and a full page telling the coming articles in "Reel Life," "Magazine Movies" as he calls it in his advertising.

"I became so interested in the attitude of spectators toward the occasional shorter length picture I showed that was not a photodrama," writes Mr. Golding, which I often in the old days contemptuously termed fillers, that I decided to make a study of them. Gradually I came to see that I was overlooking a valuable source of revenue by not featuring good series of such single reels. I saw that they were building up my clientele, bringing new people and making regular patrons of those who had before only come occasionally.

"Motion Picture News had an article in its December 23 issue called 'Consider the Little Ones—and Profit Thereby.' That article might have been written from my own experience, because I have both considered and profited. It is hard, I'll admit, to get photodramas suitable for a special matinee sometimes, but I have no such trouble with my single reels. The Gaumont Company has an ideal split-reel for such matinees. It goes by the name of 'See America First,' but it contains also an animated cartoon that is always a big factor in pleasing the children."

Mr. Golding's leaflet gives a list of subjects in the forthcoming single-reel releases, as well as an illuminative introduction to each series.

This Was One on the Exhibitor

"It may be good advertising, but no more for mine," said R. R. Booth, owner of the Paramount at Nebraska City, Neb., at the close of the best night's business his house ever enjoyed.

Mr. Booth had just been to Omaha, been married, and was returning with his bride when a crowd of friends met him at the depot. They forced him to give up his idea of riding in a taxi, and put him and Mrs. Booth in an old wagon. A parade of men, boys and girls dressed as clowns, tramps and others followed the aged vehicle as it was drawn through the main part of the city by a pair of still older mules. In front of the theatre a rear wheel of the wagon suddenly came off and Mr. and Mrs. Booth rolled to the ground, almost in the entrance of the house.

That night the Paramount did more business than ever before.

Physicians Asked to View "Truant Soul"

A novel method of stimulating interest in "The Truant Soul," the Essanay, released through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay, was adopted by the Empire theatre, the Bronx, N. Y., Sidney Cohen, manager. A slide was prepared with the following sentence:

"Your doctor ought to see this. It is to your interest to give us his name and we will invite him."

The result was that hundreds of names of physicians in Greater New York were left at the box office and Mr. Cohen was particular to see that each one received an invitation to witness "The Truant Soul." Many physicians who accepted the invitation declared that the picture carried with it a great moral lesson far-reaching in effect and one not soon to be forgotten.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG is once more back in New York after a trip to New Orleans to film necessary scenes for "The Price She Paid." Director Giblyn was in charge of the company. Miss Young received a royal welcome in New Orleans, and the company was accorded many courtesies to aid in securing the film version of the David Graham Phillips' novel. Alan Hale, recently seen in Fox and Famous Players subjects, plays opposite Miss Young in this Selznick feature.

THE cast at work under the direction of Allan Dwan in the first Norma Talmadge production surely does include its share of well-known screen names. Among those who will be seen in Panthea are: Roger Lytton, George Fawcett, Earle Fox, Murdock MacQuarrie, Count E. Von Stroheim, Norbert Wicki, Herbert Barry, Jack Meredith, Henry Thorpe, William Abbington, Winifred Harris, Ieleen Peisey, Stafford Windsor, William Lloyd, Dick Rosson, Frank Currier and J. S. Furey.

JANE AND KATHERINE LEE, the diminutive Fox stars, were among the delightful features at a Christmas week performance in Cohan's theatre given by the stage children. The youngsters were seen in a little skit, and appeared just as much at home as if under the studio lights.

"ART for Art's Sake!" is the slogan of Baby Clarice Snyder, aged seven, who has an important part in the drama that Director Edmund Lawrence is now completing with Madame Petrova as the star. Recently she was asked what her salary was.

"Mamma says I get money for acting, but I don't know how much it is, for I don't want it," the child replied. "I don't want money. I want to be another Madame Petrova."

Baby Snyder is known to the spoken stage, having been on Broadway in "The Squaw Man," "Hands Up!" "The Revolt," in which Madame Petrova starred, and now is with Clifton Crawford in "Her Soldier Boy." In motion pictures she has appeared in the cast which supported Madame Petrova in "The Eternal Question" and the two most recent Popular Plays and Players Feature releases.

HARRY J. COOK, agent of the Westchester County Society for the prevention of Cruelty to Children, called at the Thanhouser studios to see Florence La Badie in her new play, "The Lonely Heart." He was enforcing a new law requiring that no child be permitted to act in motion pictures until an authorized officer had approved the scenario as moral and had witnessed a rehearsal.

Edwin Thanhouser supplied Mr. Cook with copies of the scenario of "The Lonely Heart." Frederic Sullivan directed a rehearsal of scenes in which Helen Badgley, 5 years old, is to appear. Mr. Cook pronounced the scenario satisfactory, and the cameraman went to his post.

Director Paul Scardon (Vitagraph)

KITTY GORDON is hard at work on "Haunting Shadows," the first of her new World-Brady picture plays. This will hardly reach the public until well into the Summer.

Rockliffe Fellowes has been rewarded for his illuminative work in World pictures by having his name featured in several recent casts.

A MINIATURE rendition of a storm was conducted by Director John B. O'Brien, under the auspices of Lloyd Lonergan, author of "Mary Lawson's Secret," a Thanhouser production in which Charlotte Walker is to star.

A ship had to be sunk in Long Island Sound in a terrific gale. To make the sinking more complete in all the awful details, it was decided to experiment with a miniature ship, having two dolls on the deck. A large tank was filled with water and dirt piled up at one side to represent the Connecticut hills. The usual overhead perforated "rain tank" and an aeroplane propeller created the driving tempest, and made enormous six-inch waves.

An unusual lightning effect was obtained by making tree-like slits in a half dozen places on a black backing, with a separate light back of each tree-like slit. This was an invention of Mr. O'Brien and his cameraman, H. B. Harris.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—Pearl Palmer and Edmund Roseman, members of a troupe of the Fox Film corporation now engaged here in taking scenes for a western scenario, "The Blue Streag," had a narrow escape from serious injury Sunday afternoon, when the horse they were riding slipped and fell into a creek. Roseman threw Miss Palmer clear of the struggling animal, but was caught by the weight of the horse and held under the water for some time. At the time of the accident the Fox company was making a scene for "The Blue Streak."

Miss June Caprice, of the Fox company, appeared in person at a local theatre Saturday night where her first picture was being shown. She was accompanied by other members of Director Adolfi's troupe and Director Nigh's company.

BURTON L. KING, Popular Plays and Players director for the Metro program, is in receipt of many interesting letters from boys in the trenches at the European front. They came through his tailor, whose labels were in several garments that Mr. King had given to societies that were collecting clothing for the men. Most of the letters are necessarily brief, but a few from the boys on hospital leave, describe the scenes and hardships of trench warfare, and express the appreciation of the lads who have been remembered so generously here in America.

POLITICS makes no stranger friends or enemies than does motion picture work. Helen Dunbar and Beverly Bayne, friends for year, find this especially true. Lately Miss Dunbar has been browbeating and attempting to poison Miss Bayne; she has imprisoned her, attempted to beat her out of an inheritance, and there seems to be no limit to the cruel and treacherous nature of Miss Dunbar, in her new character role of Jane Warren in Metro's serial, "The Great Secret."

A SON and three daughters make home life worth while for Florence Natol, character woman who appears in many Metro-Rolfe and Metro-Columbia productions. Miss Nato will next be seen in Lionel Barrymore's forthcoming Metro-Columbia production, "The Great Green Eye."

ROBERT WALKER, leading man for Viola Dana, limped painfully around the Pennsylvania terminal yards the other day, while Director John H. Collins, was taking scenes for Miss Dana's new Metro-Columbia production, "The Mortal Sin." Walker was injured when his foot was caught in a switch.

GLADYS HULETTE, soon to be seen in the Thanhouser-Pathe "'Her' New York," fell twenty-six feet from a hotel window in New York City the other day, and thanks to a life-net and a cameraman, they "got" her safely.

MR. and Mrs. B. A. Rolfe have returned from a visit over the holidays to Mr. Rolfe's mother in Brasher Falls, N. Y. A snow fall of more than five feet kept them within doors, but old fashioned visits with friends of their childhood supplanted the many planned sleigh rides.

IN AND OUT OF WEST COAST STUDIOS

By J. C. JESSEN

WEST Coast studios were less than twenty per cent efficient last week, due to absence of players for holiday vacations, rainy and cloudy weather. There was a general rejoicing when the sun put in an appearance, one afternoon, the first time in three days, and at all plants companies were busy until late in the afternoon.

Two new Triangle Kay-Bee plays were begun last week at the Ince Culver City studios. One will offer Dorothy Dalton as star, and the other Louise Glaum. The first referred to is a war zone drama from a story by John Lynch. It is being directed by Charles Miller. Jerome Wilson and Monte M. Katterjohn are responsible for the Glaum story, which Director Reginald Barker is filming. In both instances the stars appear in vampire roles.

RAYMOND B. WEST caused a scene from "Faust" to be staged with every word and note for a portion of a Triangle Kay-Bee photoplay. In this he had the aid of five men who have had grand opera and musical comedy experience. all of whom are members of the Ince organization; Thomas S. Guise, John Lince, Albert Cody, Jules Friquet and Victor Schertzinger, the composer.

William S. Hart has become a miner, and is staging many of the scenes for his coming photoplay about a mine shaft sunk in the side of one of the Inceville hills. It is a replica of a big Arizona mine. Working in this story with the popular western star are Margery Wilson, Jack Livingston and J. Frank Burke.

WALTER EDWARDS is having a grand opportunity to learn the ways of war correspondence in directing the filming of a story by J. G. Hawks laid along the lattle front. The principal role is that of a war correspondent from a London daily who has many thrilling and trying experiences, including the making of a flying mount, scaling a building, combating conspirators, all for the love of a fair woman.

Wallace Worsley, stage director and leading man, was added to the Triangle Kay-Bee forces by Thomas H. Ince last week. For a time he will serve as associate director with Reginald Barker so he will become familiar with the Ince system of production, and thereby fit himself for a position as director.

ENID BENNETT, Ince's most recent star, last week met her sister Marjory Bennett, who arrived from Australia, and together the two went East where the Ince actress will spend a short vacation. She will later return to the coast and appear in additional Ince subjects.

The Ince Kay-Bee studios have forwarded East a lively drama of adventure, "Blood Will Tell," which is the tale of a care free collegian whose lack of business judgment comes near wrecking a reputation built up by three generations. Scenes are laid in a college campus, the mart of commerce and in the glare of a big city's white lights. In the end the youth meets a girl and is lead to mend his ways. The story has William Desmond, Enid Markey, David M. Hartford, Howard Hickman, Margaret Thompson, Charles Gunn and J. Frank Burke as principals. It was produced by Director Charles Miller and photographed by Clyde DeVinne.

"The Gilded Youth," the last of the American Richard Bennett series of features, has been completed from the Aaron Hoffman story. Bennett appears as a careless young man who wins prosperity and recognition by the wearing of a magnificent fur overcoat won at a Belgium war relief lottery. The coat, hiding his shabby clothing, gives him entree to fashionable places, and brings about a transformation from a happy-go-lucky youth to that of a man of purpose. The photoplay is of the nature of a comedy drama.

Hollywood Hookum

Jan. 20, 1917 NEWS MORE NEWS

It Snowed Sunday.

THE motion picture industry, the second greatest of our midst, exceeded in number of employes only by real-estating, has been brought to near perfection by an influx of commercial experts, self-styled "efficiency men."

There are wails heard at the Lasky studio from every cameraman, because the save-the-squeal-man caused pencil sharpeners to be attached to cameras so the stenogs could do away with the exercise of whittling. A Universal genius has figured it out that enough electrical energy could be conserved by means of generators and storage batteries, hooked on to Edward Ullman's corps of sixty celluloid exposers, to light the place.

This is not to be installed at present for John Nickolaus, the Lab superintendent, fears such would kill reasons for poor film, and thus do away with Alibi Static. E. Helper Allen is training the Ince studio fountain goldfish to call down employees when they do not keep in line at the pay window, thus eliminating the services of one man, for it has been found professionals will pay attention to fish when they hear them talk. David Horsley's thousand-eyed camera requires but one operator, and, like a fly sees (and shoots) in all directions at once.

But creative brains have overlooked harnessing the hot and powerful air passing through the directors' megaphone, and much energy is thereby lost. Take G. Melford (the whispering director) as an example, and we guess that if tests were made, it would be found the earth tips on its axis every time his cameraman cranks. If salaries were fixed by the pressure or temperature tests, it might cause a falling off of internal income tax, for D. Wark is said to never speak so loud that he can be heard farther than sixty rods. Hank McRae is referred to as a soft voice Simon LeGree, Reg. Barker defies the rattle of a Ford, and Tom Ince's boy, Westy, can be heard over the din and roar of battle.

The industry needs men who will conserve the natural resources.

David Horsley's autoped has been stored for the rainy season for want of skid chains. The trailer will be used with one of the auto trucks.

Word has reached us in a round-about way that the Southern California Climate Boosting Association will shortly petition the film companies for the right to censor all publicity copy which goes out during the rainy season. Old Man Censor won't be downed.

Bill (Kalem) Wright was Glendale, California's, Santa Claus, giving that thriving municipality five new producing companies as a New Year's gift.

George Walsh is such a good boy he couldn't think of any swear off for New Year's Day, so he's going to stop buying pets.

Julius Caesar, a beautiful brunette with soulful eyes, has been added by M. de la Parelle to the La Salle Film Company's stock. Jule has been attempting to hog all the scenes, but other players have overlooked this professional instinct by the remark that such is natural for a pig.

in the woodlands near Santa Cruz. The hair famine continues at the factory, for all the boys used King Gillett hoes.

Hank Mann, by printed forms, advised his friends their presents were requested at Castle de Slap-Stick New Year's Eve. Queensbury rules prevailed, and all were advised to bring arnica and bandages. Music was furnished by the little wonder records, decorations by Woolworth, and Oldfield and Kipper were caterers. Rather than mislead his friends, Hank notified them Chaplin would not be present.

Hookum invites its readers to contribute essays of a constructive character on art, the drama, and slap-stick, but owing to the high price of ink since submarine transportation was introduced for dye-stuffs, none of more than fifty words, written on one side of the paper, will be noticed.

Monopoly note: "Dustin Farnum is utilizing every bit of sunlight to do scenes for his first Fox photoplay."

Commercialism has downed the sporting proclivities of many a Lasky player. With the mammoth artificially lighted studio completed, it makes possible work on all rainy days, so the Lasky Yachting and Swimming association has disbanded.

Perc Hilburn, expert camera cranker of Lasky's, is the only optimist of the film colony. The rain came just when he wanted rain stuff.

Ces deMille has no fear of the thirteenth. He's going to premier "Joan The Woman" at L. A.'s Majestic Theatre that day.

Skid chains are to be put on the rollers used to move Harv Thew's Lasky scenario department. The cry of "safety first" is heeded as the continuity buildings are raced about the lot almost daily, and the rainy season causes additional dangers.

Herb Rawlinson's mail is littered up every week by girls writing to inquire what kind of curlers he uses. Save the postage, girls, it's au natural.

The photoplay colony has been denied, by Los Angeles saloon owners, the privilege of shooting up the place by a celluloid gun, but the welcome sign still hangs out for those who wish to rest their weary feet on the brass rail.

Ron Bradbury, Kalem heavy, has found a heavy mate—it's a wild cat, and Brad has built a nifty little cage for it at the studio.

MEMBERS of the Yorke-Metro producing company were possibly the only ones of the Los Angeles film colony to enjoy a white Christmas. They going to a lumber camp near the Oregon-California line the latter part of last week. In this vicinity exteriors for a portion of the coming Metro release "The Promise," a drama of the big out doors, will be filmed.

Dorothy Barrett, formerly connected with the Universal and Lasky organizations, has become a member of the Fred J. Balshofer Yorke-Metro staff, and will have charge of the publicity department at the studio.

A feature, dealing with the subject of capital punishment, to be titled "Who Shall Take My Life," is being prepared for filming by Director Colin Campbell at the Selig studio. The cast selected for the subjects includes Fritzi Brunette, Tom Santschi, Bessie Eyton, Ed Coxon, Al. W. Filson, Harry Lonsdale, Eugenie Besserer, and other Selig players.

AT the Vitagraph Hollywood studio, William A. Wolbert is making the final scenes for a five or six reel production adapted from the Frederick Isham novel of adventure titled "Mr. Aladin from Broadway." Edith Storey, Wm. Duncan and Antonio Moreno are co-starred in this picture, and the cast includes George Holt, Otto Lederer and other favorites of the Vitagraph organization.

Another Vitagraph Company headed by Mary Anderson is busy with the sixth one reel episode of "The Dangers of Doris."

William Duncan, who recently was notified of his promotion to directorship for the Vitagraph, will within a few days begin the making of the first episode of this release. This very successful actor is perhaps best known for his work in "The Chalice of Courage," "The Last Man," and "God's Country—And the Woman," and in addition to these has been leading man and star in Vitagraph productions for the last four years.

AT the Morosco plant Howard Estebrook is directing his first picture with Vivian Martin, and the second George Beban subject is under way with Donald Crisp as director.

Maxwell Ryder, considered the best character actor of the English stage, has been engaged by Morosco Company to play an important part in the support of George Beban in his present subject.

Eight one reel comedies have been completed by the La Salle Film Company's organization under the direction of M. de la Parelle, and shortly announcement of the release is to be made. The titles of the eight single reelers are "The Flight that Failed," "Chubby Inherits a Harem," "The Prodigal Uncle," "The Hungry Romeo," "Detective Lockjaw's Downfall," "The Sheriff's Baby Brother," "Chubby's Antique Chicken," and "Kissing the Butter-Fly." Gene Otto, the heavyweight, is the leading comedian; William Scott, juvenile lead; Camille Astor, comedienne, and Xasu Pitts, character woman. Mr. de la Parelle has King Vidor as his assistant and Robert Peck as cameraman.

FOR the first time in more than fourteen months, all members of the big staff at Universal City were at work. Following a general close-down from Christmas and weather which would not permit filming, all companies fell behind in their work. General Manager H. O. Davis called for a vote of the directors as to whether they should work on Sunday and have a holiday on New Year's Day or not, and the majority decided to work on Sunday.

Rena Rogers, until recently ingenue for the American Company at Santa Barbara, has been engaged by Marshall Stedman, director of the Universal employment department, to play in a series of light comedy dramas to be made under the direction of T. N. Heffron, which will feature Herbert Rawlinson. The first to be made is titled "On Six Cylinders."

"THE Cruise of the Alden Besse," a five reel subject, has been completed by Director Lynn Reynolds and his company which includes Myrtle Gonzales as star.

Director Reynolds has now prepared a script for a five reel Alaskan drama titled "The Code of the Klondike," which gives Miss Gonzales and George Hernandez the featured parts.

Lee Moran is appearing as a crook in the Nestor comedy "The Benevolent Burglar," and breaks up an elopement when he goes down the ladder in a woman's rain coat and falls into the arms of Eddie Lyons. Jack Cunningham is the author of the story.

Gail Henry, self-styled the homliest woman on the screen, in the Joker comedy being made by W. W. Beaudine "For Art's Sake," persists in posing for an artist to make a "September Morn" subject of her. When the picture is finally completed, a disgruntled servant in the house exchanges it to one of a jackass, just before the unveiling, which was done in the presence of a gathering of art connoisseurs. William Franey takes the part of an art salesman who attempted to win a home.

RENT MILLER, who has been directing a Vogue Company and playing lead comedian parts, has completed his contract and is on his way to New York.

"The Cabaret Scratch," with Dan Russell as the featured comedian, has been completed at the L-Ko studio by Director Craig Hutchinson, and another company under the direction of Dick Smith has filmed "That Dawgone Dog."

Wind and rain the night before Christmas caused a big loss to the L-Ko Company by the destruction of a street set. All the "buildings" were blown down, and when the company reported for work on Tuesday, their location was in ruins.

OTHER activities on the same lot include the completion of a two reel melodrama, "The Long Arm of the Law," with Mae Gaston, James Faussett and Nan Christy as principals. It is a detective story dealing with opium smugglers.

Another subject in production is called "Object, Widower," being directed by Harry Solter and featuring Bertine Burkette.

The original stage at the Signal Film Company's studios is to be torn out, and a much larger one built at a more desirable portion of the grounds. The stage will be so constructed that it may be used as an indoor studio during the rainy season. Plans are being drawns for a row of twenty new dressing rooms. They will be much larger than the present ones with windows on two sides and with hot and cold water in each. It is planned that all improvements will be made by the time Director McGowan completes the Helen Holmes serial "A Lass of the Lumberlands," which will be within the next two weeks.

THE fourteenth and fifteenth episodes require water stuff, and every member has learned the effect of January on mountain streams. In one instance William Behrens found it very difficult to play dead in water at a freezing temperature, for every nerve in his body, he said afterwards, was yelling to be permitted to shiver.

Heeding the petition of the national organization of the liquor interests, Los Angeles saloon owners are denying to motion picture companies the use of their bars or any part of the premises for use in the filming of interior or exterior scenes. It is the contention of liquor interests that motion picture theatres have caused a great falling off in the saloon business, especially in residential districts, and that scenes in pictures showing drinking were detrimental to liquor traffic. This will cause the building of sets both interior and exterior whenever saloon or cafe scenes are desired.

The Lasky Company is said to have secured the services of a Mexican army to play the roles of South American soldiers in "The American Consul," which has Theodore Roberts as the star. The producing organization went to the international boundary for these scenes, and secured some very good "shots." The Mexican soldiers worked well until the American marines were lined up opposite them, and then came a floating of the white flag. To complete filming the scenes wanted, the Lasky Company found it necessary to borrow the Mexican soldiers' uniforms, and employ American men to wear them.

H. B. CARPENTER, Billy Elmer, Lillian Leighton and others have been cast in important roles to support Marie Doro and Elliott Dexter in a Lasky production now being made by Frank Reicher.

Another new production commenced by Director Robert Leonard, has Mae Murray as star, and Emmett Flynn, Jane Wolff, Mrs. Louis McCord, Louise Morrison and Charles Ogle in the other princopal parts.

WILLIAM (KALEM) WRIGHT of New York City was host at a dinner party given members of the four producing companies of the Hollywood and Glendale studios of the Kalem Company. The dinner was served in the Rose Room of Hotel Alexandria, Tuesday Evening, December 26, with about fifty in attendance.

Mr. Wright served as toastmaster following the dinner and cabaret entertainment, and short talks were made by Directors James Horne, Lloyd Hamilton, Walter Morton and Howard M. Mitchell; Scenario Editor, Phil Lang; Technical Director, Storm V. Boyd; W. H. Cree, manager General Film Company, Los Angeles Exchange; Theodore Newman, manager of Pioneer Los Angeles Film Exchange, the first to handle Kalem subjects; True Boardman, Ronald Bradbury, Frank Jonasson, George Williams and others.

The dinner was of the nature of a Christmas party, and the pleasant evening closed with an impromptu program by professionals of the four producing companies.

THE entire river front city built especially for the Triangle Fine Arts production being directed by Tod Browning titled "Jim Bludso," was wholly destroyed by the heavy rain storm last week. It required two weeks for the construction, and when the players and directors arrived at the beach town they were unable to make scenes. The levee and city is now being rebuilt, and it is expected scenes will be staged early the coming week. "Jim Bludso" is a thrilling story of life on the Mississippi River and is based on the "Pike Country Ballads" by John Hay.

Constance Talmadge, Mary H. O'Connor and Director Paul Powell Planning Production for New Triangle Fine Art Play. Miss O'Connor is the Author

Wilfred Lucas is starred with Olga Gray playing the opposite lead. The cast includes Sam DeGrasse as the heavy, George Stone, Charles Lee, Winifred Westover, James O'Shea and Monte Blue.

"The Girl of the Timber Claims" is now being completed at the Fine Arts studio. In this production, Constance Talmadge, who is the featured player, takes the part of a child of nature raised in the big tree country, and wears a broad-brimmed cowboy hat, man's army shirt and flannel skirt. The supporting players are A. D. Sears in the male lead, Clyde Hopkins, Beau Byrd Wilbur Higby, Bennie Schuman, Joseph Singleton, F. A. Turner, Charles Lee and Mrs. Talmadge. "The Girl of the Timber Claims" as yet is not definitely titled.

MILDRED HARRIS, who is playing opposite Robert Harron in the Fine Arts production, temporarily titled "The Bad Boy," will leave for New York to play opposite Douglas Fairbanks in his next Fine Arts comedy, as soon as the filming of the subject is completed. Chester Withey has the direction of the subject, and the supporting members are Richard Cummings, Josephine Crowell, W. H. Brown, James Harrison, Coleen Moore, Elmo Lincoln and Harry Fisher.

REHEARSALS for the Triangle Fine Arts production titled "That Colby Girl" have been started by Director Joseph Henebery. Dorothy Gish is the featured player, and Frank Bennett will play the lead opposite. The cast includes Lillian Langdon, Jennie Lee, Fred Warren and Spottiswoode Aitken.

The William Fox temporary studios present very bedraggled appearance with players, directors and other employees going from place to place in the gumbo mud. Following the fire the plant was practically reconstructed for temporary use over night, and because of unpreparedness the wet weather has caused many inconveniences as well as loss and damage to sets.

MIRIAM COOPER, in private life Mrs. R. A. Walsh, has been contracted to appear in Fox subjects, and will be starred in a series made by her husband. Miss Cooper will be remembered for her work in "The Birth of A Nation," "Intolerance" and her appearance in the Fox production, "The Honor System."

The players to support Tom Mix and Victoria Forde in Fox comedies are Pat Christman, Victor Potel, Sig Jordan, George Pankey, Victor Frith, Chet Ryan and Voss Glenn.

The work of producing the first Dustin Farnum subject has been begun by Director William D. Taylor.

MACK SENNETT, general manager of the Keystone and Mabel Normand Film companies, last week made his first statement concerning the first production of the latter company, which has been titled "Mickey." Miss Normand plays the part of an orphan, the ward of an old miner, old Joe, which is taken by George Nichols. Wheeler Oakman appears as one of Mickey's lovers, a young miner, and Louis Cody is his rival. Laura LaVarnie takes the part of Mrs. DePyster, a social climber, and Minta Durfee, her daughter. A genuine Indian squaw, Minnie Prevost, takes the part of the squaw, a servant of old Joe and Indian mammy of Mickey. Director Richard Jones is now making the final scenes for the subject, which will probably consist of seven or eight reels.

Mr. Sennett will shortly make an announcement as to the date and method of releasing this production.

RAYMOND B. WEST will direct the other new production. Arthur Maude, former leading man in Ince subjects in "The Devil," "The Cup of Life" and "The Reward," has been specially engaged for the subject Mr. West is now making.

The subject of Reginald Barker with Dorothy Dalton as star will be finished within the week, and she is then to appear in a new drama with a sensational story. The role to be taken in this is referred to as one entirely new for this popular actress. John Lynch and J. G. Hawks are responsible for the story and scenario, and Charles Miller will direct its production.

WILLIAM S. HART with Margie Wilson as his leading woman, and Jack Livingston playing an important part, has begun the filming of a thrilling mining drama by Martin Brown and Lambert Hillyer. The situations in this story are said to measure up favorably with those in "The Arayan" and "Helen's Hinges."

William S. Hart as an editor is the next role in which Thomas H. Ince will present the western actor in a Kay-Bee play. This will be titled "Truthful Tulliver." Tulliver, taken by Hart, is the editor of a western newspaper who drove iniquity from "Glory Hole," a small Arizona mining hamlet in the early '60s, and was instrumental in bringing about two pretty romances. This editor found the gun mightier than the pen, and used both instruments of warfare to see that his dictates were carried out. Hart, in the characterization of this role, retains all his rugged and fearless mannerisms, and author J. G. Hawks has given him a number of big situations. Alma Reubens, who has played opposite Douglas Fairbanks, is the leading woman of this subject. Others in the cast are Walter Perry, Norbert A. Myles, Mina Bryon, and Milton Ross. In the making of this picture, Hart risked his life in riding a madly galloping horse to the back end of a swift moving train where he leaped to the observation platform. The fete is the climax of driving a cowardly easterner from the Arizona town. Another stunt of the picture was to ride his favorite pinto pony "Fritz" into a gambling hall, and out again by the horse leaping through a window.

U. Director George Cochrane Pointing Out to His Brother, Tom, a New Oriental Set

IN the future, all productions of the Fox Film Corporation on the west coast will be at the Sunset and Western Avenue studio, Hollywood. When the first Fox Company came to Los Angeles, a lease was taken on the Selig Edendale plant, and there the first three companies worked. When the comedy organizations were added in July, the National Drama Corporation studio in Hollywood was leased. Later Western Representative Carlos secured additional space which makes possible at this time concentrating production at the one studio, which has been found advantageous.

"One Touch of Sin" is the name of the Fox dramatic subject completed this week by Richard Stanton. It has as its principals Gladys Brockwell, Willard Louis and Jack Standing.

"THE Case of Simon Dudsbury," a three-reel story, is holding the attention of Director William Mong. It is of the nature of a detective tale, in which an old antique collector of wealth, feigns death from poison administered by a doctor that he may learn the intentions of the physician who claims to be his friend. The body disappears from the undertaking parlors, and months later the "murdered man" returns to save the doctor from death. Nellie Allen is playing the opposite lead, Mong appearing as the antique collector. It is an original story by Anthony Caldewey.

Ben Wilson has again taken up directing and is now in charge of filming a two-reel story by Maie Havey, "Raided Four A. M," with a cast composed of Priscilla Dean, Harry Carter and Maude George as principals.

THE Jokerites are busy with semi-Western scenes, filming the one-reel comedy, "The M. T. Ranch," which Director W. W. Beaudine is producing from a story by Jack Cunningham.

Allen Curtis has filmed a comedy of one-reel, entitled "The Butler's Blunder," and is now making an East India story. In both subjects Ralph McComas and Eileen Sedgwick are the featured players.

Another patriotic feature film of five reels, "The Reward of His Government," is now being made at U City by Director Allen J. Holubar, who is also playing the featured part of an army officer. He has as his supporting players Lois Wilson, Dorothy Davenport and Joseph Girard.

THE fourth of the Mary Ann series conceived and produced by Ruth Stonehouse, is now in the making. This one will be titled "Mary Ann's Love Affair," and besides Miss Stonehouse and Lydia Titus the only players will be children.

Wedgewood Nowell, Molly Malone and Millard K. Wilson are the principals of the cast for "Seething Humanity," in five reels, now being made by Max Ingram.

Harry Carey has for his leading woman, Claire Du Brey, and under the direction of Fred Kelsey, they are playing in a Western drama, "Their Hold-Up." William Gettinger and Vester Pegg, two of the best known real for sure cow punchers are playing important parts.

JULIUS FIRTHMAN, a short story writer, has been added to the Universal scenario department staff, and with William Parker is now preparing a five reel melodrama to be produced by Director Henry McRae.

George Sargent, recently added to the Universal directorial staff, is to make a series of pictures featuring the Universal baby, little Zoe Rea, each of which will consist of one reel. "Dollars and a Heart" is the title of the first, and the principal supporting player will be Dorothy Davenport.

GEORGE COCHRANE, directing Violet McMillan, Gordon Griffith, and Fred Woodward, the animal impersonater, is filming "The Wonderful Ring," a story of the fairy tale type, and one of a series espesially suitable for childrens' programs. Cochrane's troubles for the present one include keeping a lion, tiger, bear, crow and donkey from interfering with the mental condition of his human players. In this instance, Woodward appears as all of the beasts.

William V. Mong has written a five reel story which he is next going to film. The temporary title is "Lieutenant Governor." The play is said to deal with capital punishment. Mr. Mong will play a leading part, and others selected for this feature are Dorothy Davenport, Charles Pearle, Harry Holden and Charles Mailes.

The New York office of the Universal have authorized the making of ten additional two-reel episodes of "The Voice on the Wire" series, featuring Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber. The first six episodes were made by Director Stuart Paton, and sent to New York, it being the intention originally to make only that number.

ADVANCE OFFERINGS OF THE PROGRAMS

Nance O'Neil Will Continue Before Camera, Though on the Stage

Nance O'Neil's return to the speaking stage will not affect her work before the camera under the direction of Frank Powell. Mr. Powell recently placed Miss O'Neil under contract for a series of feature pictures to be made by the Frank Powell Producing Corporation and distributed through Mutual, the first of which, a picturization of Gertrude Atherton's novel, "Mrs. Balfame," is now in process of production.

"Her God" Is Changed to "The Red Woman"

The next Gail Kane release from the World Film Corporation is to be called "The Red Woman" instead of "Her God" as formerly. The principal personage is an Indian princess very much in love with a white frontiersman whom the neighboring Mexicans seek to kill. The Indian princess manages to save him, but the process is accomplished by an exceedingly narrow margin.

"Unlucky Jim" Is Wilbur Subject from Horsley

A new series of eight Crane Wilbur features is being produced by David Horsley under the general title "The Morals of Men." "Unlucky Jim," is the first of the five-reel features to be finished. The story begins with the birth of Unlucky Jim, on Friday the thirteenth, to parents who, through the childhood and youth of the son, fail to sympathetically understand his well-meant but always unlucky pranks and adventures.

Variety Marks Mutual Program for 15th

"Beloved Rogues," with Kolb and Dill, Heads the List—"Shorty and the Yellow Ring" Follows

KOLB AND DILL in a five part production, entitled "Beloved Rogues," top the Mutual Film Corporation's schedule of releases for the week of January 15. It was produced by Al Santell, who has directed the entire series of Kolb and Dill subjects.

The cast includes May Cloy, who has figured in all of the K. & D's., Harry Von Meter and Clarence Burton.

"Shorty and the Yellow Ring," scheduled for release January 15, is the first of the series of special Mutual "Featurettes" to be put out under the general title of "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton." There will be fifteen of these two-reel Hamilton productions in the series just announced.

"Tours Around the World," the Gaumont-Mutual travel reel for the week, takes the spectator for a trip from Gibraltar to Algiers, through Tunis and bits of other North African territory.

"See America First" scheduled for the week of January 15, shows Mount Lowe, Calif. This split reel also contains Harry Palmer's weekly cartoon comic.

George Ovey appears on Thursday of the week in "Jerry's Winning Way."

"A Jack Tar in the Making," the third of the Mutual's series of "Uncle Sam's Defenders," is available on Friday of that week. This release shows the steps in the making of a landlubber into a full-fledged sailor, described in nautical terms as "an able seaman."

Rube Miller and Owen Evans appear in a two-part Vogue comedy released Sunday, January 21, under the title of "Tailor's Trimmings."

"Reel Life," the Mutual Magazine in films, for the week, pictures orange-growing in California, discusses "the Air" and "the Hydro."

The week's Mutual schedule includes Chapter 13 of the Signal-Mutual "A Lass of the Lumberlands;" the eighth of the Gaumont company's "The Vampires," under the title of "The Poison Man;" and "Ace High" the third of the Niagara-Mutual's series of newspaper stories featuring Helen Greene and released under the general title of "Perils of Our Girl Reporters."

"Infidelity?" Is Set for Release on the 11th

The first release of the Erbograph Company on the Art Dramas program will be "Infidelity?" a five reel feature written and directed by Ashley Miller, co-starring Anna Q. Nilsson and Eugene Strong.

The story of "Infidelity?" concerns the lives of two generations—a man and his wife, and their daughter and her sweetheart. A mysterious murder, for which an innocent man suffers twenty years imprisonment, New York bohemianism, hypnotism, and the occult power of the East are the ingredients that go to make up this production.

The central theme of the play points out the dangers of marital infidelity in such a way that the picture might almost be called a problem play. "Infidelity?" is the first production made by Erbograph since the release of "The Crimson Stain Mystery."

"The Rainbow" is the third Art Dramas Production and comes from William Sherrill. Dorothy Bernard, Robert Conness and Jack Sherrill are the leads

"The Rainbow" to Be Released in Six Parts

ANNOUNCEMENT has been made that "The Rainbow," William L. Sherrill's first contribution to the Art Dramas program, will be released in six parts instead of five, the customary length of art dramas.

This Sherrill Art Drama is an adaptation of the stage success of the same name. Henry Miller and Ruth Chatterton were the featured players of the legitimate production, which ran through two years at the Liberty theatre, New York city. While at this theatre, "The Rainbow" made a box office record that held until it was surpassed by the wonderful business of "The Birth of a Nation," which played at the same house later.

Dorothy Bernard is the star of the screen production, with Robert Conness and Jack Sherrill in the featured supporting parts. It is noteworthy that Miss Bernard also played the leading role in "The Rainbow" while she was the leading lady of Belasco's stock company in Washington. Robert Conness plays the part that Henry Miller created in the original stage production. Jack Sherrill has a heavy part in "The Rainbow" along the lines that have made him such a favorite with motion picture audiences in the past.

The story of "The Rainbow" is particularly well adapted to picturization. It is one of the few plays that did not depend on lines alone for its success, but on the strong dramatic conflict which marked the action of the production. It tells of how a husband and wife are separated through a misunderstanding that finally leads to the divorce courts. The wife takes their infant daughter to live in England, not knowing that her ne'er-do-well brother had squandered her estate, and that her income is being secretly supplied to her by her former husband through the family lawyer. Fifteen years after the divorce, she returns to America, the daughter now a young lady. She meets the husband's sister, who persuades her to permit the daughter to pay a visit to her father. Father and daughter are overjoyed at the reunion, but the mother cuts the visit short abruptly, because of some scandal she had heard regarding her former husband.

In order not to hurt his child, the father tells her that the separation is only temporary. The mother leaves the country again, never to return, but through a curious chain of circumstances, the family is reunited, and the romance of the girl, which is unfolded throughout the picture, ends happily also.

Ralph Dean is the director of "The Rainbow." Mr. Dean was for a long time associated with the Frohman Amusement Corporation, of which Mr. Sherrill is also the president. Before that, he was for a number of years in the production department of the Frohmans, on the legitimate stage.

"Shorty Hamilton," Long Mutual Serial, on 15th

THE Mutual Film Corporation has contracted with the Monogram Films of Los Angeles for the release of a series of fifteen two-reel dramas under the general title "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton," the first of which, entitled "Shorty Hamilton and the Yellow Ring," will be released on January 15.

This new series is to be put out by the Mutual as one of its "featurette" star productions, just announced by President John R. Freuler.

Claude Slater, who closed the contract with Mr. Freuler for the "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton" a few days ago, is an old Mutual man. He returned to Los Angeles after making the contract and is now engaged with John Hamilton, who is an ex-officer of the United States army, in the staging of the fifth play in the series.

Mr. Hamilton served six years in the United States cavalry and became associated with film enterprises four years ago, specializing in western character parts. He was for five years a cowboy.

In the "Shorty Hamilton" featurettes, Mr. Hamilton portrays a cowboy who is used to good society though some people think he is crude because he wears "chaps."

Hist! Cub Gives Away Trade Secrets

The operation of a motion picture outfit in making a funny film is the background for the comedy situations in "Jerry's Big Raid," the sixth of the new series of David Horsley's Club Comedies now being distributed through Mutual. "Jerry's Big Raid," is scheduled for release February 8.

"Cupid's Caddies" from Kalem on 16th

From its coast studios, located at Glendale and Hollywood, Calif., the Kalem Comany has received for release through the General Film exchanges the third week in January, a "Ham comedy, two part episode of "The Girl from Frisco" and a "Hazard of Helen." Director Robert Ellis, producing in Jacksonville, Fla., has contributed an episode of "Grant, Police Reporter."

On Tuesday, January 16, Ham and Bud, assisted by Ethel Teare and Henry Murdock, introduce some new comedy stunts in a "Ham" comedy entitled "Cupid's Caddies."

On Wednesday, January 17, will be released a "Girl from Frisco" episode entitled "The Resurrection of Gold Bar."

"The Black Circle," an episode of "Grant, Police Reporter," will be released on Friday, January 19.

On Saturday, January 20, Helen Gibson will appear in "The Wrecked Station."

"Frou-Frou" Changed to "Hungry Heart"

The title of "Frou-Frou," the new Alice Brady picture for the World Film program, has been changed to "A Hungry Heart," and the production will be released on February 5, one week ahead of the original date. The first American stage adaptation of this celebrated French play was produced by the late Augustin Daly and at once became a sensational success. Afterward it was revived from time to time by various feminine stars, always effectively.

In the screen version, directed by Emile Chautard, Miss Brady plays the butterfly heroine broken on the wheel of custom. The other important characters are acted by Gerda Holmes, Edward Langford, George McQuarrie, Alex Francis and John Dugley.

"Little Lost Sister," Selig, in Production

William N. Selig has handed to Director Al Green the scenario for "The Little Lost Sister," which will be filmed as a Red Seal Play for release through K-E-S-E. Much of the production work will be done at the Selig studios, Chicago. An all-star cast will be employed, probably headed by George Fawcett.

"Terrible Wedding," Last "Vampire," Set for Release on Jan. 18

"The Terrible Wedding" is the final episode of the Gaumont-Mutual photo-novel, "The Vampires." It reaches the screen January 18, the big feature of the Gaumont program of the week of January 14. This chapter marks the end of the organized band known as the arch criminals of Paris.

The first single-reel release of the week is "Reel Life," No. 37. This issue of the Mutual Magazine in Film has pictures of the Kid Glove Industry, Producing Pickles, Care of the Teeth, and Irrigating Fish Wheels, showing how fish are kept in the irrigation ditches of the far west.

"Tours Around the World," No. 11, reaches the screen on January 16. It has pictures "From Gibraltar to Algeciras," "In Tunisia," and of the "Bois de Boulogne," Paris' largest park. The pictures of Gibraltar are particularly timely since this is the gate to the Mediterranean held by the British. At Algeciras was held the European council that grew out of the Agadir incident.

"See America First," No. 71, released January 17, takes the spectator for a trip up Mt. Lowe, the popular peak that lies twenty miles from Los Angeles, Cal. On the same reel is a Gaumont Kartoon Komic, animated for the screen by Harry Palmer. It is called "Mr. Common People Investigates."

The fourth Gaumont single-reel of the week is The Mutual Weekly. As this is not made up until the day it is issued, no advance of its contents is to be had.

Mutual "Featurettes"

President John R. Freuler of the Mutual Film Corporation announces the coming of a number of series of important short releases under the general designation "Featurettes," which by their artistic merit will illustrate the meaning of the new title—that they are all star and specialty productions.

Among Mutual productions that are now classified as "Featurettes" are four Gaumont single-reel releases "Tours Around the World," "Reel Life," "See America First," "Mutual Weekly," the George Ovey one reel "Cub Comedies" produced by David Horsley, the Vogue two reel comedies and "Adventures of Shorty Hamilton."

Essanay Announces Twelve Titles of New Serial

THE complete list of titles of the twelve photoplays which will comprise Essanay's dramatic series, "Is Marriage Sacred?" have been announced.

"The Burning Band" was the first release and was followed by "Dancing With Folly. "Wife in Sunshine," released December 30, reveals a wife who is loyal to her husband so long as he is prosperous. She learns, to her greatest misfortune, that this is the wrong attitude to take.

"When the Man Speaks," released January 6, presents a man whose toleration leads his wife to believe that he is an "easy mark." In "The Sinful Marriage," released January 13, a young girl is sold on the altar by her wealth-seeking parents. But love conquers in the end. "The Wide Wrong Way," released January 20, is the parents' intolerant treatment of their daughters. It leads the girls to deceive them in meeting their beaux. The girl trifles with the serious purposes of her many suitors in "The Magic Mirror," released January 27, and finds herself without suitors when finally she seeks marriage.

"Shifting Shadows," released February 3, presents the joys and sorrows of married life, but shows that always there is sunshine at the end. "Desertion and Nonsupport," released February 10, are the two main charges upon which divorce suits are based. This drama shows how such complications might easily have been avoided, had reason entered into the scheme. "Ashes on the Hearthstone," released February 17, are the ashes of what had been a happy marriage, destroyed by divorce. The child of the couple, however, enters the play, to rebuild the home and happiness. "The Extravagant Bride," released February 24, tells its own story.

"Social Obligations," the last of the series, shows a wife who neglected her husband and home for pink teas, card parties and trouble.

The "Is Marriage Sacred?" series is being enacted by a stock company of screen stars specially formed. In the cast is included such well-known actors and actresses as Marguerite Clayton, Edward Arnold, Lillian Drew, Sydney Ainsworth and Thomas Commerford. Each of the photoplays has a separate and distinct plot, and is offered under an individual title. The screen time for each one of the pictures mentioned in the list is approximately thirty minutes.

"Little Shoes" from Essanay, January 15

"Little Shoes," Henry B. Walthall's next Essanay picture, will be released on January 15. Mr. Walthall follows himself on the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay program, his feature, "The Truant Soul," being the last big production of Essanay.

Mary Charleson, Mr. Walthall's leading woman in "The Truant Soul," portrays the leading feminine role.

The story was written by Eleanor M. Ingram.

Two children frequently seen in Essanay productions, portray the childish roles which Mr. Walthall and Miss Charleson assume after the brief prologue. They are Mary V. McAlister and Jack Paul. Others in the cast are U. K. Haupt, Patrick Calhoun, Victor Benoit, and B. C. Turner. The production was directed by Arthur Berthelet. Its screen time is one hour and fifteen minutes.

For its February 5 release Essanay will offer through Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, "Skinner's Dress Suit." The story is by Henry Irving Dodge and appeared in the Saturday Evening Post.

Bryant Washburn is playing the leading role in this production. The play will be designed for a screen time of approximately one hour and fifteen minutes. Harry Beaumont is directing the drama.

Fisher Plays Opposite Miss Minter

George Fisher has been engaged to play opposite Mary Miles Minter in Mutual Star Productions. Mr. Fisher's first appearance in support of the Mutual's attractive young star, will be in "The Gentle Intruder," Miss Minter's sixth Mutual production.

"Babette" in Work at "V"

Peggy Hyland and Marc MacDermott started work last week in Greater Vitagraph's studio on "Babette." This picture story is by A. Van Buren Powell from the famous book of the same name by F. Berkeley Smith. "Babette" is a story of French life.

HOW PICTURES ARE BOOKING

K-E-S-E Branches Report Big "Truant Soul" Bookings

K-E-S-E branch offices, report good booking on Essanay's feature "The Truant Soul."

After the pre-release showing, The Chicago Tribune noticed the picture in high terms. The Chicago Herald, The Chicago Evening Post, and The Chicago Daily News also praised the film.

In the East "The Truant Soul" was booked by many of the leading theatres, and a large number of prints will be kept working overtime for many months in this section of the country, according to the company.

Mr. Kleine is paving the way and planning for a heavy business on the Max Linder comedies now being prepared at the Essanay studios in Chicago. Mr. Kleine states that all K-E-S-E branch offices are receiving many inquiries regarding these comedies and a high water mark is expected in the distribution of this Essanay product.

Mr. Kleine reports quick, appreciative response to his recent sending out of hundreds of checks to exhibitors, representing interest on their deposits. He declares that no innovation that he ever established in his service met with a more unqualified endorsement than this interest paying plan.

Amongst the recent releases through K-E-S-E "The Cossack Whip" appears to have scored a success, especially in Greater New York. A special interest was manifested in this K-E-S-E release on the East Side of Greater New York, where, according to a statement of the company, the bookings amounted to about fifty days.

"Bird of Paradise" Still Going Strong

IN Baltimore, Md., Miss Fischer's picture was shown at the Wizard and at the Lyric. In Minneapolis, the picture ran for the first half of the week of November 12 at the Lyric theatre. It was shown at the Strand theatre in St. Paul, at the Crystal theatre in Dallas, Tex., the Hipp in Omaha, Neb., the Alhambra in Ogden, Utah, at the Happy Hour theatre in Rochester, N. Y., the Boston in Boston, Mass., the Princess in Hartford, Conn., and scores of other theatres the country over.

Ben Judell, manager of the Chicago Branch of the Mutual says that "The Pearl of Paradise" is one of the most successful pictures ever handled through that branch. It was shown at the Orpheum, Star and Theatorium theatres downtown in Chicago the first week, and has been booked up almost solid in his territory, including Chicago theatres and such places as the La Salle in South Bend, Ind., the Lyric in Springfield, Ill., the Star in Evanston, Ill., the Lyceum in Peoria, the Princess in Joliet, and the Star in De Kalb, Ill., until February 22.

Mr. Judell says that Miss Fischer's second picture, "Miss Jackie of the Navy," released the week of December 11, is having a tremendous booking, being engaged as far ahead as March 5. The picture is being shown at the Orpheum and Pastime theatres downtown the first week, and at the Hamlin, Logan Square advance neighborhood theatres, the Princess in Joliet and the Colonial in South Bend, Ind.

"Fantomas" Is Still Popular

Notwithstanding that the Gaumont company is now releasing "The Vampires," its former photo-novel, "Fantomas," is still being booked in a highly satisfactory manner. The one difference between the two Gaumont series is that in "Fantomas" one criminal defies society, whereas in "The Vampires" it is the entire band.

"Pearl of Paradise" Pleases Exhibitors, Says Mutual

Reports of the successful showings of "The Pearl of Paradise," with Margarita Fischer, pour into the Mutual office.

In Syracuse, N. Y., "The Pearl of Paradise" had its first run at the Strand theatre. At Youngtown, O., it was shown at the Park theatre.

J. D. Wineland, manager of the Hippodrome theatre of Joplin, Mo., after seeing "The Pearl of Paradise" at a preshowing said, "After seeing 'The Pearl of Paradise,' I hasten to request as early booking on this subject as possible."

Paramount Pictures Booked in Twelve Philadelphia Theatres

Paramount pictures are now being shown in the following Philadelphia theatres: The Ruby, at Sixth street; the Alhambra, at Twelfth street; the Stanley; the Leader, at Fortieth street; the Baltimore, at Fifty-first street; the Apollo, at Fifty-second street; the Sherwood, at Fifty-sixth street; the Globe, at Fifty-ninth street; the Cedar, at Sixtieth street, the Overbrook, at Sixty-third street; the Paschall, at Seventy-fourth street; and the Orient, at Sixtieth street; all near Market street, the Broadway of the "City of Brotherly Love."

Big Demand for "Stain," Says Sladdin

After an absence of four weeks, during which he traveled extensively throughout the Middle West in the interests of "The Crimson Stain Mystery," the sixteen episode serial, S. G. Sladdin, general representative of Consolidated Film Corporation, is back at his desk.

"Business is very good throughout the Middle West," said Mr. Sladdin, "and I found everywhere a high demand for 'The Crimson Stain Mystery.' This is due to the fact that practically every exhibitor who has shown the picture has become a self-appointed booster for it.

Poughkeepsie Audience Votes for Paramount Pictures

A voting contest was carried on by the citizens of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., at the Liberty Theatre, during the week between Christmas and New Year's. Each citizen was asked to cast a vote for the picture he wanted to see. By a large plurality, Jesse L. Lasky's "The Cheat," with Fannie Ward, was chosen as the favorite picture and headed the bill for Christmas week. When the week had come to a close and the votes were counted, there were 112 more votes for Paramount Pictures than for the pictures of other companies. Two Paramount subjects alone received more votes than all other subjects combined. In order of their popularity the pictures were "The Cheat," "The Old Homestead," and "Temptation." The Triangle Pictures received the next highest number of votes.

"Where Are My Children?" Is in Third Week in Newark

"Where Are My Children?" has finished its third consecutive week run at the Goodwin Theatre in Newark, N. J. Originally booked for two weeks, Mrs. Webbe, manager of the Goodwin Theatre, agreed to continue the exhibition of "Where Are My Children?" another week in order to meet the numerous requests of the motion picture fans of that city and vicinity.

Mrs. Webbe declares the film one of the most popular ever shown in Newark. During its stay at the Goodwin more than 50,000 persons availed themselves of the opportunity to witness it. The aggregate receipts for the three weeks totalled more than $7,000.

Steen Signs Globe for Unicorn

A. G. Steen, manager of the Philadelphia exchange of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation, succeeded during the past few days in signing up the million-dollar Globe theatre in Philadelphia for the Unicorn service, including the "Billy West" series of two-reel comedies.

Mr. Steen says that the Unicorn service met with great appreciation by exhibitors in his territory. Among other interesting things of the service which he reports is the fact that exhibitors throughout his bailiwick are eager for short subjects of a high grade production.

"The Great Secret" Booked by Many New England Exhibitors

AFTER witnessing a showing of the first five chapters of "The Great Secret," the Metro serial in fifteen chapters, with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, New England exhibitors expressed unbounded enthusiasm and began clamoring for it, according to Joseph F. Lee, personal representative of Louis B. Mayer, secretary of and one of the biggest stockholders in Metro. Mr. Mayer, who is the sole New England distributor for Metro pictures, arranged the Boston showing before starting on a Western trip in behalf of the serial.

One hundred and twenty-five of the biggest New England exhibitors were present. The showing was in the Boston Metro projection room, and a second "overflow exhibition" had to be given in order to take care of the crowds.

"If you have a story that reaches up to Bushman and Bayne, you are all right," Manager Thomas D. Sirrorio of the Park theatre remarked to Mr. Mayer. "I know what their following is in my particular territory."

"At the conclusion of the showing, the exhibitors were unanimous in calling 'The Great Secret' the biggest serial proposition they had ever seen, and those who held tentative contracts, immediately had them confirmed," said Mr. Mayer. Among these were Nathan Gordon, of the Olympia Circuit; Mr. Sirrorio, Toomey and Demarra, controlling the Empire, the Broadway and the Premier of Lawrenceville, Mass.; the Fox theatre of Waterbury, and Richard C. Miller, of the Poli Circuit.

Other exhibitors present, who booked "The Great Secret," were Fred Lovett, Pawtucket, R. I.; Louis Boas, Fall River; Harry Gustin, McCune Brothers, of Salem and Haverhill, Mass.; Fred Collier, Joseph Cahill, of the City Theatre, Brockton, Mass.; the Old South and Washington Street theatre, Boston; the Comique theatre, Boston; Mr. McGinnis, Boston; F. Arbouch, of the Owl theatre, Lowell, Mass.; Martin Tuohy, of the Emory theatre, Providence, and George W. Whitney, of Springfield.

Gaumont Single-Reels Take Well

A recent request of the Gaumont Company made on Mutual Exchange managers for information shows that "Tours Around the World" sprang instantly into popular favor. Of this new reel branch managers wrote:

"Subjects are excellent," Winnipeg; "O. K.", Des Moines; "Exhibitors speak in highest terms," Atlanta; "Exceptionally fine," Regina; "Very interesting," Louisville; "Going well," Albany; "Very good," Portland, Ore.; and "Going very big in this territory," Buffalo.

"Snow White" Is Booked a Week in Capital

Loew's Columbia, Washington, D. C., booked Marguerite Clark in "Snow White" for a full week during the holiday season. This proved a big success, appealing not only to the younger element of the Capital City, but striking a responsive chord in adults as well. Both press and public have given this photoplay production of the appealing fairy tale its highest approval. Manager Beatus of the Columbia expressed himself as well pleased with the results of the week's engagement.

"Musty Suffer" Goes Well Abroad

Reports from Canada, Europe and Australia to the George Kleine general offices indicate that the Kleine comedy series "The Mishaps of Musty Suffer," featuring Harry Watson, Jr., of Ziegfeld "Follies" fame, is duplicating abroad the splendid success achieved in the United States. Mr. Kleine's Canadian offices at Toronto and Montreal, and the distributors who are exploiting the comedies in Australia have recently called for additional prints.

Rebooks "Miss George Washington"

The Crystal Amusement Company, Daytona, Fla., operators of a theatre there, played to such big business with the Paramount release, "Miss George Washington," that arrangements have been made to rebook it in either January or February. Henry F. Titus, in writing to Paramount headquarters at Atlanta, Georgia, says: "We are sorry not to have known that this was such an excellent production, as we could have as easily charged twenty-five cents admission as we did fifteen cents."

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

Savini, United, Reports Excellent Business

ROBERT SAVINI, general manager of the United Film Service in the Southern states, has returned to the Atlantic Branch, his headquarters, after a brief visit to New Orleans and Birmingham, Ala.

Mr. Savini reports that business is splendid with the exhibitors and that he has placed the "Tweedledum" comedies in the Triangle Theatre, New Orleans, to be shown the entire week.

Mr. Savini states that these comedies are going over big and that the management of the above theatre is more than pleased with the results from these comedies in regards to their drawing power.

Ted Hardcastle, former manager of the Piedmont Theatre, Atlanta, has accepted a position with the International Film Service, Atlanta branch.

Mr. Hardcastle is a man of wide experience in the film business and for a number of years has worked in the capacity of manager in several of the largest picture theatres in various sections of the country.

Mr. Hardcastle will cover the New Orleans territory, which territory covers the Southern States.

Ed. Colley, of the Mudd and Colley Amusement Company, one of Birmingham's largest picture exhibitors, is at present in Atlanta arranging his bookings for the New Year.

The Mudd and Colley Amusement Company controls the Trianon, Rialto and Princess and one colored house.

Mr. Colley reports that business in Birmingham is splendid and the New Year looks very bright for the exhibitors in that city.

O. K. Bourgeois has resigned as manager of the United Film Service, Atlanta branch, to open an office for himself, handling states right features and special subjects.

Mr. Bourgeois has been in the film business for a number of years, going to Atlanta from New Orleans, where for a number of years he worked under the personal direction of R. M. Savini, the present general manager of the United Film Service in the Southern States.

Santa Claus Visits Omaha Exchanges

Exchange managers in Omaha were favorite sons of fortune at Christmas time. The force in the General exchange gave Manager Taylor a desk lamp and desk set. Manager Jake Mitchell of the Laemmle branch and Manager Calvert of the Bluebird exchange each received loving cups from employes.

Manager Denham Palmer of the Vitagraph exchange received a watch chain and fob, and Manager Van Husan of the Western Supply Company received a big box of flowers. In the other exchanges there was a rule that no Christmas presents should be given the managers by the employes.

John McLean, traveling auditor for the Universal, has finished his work in the Omaha exchange and has gone to Indianapolis to confer with E. O. Gurney, the Universal's chief auditor.

Hancock Is Mutual Exchange Manager for New York

H. C. Hancock has been appointed manager of the Mutual New York Exchange. He is in charge of the Twenty-third street Exchange and its subordinate branches, serving a large territory.

Mr. Hancock is widely experienced in the motion picture industry, having held various important offices with different film corporations, including that of manager of the General exchange in New York, Vitagraph, and the Kinetograph company. He has always been in close touch and is popular with exhibitors.

Vitagraph in New Quarters, Detroit

Greater Vitagraph at Detroit is now located in its new quarters, 42 East Larned street. Later it will occupy permanent quarters in the new film building on East Elizabeth street.

C. G. Kingsley, until recently manager at Pittsburgh of the Famous Players exchange, has been appointed manager of the Fox Film exchange in Detroit, a position he formerly occupied. Mr. Kingsley represented the Fox organization in Michigan.

"U" Salesmen in Missouri Enter Contest

J. I. Dodson, who handles western Missouri for the Kansas City Universal office won the prize of twenty five dollars offered by R. C. Cropper, district manager of the Mid West territory for the universal, with headquarters at Kansas City.

All salesmen of the universal exchanges at Kansas City, St. Joe, Omaha, Oklahoma City, Wichita, Fort Smith, Sioux Falls and Cairo, Ill. were eligible to the contest, which lasted four weeks, ending December twenty fifth. The prize was given for the salesman sending in the largest increase in business in his territory for that period.

John Muchmore, cashier of the Metro exchange in Kansas City, has been elected treasurer of the Kansas City Screen Club, superseding E. R. Pearson.

Edward E. Hiller, for two years booker at the Pathe Exchange, Kansas City, has been given territory in Kansas and Missouri.

R. C. Cropper, district manager of the Universal at Kansas City, gave a New Year's party for all the salesmen and heads of the departments at the Kansas City office, thirteen in all. The party went to the theatre and then to a dinner party. The cafe was filled with diners and the party from Universal had arranged with the management of the cafe to have a girl wearing a purple mask descend the stairs at an opportune moment. A purple spot light followed her down the stairs and to each of the tables where she gave each guest a purple hand mirror. The stunt was a good send off for "The Purple Mask," which was released in Kansas City a short time ago.

L. H. Chandler formerly traveler for the Federal Film Company at Kansas City, has recently accepted a position with the Universal office at Kansas City as traveler.

The publicity department of the Universal Film and Supply Company at Kansas City, furnished a number of the cafes of the city with purple masks to be given out to the guests as novelties on New Year's Eve. They were also distributed at the dinner given by the Kansas City Screen Club.

J. B. Gruwell, who has been traveling for the K-E-S-E office at Kansas City for the past two years, was recently called to the Chicago office. It is understoood that he will be given the management of the Cincinati office.

The Kansas City Metro exchange has had a very successful year and the increase in the business of the office has necessitated the taking of additional floor space amounting to about half their former space.

C. A. Jones, traveler for the Universal at Kansas City, was awarded a prize of ten dollars offered by D. O. Reese.

Free Booking by Vitagraph

The Vitagraph exchange recently established in Omaha has a system that is new to the Omaha territory. It consists of giving an exhibitor another try, free of charge, at big features that for some reason, bad weather, or slip in advertising, fails to "make good." "We feel we can afford that better than have the exhibitor say our picture was no good, when it really is a good picture," said Manager Denham Palmer. "Vitagraph does this all over the country."

"Patria" was shown by the International exchange of Omaha, Neb., to a private gathering of exhibitors at the Muse theatre the other morning and the exhibitors were loud in their praise of it. They saw the first three episodes. Manager Edgar Moss is out in the territory, booking the new picture.

Meyer Is Manager for General in Minneapolis

Fred S. Meyer, who has been in New York looking over trade conditions, has been appointed manager of the Minneapolis exchanges of the General Film Company. He has already proved himself particularly adept in his position by further stimulating the interest of the Northwestern exhibitors in the General program.

A circular letter has been sent to all exhibitors in that section of the country, whether they use the General program or not, urging them to consider the worth of the pictures offered by this house daily. The letter bears Mr. Meyer's signature and increased business is expected.

Bryan Returns to Pathe

Byron S. Bryan, intimately known throughout the Southeastern territory as "Pathe Bryan," has rejoined the Pathe sales force and will cover Georgia and Eastern Tennessee for the Atlanta Exchange. Mr. Bryan has, barring a short intervening period, lived and breathed the Pathe productions since they began releasing independently several years ago and specialized particularly with the Pathe News when it was issued in its present form.

He also acted as relief branch manager at New Orleans and succeeded in placing that office upon a solid and substantial basis.

Detroit Exchanges Members of Credit Bureau

GEORGE COTTON succeeds Samuel Denbow as manager at Detroit for the World Film Corporation, Mr. Denbow having been transferred to Dallas, Texas.

The Wolverine Feature Film Company, 71 Griswold street, Detroit, Mich., announces having secured the Michigan rights on the forthcoming productions of the Ivan Film Corporation. Edward Geller is manager of this exchange and Charles E. McCabe assistant manager.

Under the management of Sidney L. Alexander, a film credit bureau has been opened in Detroit, with offices at 556 Penobscot building. Its purpose is to secure credit reports and to make adjustments of claims. Some twenty Detroit exchanges are members. Exhibitors will be able to file their complaints against exchanges, and to obtain a settlement. Records of all motion picture exhibitors in Michigan also will be kept on file, and reports of every nature will be furnished to members of the bureau of credits in Detroit.

W. C. Preller is the new manager of the Triangle Film Exchange in Detroit, Mich., to succeed A. I. Shapiro, who recently went to Buffalo to manage the Rogson Film Company. Mr. Preller for the past four years has been manager of the General Film Exchange at Minneapolis, and was previously manager for the same concern at Des Moines.

Howard A. Bauer has been appointed manager of the Detroit branch of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, succeeding C. L. Peavey, who has resigned to become manager at Minneapolis for the Famous Players Film Service.

C. A. Meade has been appointed central division manager for Pathe and is temporarily making his headquarters in Detroit.

Mr. Meade was for many years associated with Vitagraph and of recent months has been division manager at the branch, Cleveland, Ohio.

Chase Finds Favor for Short Subjects

Treasurer P. A. Chase of the Unicorn Film Service Corporation has just returned from an extensive trip throughout the country, which embraced not only an inspection and reorganization of the Unicorn's twenty-eight exchanges, but also afforded him an opportunity to come in contact with the exhibitors from coast to coast. Mr. Chase made several interesting mental notes while on his tour ,and not the least significant of the facts which he discovered was the crying need by exhibitors of really good short subjects.

"I found," said Mr. Chase, "through the medium of conversation with a large number of exhibitors, that the Unicorn with its twenty-one reels a week, is supplying a distinct demand for short subjects, both in comedies, dramas and western pictures, which hitherto has been unfulfilled, or else the exhibitor has been supplied with an inferior brand of pictures of this class."

Hague and Hoffman Confer in Toronto

Mr. Hague, general manager of the Universal exchanges in Canada, met Mr. Hoffman, general manager of all the Universal exchanges, in Montreal during the past week.

Bryan, Vitagraph, in Nashville

One of the early arrivals to reach Nashville last week was Frank P. Bryan, popular traveling representative of V-L-S-E of Atlanta, Ga. During his stay in Nashville, Mr. Bryan spoke enthusiastically of the business his company was doing in that territory. The Vitagraph picture, "The Fall of a Nation" did forty-six hundred dollars worth of business in four days during its run in Atlanta.

A private screening will be given in Nashville by Mr. Bryan on "The Secret Kingdom." The Strand, one of the most popular theatres in Nashville has now obtained all of the Vitagraph features. Among some of the bookings are: "An Enemy to the King." This feature will be shown during Christmas week. An elaborate amount of advertising will be placed with the big production. "The Rose of the South" is another feature secured by General Manager Carson Bradford to be shown at his theatre.

Green Is K-E-S-E Manager in Buffalo

Louis Green, known throughout New York as a film salesman and exchange manager, has been placed in charge of the K-E-S-E branch at Buffalo, N. Y.

LIVE NEWS FROM THE PRODUCERS

Maxine Elliott to Make Screen Debut with Goldwyn

Will Appear as Either a Light Comedy Star or a "Heavy"—Director Will Be Announced in a Few Days

MAXINE ELLIOTT, who arrived in New York on December 24 to appear in Goldwyn pictures, as was exclusively announced in MOTION PICTURE NEWS of last week, will commence work at an early date. Miss Elliott's first picture has not yet been selected, but it is learned from the Goldwyn office that she will appear either in a light comedy role or the reverse—a "heavy" part. The name of her director will be published shortly.

Maxine Elliott (Goldwyn)

Despite the vogue of the screen and the fact that many other celebrities have entered pictures, Miss Elliott has never had a desire to invade the cinema world. To all of the companies who have sought to entice her she has resolutely said "No."

The Goldwyn officers had several surprises during the last moment of their negotiations with this famous beauty. They asked what furnishings she wished for her dressing rooms, what type of motor she preferred to convey her to the studio and other questions of the same sort. Even the upstarts of the film business are very particular about these details. But Miss Elliott was not interested at all.

"All of us in Europe have seen so much that is distressing, so much that is chastening, so much that adjusts any sane man or woman's perspective—especially in Belgium and Flanders—that never as long as I live will I lay any emphasis upon receiving special favors and considerations above other men and women," she said.

Announcement will be made in a few days of the director who is to introduce Miss Elliott to the public in her first Goldwyn picture.

Maxine Elliott has long been called "the handsomest girl who ever came out of New England." She was born in Rockland, Me., the daughter of Thomas and Adelaide Dermott. Her father was a sea captain who, after his little girl's education has been completed at Notre Dame academy, Roxbury, Mass., took her on long sailing voyages to South America and Spain, and she grew to love the sea.

Ultra Enters Film Field, Announces Cobe

Will Distribute Twelve Subjects a Year, with First Release on 20th

A. J. COBE, who has just returned from a tour of the west coast and Middle West, announces the completion of the organization of a new distributing company, The Ultra Pictures Corporation.

Through negotiations conducted by Mr. Cobe the Ultra Pictures Corporation has already signed with two of the large producing companies which assures their exchanges of twelve pictures a year, with the privilege of making additional purchases in the open market.

An aggressive advertising campaign has been started and Mr. Cobe declares that this distributing company will not handle mediocre or suggestive productions.

The pictures will be selected by a number of the members of the organization and not by one man.

The first release of the Ultra Pictures will be made January 20 when they will present the California Motion Picture Company's "The Woman Who Dared," a seven reel feature, starring Beatriz Michelena.

Sanger Will Soon Make Announcement of Plans

Eugene B. Sanger, the president of the Sanger Picture Plays Corporation, has announced that the definite statement of his plans for the season will be issued in a very short time. Associated with Mr. Sanger in the executive offices of the Sanger Picture Plays Corporation, at 1544 Aeolian Hall, are Brown Rolston, the vice-president, and Frederic Leake, the secretary and treasurer. The Sanger studio is at 134th Street and Park Avenue.

Spoor Buys Rights to "The Trufflers"

George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, announces the purchase of the motion picture rights to "The Trufflers," a novel by Samuel Merwin. Its picturization is being prepared now at the Essanay studios. The film will be released through the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, March 4. Nell Craig is the star.

"The Trufflers" first ran in The Cosmopolitan Magazine as a series of short stories. They met with such success that the author combined them into one story which was one of the "best sellers" of the year just closed.

"The Trufflers" refers to the colony of artists at Greenwich Village, New York. It is here that many well known painters, illustrators, sculptors and writers of Manhattan reside and Mr. Merwin has given a vivid portrayal of their Bohemian lives.

The story has to do with a modern Trilby. She is an artist's model—a gay, carefree beautiful young woman who is the idol of "The Trufflers." A love affair tears her down from her pedestal and brings her face to face with famine.

Fred E. Wright is arranging the story for the camera and will direct its production.

Hamilton at Work on Another Multiple Feature

Gilbert P. Hamilton, who has been in the east for the past two months, has returned to Los Angeles to produce another multiple reel feature, and is now busy in preparing the story and completing negotiations for the lease of a studio. The forthcoming feature to be made by Mr. Hamilton will have Miss Dorothy Farley and William Conklin as co-stars, and will be made for the Problem Film Company of which Mr. Hamilton is vice-president and general manager.

The most recent production by Mr. Hamilton is "Are Passions Inherited?" and is now being shown to exceptionally good business in New England, New York, Illinois, and Wisconsin, state rights having been sold for this territory.

Distribution of the picture will be handled by Warner Brothers, New York City, H. M. Warner being president of the new company.

Ellen Gierum Engaged to Play in Danish Company

Ellen Gierum, who at the present time is the leading lady with the Warburton Theatre Stock Company, Yonkers, has been engaged by Benjamin Christie, president of the Dansk Biograph Company, to go to Copenhagen July 1, and play the leading feminine role in a photo-dramatic adaptation of "The Wandering Jew," the scenario of which Mr. Christie has prepared.

Shirley Mason in a Pose and Two Scenes from "Passion," an Episode of the "Seven Deadly Sins" Series (McClure)

"Passion" Is Third McClure "Sin"

McClure Pictures announces that "Passion," starring Shirley Mason, supported by George Le Guere, will be the third of "The Seven Deadly Sins," the group of five-reel features to be released through the Triangle exchanges. The seven are to be released at weekly intervals, beginning the latter part of January.

"Passion" attacks gluttony and drink, and raises a danger signal for girls who are prone to fall in love at first sight with brainless but handsome men.

The cast includes Clifford Bruce, who has been with Selig, Fox, Pathe and Metro, as Leonidas; Bigelow Cooper as a villainous trainer; Ruby Hoffman, Mabel Strickland, Edith Wright, Edmund Dalby and Harry Gripp.

Richard Ridgely directed the production and George Lane was the photographer.

Bessie Love Hard at Work in "Doll Shop"

Bessie Love is hard at work upon her latest Triangle starring vehicle, "The Doll Shop," from the pen of Anita Loos, and scheduled for release about the middle of January. It will give Miss Love a record of three feature releases within three months. The story of "The Doll Shop" tells of a young girl who runs a toy store in a small factory town.

Roy Stewart is her leading man. In addition to Stewart, Bessie Love is supported by Max Davidson in the role of the janitor with an aversion for the "parasite rich;" Carmel Meyers, who has the second feminine part; and Carl Stockdale, who is cast as a hard-fisted, self-made factory owner. Edward Dillon is directing the production.

"Son of Battle" Is "My Fighting Gentleman"

The title of William Russell's next Mutual Star Production, which was announced as "A Son of Battle," has been changed to "My Fighting Gentleman." The story is by Nell Shipman, the picture player. It will introduce Francelia Billington as a leading woman for Mr. Russell. Jack Vosburgh is seen in the "heavy" role. Sidney Algier is assisting Edward Sloman.

Five Plays in Work at Once at World Studios

The Subjects Are "Haunting Shadows," "The House Cat," "Motherhood," and "Her Higher Destiny"

FIVE picture plays are simultaneously in the process of making for the World Film Corporation under one roof in the Peerless studio, Fort Lee, N. J. The directors in charge of these productions are Emile Chautard, Harley Knoles, Travers Vale, John O'Brien and George Archainbeaud, respectively.

The individual stars are Kitty Gordon, Ethel Clayton, Alice Brady and Gail Kane, together with one of the World-Brady all-star casts led by Carlyle Blackwell, Arthur Ashley and June Elvidge.

Mr. Chautard is directing the play in which Kitty Gordon is acting the star role, the working title of which is "Haunting Shadows." In the cast assisting Miss Gordon are Montagu Love, George McQuarrie, Alec Francis, Lillian Herbert and Norma Phillips.

Mr. Vale's production, starring Ethel Clayton, is "The House Cat," with Rockliffe Fellowes. Others in this cast are John Hines, Walter Green, Edward Kimball, Eugenie Woodward, Justine Cutting, Frank Goldsmith, Ned Burton, etc.

"Motherhood," with Alice Brady as its star, is being produced by John O'Brien, the most recent addition to the World's list of directors. Supporting Miss Brady are John Bowers, David Powell, Stanhope Wheatcroft, John Dugley, Madge Evans, Marie Chambers, Florence Crane and others.

Harley Knoles is placing the finishing touches on "Who Is Sylvia," with Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge, Arthur Ashley, George McQuarrie, Albert Hart, etc.

The final scenes of "Her Higher Destiny" are being made under the direction of George Archainbeaud, with Gail Kane as the star. In this play the cast includes Frank Mills, Gerda Holmes and Edward Langford.

Purely by coincidence it occurs that all five of these productions are unusually "heavy" in their employment of massive scenes and large numbers of players outside the principals, so that the studio presents a spectacle of unwonted action with every department pressed to the utmost of its productivity.

Studio Manager Robert B. McIntyre, Technical Director T. K. Peters and the various department heads have been working long hours at top speed—and this is true also of nearly all their subordinates.

"It would have been simple enough if one or two of the plays had not been so exacting," said Mr. McIntyre. "For then we should not have had to crowd on all steam five ways at once. The good points about this rush period are that it gives us a practical demonstration of what our capacity really is, and that it does away with all possibility of our ever getting an order that scares us."

"Greater Woman" Completed for Mutual

Frank Powell has finished the filming of "The Greater Woman," a picturization of Algernon Boyesen's play of that name, in which Marjorie Rambeau makes her screen debut.

"The Greater Woman" is the first of the series of Marjorie Rambeau pictures now being made by the Frank Powell Producing Corporation and to be distributed through Mutual.

The cast includes Aubrey Beattie, Hassan Musselli, Josephine Park, Frank Ford, and Sara Haidez.

Miss Rambeau has started work on her second production.

Hart as Old-Time Prospector

In place of the hard riding, hard fighting cowpuncher of the longhorn country, William S. Hart will, in his next Triangle-Kay Bee feature impersonate an old-time prospector. The details of this new play are being very carefully guarded by Hart's own company at Culver City. The story is the work of Martin Brown, and from it Lambert Hillayer has made the version in which Hart will appear.

Margery Wilson, who last played with Hart in "The Primal Lure" and "The Return of Draw Egan," will reappear as his leading lady. Among others who will support Hart are Jack Livingstone and J. P. Lockney.

Universal Specialties

THE Specials listed below are of a class and character that are necessary to the Exhibitor who finds it advisable to book Special Features of one or more reels. They include, beside the Five-Reel Feature—Comedies, Cartoons, Educationals and the Greatest of all Screen Novelties—The Universal Screen Magazine.

Like the other releases on the Universal Program, these Specials may be booked separately—but Exhibitors must expect to pay extra for them. Not only because they are genuine Box-Office Attractions, but because it is manifestly unfair to expect to pick and choose from the entire Program, and get these releases at the pro rata price of that paid by the user of the entire Universal Service.

Special Releases on the Universal Program, for the Week of January 29th

RED FEATHER—"LOVE AFLAME." With Ruth Stonehouse and Jack Mulhall. (Five Reels—Romantic Drama.)

NESTOR—"WHY, UNCLE!" (One-Reel Comedy.) Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts.

L-KO—"FAKING FAKERS." With Phil Dunham. (Two-Reel Comedy.)

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL—"THE WAR WAIF." (Two-Reel War Drama.) With Allen Holubar.

UNIVERSAL SCREEN MAGAZINE—No. 6.

JOKER—"HIS COMING OUT PARTY." (One-Reel Comedy.) With Gale Henry and William Franey.

POWERS—"MR. FULLER PEP—HIS WIFE GOES FOR A REST" (Comic Cartoon) and "IN NORTH CHINA AS SEEN BY DR. DORSEY" (Educational). (Split Reel.)

Look them over. Nowhere on earth will you find the specialties you need that can compare in money-getting value at your box-office with the Universal Specials listed here.

The Complete Universal Program every week—Book The Mighty

Compare the full Universal Program as given on these pages with any Moving Picture Program on earth, and you will acknowledge its absolute supremacy from the standpoint of Popularity and Profit. Remember, the Universal Program is split (as shown here) ONLY AS FAR AS INDIVIDUAL BOOKINGS ARE CONCERNED. Every subject listed is included in the full Universal Program Service of Twenty-nine Reels a week. This is the ideal show—the popular and profitable moving picture entertainment—to which thousands of Exhibitors have returned after disastrous experiences with "Open Bookings," "Feature Programs," and other freak ideas of recent times.

Book The Great-Complete UNIVERSAL Program

Universal Regular Releases

THE Releases listed below as "Regular" are the cream of Juvenile, Comedy, News Weekly, Educational and Dramatic Subjects. They constitute the backbone of the mighty Universal Program. In comparison with the "Specials" opposite they number Sixteen Reels of Dramatic Subjects, with only Four Reels of Juvenile, Comedy and Educational. They are the solid, substantial program releases that are making thousands of Exhibitors succeessful throughout the world.

Regular Releases on the Universal Program, for the Week of January 29th

GOLD SEAL—"JUNE MADNESS." (Three-Reel Romantic Drama.) Roy Stewart and Wadsworth Harris.

VICTOR—"SOME BABY" and "NELLIE, THE FIREMAN'S DAUGHTER." (Split-Reel Comedy.)

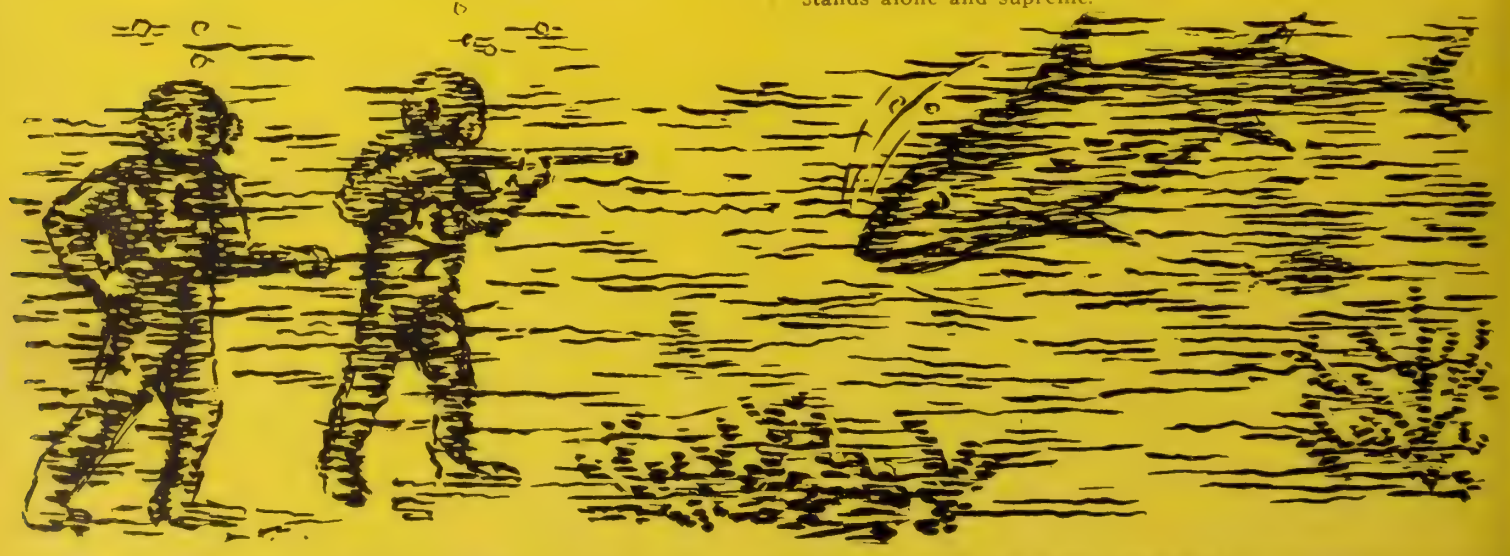
Announcing

The Most Extraordinary STATE RIGHTS Proposition ever offered in the History of Films

20,000 LEAGUES

To the States Rights Buyers of the World

IN announcing the STATE RIGHTS sale of the Universal's Feature Production—"Jules Verne's 20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA"—we present what has already been pronounced, the most amazing spectacle—the most remarkable achievement in pictures and the BIGGEST BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION ever placed before State Rights Buyers and Exhibitors. Judged from its already tremendous success in both Chicago and New York, "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA" is without question—



The Biggest State Rights Proposition in all the History of Moving Pictures

"20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA," is entirely different than ANY State Rights proposition on the market. First—the picture is different—second—the advertising possibilities outclass those of any feature ever produced—and third—it will outdraw any feature production now being shown anywhere in the world.

This Vast Difference can be Instantly Seen

THIS huge spectacular production played for eight solid weeks to overflow crowds in the city of Chicago. In its very first week in New York City at the Broadway Theatre it shattered every record held by that house. That's the kind of evidence on which to base your judgment in the buying of ANY State Rights production.

NO "If's"—nor "And's"—nor "But's" to it. You don't have to ask—"Can it win"—or 'Will it win" but "Did it win already"? Where—When and How? "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA," is now playing to CAPACITY CROWDS afternoons and nights because it is distinctly different, entirely new, absolutely unique among big film productions. There is none other like it—you can't see anything to compare with it and you can't get any other like it. It stands alone and supreme.

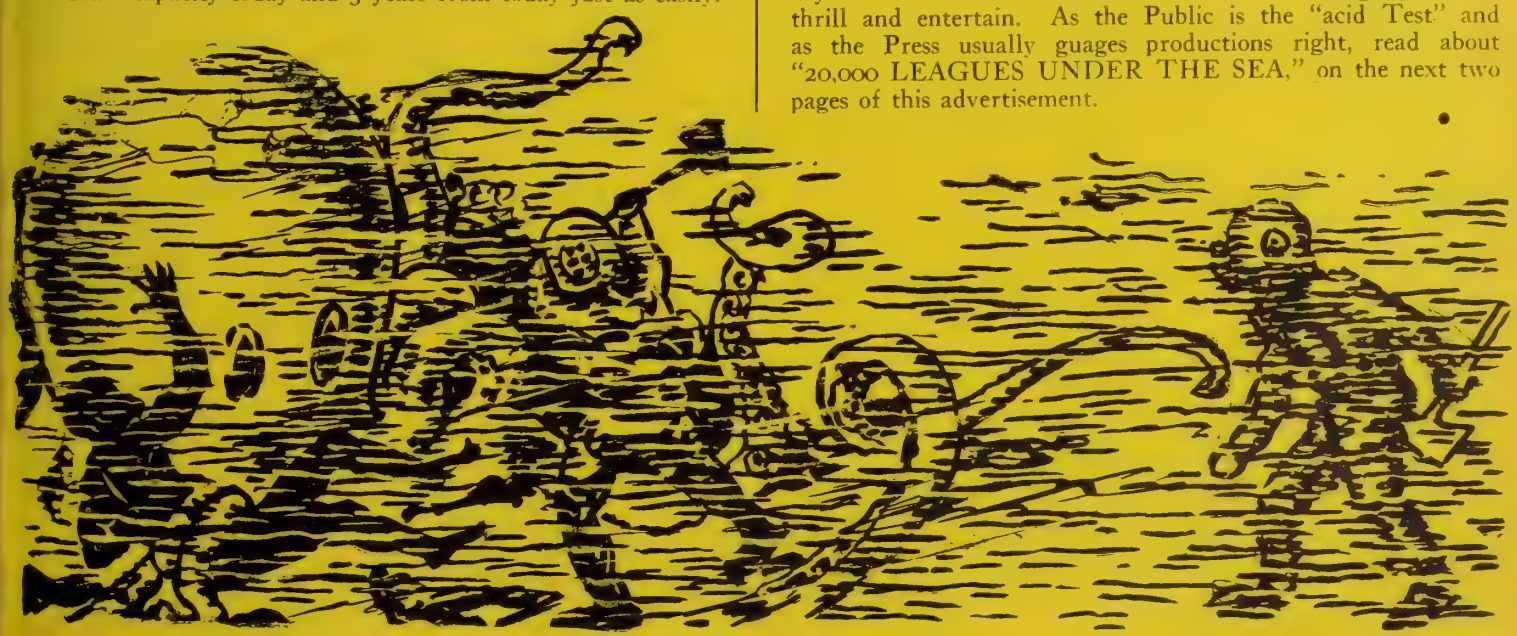
UNDER THE SEA

Nothing like it on Earth!

"NOTHING LIKE IT ON EARTH" was the exact phrase used by one of the biggest State Rights Buyers in America upon seeing this production. We quote his phrase because it described 20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA perfectly.

"20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA" is an almost unbelieveable accomplishment, visualizing for the peoples of the earth, the most fantastic dreams of the greatest imaginative writer of all time. Jules Verne's enthralling story, read by and known to millions of people in every civilized country on the globe, and from the State Rights Buyer's angle this production is worth more than twice that of ANY OTHER State Rights production for the reason that it is—



EIGHT SOLID WEEKS OF CAPACITY BUSINESS IN CHICAGO

A Production that can be sold again 1-2 or 3 years from now just as easy as it can be sold today

CONSIDER this with great thought Mr. State Rights Buyer. Consider that it means IN CASH TO YOU to be able to re-book this production again next year—the year after and the year after that. While re-booking any other feature production might be a difficulty if not an almost impossible matter—it's a cinch with "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA," because of it's distinct novelty. It will draw capacity today and 3 years from today just as easily.

THAT'S why this production is a far more profitable purchase than ANY State Rights feature production on the market. It's a 1-2 or 3 year feature and will "get the money" anywhere, anytime, all the time.

People who see it once will be as anxious to see it again a year or more later because it never loses its magic power to thrill and entertain. As the Public is the "acid Test" and as the Press usually guages productions right, read about "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA," on the next two pages of this advertisement.

20,000 LEAGUES

The Wonderful Advertising Campaign Book for "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" and what it will help you do

AT great expense we have prepared an elaborate Advertising Campaign book. This complete book shows Exhibitors what has been done with "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA"—how it was done and how Exhibitors can accomplish proportionately the same identical results. It shows the complete advertising campaign, and how to use it. It describes the publicity matter, cuts, etc. It describes the advertising props., in short it tells you everything you want to know in putting this production over big.

A Book will be sent you for the asking

WE direct especial attention to the powerful campaign of ready prepared ads for newspapers in this great Ad book. These ads are so carefully prepared and so expertly laid out as to make up the most compelling campaign possible in the smallest possible spaces. The book tells you how to secure the publication of the free publicity stories, halftone cuts in conjunction with the newspaper ad campaign.

The Production That Will LIVE FOR YEARS

Advertising Campaign Books FREE to State Rights Buyers

TO demonstrate the lengths to which the Universal Film Manufacturing Company goes to insure success to its host of State Rights customers, we will give free to all Buyers—a limited quantity of these expensive Ad Campaign books. No matter of this character has ever been issued for any State Rights production, and it is of tremendous value and importance as it practically constitutes the State Rights Buyer's salesman.

Publicity Matter and Cuts

A COMPLETE series of special halftone newspaper publicity cuts have been prepared, showing the finest views of under sea action scenes, etc. Publicity stories accompany all illustrations.

THESE advertising cuts, props, etc., etc., can be used for any house in any city in this country. Besides the advertising props, other ways and means, schemes, plans and ideas have been prepared that pave the way for a successful run of this great production. You have nothing to think about —nothing to dope out. Everything is complete and ready for you.

Tremendous drawing power of 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea already proven in America's hardest picture territory

S.R.O. has been the slogan wherever "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA" has been shown. Capacity Houses — struggling crowds—with a never ending stream of cash passing thru the Box Office. That's the answer to the tremendous power of this production. The two hardest picture territories in the United States have already been played at the time of the writing of this book (Chicago and New York). Compared to these two territories, the others are what a good showman would call "Pie." "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA" has proven it's power as THE BIGGEST BOX OFFICE WINNER OF THE DECADE.

Al Santell Is Director of Kolb and Dill for Mutual

Al Santell is the latest scenario writer to turn director at the studios of the American-Mutual Company, at Santa Barbara, Cal. Mr. Santell has been a member of the scenario staff for over a year, and has created a great deal of original stuff at the same time he has put many of the stories purchased by the company into scenario form.

For the past few months Mr. Santell has been centralizing most of his work on the productions featuring C. William Kolb and Max Dill. But it was not until the beginning of the production of "Beloved Rogues," the fifth picture featuring the Mutual's famous character men, that Mr. Santell went over into the directing field.

"Beloved Rogues" is at present under course of production at the American studios. The story was written by Aaron Hoffman, and put into scenario form by the same clever writer who is directing the screen version.

Mr. Santell came to the studios at Santa Barbara to write comedies for Mutual release. He was the originator of the "Billy Van Duesen" stories which featured John Steppling.

Kaufman Will Direct Cohan for Artcraft

The actual production of the initial George M. Cohan subject for Artcraft has been assigned to Joseph Kaufman, director of many Famous Players subjects, including "Ashes of Embers," "The World's Great Snare,' and "The Travelling Salesman."

Mr. Kaufman's most recent work was evidenced in Frank McIntyre's first screen production, "The Travelling Salesman." His association with George M. Cohan in his theatrical activities for many years prompted Artcraft to secure the services of Mr. Kaufman for the production of the first Cohan screen offering.

On the stage Mr. Kaufman met with considerable success during the twenty years he spent behind the footlights. Under such managements as Cohan and Harris, Frohman and Henry B. Harris he appeared in many metropolitan hits on Broadway and throughout the country playing important roles with Willie Collier, Maude Adams, John Drew, Virginia Harmon and others of equal prominence.

"Heart of Texas Ryan" from Selig on February 12

"The Heart of Texas Ryan," is the title of the Selig Red Seal Play announced by William N. Selig for release in K-E-S-E on Monday, Feburary 12. It is a drama of the Texas borderland. In the cast are George Fawcett, Bessie Eyton, Frank Campeau, Tom Mix, Goldie Colwell and others.

Episodes are announced including a forest fire, a hand-to-hand battle between two infuriated men—a battle which is said to compare favorably in realism to the fight in "The Spoilers," and an automobile crash. Views of the Texas cattle country are presented.

Freuler Signs Edna Goodrich for Mutual

Stage Favorite Will Begin Film Rehearsal on Completion of Vaudeville Engagement

PRESIDENT JOHN R. FREULER of the Mutual Film Corporation announces the closing of a contract with Edna Goodrich, a stage favorite, for her appearance in a series of big features to be released by the Mutual.

Edna Goodrich (Mutual)

Miss Goodrich will begin actual rehearsal on the conclusion of a vaudeville engagement at the Park theatre, New York. This necessarily sets the date of her picture work ahead some weeks.

Miss Goodrich's first theatrical appearance was as a member of the celebrated sextette in "Florodora," after a successful tour with which she joined Anna Held's company and achieved fame as the highest salaried show girl on the stage. It was during her engagement with Miss Held that Miss Goodrich obtained her first opportunity to play an important part— that of Madame Recamier in "Mam'selle Napoleon."

Miss Goodrich was then engaged as understudy in "The Rollicking Girl." She then entered the comedy field and purchased the rights to "The Genius and The Model," producing the play herself and starring jointly with Harry Woodruff in the autumn of 1905.

In the spring of 1906, Nat C. Goodwin bought the rights of this play and engaged Miss Goodrich for her original role—that of the artist's model. She continued as Mr. Goodwin's leading woman for several seasons, appearing in "The Genius and the Model," "When We Were Twenty-one," and other plays in which Goodwin starred. Later on she appeared with Charles Cherry in "His Neighbor's Wife."

In 1913 Miss Goodrich appeared in the New York production of "Evangeline," at the Park theatre.

Since 1913 Miss Goodrich has spent much of her time in Europe and she only recently returned to the United States.

Miss Goodrich has appeared as Jinny Hopper in "The College Widow," Nell Ruthven in "A Gilded Fool," Madge Kederly in "What would a Gentleman Do?," Grace Morton in "The Easterner," and later toured with "The Master Hand," "The Native Son," "The Awakening of Minerva," and "The Runaways."

Kerrigan Forms Own Company

J. Warren Kerrigan last week signed a contract to star in a company bearing his own name. Eastern capital is financing Kerrigan in his latest enterprise and work has already been started on the construction of a studio in Hollywood, California. It is not known as yet just through what channels the new Kerrigan pictures will be released nor the number his present contract calls for.

The J. Warren Kerrigan company will have access to a number of well known books and plays by some of the foremost authors. A well known director will be engaged. The star himself will have charge of the engaging of his supporting players. Mr. Kerrigan is one of the most popular stars on the screen today. He has been in motion pictures for over five years.

Titles Announced for Kalem's New "Stingaree" Series

The genius of E. W. Hornung, internationally famous as the author of "Raffles" and the "Stingaree" stories, filmed by the Kalem Company, is said to shine forth in the titles he has given to the new series of Stingaree's adventures, now under way with True Boardman in the title role.

"Not only are these titles picturesque and indicative of the originality of the new series, but they are such good film titles as to lead one to believe that Mr. Hornung has made a study of motion pictures, including their sales angle," said an officer of the company.

"And that is exactly what he has done. Having followed closely all of the former 'Stingaree' series as they were released in London, Mr. Hornung has grasped the motion picture viewpoint as perhaps no other author outside of the industry ever did."

He has named the first thirteen of Kalem's new series as follows:

"A Salon Passenger," "A Model Marauder," "His Mark," "A Brace of Snakes," "A Prisoner of Stingaree," "The Double Dummy," "The Black Bloodhound," "Through Fire and Water," "At the Sign of the Emu," "A Hanging Matter," "All Peacock Blue," "The Jackeroo on G. Block," and "A Champion of the Church."

William Wright, who has just returned from a business trip to Kalem's California studios, states that production of these initial episodes is proceeding rapidly. True Boardman's famous white horse will again figure prominently in these thrilling adventures of the Australian bush ranger. The horse became practically a trade mark in the first series.

Bluebird Celebrates Its First Birthday

Unknown Players Picked by Company and Put in Proper Vehicles Gain Deserved Stellar Honors

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS, INC., terminates its first year as a producing organization on January 15, with the release of "Her Soul's Inspiration," in which Ella Hall is featured. General Manager M. H. Hoffman has issued a statement outlining the future plans of Bluebird and recalling the important moves his company has made during its initial year.

"We have succeeded in improving the quality of Bluebirds from the very beginning of the series," said Mr. Hoffman, and exhibitors may confidently expect the second year of our program to mark even greater advances in every factor that makes for better features. Bluebird will never stand still, but go on with improved results from week to week.

"Bluebird's record is one of which we have reason to be proud. We started along the generally accepted proposition that the only way to install a new program was by doing something out of the ordinary, and we have succeeded. We pledged ourselves at the outset to an even production, incorporating plays, players and equipment and we have kept our promises. When we entered the field there was plenty of competition—and if it had not been for this same vigorous competition Bluebird could not have succeeded.

"Our program was established at a time when 'features' were such only in the parlance of the trade. In some instances the 'feature' was the star; in others the play itself was the feature and in many instances the production was the most important detail of the result. Bluebird decided that the best way to meet and overcome opposition was to have an evenly balanced outcome in all points that constitute good photoplaying.

"We tried the star system, opening with Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, the greatest of all stars. Later we adopted the radical method of declaring that our succcess must depend upon the play; and since that day 'The Play's the Thing' has been a dogma we have rigidly abided by. We have first found the play, then employed the players and equipped the combination with as good productions as an unstinted investment of money could provide. And from the day we made this radical move, Bluebird began to overcome opposition and win its way into a class by itself.

"While we have, excepting in the first few weeks, made no effort to promote stars in our production we have, nevertheless, presented in Bluebirds some of the best known of screendom's acknowledged favorites, Tyrone Power, Helen Ware, Rupert Julian, Carter De Haven, Jane Gail, Florence Lawrence, Mary Fuller, Violet Mersereau, Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley, Hobart Bosworth, Cleo Madison and many other names that have been associated with the best in photoplaying.

"Not because they were stars did Bluebird employ these fine artists, but because their talents and temperaments fitted best into the roles that were assigned to them. They were capable of best playing the parts we had to play and were accordingly employed. Being encumbered with no contracts with exorbitantly paid stars Bluebird has been free to choose its own casts and promote its own interests.

"Because of this, and in casting about for the best artists to most satisfactorily interpret the leading roles, we have discovered several talented players and elevated them to featured positions; players who had the talent to warrant their names appearing in large type on show bills, but who had never before arrived at their opportunity. In this way Mary Mac Laren was created a star in Bluebirds when Lois Weber, the producer of 'Shoes' was seeking a girl to properly realize the heroine. Miss Mac Laren had previously been playing 'maids;' we made her a star and she has, since her debut in 'Shoes,' appeared on our program in several Lois Weber productions that have been a great credit to Bluebirds.

"Ella Hall is another instance of Bluebird's fitting the player to the part—another star of genuine worth who at last found an opportunity. Louise Lovely, a pretty Australian girl utterly unknown to American filmdom, is a third star created by Bluebird. Men and women who have been previously known as artists of sterling merit have been advanced to greater publicity and better opportunities than they ever had before—George Hernandez, Myrtle Gonzalez, Val Paul, Dorothy Phillips, Ruth Stonehouse, Franklyn Farnum, Marie Walcamp, Edith Johnson, and Little Zoe Rae, made a star in Bluebirds in the season she was seven years old.

"Bluebird's directors have formed an important essential in our success. With names like Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley, Joseph De Grasse, Rex Ingram, Rupert Julian, Jack Conway, William Worthington and Edwin Stevens attached to the production end of Bluebird exploitation there would naturally be expected the very splendid results that have been accomplished.

"We have had the advantage of the greatest producing center on earth—Universal City, Calif., we have bought features in the open market that were of sufficient merit to meet Bluebird requirements, and in many ways have we ignored traditions to the benefit of our trade mark. We have always aimed first to make money for the exhibitor, for we realize that in no other way can we make money for ourselves.

Stone Is Vogue Studio Manager

S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, Inc., has appointed A. E. Stone, for two years an executive at the Flying A, studio manager of the Vogue Film Company in Los Angeles.

He began his duties the first of the year, succeeding J. Davis, now directing Vogue comedies.

Metro Studio Burns

The studio of the Popular Plays and Players Company, of the Metro Corporation, was gutted by fire last Wednesday afternoon while Madam Petrova and her company were working in "The Waiting Soul." The picture was concluded in the Rolfe studios. No lives were lost.

Jane Cowl a Goldwyn Star

Jane Cowl, prominent star of the spoken drama and known for her work in "Within the Law" and "Common Clay," Broadway successes, is to appear in Goldwyn pictures.

Immediately following the run of her newest stage play, "Lilac Time," soon to be produced by Selwyn and Company, Miss Cowl in the late spring will begin work in the Goldwyn eastern studios on two pictures to be written around her personality by two important dramatists.

Each year thereafter, between her theatrical engagements, Miss Cowl will appear in other Goldwyn productions.

Four Single Reels from Gaumont

Having made the release of the final chapters of "The Vampires," the Gaumont Company has only four single reels to offer as its contribution through Mutual for the week of January 21. However, a great many exhibitors are only beginning to get "The Vampires" as there has been such a demand for it that the Mutual Film Corpration has been unable to supply the demand with the prints sent from Paris.

The first single-reel of the week is Reel Life, No. 38, the Mutual Magazine in Film. This contains pictures of "Oranges in California," "The Air," "The Hydro-ski," "Automatic Apple Graders," and "How to Remove Shattered Glass."

January 23 brings to the screen the Gaumont "Tours Around the World," No. 12. The pictures take spectators on a trip from Bordeaux, France, down the Gironde river to Pauillac. Although Bordeaux is the fourth port of France it is situated sixty miles inland. There are also pictures of the Monastery of St. Thessalonica in Greece, and of the Gorges of the Nive river in the French Pyrenees.

"See America First," No. 72, which has on the same reel an animated cartoon by Harry Palmer, is released January 24. It shows places in "Historic Virginia," picturing Williamsburg, Hampton, Norfolk, Hampton Roads, and the site of the surrender of Cornwallis. The Gaumont Kartoon Komic is entitled "Absent Minded Willie."

The fourth single-reel of the week is The Mutual Weekly which is manufactured at the Gaumont Laboratories.

To an Esteemed Contemporary

Last week we made a regrettable and an entirely unintentional assault on our jovial contemporary, "Film Fun." In the Table of Contents, the article "Frank Rembusch Protests Against Filth Film" was unfortunately listed "Frank Rembusch Protests Against 'Film Fun.'" If Frank Rembusch has grievances against "Film Fun" it is entirely without our knowledge, and we hasten to tender our humblest apologies to the magazine we so unwittingly abused.

Problem Play Finished

The Regal Photo Play Company of Cleveland, O., who have leased stage space at the Garrick Studios, Jacksonville, have completed the production of "What Becomes of the Children" from the pen of Miss Corra Beach, and it will be placed on the market in the near feature.

Exhibitors Pay Tribute to Pathe Serial

"Pearl of the Army" Is Magnet, Drawing Throngs, Says Conlon, Portland, Ore.

TRIBUTE to the drawing power of the Pathe serial, "Pearl of the Army," is paid by many exhibitors in unsolicited letters to the various Pathe exchanges, the main office reports.

Charles Sweeton, general manager of the North End Amusement Company, Inc., of Evansville, Ind., operating the Orpheum and North Side theatres, under date of December 18, writes as follows:

"I have had the pleasure of seeing the first three episodes of the new Pathe serial "Pearl of the Army" and while I had expected something unusual and far above the average I was not prepared for the great interest of the story, the wonderful situations and the splendid cast. Miss White has been seen in many great characterizations in her past film successes, but in "Pearl of the Army" she has a role especially suited to her charms and talents and her thousands of admirers are sure to be pleased with her careful portrayal of the difficult role.

"We have, in the past few years, showed all the leading serials but I am confident that 'Pearl of the Army' will break all previous records both from the point of interest to our patrons and the box office view.

"The Pathe Company is indeed to be congratulated in giving to the exhibitors and to the picture loving public, a serial of such sterling qualities.

T. R. Conlon, manager of the Hippodrome theatre of Portland, Ore., under the date of December 26, writes as follows:

I want to tell you that "Pearl of the Army" has eclipsed in drawing power any picture we have ever played.

The patriotic theme has a special appeal to the public and Pearl White surely is a favorite. These, combined with sustained interest, mystery and hazard have proven a veritable magnet—drawing the throngs to the Hippodrome at every showing.

"Should you have any exhibitors in your territory hailing from Missouri, send them to me."

Correcting Exhibitors' Faults in Mid-West

local managers realize not only from the standpoint of correcting abuses, but from the standpoint of absolute sheer necessity, that organization must come, must get support financially from the parent organizations, must have good men at the head of it even if it is necessary, and I believe it must come, to have paid officers to do nothing from one year to another but take care of the organization.

Isn't it a fact that in every other line of business these trade organizations have bettered conditions? Why then should this mighty trade of ours be an isolated instance lacking organization, co-ordination and co-operation. In other lines these organizations have the earnest support of the trade papers. Is it unfair to ask for our industry the same support from our trade papers? If any line of industry needs organization it is ours. Get busy. Give us some red-hot editorials on the subject. It is in your line—not mine—and it will be great work. Devote a page in each issue to the F.I.L.M. Club's doings. Stimulate the trade. Push the idea. It isn't one man's work. It is the work of us all.

An idea seems to prevail that we blacklist people. I want you to know that as long as I am associated with the Club I never will consent to its being used as a club over an exhibitor's head or for black-listing purposes, and when the time comes that it is used for these purposes, then the time has come when I will sever my connection with it.

One of the most remarkable things in connection with our organization is, that frankly, I believe the Chicago Exhibitors as a whole are with us rather than against us, the cause of this being that they know if they have a complaint against a film exchange that it is going to be acted upon the same as if the film exchanges had a complaint against an exhibitor. As a consequence those exhibitors who wish to play the game straight know that we are with them and consequently they are with us.

In February it is our intention to call a convention and at this first meeting of the convention you should not only make it a special point to give us your support, but endeavor to secure the attendance of the biggest men in the business, from San Francisco to New York; to urge the parent companies to attend as visitors, as well as the managers as delegates.

Cleo Madison Company Formed by Bernstein

ALL rumors in Los Angeles concerning Cleo Madison Feature Film Company were killed last week when bonafide announcement of the formation of this producing organization was made known by Isadore Bernstein, who is serving as general manager.

Mr. Bernstein has been in Los Angeles for more than three weeks, and has something to show for practically every minute of his time. He entered into the new industry with the same zeal and efficiency that he gave to the Universal upon his former employment in the west coast producing colony.

After visits to a large number of sites offered, Mr. Bernstein selected what is known as the Perry Davis Estate, consisting of nine acres and located on the highest ground within the city limits. The plot is but twenty minutes from the civic center, fully 300 feet above the business section, and surrounded by such natural advantages as to assure the greatest possible efficiency from the standpoint of climatic conditions.

The former owner of this beautiful estate gave much attention to beautifying the grounds, and now there are growing trees from every clime. These are to be grouped, and the grounds will then have every atmosphere creating vegetation to make possible northwestern Canadian scenes, or others for action laid in the tropics. There is a Mississippi cane brake, furs, pines, rubber trees, together with the sturdy oak, hickory and sycamore to be found in the Central and Northern States.

Another marked natural advantage of the plot is that it contains a cañyon with overhanging cliffs which can be converted into the Canadian Horseshoe of the Niagara Falls by the laying of three inch water mains.

"The plant will have two stages 80 by 150 feet in size, and it will hardly be necessary for us to leave the grounds to make any exteriors," says Mr. Bernstein. The corps of workmen we now have busy constructing the necessary buildings promise they will have the place in readiness to begin shooting by the first of January, or the fifteenth of the month at the latest. We have nothing to say at this time concerning the first production in which Miss Madison will be starred, but we know we are going to put the money into it, and make it one that will establish a reputation for us from the first. Our motto is, 'Pictures for the clean-minded millions,' and we promise there will be no sacrifice of story for footage, and absolutely no padding."

Ovey Appears in Sixty-two Cub Comedies

Up to January 4, when the first of the new series of Cub Comedies was released through the Mutual, the Cub organization had made sixty-two one reel subjects for David Horsley with practically the same cast throughout and under the direction of the same man, Milton H. Fahrney.

In all of the sixty-two pictures George Ovey played the featured role. He made his first picture appearance in Cub Comedies and has never appeared in another brand.

With few exceptions Ovey's leading woman in his sixty-two picture appearances has been either Goldie Colwell or Claire Alexander. At this time both are appearing in Cub Comedies.

Frank Lawrence Is Manager of Vitagraph Factory

Frank Lawrence, recognized as one of the cleverest film cutters in the business, has been made manager of the film factories of the Greater Vitagraph.

Ever since his boyhood, Mr. Lawrence has been employed by this concern. At first in the capacity of an operator, he was employed by William T. Rock in an amusement house in 125th street, New York City, and, when the Vitagraph Company was formed by Mr. Rock, Commodore J. Stuart Blackton and Albert E. Smith. Mr. Lawrence was one of the very first employees.

In the infancy of the business, when most pictures were rather crude affairs he was sent by his company to doctor up any production that seemed in need of improvement. It was through this channel that his knowledge of film surgery increased until he was heralded as one of the cleverest cutters in the profession.

In his new capacity, Mr. Lawrence controls Vitagraph's negative room, cutting room, printing department, joining room, perforating, developing, drying, shipping and still-picture departments. Since his rise to his present managerial capacity, a complete innovation has taken place due alone to his skillful and untiring efforts.

Among the features a large part of whose success must be attributed to Mr. Lawrence are "A Million Bid," "Captain Alvarez," "The Wreck," "The Combat," "The Juggernaut," "413," "The Tarantula," "The Christian," "The Battle Cry of Peace," "The Regiment of Two," "Wild Beasts at Large," "The Law Decides," "The Island of Regeneration," "The Suspect," "Crookey," and "My Official Wife."

Max Linder in His First Essanay Comedy

Ohio Censor Board Passes "Truant Soul"

The board of censors in Ohio has finally admitted Henry B. Walthall's Essanay feature, "The Truant Soul," to the screen in that state after holding it two weeks.

The objections to the picture were based on the fact that it depicts a famous surgeon as a victim of narcotics. There are several scenes in which Mr. Walthall is seen in the throes of this great menace to humanity. It was at first claimed that to show the results of the drug vice as vividly as they are portrayed in "The Truant Soul," was a bad influence on the community. It was on account of these protests that the board of censors ordered the picture held up pending an investigation.

The result of this investigation proved startling to the objectors. Noted ministers of Ohio, civic workers, clubwomen and finally federal internal revenue agents in charge of the government's crusade to stop the use of drugs and enforce the Harrison anti-narcotic act, were called in to view the picture and render their verdicts on its prospective influence on the community.

Their verdict was unanimous that such a picture would be a great moral lesson in aiding the government and communities at large in halting the death dealing strokes of drugs. In showing the public how terrible is the effects of narcotics, the picture has a good rather than a bad influence. On this verdict, the censors placed their O. K. on "The Truant Soul."

Balshofer Buys Fifty More Studio Lights

In order that production on the Harold Lockwood-May Allison plays will not be interfered with by the present rainy season in California, General Manager Fred J. Balshofer has purchased fifty Winfield Kerner studio lamps from the Los Angeles Equipment Company. The lamps were installed under the personal supervision of Chief Photographer Tony Gaudio, and due to his arrangement, the top lighting system will be employed by the Yorke-Metro studio.

The elaborate office scenes in "The Promise" were the first to be filmed in the new electric light studio, and in this set appear Harold Lockwood, May Allison, Paul Willis and Doc Pomeroy Cannon.

Jay Hunt is directing Harold Lockwood and May Allison in "The Promise" under the supervision of Fred J. Balshofer. The action of the story is laid both in New York and the great Northwest.

"Gentle Intruder" Is Latest Minter for Mutual

Newest of the Mutual Mary Miles Minter features being produced at the American studio is "The Gentle Intruder," under the direction of James Kirkwood.

The story concerns a young girl who has been defrauded of an inheritance by her uncle's lawyer. Into the home of the man who has taken what is hers she comes as a companion for an elderly woman and through this association finally brings the lawyer's self-seeking, society-crazed family into a realization of their shortcomings.

Clara Kimball Young, Who Will Shortly Appear in Another Selznick Feature, "The Price She Paid," Charles Giblyn, Director

Rose Fashions Every Week in 500 Foot Lengths

Following the announcement by Pathe of its alliance with International, comes the statement that development of the program of short reels will be a part of the campaign for 1917.

The Florence Rose Fashion films will be released every week in five hundred foot lengths instead of every two weeks in one thousand feet, effective with number eleven.

A number of theatres that did not use them because they could not get them regularly each week and because they were too long in one thousand foot lengths will now make them part of their regular weekly program.

"The Strand Theatre in New York is running them and that means that they can be classed with the best single reel subjects that are being released today," said Pathe. "Every theatre that caters to the better class of people should run these subjects owing to their popularity with women, because of the clothes and with men because of the pretty girls. Backed by the cooperation of newspapers, they are a decided box office attraction.

"Miss Florence Rose has had to add to her office force to take care of the hundreds of inquiries she receives every day from women throughout the country who want to know where the garments shown in the pictures can be secured."

"The women of the country simply insisted upon the change," said Miss Rose, when interviewed on her plans. "They flooded my office with inquiries; they could see no reason why they could not have the fashions every week. They didn't want to jump a week. They wanted to look forward to seeing the last word in fashions from New York on a certain date every week. They pestered the managers of the theatres until they referred them to me.

"Of course I am pleased that the women have welcomed with such enthusiasm the fashions. I felt sure that they would, for I have been traveling for the past eighteen months through the country and I knew that the fashions would be just what they needed; whether they recognized the fact until they saw them or not. With a release every week I am certain the pictures will prove even more popular."

John Barrymore Signs for Brenon Pictures

Stage Star Will Make First Screen Appearance in Two Years

JOHN BARRYMORE has signed a contract to appear under the direction of Herbert Brenon in a photodramatic version of Louis Joseph Vance's popular novel, "The Lone Wolf." This will be Brenon's next Selznick-Pictures production following "The Eternal Sin," which is now nearly ready for release, and which will introduce Florence Reed in the tragic role of Lucretia Borgia. The finishing touches are being put upon the Victor Hugo story at the Brenon Studio on Hudson Heights, and its release date will be announced shortly.

Work on the Barrymore production will begin within the next fortnight. This will be the first appearance of this popular star in moving pictures in nearly two years. His last season was devoted to the spoken drama, and his success as Falder in Galsworthy's "Justice" was one of the big theatrical events of the year. Mr. Barrymore had been regarded previously as a light comedian, and the power he displayed in his interpretation of the role of the victim of the processes of law was a revelation to his admirers. In "The Lone Wolf" he will have opportunity for demonstrating his talent in both the lighter and the heavier branches of his art.

By engaging John Barrymore, Mr. Brenon has made an exception to his rule to feature none but women stars in his productions. He is so impressed with the possibilities of "The Lone Wolf" however, that he is anxious to produce it, and as it would be like featuring Ophelia in "Hamlet" to try to develop any of the feminine roles, important as several of them are, to stellar dimensions, Mr. Brenon has pigeonholed his general principle for the present.

Another interesting point about this production will be its contrast with the previous Brenon productions since he joined the Selznick alliance; Nazimova in "War Brides," Florence Reed in "The Eternal Sin," and John Barrymore in "The Lone Wolf."

Following the Barrymore photodrama will come Mary Garden in an offering under the direction of Herbert Brenon. Announcement of the details of this production is being withheld for the present.

Lasky Players Go to Hawaii

For "Each to His Kind," a Lasky picture in which Sessue Hayakawa is to appear, director Marshall Neilan is sailing to Hawaii with his players.

Theodore Roberts, on the other hand, will star in "The American Consul," some of the action of which takes place in Washington.

"Panthea" Shown at Rialto

Norma Talmadge made her first appearance as a Selznick-Pictures star last week in a photodramatic version of "Panthea," at the Rialto theatre, Forty-second Street and Broadway.

Two Scenes Showing the Elaborate Settings Used in Pathe's Florence Rose Fashion Films

JUST FOR FUN

By LONGACRE

CARL ANDERSON, C. Carrington Burr, Ike Schlank, Wedgwood Nowell and Willard Howe have Christmas carded and Happy New Yeared their greetings to THE NEWS. Rather late, but these holiday mails are always so slow. We thank you.

WE suppose, now that the well-known and justly celebrated George M. Cohan has taken up picture work, that the trade journals will be flooded with the series of yarns about the illustrious gentleman, "keeping the money in his family," just as the dailies were in years gone by. Pete Schmid, the Teuton Bard of the Artcraft forces, has started the ball rolling with the story about the stage play, "Little Johnny Jones." George wrote the lyrics, music, built the scenery and his mother designed the costumes. A wheeze about a Cohan Revue is now in order.

BEWARE, people. One of Theda Bara's Christmas presents was an ancient ring containing a secret chamber specially designed for poison. We thought we'd pass this dose on just for the fun of it.

MISS L. M. KIRMMSE, who during the past two years has been connected with C. C. Wilkening, Ouida Bergere and the Players' Engagement Department of the American Play Company, has opened an office of her own at 105 West 40th street. She will handle scripts and players.

FRANK PRICE, JR., has just commenced severing connections. This time next week he will be handing out publicity for Jack Cohn's far-famed Universal Animated Weekly instead of wielding the blue pencil for the motion picture section of the Morning Telegraph. We wonder whether the newspaper man Frank will remain such in his new position or go the way of all those who stray into publicity jobs.

THE engagement of Fred J. Bird, assistant sales manager of the Nicholas Power Company, to Miss Marian Evelyn Cox, a singer of Brooklyn, has just been announced. Getting engaged seems to be a regular epidemic at the stronghold of the Powers in 90 Gold street—lots of people from every department are falling in line—except those from the export department. What's the matter, Captain?

JAMES M. COLWELL, who formerly handled publicity for Willis and Inglis, is now doing the same thing for the American Film Company at Santa Barbara, California.

BOTH Vivian Martin and George Beban of the Morosco studios wanted the services of stalwart Colin Chase at the same time. He was neutral and so Miss Martin and Mr. Beban took to a sport called the "Colin Chase." This is all the joke supplied by the Morosco press agent, except for the fact that he goes on to explain by saying the first production under way was to have the services of Mr. Chase's "historic" efforts. We used to be good in that line ourselves.

TO Max Linder goes the credit of having made the most startling discovery of the age. "The average motion picture manuscript," thinks Max, "makes excellent waste paper." Why go so far as to spoil the paper with all the printed matter, though?

LINA BABST, who for nearly five years has been stenographer and private secretary to Harry Raver, has been appointed secretary and treasurer of Mr. Raver's latest company, Apollo Pictures, Inc.

LOUISE GLAUM'S cute little Christmas card on which she wished the eager receiver a "Merrie, Merrie Christmas" sounded so kittenish like that one even forgets Louise's long string of vampirish pictures.

AND as for Terry Ramsaye's card, impressed with his royal insignia mounted by a little bull, who would think that it came from a press agent? We wish people wouldn't be so sarcastic.

WE are now quite certain that those English wheezes we clipped, originally came from Richard Willis. We have a page of Dick's funny stuff before us as we write. Running our trained eye over the paragraphs thereon we learn that Cleo Madison has married a tall man named Don Peake, because she was always anxious to attain the highest peak; that Charles Ray wore a monocle in "The Honorable Algy," his studio companions declaring he had a window in his eye despite his counter-assertions that it gave him a pane; and that Herbert Rawlinson is still wearing leather and steel supports on his kneecap, making him a bit unkneesy as it were. Can there now be any doubt about Dick's offense in the English publication?

MANAGER H. M. DAVIS of the New York Unicorn Exchange is in receipt of the following letter from a would-be comedian. It is eloquent in itself and needs no comment other than it comes in very handily when one is pressed for uproarious little paragraphs.

I am (double-jointed) and have all of the (latest) funny walks. Only one like Chaplin. I am a (contorsionist and a achrobate). Have you any pictures or any kind comedies. I have never been in pictures or vaudeville. I would like to get in the pictures. I want to get in comedies.

Mr. Davis, do you know of any companies that want double-jointed men for funny walks. I have heard that moving picture actors paint their faces yellow. I could save you much money on grease paint, as I already have yellow jaundice.

HAROLD KRIST.

DIRECTOR George Cox returned to Chicago for the holidays and while there underwent a successful operation—a tonsilectomy, that is—at the Lake View Hospital.

The Longacre Lampoon

All the News That Fits, We Print Longacre Square, N. Y., January 20, 1917

EDITORIAL

Padded pictures are not just the thing that one would call a rarity in this great and beautiful business. Padding comes in divers forms. Some of it is tolerable in that it is scenically pretty, some of it is just aggravating in that it prolongs certain phases of the action unnecessarily, and some of it is absolutely intolerable. This last variety crops up in the form of superfluous sub-titles. We have half an idea that the fellows who insert these superfluities of explanatory wording know in the bottom of their hearts that they form thereby rank padding. "Well, we need ten or a dozen feet more," reasons the editor, "here, let's explain all this action that has taken place in the last fifty feet. The players made it clear enough but a sub-title telling the same thing won't do any harm." And so the sub-title is put in, the players' work wasted and the gray matter of the average audience treated as mud of the gutter. Then, when a few of the populace who know a thing or two more than the film editor cry, "Hold, enough," and say that the motion picture will never be anything more than a "movie" the sincere film magnate is puzzled.

IN THE STATE RIGHTS FIELD

Rogson's New York Rights

The Rogson Film Company, Inc., with offices at Buffalo and New York City, desires to call to the attention of the exhibitors that the following features are handled by them for New York State excepting Greater New York: Around the World in Eighty Days, Birth of Character, Prima Donna's Husband, Salamander, One Day, Where Are My Children, Birth of Man, and Charlie in the Trenches.

"Absinthe" Territory Sold

King Baggot who has been selling his special feature "Absinthe" on state rights announces that nearly all the territory has been sold, and that he intends launching a new film proposition which will be made known in connection with his appearance at the leading motion picture theatres throughout the country.

"Living Book of Nature" Has Large Demand

Mr. E. W. Hammos, vice-president and general manager of the Educational Films Corp. of America, reports the most astonishing demand for the Raymond L. Ditmars "Living Book of Nature."

"It seems," said Mr. Hammos, "that every theatre in the United States is anxious to know how they can secure these pictures that heretofore have only been available to the Strand Theatre, New York, where they have been playing for fifteen consecutive weeks. And following our announcement in the NEWS that these pictures are now available to every theatre."

Jans to Handle Selznick

H. F. Jans, president of the New Jersey Metro Film Service advises that he has just consummated a deal with Mr. Lewis J. Selznick to handle all of his productions for the northern part of New Jersey. The pictures will be released under the Selznick Pictures of New Jersey at the 71 W. 23rd St. New York offices.

IN AND OUT OF TOWN

W. S. Butterfield, head of the Michigan circuit of theatres, arrived in New York this week. While here Mr. Butterfield will look over the big feature pictures and vaudeville productions for future bookings in his big string of theatres throughout the Middle West. A full month's consecutive bookings are available for Butterfield for the big de luxe picture productions.

The following "up-state" exhibitors were at the Delmonico luncheon last week getting pointers on the Sunday closing situation; Messrs. Cornell of Buffalo, Hubbard of Rochester and Cohen of Binghampton.

D. W. Griffith arrived in New York last week.

Mastbaum to Handle Fontana Films in East

Stanley Mastbaum, of the Stanley Producing Company, The Stanley Company and the Stanley Booking Company has secured the rights to all of the productions released under the name of the A. G. Fontana productions.

The magnitude of this deal can best be appreciated when it is mentioned that the Fontana company controls the rights of "Civilization," "Intolerance," and several other large productions for the states of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Maryland, Ohio, District of Columbia, Delaware, Virginia, and West Virginia. They do not, however, control New Jersey for "Civilization."

The heads of A. G. Fontana, Inc., after making a careful canvass of this territory and after considering the possible concerns which could handle it to the best advantage finally decided upon Stanley Mastbaum.

Mr. Mastbaum will be in complete control of this territory and all of the present and future bookings will be made through him.

Globe, of Boston, Has a Winner

The officials of the Globe Feature Film Corporation, of Boston, believe that they have made another ten strike in securing the New England rights to the Frohman Amusement Corporation's production of "The Witching Hour." The negotiations were conducted by Manager H. G. Segal and his associates to bring the six-part adaptation of the Augustus Thomas play to New England under the Globe banner.

A big publicity campaign will be inaugurated by the Globe forces on behalf of the production, which features C. Aubrey Smith, Marion Shotwell, Jack Sherrill and Robert Conness. The campaign will be under the supervision of Manager Segal's assistant, R. W. Cobe.

"Enlighten Thy Daughter" Sold

A statement from the Sorn Film Corporation says that after refusing a number of alluring offers from several theatre managers, for extended runs on Broadway for his latest picture, "Enlighten Thy Daughter," Ivan Abramson, author and director, disposed of the world's rights, this week, to Winik-Brock for a sum aggregating $125,000.

The United States and Canadian territories are to be disposed of on state right basis.

Within an hour after the deal between Abramson and Henry Brock was consummated, the New York, Northern New Jersey, and New England rights were purchased by the Merit Film Corporation, at a figure close to Forty Thousand dollars.

The production will be handled apart from the Winik-Brock enterprises, under the name of Enlightenment Film Corporation.

Lesser Gets Alcazar Theatre

Sol L. Lesser, president of the All Star Features Distributors of San Francisco, who recently purchased the California, Arizona and Nevada rights to Herbert Brenon's "War Brides" by Marion Craig Wentworth, and Thos. H. Ince's "Civilization," has secured the Alcazar theatre from Geo. Davis, manager for Messrs. Belasco and Mayer, for the presentation of his two film spectacles.

"War Brides" will open at the Alcazar theatre on Monday, January 15, for an indefinite engagement. This production will be presented with an augmented orchestra of eighteen pieces to interpret the music score by Robert Hood Bowers written especially for this production.

The "War Brides" engagement will be followed by Thos. H. Ince's "Civilization."

Pennington Gets Verne Play

J. B. Pennington, a well-known film man, has just purchased the rights for Jules Verne's play "Around the World in Eighty Days" for Virginia and North Carolina. The picture will take to the road January 1st, playing legitimate and picture theatres in the above territory.

NEWSY REPORTS FROM ALL SECTIONS

Midnight Matinee for Cleveland, at Mall

Special Program of Pictures Starts at 11 P.M. and Lasts Until 12.30 A.M.

SOME time ago the New Mall theatre announced that it would introduce midnight matinees. Manager Becht arranged a special program of pictures, songs and "stunts" starting at 11 P. M. and lasting until 12:30 A. M. It is understood that this is to be a regular Saturday night institution.

E. Mandelbaum, managing director of the Stillman theatre and one of the most widely known of motion picture exhibitors, was arrested last week on a charge of showing an uncensored motion picture.

The picture in question was "The Slave Market," featuring Pauline Frederick.

Mr. Mandelbaum was released on personal bail.

According to Assistant Manager W. J. Brandt of the theatre, the picture arrived in Cleveland too late to be sent to Columbus for the censors' inspection.

Approximately 300 pupils of Rockwell School, with their teachers, were guests of the Reel theatre on East Ninth street, last week to witness a special showing of little Zoe Ray in "Gloriana." The picture was donated by Bluebird for the occasion.

Holiday matinees beginning at 2 o'clock every day were given last week for the children at the Alhambra. "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp" was the special feature. The regular program followed.

A fire in the film booth of the Strand theatre, 930 Prospect avenue, was discovered last week. The audience, consisting of several hundred men and women, left the place without the least confusion when it was announced that there was a fire. The blaze originated in a roll of film and spread to several other reels.

About 250 children attended a performance of "Snow White" at the Stillman theatre as guests of the Cleveland Advertising Club. That the delightful fairy tale reached the hearts of the little ones was evidenced by the "ohs" and the "ahs" that permeated the theatre.

"Shell 43" Is Too Explosive, Says Officer

After it had been shown in the large cities of the Canadian East and also in the province of British Columbia, "Shell 43," a Triangle-Ince production which has been traveling throughout the United States since the middle part of June, was banned from being exhibited in Military District No. 10, which extends from Port Arthur, Ont., to the western boundary of Manitoba, by General Ruttan, district officer commanding.

The general, who constitutes the court of last resort in all matters affecting the country at the present time, saw fit to sit down on the film being shown in his district by reason of display advertising which appeared in the three Winnipeg papers two days prior to its first showing, which was to have taken place on Christmas Day. He claimed that the advertising contained seditions.

The appeal board is to review "Shell 43" again, which will be done in about ten days' time. Evidently the history of the film is not over, as far as Military District No. 10 is concerned. JULES L. STEELE.

Put-in-Bay Now Sees Films

Put-in-Bay, Ohio, citizens are enjoying motion picture films while Lake Erie is filled with ice and the town is cut off from the rest of the world. Heretofore they have had to forego picture shows in the winter time. Business men of the city have arranged to secure films on Tuesday and Saturday evenings of each week from Sandusky or Port Clinton, Ohio.

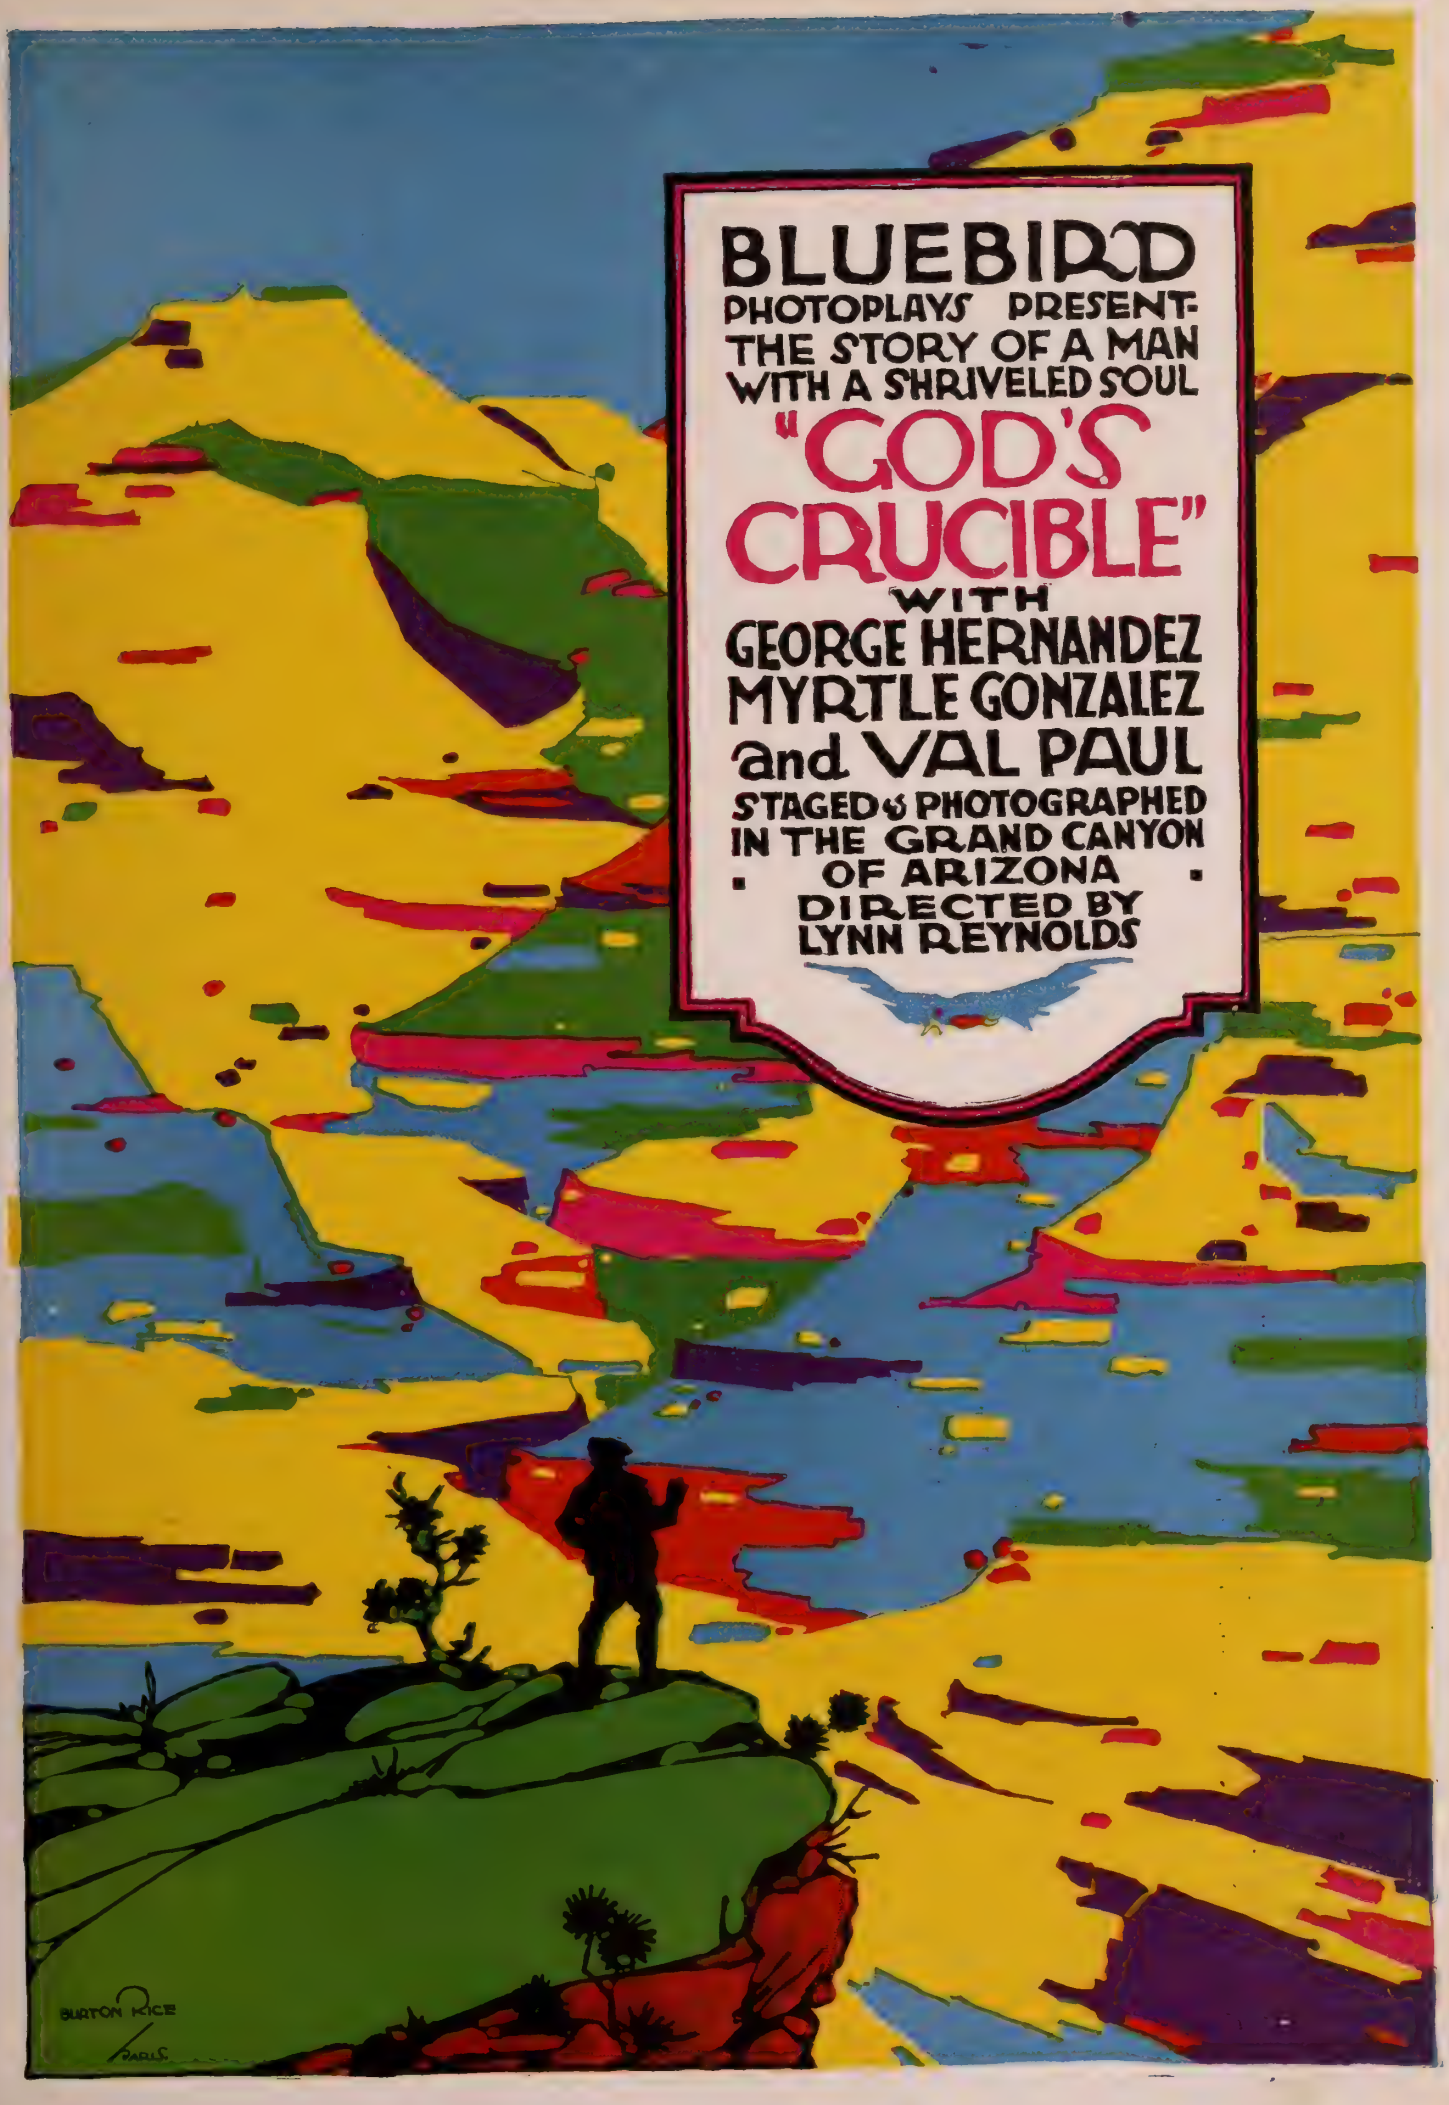
Serials Popular in Omaha 10 Cent Houses

Jake Mitchell, manager of the Laemmle Film Service Company exchange in Omaha, Neb., resents the inference in MOTION PICTURE NEWS' table of trade conditions that serials are most popular in five cent and non-first run houses, even though the report did not say such conditions were true in his territory.

"In Omaha's territory ninety per cent of the serials are shown in ten cent houses," he declared, "and most of the other ten per cent. are shown in houses that charge more than ten cents. In Omaha's five-cent houses, and they are few and far between, the exhibitors are planning to raise the price to ten cents when 'The Purple Mask' is shown. Only a few five-cent houses are showing 'Liberty,' and it is being shown in more theatres than any serial ever released by this exchange. Exhibitors are inquiring every day whether it is true that it will end in twenty reels. 'Can't we make it ten, fifteen or twenty reels longer?' they ask.

"Serials may be most popular in cheap houses elsewhere, but not in Omaha's territory."

"Blind Justice" Is Released as a Blue Ribbon



"Blind Justice," in seven reels, with Benjamin Christie, will be released on January 15 through the Vitagraph V-L-S-E. exchanges as a Blue Ribbon feature. Mr. Christie will be remembered for his production of "Sealed Orders."

He states it took a year to make "Blind Justice."

Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Vitagraph V-L-S-E., calls special attention to the fact that "Blind Justice" is a regular release, available to every exhibitor as a program Blue Ribbon feature. instead of being released as a special feature as an increased price.

Early January releases from Essanay. Left to Right: "When the Man Speaks," "The Girl God Made for Jones" and "Among Those Present."

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS [INC]

EXHIBITORS in every section of this great country, who appreciate and understand the tremendous power of Saturday Evening Post advertising in connection with BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS are reaping the rich reward in exhibiting BLUEBIRDS, thus bringing home to their respective audiences, EXACTLY THAT SUPREME TYPE OF PHOTOPLAY ENTERTAINMENT that the people demand.

The refinement, the unusual class and finesse of BLUEBIRD plays make a wider appeal than any known brand of feature on the American market. The underlying idea of "THE PLAY'S THE THING" has doubled in its value because the STARS in BLUEBIRD PLAYS are building a magnificent future for those Exhibitors who are keen enough and who possess foresight enough to understand that "giving the public the entertainment they demand"—means financial independence, greater prestige and constantly growing popularity.

As evidence of the pre-eminently superior character of BLUEBIRD-PHOTOPLAYS we advise you arrange with your nearest BLUEBIRD Exchange to exhibit "GOD'S CRUCIBLE" for you, or if you cannot arrange to view it, book it on our recommendation and advertise it stronger than ANY feature you ever showed in your Theatre. It will start a new and greater clientele, the kind that insures lasting success for your House.

Book through your local BLUEBIRD Exchange or Executive Office.

"News" Directory Helps Exhibitors in Newark

One of the lessons of the past year brought home to Newark, N. J., exhibitors by the increased box office returns has been the value of showing pictures in which former Newark residents and citizens have prominent parts. In fact these pictures have been so popular that exhibitors there have taken up a study of the latest motion picture directories in order to familiarize themselves with the former environments and home associations of the present day actors and actresses. Recent offerings of Newark theatres indicate the results of the exhibitors' activities.

The management of the Court Theatre discovered that Harold Lockwood was born two doors from that place of amusement. It needed little extra effort on the part of the Court management to secure capacity houses at each production of "Big Tremaine." The management of Fox's Carleton Theatre was informed of the fact that Harry Hilliard, who played Romeo opposite Theda Bara passed the greater part of his pre-stage career as a resident of that city. This bit of information was accompanied by numerous requests for a return of "Romeo and Juliet" to the Fox playhouse. John Mason and Alma Hanlon, who were seen at the Goodwin Theatre last week in "The Libertine," are both natives of the Oranges and both have many friends and acquaintances who made the trip to Newark to see them in their latest efforts before the screen.

"Newark has a population of almost half a million," explained one live wire exhibitor, "and you would be surprised at the number who have attained fame as screen artists. It is even more surprising that up to this time exhibitors have given little attention to a condition that will enable them to popularize their houses and increase their receipts. Recentlly there has been an awakening. Only the other day one exhibitor told me he had found in the last Directory number of MOTION PICTURE NEWS the names of more than sixty actresses and actors who were former citizens or residents of this city. That he has made a list of their names for future reference proves his faith in their ability to assist him as an exhibitor."

Western Exhibitors Announce Show-Time

Public Knows Exact Hour to See the Feature, the Comedy or News Reels

J. W. BALLINGER, proprietor of the Dean, York, Neb., is a live wire exhibitor. His line of programs, "dodgers," and other printed matter is a wonder, and there is a reason. Ballinger has installed a printing press as a part of his theatre equipment and does his own printing.

With the addition of Arthur Thiele as chief booker, the Omaha Bluebird exchange, under Manager Calvert, is complete in itself. It is the only Bluebird exchange in the country, Mr. Calvert says, that is independent of the Universal exchange. It has its own poster department, its own road men, its own inspectors, own shippers, own bookkeepers and other employes. Manager Calvert reports the week just before Christmas was the best in the history of the exchange.

The plan found so successful in New York and Chicago in introducing Mrs. Vernon Castle in "Patria" was tried out in Omaha by Manager Robert Shirley of the Muse theatre and Manager Edgar Moss of the International exchange, co-operating with the Hotel Fontenelle, Omaha's finest hostlery. The first three episodes of the patriotic film were shown at a private exhibition the night of December 22 to nearly 1,000 of the city's society people. The party received much mention in the society columns of the newspapers and was highly commended as an excellent plan of introducing the feature. Many favorable comments on the picture were heard.

"Why not a little sentiment?" inquired Curly Calvert, manager of the Bluebird exchange in Omaha, Neb., exhibiting a stack of "Christmas Greeting" notes he was sending to his exhibitor friends. The greetings were tastefully printed and arranged.

A benefit show for the benefit of the poor of Fairbury, Neb., was recently given by C. W. Bartlett, proprietor of the Rex theatre. He turned $150 over to the charity organization as the day's receipts. The General exchange in Omaha furnished the films, free.

With few exceptions the exhibitors of the Middle West, especially in the cities, advertise the exact time their various shows will start. In the city of Omaha, several of the downtown theatres advertise the moments the comedy, or the feature, or the news reels will be shown.

Fred Salinger, road man for the World exchange out of Omaha, has been appointed exchange manager for the World branch at Pittsburgh. Dave Block succeeds him as road man. Block was formerly with the Metro people.

Because the judges couldn't decide which article was best, Mayer H. Monsky, booker for the World exchange in Omaha, divided honors with Arthur Mayer of the New York City World office in a contest. The contestants were to write letters telling how best to handle shipments of films and advertising matter to the best advantage of the exhibitor and the exchange.

Bridgeport, Conn., Is in Censor Bonds

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., where 30,000 people nightly attend moving picture exhibitions, and where the public spends $1,-648,000 (estimated) annually to see good photoplays, is now in line to try out the censorship idea. A board of censors, directed by Charles H. Suckley, assistant superintendent of police, has been established and operating quietly for the past four weeks, it has just become known.

The Bridgeport newspapers have appeared in favor of the change. There are twenty-eight picture theatres in Bridgeport, and members of the board will visit each of these to review every subject brought to the city.

It is quite obvious that a censor board, no matter how large, will have considerable difficulty in censoring the programs in each of twenty-eight theatres.

Bridgeport's censorship is more liberal than that provided in other cities in the state where the police are left to supervise public morals, since elsewhere there is but one person who passes upon the fitness of subjects.

Coal Strike Almost "Bats Out" Exhibitors

Lack of Fuel, Due to Mine Walk-Out, Shuts Off Current in Australian Theatres

FOR the past six months or so, exhibitors and other amusement purveyors, have allowed themselves to fall too much into a rut, being content with the business their respective shows have been doing and not exerting themselves in an effort to score over their opponents. This applies more to the suburban showmen than otherwise. It was left for the recent coal strike to wake them up—and it did, considerably. On account of the strike the showmen were threatened with losing their electrical supply. This did happen in the third week of the strike and then it was that they had to use their wits in order to keep their promises with the public.

Some survived, others closed down for the period of the strike. Many were the ingenious devices resorted to in order to supply theatres with current. Motor-cars and petrol engines, were recruited from all sources and installed outside the various theatres and their noise was almost deafening, in some cases, to the people inside the theatre. The Union theatres, Sydney, were perhaps the most fortunate. Out of the whole circuit, only the Empress was forced to close down, and then only for one day, as each house was quickly fitted out with an independent supply.

Waddington's theatres in the city fared much worse. The Strand installed an engine of some sort, but on the first day its fumes overcame the operators and prevented further use. Again the next day, when the same engine was moved into the cellar, it forced a hole through the pavement. However, the management persisted and eventually succeeded in arranging matters satisfactorily. Waddington's Grand was closed for a period, and also the Globe. This theatre now has an engine that can be heard for blocks.

The Alhambra, which was also closed, utilized the forced delay by having the theatre thoroughly renovated and rebuilt. The Victoria, American, New York and many other houses, both in Sydney and the suburbs, were greatly affected by the strike. The exchanges of course also suffered, more especially in their country business, as there were very few trains to convey films and in the face of this most of the country theatres already had their own plant installed. It was a case of being able to supply those who could not use the pictures, and not being able to help those who wanted them.

However, now that a settlement has been agreed to between the miners and owners, all the preparations practically amount to a dead loss. It was a curious sight to enter a theatre and be ushered to a seat by the light of a candle or oil lamp.

Whatever ill effect the strike has had on other industries, it certainly was the means of waking up the New South Wales (in fact all the Australian) picture showmen.

Illinois Litho Succeeds Goes Company

The Illinois Lithographing Company has purchased the poster plant of the Goes Lithographing Company, and will specialize in motion picture posters. The officers of the Illinois Lithographing Company were formerly connected with the Goes Company. Arthur R. Tice, president, was the general manager for the Goes Company for twenty-five years. Mr. Thomas H. Quill, vice-president, had charge of the Goes poster department for the past ten years.

Levey Announces Policy of Overseas Company

To correct an erroneous impression amongst the trade Arthur Levey, vice-president and general manager, makes the following statement to the effect that the Overseas Distributing Company was formed primarily to distribute the products of American Film Manufacturers throughout the world exclusive of the United States and Canada.

"We believe our system of distribution of American films throughout the foreign markets is a radical departure from former methods employed," says Mr. Levey. "Heretofore agents and others representing foreign exchanges have continually decried existing conditions.

"The policy of the Overseas Distributing Company is entirely contrary to this plan inasmuch as our object is to give the manufacturer the best possible distribution, thus securing far more revenue for him than would ordinarily be obtained."

Swindlers Use Milwaukee Theatres to Promote Land Scheme

Alleging that patrons of the outskirt theatres of Milwaukee had been swindled out of money by a Milwaukee branch of a Chicago land concern, District Attorney Zabel has ordered the company to refrain from continuing business there.

According to Mr. Zabel the scheme was for the land promoters to go to the managers of the outskirt houses and by paying them a small sum gain permission to give out numbered coupon tickets. The patrons were requested to sign their names and place the coupons in a box, each coupon entitling the holder to a chance on a lot in Michigan.

It was stated by the promoters that the numbers would be drawn nightly and the winners would be notified. It is said that some of the theatre managers allowed the land firm the use of the theatre for nothing under the misconception that this was a good advertising scheme and would boost their business.

Shortly after depositing his or her ticket, the holder was informed that he or she had won a lot and was requested to send $3.80 to cover the cost of getting out the papers. This was followed shortly after by another request for eight dollars for an abstract to the lot. The scheme, it is said, is to sell the abstract, as the property is absolutely worthless and is blown away in a good strong wind, consisting principally of sand dunes. The scheme prospered in Milwaukee for some time until complaint was made to the district attorney and the promoters ordered to quit business.

Washington, D. C., Women Discuss Better Pictures

THE Motion Picture Committee of the Federation of Women's clubs in Washington, D. C., held a meeting recently in the white parlors of the Ebbitt House to discuss the "better pictures" movement which this organization is advocating throughout the city. Under the chairmanship of Mrs. J. J. Locher, this committee has been doing some very effective work, which has entailed great labor, expense, and a great amount of judicious thought.

On this occasion Rose Tapley, of the Vitagraph Company, gave a very interesting talk on the co-operation that the producers wish to give to the "better pictures" movement, which has become country-wide.

Mrs. Locher also made an important address as to the theatre which would cooperate in the children's matinee performances, and announced the chaperones, culled from the parents and teachers, who would have charge of the various performances.

These matinees will be held on Fridays and Saturdays during the month of January, the first two being known as "trial" performances, at which no admission will be charged. At the others a nominal admission of five cents will be asked.

The theatres offering their houses for the Friday performances are the Avenue Grand, Empire, Home, Lyric, Olympic, Victoria, and Howard. Those for the Saturday matinees are the Masonic Temple Auditorium, Circle, Dunbarton, Truxton, and Blue Mouse. The Masonic Temple Auditorium promises to have a children's performance weekly, if possible, as a part of its regular service. There will be two performances each afternoon at 2 o'clock for the smaller children, and at 3.30 for those of the higher grades.

Mrs. Locher has been in close communication with the Washington, D. C., exchangemen and with the manufacturers in order to secure the films desirable for these performances. She finds there is a scarcity of the pictures she wants. She is desirous of making the first performances entertaining with no especial desire of making them educational. "We are anxious to make the children want to come," she emphasized. "We want them to be amused. In fact, we want to show them something different from what they have been seeing."

What Is In Store for Milwaukee This Year?

Exhibitors Are Uncertain About Film Prospects—They Claim That People Turn to Vaudeville

MILWAUKEE photoplay theatres are in a great stage of unrest and change. The ensuing year promises to be either one of the best or one of the most disastrous in the history of the business in that section. Practically every one of the downtown theatres is playing nothing but the biggest of features. There seems to be an upward trend of admission prices at this time, the Alhambra going to fifteen cents, the Strand to fifteen cents, and the Orpheum to twenty-five cents. On the other hand, the Merrill theatre, which since it was opened about a year ago has consistently held to a fifteen cents admission fee, announces that with the first of the year the price will be dropped to ten cents.

On top of this, all of the photoplay houses are carrying heavy advertising and the legitimate and vaudeville theatres are forced to take second position in the matter of advertising in the newspapers. On Sunday, the 31st, not a photoplay theatre had less than ten inches and some of them had twenty and thirty inches of space. The advertisement of the Davidson, which plays a two dollar show, is buried amid a regular blizzard of photoplay advertisements.

The Alhambra has booked the Selznick productions and is playing them for week stands. Marguerite Clarke played an entire week in "Snow White" at the Alhambra, the following week, while E. H. Sothern was booked for a week at the Strand. Both these houses have heretofore been changing twice weekly and getting nothing more than ten cents. The Merrill, which but recently changed managers, and is now under the management of E. C. Bostick, has opened at ten cents, with Ethel Barrymore in "The Awakening of Helena Richie." The Princess, which was formerly a five cent house, is now playing Triangle and Paramount pictures and getting what is practically ten cents admission fee. The Butterfly theatre is also playing features and keeping to the ten cents policy.

Business the past few weeks has been very poor, the extremely cold weather—the thermometer being below zero for days at a time—having had much to do with this. However, the managers all over the city are complaining over the lack of real features. There are plenty of big names and widely advertised photodramas to be had which get the business on the strength of their name only and which are poorly written and are almost tiresome. This is having a tendency to drive away the photoplay fan from the screen drama and the result is that the vaudeville houses are all reporting an increase in business, despite the fact that a new hippodrome playing ten cents and twenty cents vaudeville and seating 3,000 people has recently opened. This theatre is reported to be playing to capacity, and the statement was made only Wednesday that if business held up as it has started the profit of the house for the first year would be close to $100,000.

Another vaudeville house will be shortly opened and this too will play at ten cents and twenty cents, and its owners, the Saxe Brothers, who control many photoplay houses in Milwaukee, expect to do a tremendous business. Despite these two houses and the other vaudeville theatres in Milwaukee there is a persistent rumor current that another popular price vaudeville house will shortly be announced for downtown. Milwaukee has little transient population and the only explanation that can be given of this sudden increase in the popular price vaudeville business is that the new set of theatregoers which the photoplays have created in the last few years are tired of the same wishy-washy screen dramas and are flocking to the vaudeville houses for amusement.

Just what the new year has in store for the photoplay exhibitor of Milwaukee is problematical. Some prophesy the biggest year on record while others are equally as pessimistic and see nothing but trouble and bad business ahead.

Limerick Contest for "Purple Mask" in Canada

The publicity department of the Universal Film Company, Toronto, is conducting a unique contest in the Toronto and Montreal papers in connection with the serial "The Purple Mask."

The idea is a contest for limericks which contain the names of Frances Ford, Grace Cunard and "The Purple Mask." The winners will receive large personally autographed photos of these two popular stars, and judging by results up to date the idea will be quite a success.

The first Canadian film taken in the air has been completed by William James, a Toronto photographer, above Long Branch, on the north shore of Ontario.

The flight was made under the auspices of the Curtis Aeroplanes Company and it is likely that this picture, the first of its kind, will be shown at one of the larger Ontario theatres.

The entire staff of the Specialty Import Company of Toronto, presented Mr. Travis, the manager, with a travelling bag the other evening. Mr. Bailey, president of the Exhibitors' Association of Ontario, made the speech of presentation. Afterwards a most enjoyable evening was spent in social entertainment.

The bill increasing the censorship fees on films was amended by the Legislative Council in Quebec last week in such a way as to provide for a reduction of the new schedule of fees, if it is not found workable.

The bill increases the censorship fee to five dollars per film. The amendment is to the effect that the lieutenant-governor in Council may, if expedient, make a reduction in the charge.

The film exchanges made strong opposition to the bill while it was before the Assembly, and it is now possible, if the Opposition is continued that the Cabinet may make a change.

SCREEN EXAMINATIONS

"The Pride of the Clan"

(Artcraft—Seven Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

WHETHER she laughs or cries, pouts or scolds, Mary Pickford is always delightful. "The Pride of the Clan" furnishes the popular little actress opportunities for every kind of mood. The picture is brimful of humor and pathos; the kind that gets right to the heart and carries an audience along with gratifying tenacity until the final scene. When Marget MacTavish laughs you must laugh too; when she cries—don't say you won't because you can't help it—you will have to cry too. If you are ashamed to use a handkerchief a cotton glove will arrest a fugitive tear.

In the Broken Mirror

If Marget draws up her shoulders and tosses her head with a "smarty" expression you may know that she is not going to be "put upon."

Not that any one tries to put upon Marget; on the contrary, she is idolized by the MacTavish clan, of which she is the chief. But when Jamie's mother discovers that her son did not die when he was a baby and she is caught kissing Marget's laddie there is a fire in the little girl's eye that shows the MacTavish temper must not be tried too far. Her acting in the scene where she gives up Jamie, after she has been convinced by the Earl of Dunstable, that there will be no place in Jamie's new world for her, is adorable. There are lots of such scenes and they give Miss Pickford a better chance for real acting than she has ever had before.

A delightful incident is when Marget, through an accidental word from Jamie, becomes dissatisfied with her linsey-woolsey dress. She improvises a waist from an old muslin window curtain, a skirt from a flaming bordered tablecloth and a hat from a lamp shade. Jamie is unable to appreciate this creation. He decides that it is useless to argue with a woman about clothes and that "when she is most wrong she is right."

One of the best scenes is Marget and Jamie's betrothal on St. Cullom's Eve, when according to custom, a sixpence is broken—and a half to each brings joy to both. The fisherman, pipers, kilts and Marget dancing the hornpipe with the oldest inhabitant would alone make the picture a success.

When MacTavish's boat goes down in sight of the frantic clan on the beach of an island on the west coast of Scotland his daughter Marget assumes the office of comforter to the rest, although her heart is breaking for her only parent. Her father's death makes her, in accordance with tradition, chief of the clan.

To be nearer her beloved father she goes to live in an old fishing boat, where she is able to look upon his wave tossed grave. Her companions are a kitten, a lame goose, that is almost human in its waywardness, a kid and a donkey. Marget delights in dressing up her pets and naming them after her friends.

Young Jamie Campbell, who is really the son of an English woman of rank, had been left in Scotland with his nurse. When his mother married again Mrs. Campbell, the nurse, decided to keep the boy for herself and reported his death. Jamie courted Marget in truly lad and lassie fashion. With the half sixpence around his neck he believed that nothing could ever happen to part them.

Mrs. Campbell becomes ill, and thinking that Jamie should not be deprived of his inheritance, writes to his mother. The Earl and Countess of Dunstable arrive in due time and claim Jamie, but they do not include Marget in their plans. She is persuaded that it is for his good that she should be left behind. The Earl tells her to explain to Jamie in a note, which she does. It makes no difference to Jamie; he tries to hold her to her promise, but Marget uses her authority as chief and orders him off.

With Jamie gone and nothing to keep her on the island, Marget cuts the ropes that tie her old boat to its moorings, hoping that she will drift to some kindlier shore. The hulk takes water and very soon Marget is in extreme danger of being drowned. Jamie sees from his mother's yacht in which he is sailing to England, the plight of the old fishing vessed. He is able to lower a boat and get to the fast sinking craft in time to save Marget. His parents are convinced of the young people's love and decided to take Marget to their hearts.

Maurice Tourneur directed this excellent picture and it is to be hoped that he will direct a good many more just as good. Miss Pickford is supported by Warren Cook as the Earl of Dunstable; Kathryn Browne Decker as the Countess; Ed Roseman as Pitcarn; Joel Day as the Dominie, and Matt Moor as Jamie Campbell.

"The Man Who Forgot"

(Balboa-Pathe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THAT which is dramatic and that which is frankly prohibition propaganda are pleasingly combined in "The Man Who Forgot." The hero is a fellow who rises from the depths to carry his prohibition bill through in Congress. His love affair with the daughter of the "wet" senator comes in to furnish the all important romantic angle of the story. While entertaining and sometimes unusually strong in a dramatic way "The Man Who Forgot"

The Returning Memory

lacks polish. The continuity is uneven and there is a certain reiteration of incident particularly through the medium of the subtitles that give undue emphasis to an obvious point. We refer in particular to the fact that John Smith, the regenerated derelict, continually dwells on his loss of memory. He never forgets that he has lost it.

To secure the right atmosphere Director Emile Chautard took his company to Washington. The Washington monument looms up needle-like in the background of many a scene. The capitol itself is shown several times, with a great crowd of cheering prohibitionists on its steps. The interiors are quite in keeping with the exteriors. The scene showing the House in session is particularly realistic.

The story tells of John Smith, who goes from opium fiend to drunkard and then to reformation. However hard he tries, he cannot remember his past. He knows that he has been an inebriate but that is all. This stands between him and Edith Mallon, the girl he loves. Senator Mallon and the liquor heads attempt to get something on this John Smith, the leader of the prohibitionists and they do, but somehow they don't take advantage of it and while they are apparently wondering what to do the bill is passed against them. John learns of his past and discovers that there was never anything in it other than dope and liquor, and takes Edith in his arms.

Robert Warwick does some difficult work well in the part of John Smith. Doris Kenyon is a delightful Edith, though acting a little too much. Ralph Delmore is a pronouncedly good type for the liquor senator, while others are John Reinhart, Frederick Truesdell, and Alex Shannon.

"Twin Kiddies"

(Paragon-World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

BABY MARIE OSBORNE, the little Mary Sunshine of Pathe pictures, essays her first dual role in "Twin Kiddies." She plays the part of a spoiled little girl brought up all wrong and of a sweet little girl brought up all O. K. The spoiled little girl has for her grandfather a hard hearted old capitalist and the sweet little girl is the daughter of a mine foreman. There is the strike and events so shape themselves that the twin kiddies get mixed, and their mixing incidentally is the thing that brings the strike to an end and makes the old grandfather kind hearted after all.

"Twin Kiddies" was written for Baby Marie by Calder Johnstone. To supply plenty of scenes for the little star and yet maintain a sustaining interest in the form of a plot was Mr. Johnstone's task and he has accomplished it. The chances he has thrown Baby Marie's way are many and she rises to their several requirements every time. She can be the naughty spoiled little girl just as well as she can be the sweet and loving one. She always distinguishes between the two parts—you never confuse them. But her work is so well known as to defy further remark. Referring to Mr. Johnstone again, he has supplied his scenario with a number of unusually fine touches and these include his subtitles. Those in which either one of the twin kiddies is speaking are excellently worded. They have all the charm of youth; they are just what a child would say.

The Look That Grandfather Got When He Said "No Dogs in the House"

Henry King who directed the previous Baby Marie pictures directed this one too. The manner in which he handles his little lead stamps him as fully conversant with the subject of child psychology. There is never a scene in which she appears to know she is acting. In other respects Mr. King's direction is indeed worthy. There is not an angle of his work left to pass without the most careful attention. Mr. King plays the miner satisfactorily and Daniel Gilfether is good as the grandfather. Others are Ruth Lackaye, R. Henry Grey, Loretta Beecker, Edward Jobson, and Mignon Le Brun.

"Great Expectations"

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

IT is to the credit of the makers of the picture that they did not attempt to crowd into five reels the whole story of "Great Expectations," which would have needed at least twenty-five reels if all the good things had been used. Director Vignola has condensed the plot effectively. If Pip should happen to be your favorite among Dickens' orphans, you might feel a shade of disappointment at the absence of "that unlimited miscreant," Trabb's Boy, the bête noire of Pip's young life. Or the other bugaboo, Mr. Pumblechook, the corn chandler, would have been welcomed because he was such a factor in the life of this particular orphan, who enjoyed the distinction of being "brought up by hand."

Pip's Views Are Broadened

Jack Pickford should stick to small boy parts. He makes a fine Cruikshank Pip, and Louise Huff is a very winsome Estella. Dickens lovers always have misgivings when one of their favorite stories is going to be picturized, but I wish that every Dickens reader could see what the Famous Players have done to "Great Expectations."

There is no doubt that, like other Dickens pictures that have been shown lately, it will stimulate interest in the great author and create a demand for many more of his stories in film.

Some of the scenery in the picture looks very much like the highways and hedges of England, the costumes, furniture and coaches are very English of Dickens' time. The coachmen are not, it is to be regretted, of the Tony Weller type, but some day we may see "The Pickwick Papers" on the screen, and then—but we must not anticipate.

Pip was left an orphan before patent baby food and feeding bottles were known, and when bringing up infants without those things was an achievement. His sister, wife of the village blacksmith, accomplished this feat. Pip used to blow the bellows at the forge for Joe Gargery until one day a crazy old woman, who had been dressed in her wedding clothes for twenty years, suddenly thought that she wanted Pip as a play-fellow for her adopted granddaughter. Of course the children fell in love, and the old woman, Miss Havisham, sends Pip away, telling him that she wanted to make him love Estella so that she could break his heart as her own had been broken.

Later the boy learns that an unknown benefactor wants to educate and make a gentleman of him. Pip thinks Miss Havisham has relented and is going to fit him to marry Estella. Several years elapse and Pip, under a good tutor, turns out well. He secretly meets Estella, who is away at school. Still believing that Miss Havisham is his unknown benefactor, he becomes engaged to her ward.

About this time Pip receives a strange caller. An escaped convict, whom Pip had been terrorized into giving food and a file when he was a child, had gratefully remembered the boy. When he became prosperous in the penal colony to which he had been sent, he made arrangements with a lawyer to have the boy prepared to inherit his fortune. The lawyer had sent such glowing accounts of the success of his plan that the convict, who is not so very bad after all, yearned for a glimpse of the boy. He risks arrest and goes to London.

Pip is horrified when he learns to whom he is indebted. The thought of losing Estella is hardest, but it turns out that the convict is Estella's father. He is killed in trying to escape recapture.

"Great Expectations" is a very good picture for Saturday and Sunday bookings, because Pip and Estella are children and because Dickens is read in all the schools.

"Her Soul's Inspiration"

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ELLA HALL is seen in this Bluebird of average worth in respect to story but rather lacking in direction. Miss Hall's performance as the dancing girl who can never keep her feet still is pleasant in its simplicity. She belongs to a traveling troupe of dancers and her grandfather is the owner of the show. When he dies the wardrobe woman and her daughter, another member of the company, go to the child's guardian and claim the inheritance. They have things their own way for a time until the little dancing girl turns up with fame and romance to defeat the conspirators.

The rather commonplace story is made entirely acceptable by the winning performance of the star, who in girl parts has few equals. The picture is an adaptation of Harris Anson's story, "Mary Keep Your Feet Still" and was produced by Jack Conway. Mr. Conway, it seems, could have made a much better production than he has. There were numerous opportunities in the script for the introduction of better touches—little bits of action that would have added originality and so strengthened the whole fabric.

The Deal Is Consummated

And then, after all, your average picture audience wants a hero and a pronounced one. All that "Her Soul's Inspiration" has to offer is a fairly aggressive sort of a fellow who stands ready to marry the dancing girl but not to do anything that stamps him as really heroic. He really doesn't have a chance though, as Miss Hall is kept busy in the center of most scenes. When the story runs down, as it does at times, she dances and dances very well, too.

Marc Robbins, Marcia Moore, Margaret Whistler, and Edward Hearn lead a good supporting cast. The light and harmless character of the whole picture, combined with its brighter moments, makes "Her Soul's Inspiration" particularly suitable for Sunday showings.

"The Master Passion"

(Edison—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY F. G. SPENCER

MABEL TRUNNELLE as Julia Long, and Robert Conness as George Bender are featured in Edison's "The Master Passion," and they are supported by an exceptional cast, as is necessary for a faithful delineation of a remarkable picture, for such is "The Master Passion." While the subject proper is based upon an old story of a man's passion for making money and a woman's passion to "bring the world to her feet" as an operatic star, there are many unique situations which are delicately handled, thus elevating this picture into a class by itself.

Julia's Success Brings the World to Her Feet

The photography is clear throughout, and there is every evidence of the exercise of great care and keen judgment in the selection of the exteriors. The views of the gambling salon at Monte Carlo, and the surrounding parks are also most realistic, although the company had to travel to Cuba to obtain the closest approach to the desired atmosphere without going to the Riviera. The results, however, fully warrant the expedition and a picture is furnished which should meet with a great reception wherever shown.

The story deals with the career of a young woman, Julia Long Bender, who, though happily married, hearkens to the voice of a teacher of voice culture, who promises a great future for her in Paris. She deserts husband and daughter and in turn is deserted by the man with whom she eloped. Making the acquaintance of Mme. Marie Jardin, the operatic star of the day, she becomes her understudy and is called upon to take the diva's part, which she does in excellence.

Later her husband and daughter are visiting in France and Julia discovers the fact and has Cora call on her frequently at the opera house. Here mother, father and daughter come face to face and when Julia learns that her husband has promised Cora in marriage to a dissolute, impoverished nobleman, with whom Julia herself has had a mesalliance, her mother love asserts itself, and at the risk of her own degradation becoming known, she prevents the marriage. Bender is wild; he was about to take Julia back, but now he repudiates her and with his daughter takes the first boat back to the United States. Julia's voice here fails her, and she goes from bad to worse, feeling the pangs of poverty as never before.

The quietude of an ocean trip, however, has wrought a change in Bender's attitude, and after cabling he returns to Paris and rescues his erring wife from a still more serious condition. It is a fascinating story of a beautiful woman's rise, fall and ultimate regeneration.

Others in the cast are A. Lincoln, Helen Strickland, Richard Tucker, William Wadsworth, Ann Lenoard, Raymond McKee, Olive Wright, and Bigelow Cooper.

The picturization reflects great credit upon Director Richard Ridgely.

"The Innocence of Lizette"

(American-Mutual—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

THIS picture is made interesting by winsome little Mary Miles Minter. The story is very pretty and deals with a little girl who assists her grandmother at a news-stand, which supports the small family. Luzette is attracted to one of her customers by a sad expression on his kindly face. She is curious and learns from his office boy that he had lost his wife and baby a year before and has never recovered from the shock.

Luzette in turn attracts the attention of a well-to-do man, Henry Fauer, by always trying to get his attention so that she can cheer him with a smile. After a while he becomes very much interested in her and asks if she would not rather come to be his little girl than learn millinery. The child is delighted and a pleasant life opens for her as the adopted daughter of Mr. Fauer.

Under a good governess, Luzette develops rapidly. Henry Fauer is called out of town for a few days and while he is away finds so much business to attend to, he writes his housekeeper that he will not be back for two months. Luzette decides to spend most of the time with her grandmother. She is warmly received by her former sidewalk companions and she spends two happy months. She is notified by the housekeeper that her guardian will return on a certain day in time for dinner. Luzette hurries home. On the doorstep she finds a baby in a bundle that has just been placed there by a poor mother who could not afford to keep it.

Luzette is delighted, she had so often begged for a baby. She firmly believed that babies come from heaven and that when God was ready he would send her one. That was what her Granny had always told her and now here was a baby right straight from heaven, fully dressed and two or three months old. The child is afraid that her governess will take the baby away if she tells her where she got it, so she just repeats over and over that the baby is her very own, sent to her by God.

The horrified servants are afraid to meet their employer and the butler gets intoxicated because the scandal has upset him. When Mr. Fauer arrives Luzette has gone to bed with her baby. He is told the news and rushes to Luzette's room. She still declares that the baby is her very own. At last he feels bound to believe her and asks about its father.

This is puzzling to Luzette and she tells him she is not sure, but will make up her mind later. Finally she mentions the nicest looking young man of her acquaintance for the honor. Mr. Fauer almost drags the young man to the house to marry Luzette. The minister is in attendance, but the girl has run away with the baby. She had no idea of marrying Daniel Nye when she selected him for the baby's father. She is brought back just as the poor woman returns and demands her baby.

The audience is taken into the secret at the start, otherwise the picture would appear to treat a serious subject flippantly.

"The Evil Eye"

(Lasky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

THIS latest Lasky success does not deserve its forbidding title. There is no evil in the story; only ignorance and superstition, that make a lot of Mexican vineyard laborers afraid of a lamp which the woman doctor wears on her forehead while examining diphtheria throats. The poor workers, crazed by the illness and death of their babies, call it the Evil Eye and declare that it destroys instead of heals. They demand a "doctor with whiskers," not a frail woman who opens their windows and changes their soiled bed clothes for fresh linen.

Blanche Sweet is the doctor in the case, and Tom Forman the manager of the vineyard, and it is safe to say that "The Evil Eye" furnishes them with as good parts as have fallen to them in a long time. The supporting company are up to their leaders and do very good work.

This is particularly true of Ruth King, who plays the part of Rosa, the manager's servant. The story is by Hector Turnbull, and was put into screen form by George Proctor. The directing was in the hands of George H. Melford, who left nothing to be desired to make an excellent picture.

Leonard Sheldon sends to the nearest city for a doctor to attend to the numerous cases of diphtheria among the children of the vineyard workers. Doctor Torrence, a slender, fair-haired girl, arrives, to the dissatisfaction of the Mexicans, who had never seen a female doctor before. Sheldon, foreseeing the difficulties in her way, advises her to return, but the physician is not made of running away material. She makes a brave fight against superstition and prejudice, but in the end has to give in that she is a failure.

The parents will not use her medicine nor carry out her instructions. The children die and the cause is attributed to the evil eye—the doctor's forehead lamp. Through all her fruitless efforts Sheldon has been her much needed body guard. Finally a crazed Mexican couple, whose child Doctor Torrence has failed to save, lure her to their brother's house and threaten to burn out the evil eye. It looks as though they might carry out their threat, but Sheldon arrives in time to upset their plans.

Frank King, Sheldon's assistant, has had a sentimental adventure with Rosa and grows tired of her, and Rosa's parents, with all the community at their heels, run to the manager's house to demand justice for Rosa. Doctor Torrence thinks that Sheldon is the culprit and Sheldon believes that Clifford, the doctor's brother, is guilty and is about to confess himself to save the boy when Frank admits his fault and takes Rosa back to his heart. In the excitement Sheldon and Katherine discover that they love each other and all ends happily.

"The Great Secret"

(Quality-Metro—Prologue and Five Chapters)

REVIEWED BY F. G. SPENCER

HOW the gangsters of the lower strata are hired to do the biddings of the financial gangsters who loll in the lap of luxury, and parade under the guise of respectability is fully amplified in this picture, whose locale is made New York City. The moneyed men, who have become wealthy by the most questionable means, have at their beck and call numerous denizens of the underworld whom they call in when occasion requires, and the methods resorted to, to effect their ends comprise everything in the calendar from strangling to shooting.

The picturization is good, the mechanical devices for lowering rooms by elevators are novel, but there are a few instances where a few feet of good material have been made to do duty for a few hundred, as witness the calling out of the police force. A squad of about two score bluecoats—perhaps more—anyway enough to suppress an incipient rebellion in Mexico, emerge from the pretentious police headquarters, and on the "double quick" parade several blocks of city pavement and then are loaded into waiting automobiles. A waste of energy on the part of the force and enforced idleness for the autos, which surely might have been parked nearer the station to await an emergency call.

But apart from this, the film opens with a rather novel departure from the hackneyed grafter game in that there is a Secret Seven, all experts in their various lines of blackmail and other phases of criminality, six of whom are under the will and power of "The Great Master" (Fred R. Stanton) who rules them with an iron hand.

One of the band, Thomas Clarke (W. J. Butler) is reported seriously ill and is being attended by Dr. Zulph (Edward Connolly) also a member of the Secret Seven, bearing a reputation for craftiness and cunning second only to The Great Master. The chief interest centers around the sick man, because being now conscience stricken he may decide to make restitution to his niece, whom he has impoverished, and the secret board has ordained that he must transfer his millions to them, and to Dr. Zulph is entrusted the task of getting Clarke's signature to a will with this end in view and then by an overdose dispatching the millionaire.

Events miscarry, however, and the bonds and securities do not fall into their hands and here the abductions, assaults, intrigues, plots and counter plots commence and doubtless will continue throughout the whole fifteen chapters.

Beverly Clarke, the niece, portrayed by Beverly Bayne, has a strenuous time in these first few episodes in that she is abducted, tortured, given the "third degree," strangled and left for dead because she will not give the information concerning the disposition of the missing papers. Francis X. Bushman as William Montgomery Strong gets into the melee through a chain of untoward circumstances and has to battle his way out of a crowd of gangsters, but finally is overcome, only to be released by the tardy police force.

There is enough action to suit the most belligerent of audiences and the photography of a fashionable masked ball and a dance in the underworld are faithful reproductions.

The story is by Fred de Gresac. William Christy directed the picture.

Strong Overpowers the Thug

The cast is a large one and includes Thomas Blake as "Bull" Whalen; Helen Dunbar as Jane Warren; Sue Balfour as Mrs. Matilda Clarke; Belle Bruce as Sara Loring; Dorothy Haydel as Eunice Morton; Charles Ripley as The Spider; Art Ortego as The Rat; Tammany Young as The Shadow; Charles Fang as Wee See, and Baron Wenther as Hadji Mahal, East Indian servant.

"The Rainbow"

(Art Dramas—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

THE success of "The Rainbow" is entirely in the hands of Robert Conness, Eleanor Gist and Dorothy Bernard; and they have made of it a very good picture. The story, if there is one, is so old that we have long ceased to look upon it as fiction. A domestic misunderstanding, a separation and a reunion after ten years is a tame affair, but Eleanor Gist as the wife and mother, with the exceptionally good support she receives from the rest of the company, has made the story quite different from the ordinary.

There is lots of heart interest and just enough intrigue to create the cross purposes which hold the plot together. The villain, played by Jack Hopkins, is very harmless; he is always in need of money and that is fatal to the plans of any villain. Without money to hire his supernumerary villains, he is as helpless as a serpent with its fangs drawn.

Whenever Hollins feels viciously determined to punish Sumner by flirting with Sumner's engaging little daughter, he remembers that he needs money and borrows from Cynthia's father instead, biding his time to carry out his ill designs.

After six years of marriage, Mr. and Mrs. Sumner decide that they are unsuited. An unusually sweet child (Marion Adams) fails to keep them together. Dick Harcourt, Ruth Sumner's brother, after losing everything at cards, commits suicide in their house. Because the young spendthrift lost his money to her husband Ruth blames him for the young man's death. This hastens a divorce she had feared for some time.

Ruth takes her six-year-old daughter and goes to live in London. In a letter to his lawyer, found on Dick, was a confession that he had squandered his sister's fortune. To give her the independence she seemed to desire, Neil Sumner arranges with his lawyer to pay her regularly the amount she would get from the fortune she thinks is still hers.

Ten years elapse. Sumner is living a careless bachelor life in New York when he learns from his lawyer that his former wife is anxious to convert her American stocks into money to invest abroad. Ruth and Cynthia return to carry out this plan. They are met by Sumner's sister Betty, who takes Cynthia to visit her father. Mr. Conness makes a very devoted father.

Cynthia, now eighteen, is allowed to extend her visit to her father and it soon brings her in contact with his promiscuous friends. Hollins, a horsy individual, would be very ardent in his attentions, but his constant need of a loan keeps him from doing any harm. Her mother hears of the dangers to which Cynthia is exposed and takes her away.

Through Sumner's lawyer, played very well by Conway Wingfield, the family all meet in London and Ruth hears accidentally that to spare her, Sumner had concealed her brother's theft and furnished her with funds for ten years. They are reunited. Cynthia is engaged to be married, and Fellowes, the lawyer, reaches an understanding with charming Betty, played by Jean Stuart.

Ralph Dean deserves great credit for his direction of one of the best pictures shown in a long time. "The Rainbow," which by the way, should be changed for "The Silver Lining," may be shown to any kind of an audience any day in the week—including Sundays. Dorothy Bernard as Cynthia will make a touching appeal to children, and Cynthia's parents will satisfy the most critical grown-ups.

"The Resurrection of Gold Bar"

(Kalem. Two-Reel Episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco")

REVIEWED BY F. G. SPENCER

AS each succeeding episode of "The Girl from 'Frisco" serial is filmed, the West and its life is more ably depicted—not that any of the preceding chapters have been below par, but that this, the latest one, is very realistic.

A boom mining town is deserted in a night when the vein in the Jackass mine peters out, and twenty years later on the re-discovery of the lost vein the same town achieves the distinction of a live town in as short a space of time as it took to effect its effacement from the mercantile map. Here, too, are pictured the typical bad man of the mining camp, and the "sticker" who refuses to believe all the claims are barren, and who after twenty years of hardship and privation has his labors amply rewarded by this discovery.

And all this came about through Barbara Brent's choice of a birthday present. Barbara was born in the mining town of Gold Bar, and when the town went broke her father, Ace Brent, sought other climes, taking the child with him. Now, on Barbara's twentieth anniversary of her birth, the father's mind naturally wanders back to the circumstances surrounding his career at her birth, and she insists on inspecting her birthplace.

There is the old town, or rather there are the remnants, the wreckage of what was once the thriving town and the only remaining inhabitant is the old prospector, Ben Granger, apparently on the last stage of the down grade of life. Recognition between Ace Brent and himself follows and the greeting is pathetic. There stands Ace Brent, powerful, physically and financially, and there totters Ben Granger, weak, physically and financially. But, through a chain of incidents, the Brents, father and daughter, discover gold on the all but abandoned site and Gold Bar comes into its own again, as also does Granger, who was robbed years previously by Dick Dingley, the bad man of the camp, who, by the way, also gets "his," he having shot a man who interfered when Dingley was about to jump old Granger's claim.

There is plenty of ginger in this episode, the picturization is clear and the sites well selected.

Robert Welles Ritchie is maintaining the keenly interesting phases of the serial and the direction of James W. Horne is uniformly satisfactory.

The full cast is: Marin Sais as Barbara Brent, Frank Jonasson

Granger Is Elevated at Finding Gold on His Claim as Ace Brent, True Boardman as Congressman Wallace, Ronald Bradbury as Dick Dingley and Edward Clisbee as the old prospector.

"A Wife by Proxy"

(Columbia-Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

THIS picture has two sides, a pleasant side and a disagreeable side. Mabel Talliaferro is on the right side of the story. Sally Crute is on the other side, and Robert Walker is the man between.

In her part of Jerry McNairn, an ignorant Irish girl, Miss Taliaferro plays with great tact and judgment. Mr. Walker as the young clubman, who is easily imposed upon, is not so convincing, and Sally Crute, as Beatrice Gauden, the adventuress, though a very fascinating and handsomely gowned woman, over acts her part. Fred Jones makes a typical mustached villain, husband of Beatrice.

Norton Burbeck inherits a fortune on conditions that he is married before a certain date, otherwise the money goes to his cousin Curtiss. Norton is in love with Beatrice, not knowing that she is married. Beatrice's husband, the aforesaid villain, who trades on his wife's attractions, schemes with Curtiss to have her lead Norton on until it is too late for him to marry any one else.

Little Jerry McNairn, a protege of Norton, is sent with a gift to Beatrice. She is horrified, while waiting for an answer to her message, to see Beatrice enter her husband's room, show the gift and go through demonstrations of affection and triumph. Jerry is worried on Norton's account, but decides to wait before telling her employer.

Two days before their supposed marriage Beatrice and Norton spend Hallow-e'en at a gay resort. Beatrice becomes depressed and tells him she has a secret to impart. He takes her home and she tells him that she is married to "a brute of a husband." This has been carefully arranged beforehand. With the assistance of a maid Gauden is able to pop in the room at the best time for his purpose and a sham fight takes place. That is the pistol with which Gauden threatened Norton it was shown later, was loaded with blank cartridges.

Norton still believes in Beatrice and falls into a plan for buying off "the brute," which seemed to be a part of their scheme. To save his fortune, Norton's lawyer hustles for a wife for his client. When Curtiss calls the next day to claim the inheritance he finds Norton and Jerry shaking hands with the minister who has just married them.

After a month Jerry demands the divorce that was promised to her, and Norton sends to tell Beatrice that he is free. Beatrice learns from Norton that Jerry, though giving him the divorce refuses to return the fortune, which by the terms of the will she controls. Beatrice loses interest in her lover and leaves him in anger. Jerry tells her husband that she had withheld the money to try out Beatrice. Then she tells him what she had seen upon her visit to Beatrice's house. Norton decides that his Proxy Wife is all right, and there will be no divorce. But in the morning he finds his money has been returned and Jerry has sailed for Ireland. He just catches the boat and they sail together. The direction of this picture by John H. Collins is excellent, considering the disagreeable things that are in the story. "A Wife by Proxy" will no doubt draw well with some people, but it is by no means a Sunday School subject.

"The Price of Silence"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

NEITHER William Farnum nor the theme of Child Labor has ever appeared to such fine advantage as they do in "The Price of Silence." The dramatic possibilities of the theme are many, but they must be handled carefully, else the results are stilted and conventional. The writer, William Piggott, has handled them carefully in this case and has supplied also a strong, gripping plot of a man who sacrifices his honor and liberty so that the girl he loves may go through life without a stain on her family name.

Mr. Farnum doesn't fold the girl to his breast after the fashion of heroes in the last scene. He is sitting in a prison cell and there the final fadeout leaves him. And of course there could have been a happy ending, easily, and the picture would have been world's weaker than it is now. Mr. Piggott snapped his fingers at tradition, it seems. We hope he goes on doing it.

Mr. Farnum appears as Senator Deering, an ardent fighter for the abolishment of Child Labor, an ardent admirer of Grace Vernon, daughter of an old judge, who is Deering's idol.

The Climax of the Senate Fight

Dearing loses in his love affair. A Dr. Kendle wins out. And so he turns all his attentions to the Child Labor question and is appointed chairman of a committee to consider the new bill. In the midst of it Judge Vernon dies, leaving only Deering in possession of the secret that he was bankrupt and an embezzler. So to gain money to save the name of the Vernons Deering takes a bribe and defeats the bill before the committee. Later he confesses, goes to prison (not to court, loud cheering) and Grace never knows of the sacrifice.

As produced by Frank Lloyd "The Price of Silence" has been given a most realistic presentation. The factory scenes, of which there are only a few, the senate scenes and the flashes of the mob outside the house, awaiting the returns are all done exceedingly well. Mr. Farnum makes you feel his part all the way through. His is a great performance. Gordon Griffith as the little cripple adopted by Deering acts up to the high mark set by his elders, every time. Vivian Rich is the girl while Brooklyn Kellar, Charles Clary and Ray Hanford are seen in other important parts.

"Pearl of the Army"

(Pathe—Eighth Episode—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THAT mysterious gentleman, T. O. Adams, sheds a few of his villainous traits in this number, "International Diplomacy" and grows correspondingly more heroic. Perhaps friend T. O. intends to fill the void left by the absence of any out-and-out hero in the preceding chapters of "Pearl of the Army." We hope so, for a serial without such a figure is something like a ship without a rudder.

The Silent Menace Taunts Pearl

The episode opens with Bolero commanding Adams to shoot Pearl. The tension of this scene only breaks at the arrival of the troops under command of Colonel Dare. Adams turns and shoots Bolero dead and then the fight is on between U. S. soldiers and the Grenadians.

The scene then shifts to Washington where all the principals sojourn after their border experiences. Pearl opens her father's safe to secure the canal plans to take to the war dpartment when she is attacked by a Silent Menace. After a furious struggle she is knocked unconscious. Reviving she discovers in her hand a crumpled rose which she had previously seen in Adams' possession. Her suspicions of him are again aroused.

Later though she acts on his advice and goes to the basement of the chemical building and there overhears a meeting of the Foreign Alliance. Adams enters, is immediately made a prisoner, tied to a stake and is about to be shot when Pearl from a distant corner shoots the man with the gun. Luckily a company of soldiers bursts in at that moment, but the exploding of chemicals so beclouds the scene that the Silent Menace manages to escape with Pearl and imprison her on board a ship bound for sea.

"The Turn of the Wheel"

(Mutual—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

DOROTHY DAVENPORT is featured in this picture and does very good work. She is a loving daughter to a weak old man, who scrapes up every cent to gamble in an infernal den conducted by a notorious underworld character, played by Rupert Julian.

Arnold Gray (Lee Bell) is Alice's devoted admirer, but when he asks her to marry him she thinks he is prompted by sympathy more than love and refuses him. Meanwhile her father has lost his last dollar over the gaming table and they move to smaller quarters and are lost to Arnold.

The gambler has a partner who revolts from his methods of winning the old man's money. The men quarrel and dissolve partnership. The partner seeks revenge. The gambler sees Alice painting in the park. He hurries back to his automobile, disguises himself as a picturesque Italian, and she asks him to pose for her. An appointment is made for him to go to her house. He does so and sees her work about the room. He tells her he can find a buyer for her picture.

Alice is delighted and writes down the address, promising to take a picture there to show the prospective customer. She still believes he is a poor Italian. When Alice arrives at the gambler's the door is opened by the Italian. She is left alone for a few minutes, then the man returns in immaculate evening clothes and explains the trick he has played upon her. He seizes Alice and she fights to get away. Just then the gambling house is raided by the erstwhile partner. Arnold Gray is among the first to run to Alice's relief.

This is a good picture for grown-ups, and will doubtless be a success.

"The Double Room Mystery"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS latest of Red Feathers, released January 15, is hardly a mystery picture, except for the fact that for two reels you haven't the slightest idea what it's going to be about. That, however, cannot be called mystery. The body of the picture shows the manner in which a reporter succeeded in capturing an escaped criminal after the best detectives in town fell down on the job. It is not replete with any of those situations one usually describes as being tense. It has some comedy in it, some intentional and some accidental. But the main fault with "The Double Room Mystery" is that there are several scenes that mean nothing. Explanations might be in order.

The reporter introduced is a lazy fellow who has been fired from the same job several times and finally is in real danger of losing his position when his chance comes. A crook escapes from jail (rather easily) and makes his way to a rooming house wherein the reporter sleeps peacefully. Next door rooms the man that the crook is after. The crook breaks in and kills his man. The boarders hear the shot and run to the scene and the crook opens the door into the reporter's room and is safe for the moment. The police don't think about looking in the next room and so the reporter has the honor of capturing the fellow and writing his story long before the police have come to.

Hayward Mack burlesques the reporter's role to comical effect. Ed Hearn is the crook and Edward Brady the man who is murdered. A minor love affair is carried through by Gertrude Selby and Ernie Shields. Hobart Henley produced the picture from a scenario by E. J. Clawson.

The Mid-afternoon Visitor

"Nina, the Flower Girl"

(Fine Arts-Triangle—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

BESSIE LOVE is all there is to "Nina, the Flower Girl"—all there is of any worth. And even she has had much better parts. When you are allowed to look straight into Bessie's brown eyes in the closeups you are inclined to smile at the thought that she is playing the part of a blind girl. The scenes in which she appears are much too long, and for that matter the same criticism may be applied to the whole picture.

An Invitation to the Party

The story traces the fortunes of Nina, the blind flower girl, and her admirer, Jimmie, a hunchback newsboy. There are some patronizing friends who after a great bit of convening decide to put Nina in charge of a physician. The operation to restore her sight is successful but Jimmie the hunchback has disappeared. You saw him climb to the top of a bridge and believe that he jumped in front of an express train. He couldn't stand the ordeal of facing Nina with his crooked back when she had thought him handsome. But, behold, like an unexpected immersion in icy water comes our old friend Happy Ending to the rescue—of Nina. Jimmie looms up whole and decently formed. A doctor has done the trick.

The effect of this forced ending is something peculiar. At first you wonder if your eyes aren't going back on you. Then you decide that Mary H. O'Connor is just kidding. But no; she is serious to the final scene. Literally she has dragged the happy ending in by its very heels. If moving picture audiences demand it, then they demand artificiality and the complete sacrifice of logic.

Elmer Clifton, Bert Hadley, Loyola O'Connor, Alfred Paget, Fred Warren, Adele Clifton, Rhea Hines and Jennie Lee are the other principals.

"Ace High Loses"

(Signal-Mutual—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY AGNES D. CAMP

IN Chapter II of "The Lass of the Lumberlands" the swift action of the earlier parts is maintained. The men whom Helen, at the risk of her life, got to take the places of those gone on the false report of a gold rush, had almost completed the work on the railroad that was to fill Dawson's contract, when at Dollar Holmes' instigation the "Ace High" saloon and gambling house is opened up and the men drink nearly all night.

Dawson breaks up the revelry and gets the men back to work, but the scheming Holmes has another form of deviltry on tap. He instructs his men to dynamite the railroad. This is accomplished, and a large part of the work is undone. Dawson has to admit that he cannot fill the contract. Dollar Holmes refuses to pay for the part of the road that is completed. "All or Nothing," he declares to be the contract. His son, Stephen, who has found gold, but so far has told no one but Helen, vows that if his father does not pay Dawson he will; whereupon Holmes strikes his son. Later the young man is kidnaped by Holmes' orders and locked up in the Ace High. He is rescued through Helen during an exciting fight.

There are thrills a-plenty in this swiftly moving chapter. Interest is kept at high pressure throughout. It seems that there is no end to the villainous Holmes' schemes, but to judge by a scowl from his principal henchman, that worthy is getting tired of his employer's ingratitude, and something still more jumpy may be expected in the next installment.

"A Modern Cinderella"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

JUNE CAPRICE cuts a very bright and happy figure in "A Modern Cinderella." It is she who is the Cinderella of course. She has a sister who is stuck up, as they say in elite circles, and a mother who persists in keeping her in short dresses and curls. She is sort of ambiguous when she says she wants to be grown up and have long dresses. They don't come very long these days. The story of the poor, down-trodden little daughter of an extremely rich family isn't very much like the old tale of Cinderella—thank goodness.

June loves her sister's suitor, Tom, and the cattish sister takes great delight in getting Thomas jealous. June comes to the rescue, saying the "only way we women can be won is for the men to make us jealous." So Tom consents to enter upon a love affair with June, just for the sake of winning back the sister's love. And he does it, to be sure, but after he gets it he doesn't want it, for it's June that then has the first place in his heart. And June? Well, she wanted Tom all along.

Little Miss Caprice is quite delightful. She can play the young girl well for the simple reason that she is young herself. One thing perhaps Miss Caprice might do well to remember. It is not necessary to end each scene with a laugh in the face of the camera. The audience knows when the scene ends because it disappears. Her periodic smile is too regular to be fully appreciated every time and it really begins to create a little feeling of tedium towards the end of the picture.

Cinderella and Her Prince

Frank Morgan makes a suitable Tom, Betty Prendergast acts somewhat too much as the sister, while others are Stanhope Wheatcroft, Grace Stevens and Tom Brooke. The scenario was prepared by Florence Auer and the direction was in charge of John G. Adolphi.

Rothacker Seeks to Promote Thrift Through Christmas Gifts

THIS year, the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago, instead of giving gold pieces to each employe, as has been their custom for the past six years, presented them with savings books with a substantial amount credited therein. Along with these books, each employe received one of the small savings banks issued by the Central Trust Company of Chicago. Mr. Rothacker hit upon this novel idea as a means of promoting thrift among those employed by the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR BUSY EXHIBITORS

General Film Service

"The Little Missionary." (Essanay, D. Screen time 28 mins. Tues. Jan. 16.)—Synopsis—An old couple have lived their selfish, individual lives for so long that they have come to very nearly hating each other, not realizing the fact that all they need to effect their happiness was a ray of human sunshine. This happiness they eventually found in "Sunshine Billy," a little girl they secured from an orphanage to help with the wife's household duties.

"One on Him." (Essanay. Comedy and Scenic Split reel. Wed. Jan. 17.)—Synopsis—A single man hunting a position as chauffeur is informed that a certain rich man engages only married men, so the subject of this sketch marries and when he appears to take the position it develops that he has married his prospective employer's daughter.

"The Sinful Marriage." (Essanay: Episode of "Is Marriage Sacred?" D. Screen time 30 mins.) Sat. Jan. 20—Synopsis—Married for wealth and without a spark of love Jesamine Rogers (Marguerite Clayton) tries her best to be a legal wife and respect her marriage vows, but in spite of herself, her heart still yearns for Dr. Roderick Tredmore, and when the latter saves Jesamine's husband from a diabolical poison plot he realizes that the old love between his wife and the doctor still exists, so he permits his wife to secure a divorce that she may marry the man she loves.

"Among Those Present." (Essanay C. D. Screen time 30 mins. Tues. Jan. 9.)—Synopsis—Robert Ricketts (Richard C. Travers) is objected to as a suitor for the hand of Grace Stanton (Gertrude Glover) on account of his idling propensities, but when he aids materially in rounding up a "Society Raffles" and saves the girl's father Colonel Stanton (John Cossar) from further newspaper abuse for his inactivity in the premises, a deal is made whereby the Colonel gets the credit for the capture and Bob gets the girl.

"Canimated Nooz., Pictorial No. 22." (Essanay Cart. and Sc. Split reel, Wed., Jan. 10.)—Synopsis—A long drawn out wrestling match, in which sleep checks are given the spectators; Admiral Cheeseanrye of the Swiss navy, inspects the American navy. A series of Alaskan and Yukon views in which the spectator is taken from Vancouver, B. C. to Taku glacier.

"The Wide Wrong Way." (Essanay: Episode of "Is Marriage Sacred?" Screen time 38 min., Sat., Jan. 13.)—A barrier of uncongeniality confronts a newly married couple; the husband having been a rounder desires to settle down, and the wife on the contrary desires to venture forth. Constance Crawford, the wife (Marguerite Clayton), heeds the evil counsel of Wilson Ardmore (Sydney Ainsworth), her husband's friend, and but for the timely arrival of her sister, dire things might have happened. As it is, however, Ardmore realizes the wrong he was about to perpetrate and helps bring about a better understanding between Constance and her husband Hugh Chilvers (Edward Arnold).

"Canimated Nooz Pictorial, No. 21." (Essanay. Split reel. Wed., Dec. 27.)—Wallace Carlson's animated cartoons burlesquing the news weeklies, share the reel with five hundred feet of scenic taken at Lake Tehoe, California.

"Wife in Sunshine." "Is Marriage Sacred?" (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Dec. 30.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Influenced by Hitchcock, a social viper, Katherine divorces her artist husband, Edward Morrison. After some months Katherine asks Hitchcock to marry her. He scornfully refuses, and Katherine goes to Edward to ask forgiveness. She finds that he has married his model, and is enjoying the happiness she denied him. In the cast are Edward Arnold, Marguerite Clayton, Sydney Ainsworth, and Lillian Drew.

"Cupids Caddies." (Kalem. Tues., Jan. 16.)—Ham and Bud with Ethel Teare provoke the risibles in this, their latest comedy. This crowd of gloom dispellers shows up to great advantage. Henry Murdoch is the Prince de Poppycock, who is seeking his affinity, and offers 10,000 pesos or fifty cents in American money for anyone finding for him a woman 5 ft. 7 in. in height, weighing 140 pounds, for such are his requirements in aforementioned affinity. Of course Ethel Teare as Firtatious Flossie is duly nominted for the position, Ham and Bud fixing up the deal, but when they can't collect their "fee" they decide to rescue Flossie from the "foreign brute" and many amusing incidents follow.

This film is up to the Ham and Bud standard and will surely prove a drawing card where these comedians and their comicalities are known.

Mutual Program

Reel Life, No. 36. (Gaumont.)—"Turpentine from Waste Timber," demonstrates the old and new methods of draining trees for turpentine. It is most interesting and shows a building in which half a million barrels of the resinous substance are sometimes stored. "An Argosy from the Arctic" shows a whaling ship and vast quantities of whalebone before it resembles anything like corsets and other useful things we connect with that article. An Eskimo is seen in his kayak, a curious little boat from which he flourishes a weapon for spearing whale. An immense ivory tusk, worth many thousands of dollars, and so large that a man can stand under its curve is also shown. "Design Your Own Gown" is another interesting feature of this reel. Mr. Preesly, with a few yards of filmy fabric, drapes a living model and lo, before your eyes, a pretty evening gown is designed. "English Walnuts in America" may be a surprise to many, but to judge from the screen it is an important industry in California. We are shown the picking, drying, sorting and bagging of these favorite nuts, but alas, there are no signs of the green ones that make pickled walnuts of "Grosse and Blackwell" fame.

See America First, No. 69. (Gaumont).—Pasadena, California, is shown in many beautiful scenes. The drives, groves and handsome residences, some of which nestle among the orange trees, are very attractive. The Horace Mann day school is shown and looks very imposing upon the screen. On this reel there is a comic cartoon in which "Miss Catnip Goes to the Movies." A parrot and monkey time is proverbial, but when a cat is added to this happy combination the things that happen can be easier understood than explained. Mr. Palmer's pen keeps these lively pests on the jump for the entertainment of Miss Catnip.

Mutual Weekly, No. 105. (Gaumont.)—This week's number is especially interesting; showing the wreck of a United States submarine, Eureka, Cal.; the christening of the Julia Luckenback at Quincy, Mass.; Colonel Cornelius Vanderbilt with the 22nd Engineers back from the border; Christmas carols sung on the steps of the Treasury building at Washington, D. C.; Park employees receive Christmas presents; 110,000 telegrams are sent by Cardinal Gibbons; Brooklyn Jackies entertain the kiddies; Suffragettes pay tribute to Mrs. Boisevain; Christmas tree in Boston for horses, ears of corn, carrots and other vegetables hang temptingly on the tree and the horses are seen nibbling daintily at the tit-bits; a young Indian wins Marathon at Venice, California; Squadron A back from the border; Colored Guard receive armored motor, Denver, Colorado; Charles L. Schwab pledges the output of his steel works to the Government.

"Jerry's Double Header." (Vogue.)—George Ovey is as funny as he can be in this reel. He seems to be perfectly at home in a trunk on the back of his sweetheart's automobile. He is in deadly fear of her parents and is kept busy dodging them, but he renders valuable aid when they are held up by Black Gomez. He wins the girl and the lasting gratitude of her parents.

Reel Life, No. 35. (Gaumont.)—"Olive Industry." Whoever thinks that olives grow in glass bottles should see in this reel a 1,500 acre orchard with 15,000 full-bearing olive trees. The picking, sorting and bottling of this favorite relish as shown upon the screen is an eye opener, particularly for children, who only associate olives with a delicatessen store. "Modish Coiffures" are interesting and demonstrate the new style back comb. Children's hair, to judge from the child model on the screen, can no longer be left to mother's taste; an adherence to fashion for the tots must be observed. "Unique Baskets." The shells of the curious armadillo are scraped and dried; the head and tail are brought together and form a handle for the basket, and sometimes it is lined with silk. They are fanciful novelties conceived by an English basket maker. In one Texas county $10,000 worth have been sold in a month. "Value of Venom." This shows that even the despised serpent has its uses. The picture shows how poison is extracted from the deadly wrigglers and horses inoculated with the venom which makes them immune from snake bites.

"Jealous Jolts." (Vogue.)—This picture features Gypsy Abbot. A farmer and his wife select a husband for their daughter, the village belle. She makes her own selection and some very lively incidents follow in which her choice gets the worst of it for a long time. He is thrown into a hay mow and later comes out tied in a nice square bundle. Gypsy hears a sound from the bundle of hay and cuts the rope. Her sweetheart tumbles out. The recklessness with which farm implements are thrown about in this picture will keep an audience on the jump. Forks with wicked looking prongs are dropped around or flourished with utter disregard for cold steel. There is plenty of comedy of the farcical kind, which will be appreciated by most audiences.

Pathe Exchange

"Pearl of the Army." (Astra. Seventh Episode. Two reels. Week of Jan 14.)—Pearl and Bertha are in the power of the Grenadians. After a drunken revelry sponsored for a real cause by the girls, their guards fall into a drunken sleep. Pearl steals the plans and they escape. The Grenadians, in pursuit, fire several shots and Pearl is wounded. Bertha takes the plans and goes on, finally giving them to Col. Dare. Pearl is taken captive again and her execution is ordered. T. O. Adams is pressed into service to do the firing and with his gun leveled at Pearl's head the epicode closes.

"Preparing For the South." (Florence Rose Fashions. Number Fifteen. Week of Jan. 21)—Pretty Betty and her companion look over and fit themselves in all sorts of gear, from lingerie to hats, intended for wear in southern climes in this number, which in point of everything is quite as good as those which have gone before. A short subject in color entitled "Small Birds of Warm Climates" completes the reel.

"Luke's Busy Day." (Rolin. Week of Jan. 21.)—Some original gags such as the manner in which Luke's machine calls for him in the morning, unassisted, make this number highly diverting. The story concerns the rivalry of Luke and Snub for the hand of the police chief's daughter. Snub stoops to all sorts of treachery to win out but Luke manages to sail through with flying colors.

"Part of a Debutante's Life." (Florence Rose Fashions. Number Thirteen. Split reel.)—The most interesting feature in this number of the Florence Rose fashion series is the skating exhibition. Betty and her friends repair to a rink and wear a lot of attractive costumes while slipping around on the ice. On the same reel with 'Lion Cub's.'

"Lion Cubs." (Split reel.)—Showing a pair of lion cubs disporting themselves. They get into a fight with a monkey and at the end of the first round the simian has all the better of the argument. No one can deny the educational value of this. The film is hand colored and follows "Part of a Debutante's Life.'

Paramount Program

"Braving Blazes." (Black Diamond. Paramount. One reel. Comedy.) Synopsis—The Swede and Tad, employes of the Street Cleaning Department, envy the firemen their swell" job and importune the ward boss to install them in the fire department. He declines and advises them to stick to the job he has already found for them. At their noonday lunch, they fall asleep and dream of themselves as fire chiefs performing wonderful stunts for fire department efficiency and effecting some more wonderful rescues from blazing blazes. Of course—in due time they wake up, and . . .

"Visiting Montreal with Burton Holmes." (Paramount. One reel. Travel.) Synopsis—Mr. Holmes conducted his excursionists to Montreal from Quebec, thus passing the end of the great bridge now being built to span the St. Lawrence River. Then a cruise up and down the St. Lawrence is undertaken and an excellent view of old Montreal is obtained from the tower of the old Church of Bonsecourt, the favorite church of the French Canadian sailors. The fine churches are visited as are also the splendid monuments which abound in Montreal.

Universal Program

"Treat 'Em Rough." (Nestor. Mon., Jan. 15.)—Two married couples are the pivots of this comedy. Each wife thinks she would have done better to marry the other man and each husband has a high old time straightening matters out. This makes a fair Nestor with Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Priscilla Dean and Edith Roberts all playing in straight roles. Bess Meredyth wrote the scenario.

"The Prodigal Widow." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Jan. 16.)—The main fault with this picture is that it has no central plot. The author has started off one way and ended up another and the amount of incident dragged in is burdensome. A wife causes her husband's death through extravagance but is subsequently won over by her husband's brother, who decides to practice cave-man methods on her. Neva Gerber does good work as the wife while others are Carl Von Schiller, Charles Perley and Edward Cecil. Walter Woods wrote the scenario and Ben Wilson produced the picture.

"A Slave of Fear." (Imp. Two reels. Wed., Jan. 17.)—A pleasant dramatic offering in which a coward is so perturbed by the success of his bully of a rival in love that he suddenly gets courageous and uses his fists and wits to the end that the bully is discovered to be a bluff and a thief. M. K. Wilson, Earl Page and Agnes Vernon appear in this subject, which was prepared for the screen by Harvey Gates from a story by Phillip Gastrock.

"Heartsick At Sea." (L-Ko. Wed., Jan. 17.)—Dan Russell stows away on a ship in this reel and has to work his way over in the kitchen and dining room. Russell is as funny as ever but the direction is not up to the best in L-Kos. The action doesn't run at a rapid enough gait and spontaneity of humor is somewhat lacking. The aero-police are introduced in the end and cavort through the sky via the double exposure route in a makeshift aeroplane that brings a few laughs along with it.

"Putting One Over on Ignatz." (Victor. Thurs., Jan. 18.)—A number of risque scenes lend something of a too spicy flavor to this comedy which shows the manner in which a stranded road troupe swindled a local tradesman of enough money with which to leave town. Captain Leslie Peacock wrote and produced the picture with a cast including Alida Newman, Peggy Custer and Al McKinnon.

"His Little Room Mate." (Victor. Two reels. Fri., Jan. 19.)—This comedy, featuring Carter De Haven, has more ridiculous than humorous moments. A girl is knocked unconscious through Carter's trickery and he has to take her in to his college room and care for her. The situations are rather forced from the start and De Haven works just too hard to bring whole-hearted laughs. Peggy Coudray is the girl.

"Brute Force." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Jan. 20.)—A Western drama in which a traveling "sky pilot," who believes in using his fists, triumphs over a moonshiner in a love affair. This story by Eustace Hale Ball is somewhat drawn out and disconnected. Specially should the torture scenes be cut down. A. W. Rice directed a cast composed of George Pearce, Jane Bernoudy and James Farley.

"Barred from the Bar." (Joker. Sat., Jan. 20.)—William Franey as a bartender who unknowingly enlists himself in the ranks of the prohibitionists, cuts a very funny figure in this comedy and receives fine support from the usual Joker cast including, Gale Henry, Milburn Moranti and Lillian Peacock. Karl Coolidge wrote the story and scenario.

"The Bubble of Life." (Rex. Two reels. Sun., Jan. 21.)—When fast companions learn of the depleted fortunes of a society man a poor girl befriended by him proves the friend in need. Douglas Gerard and Ruth Clifford have the chief roles in this story by E. M. Ingleton which, considering it on two-reel standards, is rather poor.

"The Bad Man of Cheyenne." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Jan. 13.)—Directed by F. A. Kelsey it is quite up to the standard this director set himself a year or more ago with Fine Arts, and with a story written and acted by Harry Carey, some real thrills are evolved. The title is derived from the devotion to Carey of a dog whose master is shot in Carey's presence and who promptly avenges the killing by filling Jack Richardson full of metal. Later when the Sheriff is on Carey's trail, it develops that the latter saved Mrs. Sheriff's infant from death at the risk of his own life once, and is so deserving of every consideration even though a lawless character. A lynching is imminent, however, before the limb of the law gets an opportunity to square things, but as he does so despite the protests of Richardson's roughneck chums, all ends well. The dog used in this picture is a decidedly intelligent and fast worker.

"Midnight." (Imp. Sun., Jan. 14.)—A pretty offering is this in which a little girl appears before a priest on a stormy night and leads him to the bed of her dying father. It develops that it was only the spirit of the girl that appeared. This is a picture that tells much by suggestion—one can make of it what he will. Perhaps for the dyed-in-the-wool fan who is obliged to have an explanation for everything it is not the correct thing, but it should go extremely well in the better houses. The storm effects are excellent. Alan Holubar is the priest and Zoe Rae the child. Frank Spearman is the author.

"The Wrong Mary Wright." (Victor. Fri., Jan. 12.)—Edith Roberts and Millard Wilson are in this diverting reel of mixed identities and humorous complications. Both the leads give strongly favorable impressions. They are pleasant and attractive in appearance and practically any picture they touch is good. This one is not an exception.

Rawson & Evans Interchangeable Letter Electric Signs are made exclusively for motion picture theatres. We carefully investigated the requirements of Picture Theatres and then designed these signs accordingly.

WE HAVE THE SIGNS YOU NEED

These signs are brilliantly lighted at small cost, are practically indestructible, and are amazingly inexpensive.

Our illuminated program bulletins for theatre interiors and lobbies, are especially popular. They are real business builders.

Let us send our booklet describing these and other theatre signs. Just write your name and address on the margin of this page, send it to us, and we'll send same by return mail. Will you do it now?

MOTION PICTURE SUPPLIES

WHEN we speak of Motion Picture Supplies, we think naturally of Motion Picture Theatre Equipment, to the absolute exclusion of every other use to which this great picture invention is being put. In our active discussion as to whether a feature film is a necessity or merely a habit with the producer or whether the theatre should be thus or so, we seem to lose sight of what the outside man is doing—those whom we consider the butters-in on the industry.

IF we will stop and think a minute, we will realize that the churches and schools are actually putting in projection rooms, screens, etc. The large manufacturing plants are equipping in the same way. Salesmen are going out with reels of film and hand projectors to be used in sales work. The sportsman is taking motion pictures while on fishing and hunting trips. The man at home is piling up a library of pictures of his children.

So it goes. The theatre is, and always will be, the heart of the industry and all these other activities only tend to make new and more enthusiastic theatre patrons. We find the live theatre man taking local pictures in order to attract and build up local interest in his house. He is getting away with it. It is a reputation builder. It makes his house name a trademark of progressiveness. It makes him talked about.

THESE developments are not hearsay; they are facts. Anyone in the trade who has been too busy to realize what is going on may check it up. You will find at least a dozen home projection machines on the market. You will find cameras at various prices being pushed and sold.

You will find an increasing demand for film in various lengths. The demand must be met. Any goods which people want will force an outlet. They are doing it now. Motion picture goods are being purchased in large quantities outside what we know as the trade.

WHAT does this mean? Exceptions of course prove the rule, but in the main, from our observation, we find the Motion Picture Supply man letting most of this large income go over his head. Who is getting it? As a general rule the photographic dealer is the man. He has taken hold of this new side line and is pushing it and making money out of something which is not logically within his sphere.

STILL and motion photography have but little in common—any salesman in an ordinary photographic store can sell a still camera, providing the talking ability is there. He can also show the purchaser how to use it and, with the aid of worked out exposure meters, can be sure that the results will be at least fair. I have been instructed myself and know.

On the other hand, let the same salesman try to sell a motion camera. Can he do it? Perhaps. Can the purchaser get results? NO. The salesman is up against a problem which can only be taught by an experienced man. On the same principle, any man can run or explain a stereopticon machine—merely press a button and shove in a slide.

THE motion picture projector is different. Again an expert should not only sell the instrument but make the installation. A different grade of screen with varying surfaces should be installed in different width rooms and many other points should be taken up which require an intimate knowledge of motion picture projection not possessed by the salesman of the photographic store.

THE loading of film magazines as well as the developing and printing are in no way connected with the photographic store. With the still camera, any individual can load the plate holders with plates bought by the box. Motion picture film must be perforated and prepared especially. In the developing, anyone with passing intelligence can develop a plate or still films, but the motion picture film must be done in a plant where every man is an expert and cannot be handled by the photographic store around the corner.

Where does all this discussion lead us? Only to one point and that is to the importance to the MOTION PICTURE SUPPLY DEALER of establishing a department, if he has not already got it, to take care of this branch of the business which is developing so rapidly.

THE supply man is looking for new ways of increasing his revenue. He needs them. Here is one. Don't however just establish a department and let it go at that. Get in touch with manufacturers of the goods, arrange some basis and together do newspaper advertising locally.

Tell the people who you are, where you are, and what you have to sell. Get out on the main street where the passersby will see your show windows. Display your goods. Give a public demonstration as to how any inhabitant can use motion pictures for his own amusement.

In other words, take on this line and push it for all there is in it. It may come slow at first, but unless we are mistaken it will ultimately be the most remunerative part of your business.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED

An Outrage

G. K., Milwaukee, Wis.: I enclose you some pieces of film which I cut from the first and fourth reels of a four-reel feature, "The King of the Bowery," which was obtained from the —— exchange. The feature, as you see from the cuts, was in a disgraceful condition. I showed it to my employer and he said it might have been the fault of the machine, but I knew it was not, for I had three other reels which were in good condition and as I did not have any stops on them that convinced him it was the film. I would not make any complaint if it were not for the fact that the exchange manager guaranteed the condition of the feature.

I am running a Powers 6, with a 6A lamp house and lamp, using 5/8-inch cored carbons top and bottom. Current 60 cycles A.C., through a Bell and Howell compensarc. Sometimes my lower carbon gets red hot down to the lamp jaws, and sometimes that too gets red hot. I think I should use 3/4-inch carbons, but we have such a large supply of 5/8s the manager would not buy 3/4s. Can you suggest anything? Projection is pretty good in this city and sometime I will send in a full report on it. Wishing you and the NEWS a successful New Year.

Answer: It is an outrage. How any exchange manager can guarantee the condition of a film and then send out to an exhibitor, who pays good money, such a film as this, is beyond all understanding, yet it is done. There should be some way of holding the exchange manager criminally liable should anything serious happen, which, as can be seen from the illustration, is quite possible; in 2, 3 and 4, the sprocket holes are missing on each side of the film to such an extent as to make extra hazardous, and if the operator was not on the job every moment there would possibly be a fire due to the film stopping at the aperture and the intermittent sprocket having nothing in which to engage to cause the film to continue on its way to the take-up, or lower magazine.

It is obtaining money under false pretense for an exchange manager to send out a film in this condition when he has guaranteed it to be in first class condition, and it is no part of the operator's duty to be called upon to put a film in good condition. If he does so he should be reimbursed by the exchange if they do not or will not employ sufficient competent help to examine and inspect their film so that when it is received by the exhibitor he can feel sure that he is getting what he pays for and his patrons are getting a run for their money.

It is the habit of the exchanges to blame the operator for the poor condition in which the film is received by the next exhibitor, and while they may be justified somewhat in making this charge, it is not altogether true, for the operator as a rule takes great pride in his work and is just as anxious for the perfect running of his show as is the manager, and it is not only an aggravation when he is forced to stop his show, owing to such a condition as illustrated, but tempts him to blame others, as he so often does.

This could be entirely eliminated if the exchanges would, when they know that a film has not been properly inspected, request the operator to do the examining and pay him for his trouble; then the next exhibitor to receive the film would have the assurance that it was in good running condition. In this way the operator can be held responsible for the condition of the film and the exchange will be saved a lot of unnecessary damning.

In regard to your question about the carbons getting red hot, it seems to me that you are overloading your carbons, or it might be that your lamp leads are in need of trimming, or that the jaws of the lamp have become badly corroded, thus preventing the carbons from obtaining a good electrical contact. The transformer or compensarc which you mention has been used by me lately with great success, and I am glad to say that it is a great little device for its kind. I would suggest that you see that the wires are all in good condition and making perfect contact, being sure that they are absolutely tight, and that the inside of the lamp jaws are perfectly clean, then if the carbons still get red hot would suggest that you step the transformer down to the 40-ampere notch.

You may possibly have the transformer working at full capacity, and this, with the size carbons used, would have a tendency to so overload the carbons as to bring about this condition. Use the carbons you have at the lower amperage, and when they are gone if more light is required you can use the larger diameter carbon working on the last point of the transformer.

I will be glad to receive your report on projection, or anything else you might think would be of interest to the readers of the department. Thanks for your kind wishes, and let me say, I wish you the same.

Multiple vs. Series Multiple

A. B. T., Ohio: Can you tell me what constitutes a multiple series connection? I have had several arguments concerning this and want to be proven right or wrong. Would be pleased to have you publish the answer to this as soon as possible.

Answer: I dislike very much to be the arbiter in these "arguments," but as there may be others to whom the subject will be of interest I am going to try to answer your question. The multiple series connection in conjunction with a rheostat is of absolutely no use. For instance, if you connect two rheostats in series, and then two more rheostats in series, and then connect the two pairs in multiple with each other, you would have a "multiple series connection."

I cannot possibly see where such a connection could be applied, so far as rheostat resistance is concerned. The multiple series connection in electric lighting is nothing more than the use of one wire to carry the lamps, the other wire being grounded. This was found impracticable on account of each lamp in the circuit going out if anything happened to one, also if it was desired to extinguish one light it was necessary to extinguish all, on that circuit.

I hope this answer will satisfy you, in fact, I am free to confess that I never heard of just this kind of proposition so far as the moving picture machine was concerned.

A Progressive Union

Will J. Fallon, Sioux City, Ia.: Am enclosing you photographs of the Sioux City Moving Picture Operators Union, which you may use in the department if you wish. I also wish to state that our Local, No. 355, has started a school of instruction for its members. Our first meeting, which was held recently, lasted from 11 p. m. until 2 a. m. Our worthy brother, Charles A. Bateman, was elected chief instructor and I want to say that in my opinion the local could not have picked out a better man for the position as Brother Bateman has examined all of us (for he spent two or three years on the City Examining Board) and he knows our weak points.

Brother Bateman never leaves a subject until every man present understands it thoroughly; if anyone failed to "get it" he starts all over again. I for myself was sorry that there were not more of our members present at the first meeting but I think as the classes get better established and we have a regular routine of work it will become one of the things we hope to accomplish.

If any of the manufacturers who are willing to send us anything that can be used to help us in our efforts to become more proficient as operators we will certainly appreciate it very much. We have no machine heads or anything, except those which we borrow, and that is a pretty hard proposition when there are no supply houses in the town. I for one think it would be of benefit to the various machine manufacturers to send different things out. If the operator is called upon to set up or replace the parts on their machine they can do a first-class job. If there is any information that you can give us I can assure you that it also will be much appreciated.

Answer: Horace Greeley said, "Go West, young man," and we certainly have to hand it to the West for being progressive. Here is a local union scarcely three years old, which has really accomplished something; having been granted a substantial increase of wages without a fight the members are not content to stay in a "rut" but are anxious to improve their work to such an extent as to make the union slide synonomous with first-class work. They should have the support of the machine manufacturers, but you must realize this, if the machine manufacturers were to attempt to furnish each local union with machines they would bite off more than they could chew. That does not mean that I am going to "lay down on the job" for I am going to bend every effort to assist you in your efforts to better your work, and will make some suggestions that I think will bear fruit.

The photograph of the members which appears above shows them to be clean cut. The first man in the bottom row is a former member by the name of William K. Johnson, whose present whereabouts the members are not at all anxious to know. Unfortunately the man who has had some job wished on him, Brother Bateman, does not appear in the photograph. And Fallon must have a bunch of money with him from the way he has his coat buttoned. As he is secretary-treasurer he probably believes in "Safety first."

Another Operator's Machine Clicks

J. W. B., Brattleboro, Vt.: Well, Brother Sherman, I am having trouble caused by my machine making that clicking noise which you mentioned in the department some time ago. I am running two machines, and one of them, the one that clicks, runs harder than the other. Can you tell me what to do to overcome this? Also find it impossible to make my take-up work properly. I have taken it apart several times, cleaned and adjusted it, but it still seems to be too loose. Would be very thankful for any advice you may give.

Answer: That click that you complain of is getting my goat, too. But as long as you are getting a good picture on the screen it probably does not amount to anything, except that it is annoying. Feel out your intermittent sprocket when it is in lock and if there is very much circumferential lost motion it will have to be taken up; care must be exercised that you do not take up too much, which will cause the geneva to pound or the machine to bind.

If either of these things happen you will have made it too tight and will have to slacken off until the machine runs freely. To take up this play you must loosen up on the screws that hold the intermittent shaft bushings, and with a small steel punch inserted in the bushing nearest the sprocket when the bushing may be revolved, thus tightening the screws against the cam; if the pounding occurs you will then slack off until it appears to be just right, after which tighten the screws holding the intermittent sprocket shaft bushings.

Be sure that the sprocket shaft and cam shaft are kept in alignment in making this adjustment, which can be done by turning both bushings the same distance. The cause of your machine running hard may be due to several things: First, be sure that it is not binding anywhere. Tap each one of the gears with your fingers and see that they rock freely. Turn the machine, with the film in, slowly, and see that the tension springs are not set too tight. If the tension is too tight, it has a tendency to cause great wear on the machine, especially the intermittent movement, and the tracks on the aperture plate, as well as doing much harm to the film by stretching the sprocket holes.

It has been found that the proper tension is when the picture is steady on the screen, when run at any speed not exceeding 90 per minute. Over 90 the picture will climb on the screen. Second, it may be that your take-up tension is too tight. A loose belt does not always slip easily unless it is too loose, and if that were the case you would be unable to take up any great portion of the film.

The best method I know of in which to adjust the tension of the take-up is to loosen the collar which holds the spring on the take-up shaft, and with the take-up belt just long enough to slip over the two pulleys without being forced, tighten the spring by setting up on the collar until the lower reel begins to revolve, then place a full reel in the lower magazine and if the take-up refuses to pull, tighten up a trifle more, but not too much. This will have to be worked out by yourself, for if it is adjusted too tightly it will cause too great a strain on the first hundred feet or so of film.

Third, see that the machine is oiled early and often, and by that I mean that oil should be used with an oilcan and not with a spraying machine. If oil is applied to the machine, one drop at a time, several times a day, and the machine is properly taken care of, there is no reason in the world why it should not give good service for as long a time as you say yours has been running. If I can be of any further assistance to you, don't hesitate to call on me.

More About Carbons

SOME years ago there was on the market a carbon of foreign manufacture which was coated with copper. This carbon was found to be impracticable by a great many operators, owing to the fact that at that time the operators knew nothing about high amperage, and would have been afraid of it if they had. Conditions have now changed inasmuch as where 30 amperes were formerly used the operator is now using 60, and where 60 amperes were formerly used the operator is now using as much as 120 amperes, which calls for a carbon of higher efficiency.

For some time the engineers of the Speer Carbon Company have been developing a small-cored negative carbon, which they have found to be a decided improvement over the ⅜-inch solid negative carbon. This carbon has been developed on the principle that a negative carbon should have a fixed emerging point for the arc, and this emerging point should be restricted to an area equal to the normal hot area required by the arc.

Mr. Speer was one of the first to recognize the fact that a special carbon had to be manufactured which would meet the requirements of operators and exhibitors who wanted the higher amperage. After exhaustive tests with various coatings, it was decided to use the copper coating, as they deemed it the most practical for the purpose by reason of the fact that copper has the highest conductivity of any common metal and also melts at a relatively low temperature. These two facts make it suitable for the purpose of its intended use, inasmuch as the conductivity of the copper coating enables the manufacturer to reduce the size of the negative carbon and still carry the large current required for brilliant illumination. As the copper has about the right melting point to be disposed of by the heat of the arc at the proper time, it leaves a point which has the best shape for taking the arc. By this means a small negative carbon is obtained, and this assists in holding the arc in one position, as it must of necessity go from the tip of the smaller or negative carbon to the crater of the upper or positive carbon, which may be considerably larger, while if a large negative carbon is used there is danger of it wandering around the tip of the lower carbon.

In these later developments it was found that a ⅜-inch solid metal coated negative carbon was much better than a larger solid carbon because the area over which the arc could migrate (wander) was restricted. It was also discovered that the arc would migrate over the entire end of the ⅜-inch solid carbon and in doing this would become unstable, so that the crater on the positive carbon was not uniform in light intensity.

The shell of the usual carbon material, in which was a core made from material having slightly more heat resistance than the shell material, was found to give a steadier arc. One of the important features of this arrangement is that between the core and the shell there is a thin film of heat resisting and electrically conducting material. The object of this film is to confine the hottest area or the emerging point to the end of the core. The addition of a metal coating to the outside of the shell makes it possible to use carbon of reduced diameter.

At a demonstration which I witnessed in the Temple theatre, St. Marys, Pa., the arc burning at 70 amperes using a ¾-inch cored positive carbon and a ⅜-inch copper coated carbon as a negative, the arc was maintained steadily and with absolutely perfect illumination of the screen, there being no trace of ghosts or shadows and making it easy for the operator to maintain a perfect arc at all times.

The Temple theatre at St. Marys is an institution in itself. It was built by the Speer Company with the view of giving the people of St. Marys an up-to-date and safely conducted theatre wherein a mother would feel safe in allowing her children to attend the performances which are given there nightly and for which a small admission fee is charged which just about covers the actual renting cost of the films which are shown there. The one factor of interest to the Speer Carbon Company is that it enables them to make tests of their product under actual operating conditions, or in other words, under actual motion picture theatre conditions. These tests are conducted nightly with samples of the day's output, and are supervised by both Mr. Speer and Mr. Freyling, as well as the men from the laboratories.

These tests and experiments have enabled these men to observe the advantages which the carbon above described possesses. Among them are the following points which are submitted for your perusal:

First—The shell may be of sufficient size to give any desired life, while the arc is maintained steady because of its being confined to the end of the core.

Second: The light resulting from a combination of this special negative carbon and a soft cored upper carbon appears to be much better than the light from a soft cored upper carbon and a small, solid, metal coated negative carbon.

Third: The arc is steady because it always emerges from one point.

There is a decided advantage in this carbon over soft-cored negative carbons, for the reason that when the soft core burns too deep the arc is forced to emerge from some point on the tip of the shell, which is practically impossible for it to do with the carbon above described.

Because of the steadiness of the arc, it is also possible to maintain it for a longer period of time without adjustment than is the case when a soft-cored negative carbon or a small solid negative carbon is used. (This is the manufacturer's statement, and I believe it will bring out some interesting discussions.—Ed.)

The feature which makes this combination valuable for direct current also makes it operate well on alternating current, but it is necessary to use a somewhat larger carbon for the negative than is required for direct current.

These new carbons have been branded "Hold-Ark," and the makers recommend the following combinations as being best for direct current where they are used:

1-inch positive with 9-16-inch negative.
⅞-inch positive with ½-inch negative.
¾-inch positive with 7-16-inch negative.

Any operator who desires to try this new carbon and who will write me to that effect, I will see that he is forwarded samples, the only stipulation that I make being that he writes me his opinion after the carbons have received a fair test. Be sure to state the amperage you are using; this is very important, otherwise you might receive a combination that would be unsuited to your purpose.

I. G. Sherman.

The Industry Could Use Thirty Million Carbons a Year

THIRTY million carbons would be used annually by the motion picture theatres of the United States if they were available, according to information given the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry by the two greatest makers of carbon in the country.

These two manufacturers, the National Carbon Company of Cleveland, Ohio, and the Speer Carbon Company of St. Mary's, Penna., manufacture 15,000,000 carbons annually and at the present time this is practically the entire available stock. Previous to the war, the majority of the carbons came from Germany.

The two carbon manufacturers, the National, represented by N. C. Cotabish, general sales manager, and the Speer, by J. S. Speer, president and general manager, and J. P. Fryling, secretary and treasurer, were in conference with Executive Secretary Elliott at the National Association's rooms last week. Plans of affiliation were discussed, and the carbon makers expressed their interest in the activities of the National Association and their desire to co-operate.

In connection with the Sunday closing issue, the carbon makers offered to enclose in all their shipments a card urging the support and co-operation of exhibitors in the fight for the free Sunday which is being made by the National Association and the Exhibitors' League.

Many Thanks

THE editor wishes to thank the many who sent holiday greetings. Among those who sent remembrances were the following:

Nicholas Power, E. M. Porter, O. H. Spahr, J. F. Skerret, Edward Earl, L. W. Atwater, W. C. Smith, Arthur J. Lang, C. V. Rucker and the Radio Mat Slide Company, S. A. Louis, James V. Bryson, L. M. Fulton, Sidney B. Blakeley, Joseph Hornstein, Walter A. Bemis, John Gulfe, William Ebenau, and a host of operators too numerous to mention.

Again, my friends, thanks. It makes one feel good to know that they are remembered and the fact that you have remembered me proves that you are my friends. In return, I can only wish that all the good things wished me will return a hundred fold to the wishers.

UNION ANNOUNCEMENTS

The publishers of the NEWS have allowed me to set aside this column for operators' gossip. In it will be published any news or announcements that any local may wish to submit. Also, all local unions are requested to send in announcements of any and all elections of officers, change of date, time and place of meeting, etc., for publication in this column.

Get busy, Brother Secretaries, and let us see whether you are "on the job" or not.

Local 171 Elects Officers

AT the election of officers held recently by the Motion Picture Operators' Union, Local No. 171, I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O., of Pittsburgh, Pa., Charles W. Sheppard, who was president of the Union in 1912-13-14, was again elected to the presidency. This must be very gratifying to Brother Sheppard, proving that he is an executive of rare ability, otherwise he would not have received the highest honor the local could bestow. The other officers elected were John A. Rhodes, vice-president; Joseph Dean, secretary; H. Brooks, treasurer; Ralph Freeman, business agent; M. L. Old, guard, and Sheppard and Freeman, delegates to the I. C. C. T. Council.

In the re-election of Brother Freeman as business agent of the local, the boys acted very wisely, for Freeman has really held that position, or I should say filled that position, ever since the local has been organized, during which time he has been instrumental in getting the organization in good shape and helping to put it on a sound financial footing. My congratulations to the new officers and may the "boys" of local No. 171 enjoy a most successful year under the banner of the I. A.

Local 343 Holds Successful Ball

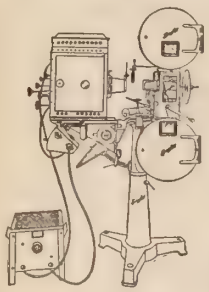
At the second annual ball given by Local No. 343, Omaha, Neb., recently, it was estimated that nearly two thousand people were in attendance. Orchestras from the various theatres furnished the music. Eight spot lights were used for the shadow dancing, and between the dances comedy films, furnished by the Universal, Pathe, Mutual and General exchanges, were shown which kept the crowd in good humor all evening.

The "big hit" was made when Jake Mitchell of the Laemmle exchange distributed to every dancer one of the masks used to advertise "The Purple Mask," a serial to be released soon. Every dancer was wearing a mask at one time. The various exchanges had striking exhibits on the walls, one of the most noticeable being that of the Bluebird, which had banners encircling the balcony which branched away from a big twenty-four sheet poster of "The Eagle's Wings."

The committee in charge, consisting of Brothers William Warner, secretary; Walter Denny, business agent, and Carl Krumere, vice-president, deserve great credit for the way in which the affair was conducted and which was voted a great success.

Local 307 Renovates Headquarters

The members of the Philadelphia Local 307 I. A. T. S. E. are reveling in their newly renovated headquarters.

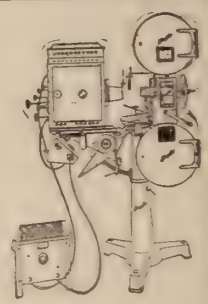


The two floors have been repapered, new linoleum laid, new furniture placed in the meeting room and business agent's office.

The boys say they now have a real "homey" place and hate to leave when duty calls. The improvements were completed in time for the annual meeting on December 3, when the election of officers took place. There was a fight on only one office, that of vice-president—J. V. Freil and J. J. Stevens were the candidates. Freil was elected. The other officers are the present incumbents and were unanimously chosen, as follows: President, B. F. Bache; Secretary, W. G. Murray; Treasurer, John A. Harris; Business Agent, Louis Krause.

It was a pleasure to the Local to have at this meeting William Smith, of the Nicholas Power Company, of the N. Y. Local, who installed the officers.

Brother Smith is well known in the Quaker City, having lived there twelve years.



The mechanical staff of "Civilization," now running at the Lyric, Philadelphia, are all members of New York Local 306, and were present at the 307 meeting.

THE MORE OPERATORS KNOW ABOUT PROJECTION, THE MORE EAGER THEY BECOME TO USE "SPEER CARBONS"

THE improvement of the projection is the paramount duty thrust upon every operator in the motion picture industry today.

NO matter how elaborate the films—the picture must be properly projected to produce the desired result.

THE latest development to delight the operator and improve his projection is the Speer "HOLD-ARK," hard core, metal coated lower carbons.

OPERATORS and experts declare it the greatest carbon achievement since the introduction of the motion picture industry.

THE hard core assures positive steadiness of the arc,—the metal coating affords additional current carrying capacity—the combination provides an ideal negative carbon.

SPEER solid, cored and "HOLD-ARK" carbons afford any desired combination and meet the most exacting conditions.

ON either D.C. or A.C. current—the light producing qualities can not be surpassed.

THE public is extremely critical—a bright, flickerless picture is demanded.

WHERE the exhibitor does not meet the requirements of his patrons, he finds the attendance diminishing.

CONSEQUENTLY every effort is put forth in an endeavor to please and satisfy. The operator hoping to do his part, sets about to improve conditions—naturally he delights in his achievements.

THE first fact he notes is that the correct carbons are most essential to improved projections.

BEING familiar with carbon faults, he rejoices in the recent developments of the SPEER LABORATORIES, and feels confident further advancement has been made in carbon qualities.

AS a progressive operator he demands improvements, and immediately becomes a regular user of "SPEER CARBONS."

HAVING adopted a carbon that is most satisfactory in every particular, he looks over his past experiences and feels that he has passed into a new atmosphere.

IT is an atmosphere of advanced thought, broad limitations and new ideas on projector carbons.

WHEN "SPEER CARBONS" were first conceived, materials were selected according to quality, and with a total disregard to price.

THIS policy still prevails, only it is being elevated and intensified.

RESEARCH, test, refinement and quality are the watchwords of the Speer engineers and experts.

THIS is why the performance of "SPEER CARBONS" is unapproachable. It demonstrates clearly that the "SPEER" is the incomparable carbon of the present day.

ULTIMATELY every exhibitor will adopt "SPEER CARBONS"—why hesitate—delays are serious—place your order today.

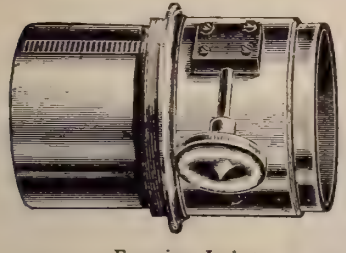
THE CAMERA

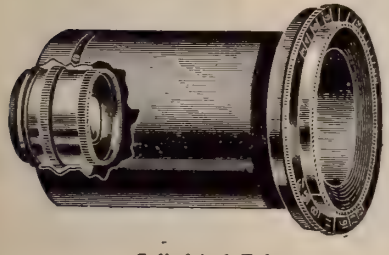
Focusing Mounts for Cinematograph Cameras

SUCCESS in motion picture making, as in most any other line of endeavor, is largely a matter of attention to details, and it is our intention in the present monograph—if such it may be called—to describe and compare the various methods and devices by which the lenses of cinematograph cameras are focused and mounted to the camera.



The subject of focusing as applied to motion camera work has been a fruitful one for writers on the technical aspects of cinematography, and opinions differ somewhat as to the best procedure in the focusing operation, but there can be no dissension from the statement that the manner in which the lens is mounted to the camera, and the mechanical perfection and principle of the device by which the objective is focused, is a controlling factor in the quality of cinematographic results.

That this fact has been recognized by camera builders and lens makers is attested by the following outline of the evolution of the focusing mountings used with cinematographic objectives.



Although many years have now passed since the beginning of motion picture production as a commercial undertaking we can well recall the cameras of former times, and the means by which lenses were then focused were such as will be readily familiar to any photographer or projection machine operator.

The focusing devices used by early workers in motion photography were of the rack and pinion type, attached to, and forming part of, the lens mounting proper, and the mounting of the lenses used in projecting was similar, as most readers are doubtless aware.

A step in advance was the introduction of the "focusing jacket" and "lens tube" form of mounting which permitted the use of lenses of varying focal lengths with one and the same focusing mount. Such an equipment is shown in Fig. 1, and is familiar to all cameramen, while a similar arrangement has long been in use in motion picture projection.

Focusing Jacket

Cylindrical Tube

Although the rack and pinion focusing mount served its purpose well for many years, and although it is possible with the exercise of considerable pains to secure a correct focus by its use, its disadvantages far outweigh its advantages when compared with some more recent devices.

The use of a jacket and tube focusing mount of rack and pinion type, as illustrated in Fig. 1, is subject to the following objections: Firstly, the precision of adjustment is limited by the size of the teeth on the rack and pinion, which, even on the best mounts ever produced, were not of fine enough mesh to permit of adjusting the lens with hair-breadth accuracy at all positions along the rack; secondly, the liability that the lens tube, when placed in the jacket, might not be in perfect alignment, thus producing an uneven focus at the image plane, and, thirdly, that manipulation of the diaphragm ring (at the front end of the lens tube) was fraught with the liability of altering the focus. Against these faults of the tube and jacket mounting is the sole and only advantage of such a device, namely, that by varying the distance to which the tube is inserted into the focusing jacket a greater range of focus is obtainable than with other forms of lens mounts, which is some advantage in title work or the photography of small objects at exceedingly close range.

A logical successor to the rack and pinion mount was the "helical" or spiral mount, which consists, in its simplest form, of an outer tube bearing a curved slot within which is another tube provided with a metal stud or pin which travels in the curved slot of the outer tube. Upon rotating the innermost tube with the fingers it is caused to advance or recede to an extent governed by the length of the curved slot in the outer tube. The helical form of focusing mount followed the rack and pinion mounting in the field of motion picture projection, but, as a matter of record, we might state that one of the earliest motion picture cameras, the Lumiere "Cinematographe" (1895) was provided with a helical mount for its photographic objective.

The condemning feature of the simple helical mount, as above described, is the fact that the lens is rotated during the focusing operation, and unless the mount were constructed with greater accuracy than any of this type which have yet appeared, the relation between the axis of the lens and the center of the image plane is disturbed, which is not a desirable condition, as will readily be appreciated.

Thanks to the efforts of the more prominent lens-makers, an improved form of the helical focusing mount finally appeared, and the improved form is shown in Fig. 2. Fig. 2 shows the mounting in which cinematographic taking lenses are customarily supplied by the lens-makers when a lens is ordered in a focusing setting, and the device shown in cross section in Fig. 2 is doubtless familiar to most all Camera Department readers.

This device also utilizes the principle of a curved or spiral slot in which a pin or boss travels, but is so arranged that when the operating lever is moved from side to side the objective moves straight toward or away from the focal plane and is not rotated in any way. Focusing mounts of this type (Fig. 2) are probably more used in present day cinematographic work than are any other, and, providing that they are free from lost motion, and are mounted to the camera front in such manner that the objective and the exposure aperture are truly parallel, a high degree of precision is attainable in focusing the image. These mounts may also be calibrated to various distances by the cameraman and if this be accurately done the task of inspecting the focused image in the camera is eliminated.

Although this improved form of the helical mounting is a strictly up-to-date device, there is some danger of disturbing the position of the lens when focused if an attempt is made to manipulate the diaphragm ring when the camera is in operation. The consideration of this deficiency, in connection with some further refinements in mechanical conception, has led to the introduction of some wonderfully precise focusing mounts by the C. P. Goerz American Optical Company.

These thoroughly modern Goerz focusing mounts are known as the Goerz Micrometer mounts models A and B, and are illustrated by Figures 3 and 4 respectively. The model A mount is designed to accommodate one lens (specially fitted) only, but the model B micrometer mount is capable of receiving lenses of various focal lengths, which are contained in separate tubes of well known type as shown in Fig. 4.

The design of both the model A and B micrometer mounts is identical, the only difference being the diameter of the main focusing barrel. The main focusing barrel consists of three tubes, the indicator tube, the micrometer tube and the barrel.

The thread of the micrometer tube is of the triple type, having a 1 mm. pitch, or 24 threads to the inch. One revolution of the micrometer tube is equal to a focusing movement of one-eighth of an inch. The model A mount allows three complete revolutions, or ⅜-inch range of focus, the model B mount five complete revolutions, or ⅝ inch.

The indicator tube of these micrometer mounts is connected with the micrometer tube and is divided into 15 parts and each complete revolution of the micrometer tube is indicated by one of the cross lines on the barrel. These fifteen engraved lines do not indicate the distance for which the lens is focused, but enable the cameraman to repeatedly place his lens at exactly the same position. These mounts may be calibrated by observing the focused image at various distances and preparing a table showing the readings of the indicator scale when the lens is at correct focus for the various distances between camera and subject.

By a further examination of Figures 3 and 4, it will be seen that the Goerz micrometer mounts are provided with a clamping arrangement (shown at the left in the illustrations) wherewith the lens may be locked in position after focusing. This is a valuable feature and overcomes one of the principal objections to all types of focusing mounts previously mentioned. It is almost needless to say that these Goerz micrometer mounts are flawless in mechanical finish, smooth in operation, and when accurately mounted to the camera are capable of very precise results.

It should be here remarked that the results with all lenses and all forms of lens mounts are problematical when the lens is attached to the front board of a motion picture camera. Should the camera front board be of wood, the slightest degree of warpage or splitting is liable to throw the lens and its mounting out of the alignment with the exposure plane, and the same would be true of a metal front board if it were slightly bent or not fitted accurately to the camera case.

The ideal method of mounting the lens to a cinematographic camera must, therefore, be—to attach the same to the main frame or mechanism plate of the instrument. This feature has been embodied in the construction of several well-known cinematographic taking instruments and it is interesting to note that the advisability of such procedure was recognized as long ago as 1907, or thereabouts, by the Pathe firm when they brought out the universally famous Pathe studio model professional camera.

In the "Pathe Professional" the focusing arrangement is built into the camera, being attached to the plate upon which the entire camera mechanism is mounted.

For the benefit of those readers who have never used the Pathe instrument we have prepared a diagram, Figure 5, which will serve to show the design and operation of the Pathe focusing device.

In Figure 5, A is a metal segment or flange which supports the lens. The segment A is attached at one end to a metal lug B which slides in a dove-tail groove in the block C. Through the center of the lug B is a threaded bearing in which runs the screw D. Upon rotation of the screw D by the focusing knob E (at the back of the camera) the lug B and the flange A, bearing the lens, are moved backwards or forwards as the case may require, until a correct focus is attained.

To compensate for any wear or lost motion between the lug B and the block C at their contact surfaces, there are provided two gibs F.F. (Fig. 5) which are set up from time to time by tightening the screws G and H, at the top and bottom of the block C. The efficiency and accuracy of this Pathe focusing device is readily apparent and the results secured with the Pathe cameras in the hands of competent cameramen are ample testimony to its merits. A device similar in principle is employed in the Prevost camera, being manipulated on that instrument by a knob on the left side of the camera connected by gearing inside the case to a lug having the same function as the lug B in Fig. 5.

Burke and James, Inc., Handles "U" Camera Products in Chicago

ARRANGEMENTS have just been completed by Burke and James, Inc., of Chicago, whereby it has become the sole and exclusive wholesale distributor for the products of the Universal Camera Company of that city. The Burke and James Company is by no means new in the motion picture field, as it has handled the famous Voigtlander and Dallmeyer motion picture lenses for several years and up until the opening of the European war did a large business in Ernemann and Bioscope motion picture cameras.

This arrangement will enable the manufacturers to devote their entire time to turning out Universal cameras, tripods and accessories so that they will be able to supply those who desire Universal cameras on short notice, a condition which, owing to the great demand, has not existed previously. Burke and James, Inc., also maintains an office at 225 Fifth avenue, New York City, for taking care of Eastern business.

Color Values

WATTERSON R. ROTHACKER of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago, has just issued an unique display of tints and tones as they actually appear on motion picture film. This consists of thirty actual cut-outs from film which have been treated in the Rothacker laboratory. There are ten actually distinct and different colors shown under the heading of "Tinted," the same under the heading "Tone" and the same under a combination of "Toning and Tinting." These colors are as follows: Blue, light blue, amber, light amber, yellow, orange, rose, red, green, purple. Under the combination treatment, variations in color are brought out rather than merely differences in intensity and degree.

In ordering colors, Mr. Rothacker states that in the past clients have not been sufficiently definite in their color specifications, which leads him to issue the circular.

CHOOSE A UNIVERSAL, BECAUSE —

"You Get the Picture and Get Away Before the Other Fellow Gets Set Up."

It was in those words that a clear thinking user of a Universal Camera told the story of his immense satisfaction with this machine. It is the story of Universal efficiency in a nut shell. The Universal is so easy to load, so quickly threaded, so rapidly set up and so perfectly built that you are always equal to the occasion, you get the picture before the other fellow gets "set up."

Experienced camera men know the unestimable value of time in the motion picture field. Current events await no man. You must be on the spot, ready and equipped for the picture. Every Universal owner is so equipped. That is why the Universal is recognized as the greatest advance yet made in the motion picture camera construction.

MUSIC AND THE PICTURE

Improvising and Theme Playing

Frank H. Anderson

FRANK H. ANDERSON of Reading, Pa., is a noted organist and has played for pictures for many years in Honolulu, California and Oregon.

In answer to a request from the NEWS for a summary of his experiences and obstacles encountered during his career Mr. Anderson sent the following letter:

After reading the many comments and criticisms concerning motion picture playing, I have decided to write on two subjects, which have not been hashed over as much as other topics of motion picture playing, viz., Improvisation and Theme Playing. Of course, the former refers only to lone organists, pianists and one man orchestras.

I have played pictures since the time of piano and traps, when the drummer rang a cowbell in all farm scenes, to the present time of great pipe organs, and Wurlitzer orchestras, I being engaged at the present time playing the latter. During this time, I have played in Honolulu, California, Oregon, and the East, and have played from printed scores and cue sheets, and have even played "Birth of a Nation" while in California, alone on a pipe organ, from a violin score sent out from Clunes. Some of the cue sheets are a great help indeed, although I have found one or two that might have been written by the janitor or the office boy. For instance, for a Chinese picture, which dealt with opium and poppies, an intermezzo or novellette was suggested called "In Poppyland" for a scene where real Chinese music was needed.

I never have a chance to see my picture before the show, and when I start the feature, I turn out my light, using no music, and settle down to "following" the action, playing airs or parts of them by memory or improvising occasionally where no particular piece suggests itself to the picture, building up the general action by Agitatos, hurries and mysteriosos and some soulful, plaintive strain where the scene calls for it. In a word, trying to sway the audience by the music during the general action of the drama. Of course, it is very difficult to "sway" some people, as they care nothing about the music whatever and pay no attention to it.

Discreet modulation is the key to the success of drifting from one scene to another, and it should be understood that improvising can be overdone. If Beethoven or Wagner, or some other old master were to improvise for five to six reels, without really playing any one good number, it would become monotonous to the listener. Great care should be taken not to play too much in the same strain, the same key, or the same combinations on the organ.

After playing the picture over once, I then arrange a program for the second showing from various numbers that suggested themselves during the first performance.

Before going into this subject, I wish to say that theme playing is not original with me, as many good pictures have been arranged this way by other men.

As the action of the picture is presented to the organist, he can readily see where some pretty little number can be played during the first meeting of the lovers and at various times afterward in scenes where they meet the same can be played, or a part of it; maybe only a suggestion, as it were. In a southern picture, probably "Old Virginia" or "Kentucky Home" might be advisable at times. I once played a Spanish picture where "La Poloma" or "Old Madrid" was very appropriate for the heroine, while her lover was an American, and at intervals, when they met, I interspersed a few bars of "Star Spangled Banner" with the same amount of the former theme, and then wandered off into something else suitable to the action of the changing scenes.

If a tuneful theme is used, the audience begins to like it and will probably hum it while going out of the theatre. Musical comedies have one or two numbers that stand out prominently above the others, and grand opera has the same thing, so why not the moving picture?

Of course, like everything else, one must use judgment; viz., if one were to play melody in F for a love theme and repeat the whole thing several times during the five reels, he would not have room enough for anything else, and would also bore the audience.

In passing, I might also say that I have found that no matter if one is playing in Honolulu to the Hawaiian mixed races, or the whites, or in California, the land of the motion picture industry, or in a small Oregon town among the cowboys or in the blasé East, you need not be afraid to play the old airs now and then. "Silver Threads" will reach just as many (if not more) people than Musetta's "Waltz Song" from "La Boheme" or the "Waiting Song" from "Madame Butterfly," although I am very partial to the latter style of music, and use Puccini's operas whenever I have a chance.

FRANK H. ANDERSON.
231 N. 4th St.,
Reading, Pa.

Concerning Mr. Anderson's ideas about the musical theme and improvising for pictures, I perfectly agree with him. But apropos of his comment about cue sheets, that some of them have been written by either janitors or office boys, I must say that every man who is undertaking to make up cue sheets is able to do so and able to do it right.

But these men or some of them, who are making these cue sheets, are not always guided by their knowledge, experience and ability.

Most of these cue sheets are a so-called one-sided affair, and are practically put up in the interest of the man who is making them or serve as an advertising medium for the music he is publishing.

You may claim that we are all doing this, and I'm willing to admit it is true, to a certain extent. Let us, for an example, take a man who is publishing few of his own numbers and is boycotting some of the bigger publishers for certain reasons, known only to him. Such a man in making up his cue sheets can never make a perfect musical setting if personal interest, publishing troubles and other things come first and the picture next.

Mr. Anderson's remark about the Chinese picture may possibly be an example of what I have said before.

Of course, I do not know the man who suggested this, but I know all of those men who are making up cue sheets at the present time, and I am also positive of the fact that they all know their business, and that they also are familiar with Chinese compositions.

You judge pictures by what they have done in other theatres. Why not judge by the satisfaction it is giving to hundreds of other exhibitors?

THE BARTOLA ORCHESTRA

CHAS. C. PYLE, General Sales Agent, 708-710 Mallers Bldg., Chicago, Ill.

Factory

Home of the California Organ Company

Now why suggest "In Poppyland?" I would greatly appreciate it if Mr. Anderson would let me know who made this cue sheet and what kind of a number he played for that particular scene.

I have made up about 500 cue sheets, which have been printed by the different film companies. I'm not a publisher nor a direct employee of any publishing concern, but to facilitate matters I am using the library of one of the largest publishing houses in the world. This house publishes over 40,000 numbers. As a basis for my work I always consider the picture first and if necessary use numbers published by anybody and obtainable everywhere.

The cue sheets published in the NEWS sufficiently prove that my statement is correct.

Thanking Mr. Anderson for his valuable comments, I hope that we will soon hear from him again. THE EDITOR.

R. P. Elliot Reappears

MR. R. P. ELLIOT, well-known in New York while connected with the W. W. Kimball Organ Company, has just sent in the accompanying photograph showing the factory of the California Organ Company, in which he has acquired an interest and of which he is vice-president and general manager.

Mr. Elliot states in his letter that although the company has made two large installations in New York City, they are nevertheless devoting the major part of their work to the Pacific Coast and other Western business. He states, however, that the activities of the company are to be enlarged and that before many months he hopes to have an organization which will cover the entire country.

BUILDING AND FURNISHING

The Strand of Steelton, Pa., Is an Attractive Theatre

THIS theatre is something out of the ordinary run of picture houses; there are many features about its construction and general appearance which is "food for thought" for other live-wire exhibitors.

The Strand, which was completed sometime during 1915, is absolutely modern in every sense of the word. The building is two stories high, the ground floor is occupied by the auditorium while the second floor would do well for art studio or business school. The construction throughout is entirely fireproof, being of concrete, brick and steel. Yellow brick was used for the construction of the front and on one side the wall trimmings are of whitestone.

The window frames, doors, cornices and the balustrade on the roof are of sheet metal. The window frames, braces for the cornice and balustrade are finished in white to match the other trimmings; the doors are finished in dark oak and the top of the cornices are painted a dark green to represent tile. The theatre is forty-five feet wide by one hundred feet deep. An electric sign about fifteen feet in height is fastened to the front wall. This sign was constructed by the Strauss Company of New York and is one of the most effective ways of attracting the attention of passers-by. There are also two five-light electric lamp posts in front of the theatre which serve to illuminate the exterior of the theatre and make it as bright as day.

Above the entrance to the lobby there is a beautiful stained glass window which cost several hundred dollars to be installed. The lobby, although not very large, is made very attractive by the numerous brass display frames and is well lighted by two semi-indirect electroliers. The box-office is centered between the two doors leading into the theatre and is equipped with an automatic ticket seller.

The interior of the theatre is sand finish and the trimmings are of gold. Both gas and electricity are used for lighting purposes, the gas being only for emergencies. The electric fixtures are of the semi-indirect type with opalescent glass bowls suspended from chains.

The theatre is heated by steam and a forced draft system is used for ventilation. The theatre seats 581 people; opera chairs, leather upholstered, were furnished by the American Seating Company of Chicago.

The projection room, located above the lobby, contains two Simplex projectors. For a screen the wall is used, it having been specially treated so that the picture comes out clear and every little detail can be well seen and does not strain the eyes. The length of throw is seventy feet.

The Strand Theatre, Steelton, Pa.

The performance consists of six or seven reels of either Fox, Metro or Paramount pictures the productions of these three corporations dividing the week's program. There are two performances daily, one matinee and one in the evening, five and ten cents being charged for admission at both performances. The management believes in advertising and uses the local newspapers as its medium to reach the public.

H. L. Sellers is the owner and manager of this theatre and he may be proud of it. This house is one of the most beautiful theatres in that section of the country.

Fox's Bedford Theatre Is Popular Brooklyn House

FOX'S Bedford theatre, which is located at Bedford avenue and Bergen street and the junction of Rogers and Bedford avenues, one of the busiest corners of Brooklyn, is one of the most popular motion picture and vaudeville houses in the city. The theatre is in the center of one of the best residential sections of Brooklyn, and is noted for its high-class patronage.

Mr. Goldman, the manager, who has been in the service of the Fox Amusement Company for the last ten years, managed both the Reviere theatre and roof prior to his transfer to the Bedford.

The Bedford was completed in 1912 and is owned by the Levy Brothers of Brooklyn, who also own and built the Fifth Avenue theatre and Ridgewood theatre of Brooklyn. Ever since the completion of the theatre it has been operated by the Fox Amusement Company. The theatre is 100 feet wide by 210 feet deep and was built specially for motion pictures and vaudeville. It is constructed of brick, reinforced concrete and steel, and is absolutely fireproof, but according to ordinance requirements is equipped with two exterior fire-escapes.

The front and one side of the theatre is of yellow brick, the rest of the building being reinforced concrete. Several display frames taking three and six sheet posters are fastened to the walls on both the Bedford avenue and Bergen street sides of the theatre. On either side of the door leading into the lobby is a translucent wired glass electric sign upon which the program is displayed. A large electric sign is used in conjunction with arc-lamps to illuminate the exterior. The flash sign is about thirty-five feet in height and was constructed and erected by Strauss and Company. This sign attracts the attention of people many blocks away.

The lobby is circular, being fifteen feet in diameter, and is in the corner of the house most accessible to both streets. The decorations of the lobby are of white Vermont marble, gold and oak. As one enters the lobby to the right is the box office.

The stairway which leads to the balcony and mezzanine floor is directly opposite the box-office. Between the two is the door which leads to the foyer in the rear of the orchestra. The lobby contains life-size, hand-colored bust photographs of the principals of the Fox Film Corporation and also a large display frame in which stills of the coming feature are posted. These are in heavy gold frames and are illuminated from above with one lamp wall bracket, the design of which matches that of the frame. The lobby is illuminated by a direct lighting fixture suspended from the center of the ceiling of the lobby and contains 45 40-watt ball frosted lamps. The doors leading from the street into the lobby are finished in oak while those leading into the theatre are of sheet metal finished in gilt paint.

The interior of the theatre is most beautifully decorated in crimson, steel gray with gold and American Portasanta Marble trimmings. The side walls are covered with a heavy crimson tapestry cloth with a flower used as a motive, marble running around the walls to the height of 4 feet from the floor. The proscenium boxes are decorated in gold with crimson and gold hangings. The proscenium arch is also carried out in gold and a crimson velour curtain with a gold monogram upon it hide the screen when not in use. The sounding board just above the proscenium arch is artistically decorated with an oil painting of General Lee surrendering to General Grant at Appomattox Court House.

The theatre has seating capacity of 2,254, there being 1,200 orchestra seats, 750 balcony seats and the balance of 304 box and loge seats. The orchestra and balcony is furnished with mahogany veneered, leather upholstered, opera chairs, the boxes and loges having gilted chairs, these were all furnished by the American Seating Company of Chicago. The manager's office is at the right in the rear of the foyer and everything going on can be seen from this office. To the left is the ladies' parlor with a matron in attendance at all times and also the men's smoking-room. In the rear of the mezzanine floor are two more retiring rooms and also a room for the use of the ushers. The floor, which is of concrete, is covered with a crimson carpet furnished by the J. B. Greenhut Company of New York.

This theatre employs two door-men and eight ushers. The courtesy with which they handle the theatre patrons is something which the management can well be proud of. In taking care of crowds we have to "hand it to 'em."

The projection room, built of reenforced concrete, located in the rear of the balcony, is exceptionally well placed. There is a window in the rear of the booth which furnishes fresh air to the operators. The projection room is equipped with two Simplex projectors and a spot light. No other extra attachments are used. There is practically no distortion in the picture, the screen being nearly on the same level with the port-holes in the booth.

The Bedford claims for itself the best projection in Greater New York. Much credit is due to the two energetic young men who have charge of this and are always working to get new effects. They are Hy. Wille and Jack Hilliard. The throw is eighty feet onto a screen of special material which was made by the house electrician, Mr. Johnson, who has not made public what his composition is composed of. This surface works exceptionally well. The theatre is equipped with house telephones which save much time and many steps.

Steam heating is used but no special ventilating system has been installed. The theatre is detached, standing free on three sides. Sufficient fresh air can be obtained by opening of the exit doors or windows without causing a draught or inconvenience to any of the patrons. Electric ceiling and wall fans are used in the summer to cool the house and it can safely be said that it is twenty per cent. cooler in the theatre than outdoors.

The theatre is lighted by both direct and semi-indirect lighting. Suspended from the center of the ceiling is a large fixture of the same type as the one used in the lobby, only containing more lights. Under the balcony and in the proscenium boxes the indirect lighting system is used. Along the walls are two lamp wall brackets with Tiffany glass shades over the lamps. Above the proscenium boxes are series of different colored lights which are hidden from view and give a sunset effect. All lights are controlled from a switchboard in the rear of the stage.

The stage lighting consists of footlights, three series, red, white and blue, a total of 216 60-watt lamps; a concert strip of 60 60-watt lamps, and five borders of red, white and blue lamps. Each color can be used separately according to what the act requires. The proscenium lights are 12 60-watt lamps. These are all connected with the latest type dead-face switchboard which eliminates short circuiting from the switchboard. These lights give plenty of illumination on the stage, leaving no dark corners.

The stage is forty feet deep and the proscenium opening is forty-three feet wide.

The music for both the pictures and the vaudeville is furnished by a ten-piece orchestra, which consists of a cello, violin-cello, first and second violin, one flute, one clarionet, one trombone, one drummer and a Steinway upright piano. This orchestra can handle classical music just as skilfully as ragtime, being in charge of a very competent director. The overture consists of a well selected number of some famous composer such as Wagner, Liszt, Chopin or Suppe.

The Bedford theatre uses for its picture program Fox, World, Mutual and Pathe service, showing seven or eight reels daily. The house is booked by the Fox Vaudeville Exchange, six acts being shown daily. The admission prices range from fifteen to fifty cents.

The theatre employs forty-one people and everything runs in perfect harmony, thanks to Mr. Goldman, the manager who has so ably provided for the needs of everyone.

The Strand, Akron, Ohio, Is Located in Shopping Center

THE Strand theatre, owned and operated by the Strand Theatre Company under the management of M. C. Winter, is located at 129-133 South Main Street of Akron, Ohio, in the center of the shopping and business district of the city. The theatre was completed in 1915, plans for the building having been drawn up by Messrs. Fichter and Booker of Akron, who have their offices in the Second National Building of this city.

This theatre is one of the most beautiful houses in that section of the country and is quite large, having a fifty-five foot frontage on South Main Street and a depth of 110 feet. It is a two-story structure with stores on the lower floor, the upper one being occupied by a billiard and pool parlor.

The building is absolutely fireproof as it is constructed of hollow tile, brick and steel. The hollow tile is the same as that manufactured by the National Fireproofing Company. The front of the theatre is of white tile, glazed finish, and makes a very attractive and neat appearance. At the left-hand side of the building is a door leading to the stairs to the billiard parlor and on the right is a heavy iron gate leading into an alley upon which the side exits of the theatre open.

The eye of the public is attracted by a huge electric flash sign of the name of the theatre and upon which is mounted a large clock about four feet in diameter. At night the face of the clock is illuminated, this being lit steady while the rest of the sign flashes.

The lobby, which is fairly large, is finished in blue and white with gold trimmings. The box-office is in the center of the lobby and is constructed of white marble and plate glass and is equipped with a National Cash Register Two-Color Ticket Vending Machine. The lobby is lighted by two very attractive chandeliers with 30 60-watt frosted electric bulbs on each. The doors leading into the theatre proper are finished in white and have French plate-glass mirrors. There are several display frames taking one sheet posters fastened to the walls of the lobby and add greatly to its general appearance.

The interior of the theatre is also very attractively decorated in blue and gold on a white background. The interior is lighted by the indirect lighting system. The theatre has a seating capacity of 1,200, there being room for 850 on the ground floor and 350 in the balcony. The chairs, which are leather upholstered, were furnished by the American Seating Company of Chicago.

The projection room of the Strand is one of the most complete of any theatre in the vicinity. It is on the balcony in the rear of the house and is constructed of concrete and hollow tile; a window in the rear furnishes the operator with fresh air. Two of the latest type Motiograph projection machines have been installed and are equipped with a Spedco Arc controller. The length of throw is 118 feet on a Minusa Gold Fibre screen, which was supplied by the Minusa Cine Products Company of St. Louis. The Strand is noted for its excellent projection.

TIE up with some good laboratory, so you will have a regular place to which to send your customers' films to be developed and printed. Don't try to do it yourself; it takes too large a plant and too much experience. It's not worth while, for it will be a losing proposition in the long run, whereas by sending film to a reputable developing plant you will receive a commission which will amount to far more than you could ever make yourself.

Million Dollar Theatre Is Mastbaum Plan for Quaker City

A REAL estate transaction, one of the largest in that particular section of the city, termed Central-North Philadelphia, has known for many years, and one of the most important deals of its character in Philadelphia, has just been completed. By this transaction, that part of the city will gain a handsome new theatre, and in addition a splendid building for business purposes and stores. The theatre will be devoted to photoplays and musical features, and it will be under the direction of Stanley V. Mastbaum and Sablosky and McGuirk.

The theatre will be located at the northwest corner of Broad street and Columbia avenue. The preliminary plans call for the erection on this site of the theatre with entrances on Broad street and also stores on the Columbia avenue side. The entire structure will be ornamental in design. The fact that this theatre is to be built by the Stanley Company and conducted under the auspices of that organization, is to say that it will be one of the best in the city.

DIRECTORY OF NEW THEATRES

CALIFORNIA

The first permit pertaining to the erection of the Stability Office and Theatre Building, at the southwest corner of Third and Broadway, was issued recently by the building department. The permit issued was for the foundation only. It will cost $15,000. Excavation work is almost completed for the structure and work will start at once on the foundation.

IDAHO

Work on a new motion picture theatre at Shelley, will be started in the Spring. The cost of the building will be $12,000.

MICHIGAN

James W. Himebaugh, proprietor of the Royal moving picture theatre of Holland, has completed plans for erecting a $12,000 movie theatre, to be completed next Spring. The building, which will be a two-story structure, will be 115 by 30 feet, and the local Elks' lodge will occupy the second floor.

PENNSYLVANIA

Harry S. Bair, of Pittsburgh, has prepared plans for the erection of a modern motion picture theatre for N. A. and C. A. Melanos at East Pittsburgh, Pa. The contract was signed this week and the work of building the theatre will be started very shortly.

The house will be of fireproof construction and will have a stage for the showing of vaudeville and will also have a balcony arrangement. The total seating capacity of the house will be 800. Work will be started at once and the building will be ready for occupancy by June 1.

TENNESSEE

Bids will shortly be opened for the erection of the proposed new vaudeville and motion picture theatre of the Signal Amusement Company at Chattanooga. An architect's drawing of the front elevation of the theatre is now on exhibit in the lobby of the Alcazar film house. Plans for the new house, which will be known as the Tivoli, indicate that it will be built of brick with a colored terra cotta front. The main lobby will be finished in Caen stone. The building will front seventy-five feet on Market street and run back 150 feet. The main floor will seat 850 and the balcony 750. It is planned to have a large smoking room for men on the second floor. The building will also contain a nursery where special theatre maids will care for babies while the mothers are attending the shows or motion pictures.

VERMONT

The new Playhouse theatre at Montpelier opened Christmas Day. It is a $75,000 house and seats 1,000. L. B. Leland is the manager, and Fox service is used.

The Star theatre has been opened at Whitefield, Vt. Mr. Solomon has installed Manager Middleton to look after the house.

VIRGINIA

It is proposed to open a new five cent motion theatre at 620 East Broad street, Richmond, Va., in the very near future. Plans were approved some time ago and building operations have been in progress for some time. The new theatre will be under the management of Messrs. Klein and Thorpe.

Beauty, Safety and Economy

WHEN building a theatre, these three points command your attention. Success depends on the theatre itself as much as the films.

"BERGER'S Classik" STEEL CEILINGS

are especially adapted to theatres. They present the rich appearance of expensive moulded plaster, yet are incomparably safer and more reasonable in cost.

They are fire-retardant, non-collapsible, sanitary, durable and easily erected.

BUTTER-KIST
PEANUT TOASTER
The Only Machine Making Toasted Peanuts

Merchants call this the HUMAN machine. It is more than a peanut toaster—it is a powerful advertising medium and salesman combined. People come from all directions to watch it work in the stores and theatres that have now installed it.

"Peanut sales are double what they used to be," says Mr. Burlando, the confectioner in one town we'll gladly name on request.

Swan News Room (location on request) writes: "Sales $1622.50 in 8½ months, from Butter-Kist Peanut Toaster.

Plenty of other signed sales records to prove that this machine earns 100 per cent profit, wins trade for theatres, stores, stands, etc., stimulates trade in cities and towns of all sizes.

THREE REASONS FOR SUCCESS

Don't think that this machine will make money for someone else but not for you. It will! It has three great essentials that insure big earnings in your own business.

1. Peanuts—a product everyone likes—now roasted as never before to an even toasty flavor, brittle and piping hot, and widely advertised by us under the well-known Butter-Kist trade mark.

2. Roasted and toasted in a novel way that makes them the talk of the town.

3. Sold in the Butter-Kist Horn o' Plenty—the cornucopia container that holds full measure but seems to be twice as big as the average!

We control this valuable invention.

Attention Exhibitors and Exchangemen

Exhibitors, if you are paying damages for ruining new film if not cured of its greenness, it's your fault.

Exchangemen, if you try to save a dollar and lose hundreds, it is your fault and not ours.

Is new Moving Picture Film released by the Manufacturer a finished product? NO. New film gum up the tension springs, which ruin the film at the sprocket holes.

The new Hanish Process cures the film of its greenness, preventing stops, and gumming up of the tension springs.

Exhibitors running first-run can now be relieved of the responsibility of any damage to new film, if they demand the Exchange to cure their new releases of its greenness. Why pay for damaged film, as it costs only about 15c per reel to the Exchange.

Removing of oil from film is easily accomplished with the new Hanish Process. Why show blurry and blotchy pictures in your Theatre?

Demand of your Exchange to install a Rex Film Renovator with the new Hanish Process, which is controlled by the Rex Film Renovator Manufacturing Co., Columbus, Ohio.

N.B.—We invite correspondence in regards to film troubles.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

The War and the Picture

"JOAN the Woman" is a great picture. Many authorities say that it reaches the high-water mark of picture production. As such we delight to point to the artistic recognition it so plainly deserves.

But we believe it greater in one other respect than faultless production. The producer has hit upon a theme of tremendous timeliness. This picture may, in brief, become a great shaping force in this remarkable era of the world's civilization.

We know here, if only faintly, of war-racked Europe and we can surmise what must inevitably follow this terrible human cataclysm. Dr. John Mott, lately returned, puts the situation in a nut shell when he says: "Today there isn't a selfish man in all Europe."

Patriotism and religious fervor—a great coupled wave of twofold emotion—will sweep all Europe after the war. Its reflection will be had here—inevitably. Such a force is too elementally great to be confined by continents.

It is just this great human emotion that "Joan the Woman" splendidly, powerfully, thrillingly typifies. This picture will fire, ennoble and sway multitudes; it should exert its influence in no unlimited way; if it does the motion picture will outdo the mightiest work ever accomplished by a free press.

The Canadian Vision Widens

BROAD mindedness has unfurled its banner in Canada! Geraldine Farrar, whose films were barred from Canada because she once sang in grand opera in Berlin, is now persona grata. The Canadian censors have decided to lift the embargo on Farrar films, and we heartily congratulate whoever led these gentlemen to the light.

Managing Director, The Rialto,
New York's Photoplay Theatre De Luxe

DECLARES "THE GIRL PHILIPPA" WORLD'S BIGGEST BOX OFFICE ATTRACTION

"The business done by 'The Girl Philippa' during its run at the Rialto exceeded anything in my experience, or, I believe, in the experience of any other manager.

"So far as I am able to ascertain, this picture surpassed the high water mark of any theatre in the country by more than $2,000. While it is true we only played it for one week, by reason of the Rialto's fixed policy, I am convinced that it could have gone on indefinitely to excellent business.

"Certainly, if our theatre had been twice the size, we could have filled it every day; notwithstanding the fact that we opened the doors at 10 o'clock in the morning, instead of at noon, for this attraction.

"The crowds were so great on New Year's Day, that several doors of the lobby were broken from the hinges. Our statement for that day showed receipts larger by several hundred dollars than Election Day, which was the best holiday business on our books up to that time.

"On the day preceding New Year's, December 31st, our total attendance was in excess of the biggest Sunday business in the history of the house.

"During the entire week more than 80,000 people saw 'The Girl Philippa.' Most of these paid 50c. Frequently these overflow crowds backed the policemen off the curbing.

"There is no need for me to add anything further to the dynamic drawing power of 'The Girl Philippa.' The facts speak for themselves."

ANOTHER FABLE

ABOUT THE BIG HEAVY MAN & THE SMALL HAPPY MAN

The BIG HEAVY MAN came to the EXHIBITOR one day, saying, "You want your theatre to make more money, don't you? Then, MR. EXHIBITOR, you ought to employ me to capture the coin for you! I know all about how to do it—Here's a PRICE-OF-ADMISSION coming along now—just watch me nab him for you." And HEAVY FEATURES struck a dark and tragic pose, as did all his little heavies called Problem-Play, Crime and Poverty, and Blood and Thunder. Along strolled PRICE-OF-ADMISSION, and when he came upon all the tragic-looking heavies he hesitated, then turned away. "I don't care to spend myself contemplating all sorts of tragedy and horrors," he said. "I want to amuse myself and come out of the theatre feeling happier and in good spirits!" And off he walked, still looking for a place to be spent. "Ah," he cried, after he had walked a little farther up the avenue, "Who is that smiling, happy fellow over there, I wonder?" and PRICE-OF-ADMISSION crossed the street to where the little happy man, named CHRISTIE COMEDIES stood smiling in the midst of his smiling assistants, called Youthful-Beauty, Clean-Cleverness, and Sensible-Stories. "You are just what I'm looking for!" cried PRICE-OF-ADMISSION, running into the arms of CHRISTIE COMEDIES. The Wise Exhibitor had been observing PRICE-OF-ADMISSION closely all the while. He now turned to HEAVY FEATURES, saying, "I see that you make an exceptionally fine box-office attraction—for my competitor! I'm going to get that happy MR. CHRISTIE COMEDIES to work for me. He and his assistants, under the direction of Mr. Al. E. Christie, are producing a new, coin-capturing CHRISTIE COMEDY each week. "What's Going On In The Mutual"

WEEKLY NEWS OF THE MUTUAL FILM CORPORATION AND ITS 68 EXCHANGES

JANUARY 27, 1917

A NEW EDITION OF "DAMAGED GOODS" RELEASED FEB. 12th

A NEW edition of Mutual's famous success, "Damaged Goods," is to be released on February 12th. The story as produced by the American Film Company, Inc., has been revised and re-edited. There is a new introduction and a new conclusion. The prints are all new. The new edition of "Damaged Goods" is even more interest-compelling and powerful in its new form. It is better than the original.

Richard Bennett Featured.

Richard Bennett is the star of "The New Edition of Damaged Goods." In this play, on the stage, he achieved his first triumph. In the original edition of the film he scored an even greater success. Now in the new edition he is certain to attain still greater fame. The original "Damaged Goods" broke box-office records at numerous theatres. Admission prices of 25c and 50c prevailed during the first showing. The same prices can easily be obtained with the new edition. Theatres which ran the first edition will find the new edition an even greater money-maker. Exhibitors in large cities can obtain this "New Edition of Damaged Goods" for long runs as a pre-release by special arrangement. For full information see the nearest Mutual Film Exchange.

"Featurettes" Will Aid Mutual Exhibitors

"Featurettes" are the latest thing in filmdom. What the "Tabloid" is to musical comedy, "Featurettes" are to feature photoplays. Frankly, "Featurettes" is a new word coined by the Mutual Film Corporation as a name for its one and two-reel guaranteed features. "Every reel a feature" is the new Mutual policy. Effective the week of January 1, eight "Featurettes" will be offered the exhibitor every week through the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges. The "Featurettes" for the first week are "Mutual Tours Around the World," "Mutual Weekly," "See America First," George Ovey "Cub Comedies," "Uncle Sam's Defenders," "Vogue Comedies" and "Reel Life." Eight reels of guaranteed quality productions. By booking "Featurettes" regularly and playing them the same night each week, the exhibitor can build up a steady patronage.

Mutual Film Corporation has arranged for a new series of Featurettes. Monogram Films is the producer. Shorty Hamilton is the star. The first is released on January 15th. They follow weekly thereafter. Booking now at all Mutual Exchanges.

NINTH CHAPLIN-MUTUAL

Presenting World Famous Comedian in New Antics

ENTITLED "EASY STREET"

At last it's ready. The ninth of the Chaplin-Mutual Specials. It's entitled "Easy Street." It's plot is nothing short of a riot. Charlie Chaplin proves able again to create something wholly new—wholly different—from anything he has done in the past. To be sure the famous hat, the funny cane, and the world renowned shoes are again in evidence. But the "business" is all new. And it's even funnier than the antics perpetrated in the past by this peer of all comedians. Charlie discovers "Easy Street" to be one of the most disorderly thoroughfares in all the world. Not even the cop on the beat can maintain order there. Then and there Charlie undertakes to reform the neighborhood. The method he takes and the success he achieves are unfolded in a thousand laughs in "Easy Street." The Chaplin-Mutual Specials now playing are "The Floorwalker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "One A. M.," "The Count," "The Pawnshop," "Behind the Screen" and "The Rink." Bookings can be made at any Mutual Exchange.

Mutual Chapterplay Opens New Theatres

No less than five new theatres were opened last week with the newest Helen Holmes-Mutual Chapterplay—"A Lass of the Lumberlands," as the initial attraction. The wisdom of the management in selecting this popular chapterplay as the feature of the opening is proven by the fact that capacity business was the rule at every house.

MARIE CAHILL HAS BEEN ADDED TO LIST OF MUTUAL STARS

THERE'S another new name on the roster of Mutual stars. Marie Cahill is the latest acquisition. This popular stage favorite is too well known both to exhibitors and public to require an introduction. She has delighted millions with her cleverness. More than one theatrical production has ridden to success solely because Marie Cahill was one of its featured principals. As a comedienne Miss Cahill has few equals.

Star of "Marrying Mary."

Perhaps it was in "Marrying Mary" that Marie Cahill attained most note. In that vehicle she scored one of the greatest triumphs ever achieved by a star. Marie Cahill became a "hit" in an instant. Her name is today a household word. She is known everywhere. The theatre able to present her in Cahill-Mutual Photoplays is assured of success. For her blonde beauty, sunny smile and winsome personality are just as pronounced in Cahill-Mutual Photoplays as they were when she was starring on the speaking stage.

Twelve 2-Reel Photoplays.

Miss Cahill has been signed to appear in twelve two-reel Cahill-Mutual Photoplays. This series of unusual comedies will be released every other week over a period of twenty-four weeks. The utmost care is being taken with each and every production. All the typical Cahill mannerisms are being taken full advantage of. The plays were specially written for her. They are sure to make her even more popular as a screen star than she was on the musical comedy or vaudeville stage. The date of release for the first of the Cahill-Mutual Photoplays will be announced shortly. Exhibitors are requested to make reservations now at their nearest Mutual Exchange.

"Girl Reporters" in Tremendous Demand

Reports from Mutual Film Exchanges all over the United States indicate big success for the new Mutual serial, "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters." Advance bookings have been heavy. The fact that a series of newspaper stories is at last available in film caused many exhibitors to act. Newspaper tales have long been a favorite form of magazine fiction. Now in screen form an even larger audience will be entertained. "The Perils of Our Girl Reporters" was produced by Niagara Film Studios. Any of the 68 Mutual Film Exchanges can arrange bookings.

Announces
Another New Mutual Star

MARIE CAHILL

CONTINUING its policy of "Big Stars Only" for 1917, the Mutual Film Corporation announces the early appearance of Miss Marie Cahill in Cahill-Mutual Photoplays. This popular stage favorite is too well known to require an introduction either to exhibitors or to playgoers.

For several years she has been known as one of Broadway's most successful stars. In "Marrying Mary" she scored one of the greatest personal triumphs ever achieved by a player. Now her sunny smile, blonde beauty and winsome personality are to be offered theatres everywhere in Cahill-Mutual Photoplays. Miss Cahill will appear in a series of twelve two-reel Mutual Photoplays. They will be released every other week for twenty-four weeks. The date of release for the first Cahill-Mutual Photoplay will be announced shortly. Exhibitors are requested to make reservations now at the 68 Mutual Exchanges.

A Sensational Serial!

A PRETTY GIRL—alone—amid rough lumberjacks, fighting gamely against the mighty lumber trust—that in brief is the basic situation in this big new Mutual serial, "A Lass of the Lumberlands." Nowhere in all the world could more unique settings be found for a story than in the big North Woods and in a railroad construction camp. The author and director have taken full advantage of the opportunities offered. Daring Helen Holmes has endeared herself to every motion picture fan by her work in "A Lass of the Lumberlands."

Signal Film Corporation Presents

HELEN HOLMES IN A LASS OF THE LUMBERLANDS

A Sensational Chapter-play of the North Woods.

FIFTEEN CHAPTERS — DIRECTED BY J. P. McGOWAN

Every exhibitor knows well the drawing power of Helen Holmes. In "The Girl and the Game" she scored a tremendous triumph. She has won a high place in the affection of the "fans." Now in "A Lass of the Lumberlands" she is packing theatres everywhere—scoring a more pronounced success than ever before. Every mail brings letters from exhibitors proclaiming that fact. You can bring success to YOUR theatre by running this newest and best of the Holmes productions—fifteen chapters—a new chapter every week. "A Lass of the Lumberlands" is backed by a tremendous national advertising campaign. The story is appearing in hundreds of newspapers. Ask your nearest Mutual Exchange.

The Principle of Cub Comedies

More now than ever exhibitors are selecting their comedies with the greatest care.

No longer is it the rule to regard the feature as the whole show and the comedy picture as a mere "fill-in," to be booked in a hit or miss way. The aim is to have a top-notch program from start to finish—a good comedy as well as a good feature.

Top-notch programs pay. The patron deposits his money at the box office window to see a performance that has quality all the way through. If such a thing is lacking he is disappointed and is apt to withhold his patronage, decreasing the income of the exhibitor. This result is just the opposite to that every exhibitor is striving for.

Cub Comedies are made with the principle that each picture must be strong enough to enable an exhibitor to show it in connection with the best feature he can obtain, and have a top-notch program. Cub Comedies are made as one-reel features—not fillers.

Current releases are: "Jerry and the Outlaws," featuring George Ovey, released January 25; "Jerry and His Pal," featuring George Ovey, released February 1. Book through any of the 68 exchanges of the Mutual Film Corporation.

How Goldwyn Pictures Will Win the Great American Public

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION has been founded with the intention of contributing three important elements to its feature films--QUALITY, NOVELTY and STANDARD OF PRODUCTION. This will be accomplished by:

GATHERING together the ablest dramatic playwrights ever assembled under one management. Only those playwrights who have written tremendous financial successes will be called as our dramatic aides. They will write the Goldwyn plays, which will mean GOLDWYN QUALITY.

ENGAGING, whenever we want and can get them, stars of tremendous personality and fame who have made their reputations because of their work---not stars created by dubious publicity and silly advertising. Also,by bringing fresh and new personalities to the screen to support our celebrities. This will mean GOLDWYN NOVELTY.

RECRUITING able directors who will make refined and intelligent pictures; men who know drama and life---not just picture men who grind out so many thousands of feet of film to fill a program. Men whose productions always have box office value. This will mean GOLDWYN STANDARD OF PRODUCTION.

To Exhibitors:—

As you have been informed, this week—January 14th—the Triangle Program changes from fourteen to twelve reels weekly. This change is fixedly in line with our statement of last week, and is made in your interest as well as ours.

We believe you will find the new and shorter program of a five reel drama and a one reel comedy for each half of the week more flexible and capable of better arrangement with your other program material. Both yourself and your patrons should benefit.

Our branch managers have been instructed to rearrange all bookings as fast as the new twelve reel program becomes available on the basis of the second paragraph of our promise printed here last week.

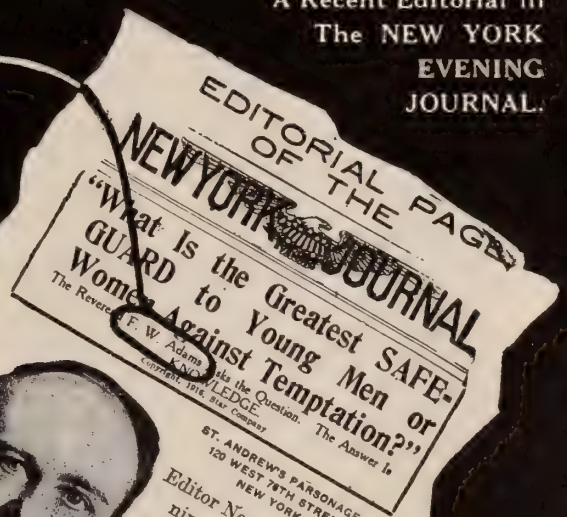
The Fascinating Broadway Star

An exceptionally forceful and impressive reply to a problem widely discussed in Press and Pulpit.—A photoplay sermon for parents which all will demand to see.

The Written Opinion of the Rev. Dr. F. W. Adams After Having Reviewed "THE GIRL WHO DOESN'T KNOW."



St Andrews Parsonage
120 West 76th Street
New York

"The Girl who Doesn't Know", is a story of life that carries conviction in an earnest, chaste, and straight forward way. It is better a girl should learn some things from a moving picture than to learn them in the peril of society. It is best of all that she learn them at first hand from one who can be both Kother and companion to her daughter. The Girl who Doesn't Know speaks its mute appeal to mothers everywhere, to supplant ignorance with knowledge that Girls forwa may be forearmed.

Editor New York Evening Journal:

My Dear Sir—I shall continue my questionnaire on Temptation, Sunday evening, December 10.

I will highly esteem it if you will answer, to be used in my sermon that evening, the question, "What is the greatest SAFEGUARD to Young Men or Women Against Temptation?"

Thanking you in appreciation,

F. W. ADAMS.

REV. FRED WINSLOW ADAMS

The Reverend Mr. Adams' Question is literally one that could be answered in one word. That word is KNOWLEDGE that protects young men and women against temptation. Ignorance in all its various forms is the only efficient enemy of vice and crime. Knowledge, real and efficient, is the greatest reliance of the foolish and the wise. Knowledge does, are the public schools and wide-spread education the greatest safeguards against folly.

We say that KNOWLEDGE, the fruit of education, is the great protection against temptation, is the great protection against vice and crime. We understand that it is so. Why is it that the words KNOWLEDGE and PROTECTION are used together? Why is it that the words YOUTH and TEMPTATION are used together? Because youth is the period of temptation, the period that tempts. He who knows, who has learned, who has been taught, who has been educated, who has been informed, who has been enlightened, who has been instructed, who has been trained, who has been disciplined, who has been developed, who has been matured, who has been perfected, who has been completed, who has been finished, who has been ended, who has been terminated, who has been concluded, who has been closed, who has been shut, who has been locked, who has been barred, who has been bolted, who has been fastened, who has been secured, who has been protected, who has been guarded, who has been watched, who has been kept, who has been preserved, who has been saved, who has been delivered, who has been redeemed, who has been ransomed, who has been bought, who has been purchased, who has been paid for, who has been owned, who has been possessed, who has been had, who has been got, who has been obtained, who has been acquired, who has been gained, who has been won, who has been earned, who has been deserved, who has been merited, who has been rewarded, who has been recompensed, who has been requited, who has been repaid, who has been settled, who has been adjusted, who has been arranged, who has been fixed, who has been prepared, who has been ready, who has been willing, who has been inclined, who has been disposed, who has been minded, who has been intended, who has been meant, who has been designed, who has been planned, who has been contemplated, who has been thought, who has been considered, who has been reasoned, who has been argued, who has been debated, who has been discussed, who has been talked, who has been spoken, who has been said, who has been told, who has been related, who has been narrated, who has been described, who has been depicted, who has been portrayed, who has been represented, who has been shown, who has been exhibited, who has been displayed, who has been revealed, who has been disclosed, who has been uncovered, who has been unveiled, who has been opened, who has been unlocked, who has been unbarred, who has been unbolted, who has been unfastened, who has been unsecured, who has been unprotected, who has been unguarded, who has been unwatched, who has been unkept, who has been unpreserved, who has been unsaved, who has been undelivered, who has been unredeemed, who has been unransomed, who has been unbought, who has been unpurchased, who has been unpaid for, who has been unowned, who has been unpossessed, who has been unhad, who has been ungot, who has been unobtained, who has been unacquired, who has been ungained, who has been unwon, who has been unearned, who has been undeserved, who has been unmerited, who has been unrewarded, who has been unrecompensed, who has been unrequited, who has been unrepaid, who has been unsettled, who has been unadjusted, who has been unarranged, who has been unfixed, who has been unprepared, who has been unready, who has been unwilling, who has been uninclined, who has been undisposed, who has been unminded, who has been unintended, who has been unmeant, who has been undesigned, who has been unplanned, who has been uncontemplated, who has been unthought, who has been unconsidered, who has been unreasoned, who has been unargued, who has been undebated, who has been undiscussed, who has been untalked, who has been unspoken, who has been unsaid, who has been untold, who has been unrelated, who has been unnarrated, who has been undescribed, who has been undepicted, who has been unportrayed, who has been unrepresented, who has been unshown, who has been unexhibited, who has been undisplayed, who has been unrevealed, who has been undisclosed, who has been uncovered, who has been unveiled, who has been unop

There is a "Hall of Fame" for almost everything nowadays, so why not have one for motion picture producers?

And while we are about it, let's reserve a spot for our own home-grown producer, W. H. Clune.

Along with Griffith, Ince, DeMille and possibly one or two others, he is deserving of front-wall position.

Yesterday at his Auditorium theater Mr. Clune revealed to an avid public his second cinematographic production, "The Eyes of the World," which not only equaled the former in the matter of scenic beauty and romantic theme, but far surpassed it in story, thrills, photography and human appeal.

TAKES HIS SEAT

Therefore, what the first film child, "Ramona," lacked to place its promotor into the coveted realm of renown the second child, "The Eyes of the World," possesses in abundancy—and now, Mr. Clune, step forward, please, and take your seat in the select row!

Harold Bell Wright, the California-Arizona author, who enjoys the distinction of having more readers to the square inch of literary Mss. than any other novelist, furnished the book "The Eyes of the World," consequently, if we are to make our deductions on "best seller" form, the second picture will double, if not triple, the popularity of the first.

As an entertainment, "The Eyes of the World" is keenly enjoyable. It has the happy faculty of annexing your complete attention in the beginning and keeping your mind—and eyes—riveted on it until the last foot of the last reel has unwound itself—a feat seldom performed nowadays in film circles.

"EYES OF THE WORLD."

FILM VERSION OF WRIGHT'S NOVEL AT CLUNE'S.

Another master picture has been added to the list of the few really great screen dramas. In some respects "The Eyes of the World," which made its debut at Clune's Auditorium yesterday, stands absolutely alone.

Nothing approaching its photographic effects have been thus far produced in pictures. The play also stands pre-eminent in the matter of vivid character types. There is no other screen play now before the public in which the characterizations are so telling or so interesting.

This production sounds a new note in pictures. Big multiple reel pictures have come to stay. Heretofore, most of these ambitious pictures have been great spectacles in which the story was almost submerged in the smoke of battles. "The Eyes of the World" goes back to what people really want to see—an appealing love story.

Those familiar with the book need not be told that in the unfolding of this love story there is an exciting succession of tense and dramatic situations. One of these is a fight on the edge of the precipice and drops and the villain. As the hero weakens and is about to be thrown over the abyss, an escaped convict, watching the struggle from another cliff, shoots across the chasm and the dead body of the villain slips over the edge of the precipice and drops into eternity.

Most of the scenes are taken in the mountains of California and Arizona. As mere landscapes, some of the scenes are superbly beautiful.

EXPRESS

By George St. George

THE EYES OF THE WORLD scored a great big hit at Clune's Auditorium yesterday afternoon. In making a photoplay out of Harold Bell Wright's widely read novel, W. H. Clune has presented an attraction that lives up to the high standard set by Ramona, his first production. In fact, The Eyes of the World will almost unquestionably prove a much more popular attraction than Ramona. It has all the essentials of popular success and, like Ramona, has a very large ready-made public waiting to enjoy it. The audience that attended the premier yesterday afternoon was the largest I have ever seen crowded into the auditorium.

The story is handled in splendid style. The producers have added a prologue for the purpose of properly placing and explaining the characters, and it proves interesting in spite of its being purely explanatory in purpose. Once it is over and act 2 begins the play sweeps along, gathering force with every stride until, as the big scene is approached, climax piles upon climax and bursts in the tremendously dramatic fight on the narrow ledge of rock thousands of feet up the cliff. This scene is one of the most effective bits that ever has found its way into a picture, and it held the whole audience spellbound yesterday afternoon. There was absolute stillness in the theater while it lasted and a sigh of relief and a burst of applause as it finished. Although it is big enough to stand competition with anything in the way of thrills, the director has, very wisely, let it be the great, big, logical climax of the play, and the events leading to it have been handled in a supremely sensible and unphotoplay-like manner.

The photography in the play almost beggars description. The locations have been chosen with an eye for the beautiful as well as for the effective, and Enrique Vallejo has made them things that are exquisite through the fineness of his art.

'Eyes of World' Opened to Startlingly Magnificent Photoplay at Clune's

By Otheman Stevens

"THE EYES OF THE WORLD" were opened yesterday at Clune's Auditorium. Opened to startlingly magnificent photography; opened to what has generally been termed the best form of photodrama—the narrative which commands.

Every place in the Auditorium was filled to the limits of the fire ordinance, and I venture that every seat will be filled as long as the picture is on.

Mr. Clune has only made two pictures, "Ramona" and this one, which proves the value of concentration of effort in results that are marked with radiant success.

The story is too familiar to readers to warrant repetition. It is intense in its action, mingling the most naturally intimate traits of humanity in a series of dramatic incidents, and saturated throughout with the ultimate of idealized romance.

It is a melodrama in the higher form of that method of dramatic expression; perhaps at times somewhat naive, as ultra intense situations are apt to be when devoid of talk; but always beautiful, always holding attention with irresistible power and always awakening a response of both understanding and admiration.

For it is all that long demanded product, a powerful drama with nothing that excites the baser instinct. No picture has been shown approaching in tensity various episodes, particularly the final fight on a mountain top; nothing in the way of a picture has been so totally devoid of faking effects, and no picture was ever more or probably equally healthy and sane in all its attributes.

Harold Bell Wright's Film at Clune's Auditorium Is Better Than Book

By Maitland Davies

THAT Harold Bell Wright's story, The Eyes of the World, makes a better photoplay than it does a novel, was conclusively proved at Clune's Auditorium yesterday afternoon, and, at that, goodness only knows how many million people read the book. A huge audience gathered to see the first Los Angeles presentation of W. H. Clune's second big film production.

Without striving to make The Eyes of the World a spectacle, the producers have succeeded in making it one of the most picturesque productions of the season, by reason of the excellent judgment used in selecting locations. Nature has provided a world of wonderful sets, and there happened to be a man in the organization with brain enough to pick out the most likely of them, with the result that some of the most splendid pictorial effects the screen has shown are disclosed in this picture.

The Eyes of the World is not something to recommend for the other man to see. It is something to see yourself. You, personally, will enjoy it. There is something about it that will appeal to everybody. I don't think I am different from the average man and I enjoyed every bit of it.

Last Week We Announced 3 Weeks at the STRAND, New York.

Now—It's FOUR WEEKS!!!

HERE'S WHY:

¶ It's a Big, Human Drama, spelled out in scenes that smash home the MEANING of War.

¶ No so-called "Battle Scenes," No Sham Posing—just the sad, terrible truth itself—and that truth needs no embellishment. Those things about battle that nobody ever reads of, but everybody wonders about!

¶ It is packing the Big Strand! That's why 4 weeks! No man needs better proof!

THE STAR AND THE DAILY CHANGE

THE past week has been one of the most unrestful in the career of an unrestful industry.

The old causes are at work, the big economic faults, boiling away deep down in the pot; a little lifting of the lid lets bubbles of steam burst out in all directions.

Part of the week's unrest is due to the fact that one or more stars are loose from their high-salaried, sky-salaried orbits.

There's a wild scramble to sign 'em up and double 'em up—to create another "movie salary" record breaker, to hit another breathless sky-line.

WHAT on Earth (to get back to Earth for a moment) is the matter with this Fifth Industry!

Is the motion picture dependent upon the star?

Are we hitched to them—with a wagon filled with the resources of an industry almost as big as steel?

Have we got to gamble for their services in a way that makes sane business men and solid financial interests regard the business with dismay and distrust?

Apparently—yes.

But why this amazing business situation?

Again the answer comes from the theatres. They say—a great many of them say—they want stars in pictures. And, of course, the theatres must be given what they want.

But why the demand from the theatres?

WE believe we know the answer, that we can put our finger right down upon it in two words; the daily change.

It is the daily change that makes the star and the star's ruinous salary.

Let us see.

We stated last week that the daily change—the frantic here-you-are and there-you-go policy of showing pictures—destroys real advertising effort.

Good pictures and poor pictures are rushed along in the mill-race; all fare alike.

The exhibitor hasn't time to tell his public about the good ones; the people can't tell each other; the picture is gone on its mad career.

The only advertising possible is one-time advertising—which is nine-tenths waste.

One-time advertising is—a flash.

The best flash is—a star's name—in electric letters, on a banner, a poster, in the headline of a newspaper advertisement.

It gets the people in.

So the theatres want stars and the producers want stars and the stars want the earth. The increase in demand is natural.

BUT the basis of the demand is unnatural, illogical, unbusinesslike; and the basis is the daily change, deadliest, greatest economic enemy of this industry.

Stop and consider. What is it that suddenly elevates the star's established earning capacity upon the legitimate stage up to the dizzy heights of the "movie salary?"

The public thinks it is the marvelous money-making capacity of the motion picture. The exhibitor thinks it is the downright madness of the producer. The producer thinks the exhibitor must have star pictures at any cost.

As a matter of fact the ruinous salary paid the star is the result of the daily change basis of this business—and nothing else. Nothing else—no other factor—is to blame.

And the situation won't be altered one iota—until we stop the daily change.

ON the legitimate stage the star's name also gets the public in. But the public won't keep coming and the play will fail miserably if it doesn't stand upon its own legs.

Hence the play has a value, and the star has a value—each clearly established by business usage and test.

And, hence also, the playwright has a value, a very important one, a value still withheld from the photoplaywright because we don't show pictures long enough to let his work prove its value.

But there's no testing the photoplay. It comes like a flash—goes like a flash—is advertised with a flash—a star's name.

The business angle is not to please the public but just to get them in. Hence the star's name and hence the star's salary. And hence, too, the weak—the many weak—star pictures.

"THE Barrier" has just been shown in New York City. There's not a star in it, yet the acting and the character portrayals of its leads have never been exceeded by the work of any stars in any picture ever made. And the play has every indication of a great popular success.

But what will happen should "The Barrier" be put out through the quick mechanics of our regular, present-day channels of distribution and exhibition?

We are killing good pictures—and worse still the impulse to make them; we are holding back the very genius of the photoplay, namely the story; we are adding a ridiculous, stupendous expense upon production and we are robbing exhibitor and distributor alike of their legitimate profits—through the deadly daily change.

It is, in other words, throttling the development of the art and the industry of the motion picture.

Nude Pictures vs. Naked Plots

THE Evening Sun, New York, commenting editorially upon the movement of "Censorship from Within" states that the nudity of women in pictures is not so distressing to the public as the nakedness of picture plots.

Silly stories, inane characterizations, hackneyed situations—plots, in other words, which anyone can see clean through—are a species of nakedness which demands immediate censorship from within, if pictures are to hold their own.

We quite agree with The Evening Sun.

State Rights and Clean Pictures

SEVERAL big pictures are now playing in New York to crowded houses—and another has just been shown for review—all of which will undoubtedly score great successes in the state rights field, if it should be decided to sell them that way.

All of these pictures are quite free of ultra-sensationalism. All are strikingly clean, and all in all they are characterized by strong themes, heart interest, artistry, beauty, strong characterization.

Which ought to indicate very clearly to the buyers of state rights that widely and steadily popular pictures are not of the sex, vice and morbid type.

It Is Better Than a Season's Pass

THE action of Elizabeth, N. J., in appointing fifty censors, twenty-four women, and the rest business men, is the latest development of the picture "regulating" craze, now so rampant. Why stop at fifty? The authorities might just as well make the appointments in multiples of fifty, changing the personnel of the board every few weeks. The advantage is obvious. Eventually everybody in town would have a chance to see motion pictures free. What a delightful Utopia. Everyone would get something without paying for it—except the exhibitor.

Censorship from Within

LAST Summer, in Chicago, Wm. A. Brady summed up the whole censorship situation in a sentence.

"Censorship?" he queried. "Censor yourselves!"

He exclaimed, of course, at the producers of pictures.

Whether he himself has followed his advice; whether any or all producers have followed the mandate, each can answer for himself.

But the point is that the question ought to be put now, and the answer ought to come, must come very shortly; and it ought to come and it must come in a manner to clear the decks of all that invites the movement for official censorship.

"Censor yourselves!"

Doesn't this simplify and settle the whole censorship problem, with all its ramifications?

We believe it does.

IN all our eleventh-hour meetings to combat pending and adverse legislation we always proceed upon the same basis and in the same way.

We denounce the malice and bigotry of those "reformers" who would close picture theatres on Sunday and who would have pictures censored in advance of publication.

True they are malicious and narrow.

True that Sunday closing is ridiculous; true that censorship is un-American, unjust, intolerable and impracticable.

But it is equally true that we ought to stop supplying the cranks with excuses to kill pictures wholesale with their outrageous restrictions and impositions.

From several of our eleventh-hour battles against Federal and State censorship a number of producers have emerged shaking their heads gravely and admitting that the production of pictures ought in some way to be regulated.

Some have even advocated Government regulation, although the industry is as one now in its opposition to official censorship in any form.

Now a light is breaking in. This matter of regulation—why not have it come from within the industry?

Why not regulate ourselves?

Why not put all of our house in order? It can be done.

The Situation in Seattle

A MAN came into our office a few days ago with one of the most remarkable stories we ever gave an ear to.

But when this story was told, we realized that it was not remarkable at all. It was simply a reflection of a condition which exists in all parts of this wide, free, just country.

Seattle, said this man, has revoked the powers of its board of censors. The mayor stepped over their heads and locked up a film in his safe which they had passed unanimously.

New York's New Theatres

NEW YORK will have, within two years, four large new motion picture theatres with an aggregate seating capacity of nearly forty thousand.

It seems certain that the new theatres will swallow still more of the neighborhood theatres' patronage. It is to be hoped that the new theatres, and all of the advertising which attends them, will stimulate the public's interest in pictures, so that the drain upon the smaller houses will be minimized.

Griffith Heads Censor Fight by N. A. M. P. I.

Is Appointed Chairman of Committee of Five to Carry on Campaign with Unified Help of All Association Members for "Censorship from Within"

THE letter with a request for "Sunday Pictures" from Frank Rembusch, which was published in the last issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, together with editorial comment emphasizing the necessity of censorship from within and not censorship from without, evidently has impressed many producers forcibly.

At a closed meeting of a newly formed organization which is called "The Motion Picture Art League," the question of curbing the "filth film" was vigorously discussed by David W. Griffith, and it is stated by those who were present that MOTION PICTURE NEWS played an important part in the discussion.

Mr. Griffith quoted at length from MOTION PICTURE NEWS, pointing out the urgent necessity for quick action on the part of manufacturers.

In an interview afterwards Mr. Griffith stated his platform in the campaign for expert censorship from within the industry with his usual clarity and with more than his usual conviction.

"We are not only quite able to handle the question ourselves," he said, "but we must handle it ourselves. I read in the NEWS last week of many new censorship bodies springing up in all parts of the country. In Salt Lake City, I understand, they have appointed the chief of police to censor films.

"The movement towards legalized censorship is gaining: we must act immediately!

"The plan brought out in the meeting is our salvation. If legalized censoring bodies have their way, our business will be bounded by such narrow restrictions that we will be unable to produce anything but sickly boy and girl love stories. Censors on the outside will continue to suggest what they have always suggested: a list of commandments."

Mr. Griffith's voice was sarcastic.

"What will become of motion picture art, progress, development, if we are bounded by a list of a dozen or two hastily drawn, arbitrary rules?"

Mr. Griffith was asked if the Motion Picture Art League proposed a list of commandments of its own.

"Set rules are out of the question," he replied; "what we need and what we must have is a code of ethics, a standard. Every manufacturer should be compelled to abide by them.

"I believe that nude women do not belong on the screen. You never saw a nude woman on the stage in your life. Why should nude women appear in pictures? I want to make one point clear. I am not talking about pictures which have been made, but pictures of the future."

Mr. Griffith declined to state his producing plans for the future. The statement has been made that he intends to produce short subjects only. He refused to affirm or deny that report.

When asked whether or not he had severed his connections with the Triangle, which might account for his continued presence in the East, he replied that he would prefer not to discuss that subject for the present.

In reply to another question, Mr. Griffith disclaimed all knowledge of Douglas Fairbanks' plans.

A statement was sent out from Mr. Griffith's New York office to the trade papers in regard to the newly organized Art League which has since been merged with the N. A. M. P. I. Committee headed by Mr. Griffith.

Mr. Griffith is quoted as saying: "In case a producer brings out a subject that does not come up to the standards of the National Board of Review we will work with them and have our select committee go over the matter in detail. The entire thing will be finally adjusted by ourselves, and when the product reaches the public the chances for further discussion will have been eliminated.

WISDOM

The Milwaukee Journal will shortly incorporate into its photoplay page a column under the heading, "Motion Picture News says——"

"The advantage of this lies in the fact that whatever eliminations are deemed necessary will be handled by experts, who will not ruin the original subject and yet will see that it adheres to our highest standards. Once we determine upon this action our force will be the final decree and we will see that these standards are upheld."

Another step taken at the meeting was to name a special committee of the producing motion picture managers to work with other organizations and center the fight on impending legislation that is sure to be up in the next few months before the legislatures of several states throughout the country seeking to establish state boards of censorship.

Mr. Griffith, according to a statement sent out by the National Association, has been placed in control of the entire nation-wide campaign against the censorship of motion pictures.

This was authorized by the resolution adopted by the Executive Committee of the National Association placing its power in the hands of a small committee headed by Mr. Griffith, who will handle the situation practically without restrictions.

It was decided that in view of the necessity for prompt and concerted action, a small committee was desirable as it would have behind it the united support of the entire industry and could act quickly and definitely.

The committee named by Mr. Griffith is composed of the following: Adolf Zukor, William Brady, P. A. Powers, Mitchel Monk, and W. W. Irwin.

This winter is the first time that the entire motion picture industry has presented a solid front on the censorship question, a position which was taken five months ago when the National Association, after thorough deliberation, decided that it would oppose all forms of legalized censorship.

Mr. Griffith was active at that time and the campaign of this winter has been turned over to him because of his willingness to see the issue through and because of the need of a strong and small body to arrange for the presentation of the industry's side to Congress and to the legislatures which are considering censorship legislation.

The procedure of the new committee has not been announced, but Mr. Griffith indicated last night something of what may be expected of it.

Present at the last meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry were Walter W. Irwin, general manager of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E presiding, William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation; P. A. Powers, Treasurer of the Universal Film Mfg. Co.; J. E. Brulatour of Eastman Films, Lee A. Ochs, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America; Samuel H. Trigger, president of the New York City Exhibitors' League; Louis F. Blumenthal of the Auditorium Theatre, Jersey City, Louis L. Levine of the Regent Theatre, Brooklyn, William M. Seabury, General Counsel and Frederick H. Elliott, Executive Secretary of the National Association, and Mr. Griffith.

"Barrier" Release Plan to Be Decided by Reviewers

The Rex Beach Photoplay Corporation's production "The Barrier" was shown to reviewers last Friday afternoon for the purpose of deciding the important question of how the picture should be released.

Three plans are suggested. "The Barrier" will be marketed either on the state rights plan, or as a special high class feature, with regulation theatre prices, or, thirdly, as a special release on the General Film Program.

It is understood that Mr. Beach favors the plan of showing "The Barrier" as a special theatrical production, at a high scale of prices.

Those who saw the film are unanimous in approval. While it features no star, its interest is so continuous that it is one of the few pictures with which the element of time is of insignificant value.

Famous Appoints Foreign Representative

J. C. Graham Will Keep in Touch with Exhibitors Abroad, with Roving Commission

THE foreign activities instituted by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and other plans which are now under advisements have rendered necessary the creating of a new office in that organization, a general foreign representative, to which J. C. Graham, one of the best known figures among motion picture executives, has just been appointed.

The engagement of Mr. Graham by Famous Players-Lasky follows closely upon the sending of Alec Lorimore to Australia and of Ingvald C. Oes to the Scandinavian countries. Mr. Graham's commission is a roving one, however, as he will make the whole world his office, traveling to any and all parts of the world for the purpose of bringing to the immediate attention of the exhibitors of foreign countries the best points of Famous Players-Lasky-Morosco-Pallas productions, which might not be seized upon by the foreigner until they are drawn to his attention.

The engaging of these three men for work in the foreign field is a concrete evidence of the determination of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation to place itself in the closest possible contact with the foreign field.

The Famous Players-Lasky Company's productions are already being widely distributed throughout Europe, Africa, the Antipodes, and other portions of the globe.

Conditions of production and methods of distribution are constantly undergoing change, and the former have almost been revolutionized in many particulars. With the changes of market conditions which will necessarily result from the tremendous upheaval abroad and with the new phases of production which have developed within a comparatively short time, it is deemed expedient by the producers to have a man of Mr. Graham's wide understanding of international conditions to act as a personal representative of the concern in foreign fields.

The new conditions will need new adjustments, and it will be Mr. Graham's duty to make personal investigations of the situation in each country and to negotiate any changes of distribution methods which his knowledge of home conditions may dictate.

That Mr. Graham is especially fitted for this new work is easily apparent from a brief glance at his long career in the motion picture business. It was in St. Louis that Mr. Graham first became interested in the motion picture, operating one of the first exchanges formed there in the days before the formation of the General Film Company.

It was with the beginning of the operation of the General that Mr. Graham began to acquire a reputation as an independent fighter, through his co-operation with the Swanson Exchange in the launching of an opposition exchange to that of the General in St. Louis.

Mr. Graham later became the general manager of the Reliance Company, and was associated with the Sales Company, through which he became the head of the Mutual Exchange activities in New York upon the formation of that company.

Leaving Mutual, Mr. Graham became general manager of the Universal, a position which he held until he took over the affairs of the United Film Service as a personal favor to certain interested parties, until the company was liquidated. Returning to Mutual when John R. Freuler was elected its president, Mr. Graham became assistant to the president with complete charge of all exchanges. With the removal of the company's headquarters to Chicago, Mr. Graham went to that city and organized the general exchange department under the new conditions.

With the completion of this task, Mr. Graham returned to New York City to supervise the Eastern producing activities of the Mutual and to take charge of its Eastern exchanges.

Though his headquarters will be made at the Fifth avenue office of the corporation, Mr. Graham expects to spend the larger portion of his time abroad. After studying more intimately the details of production and distribution of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, he will sail for England to make a first-hand survey of the field in Great Britain.

"Daughter of the Gods" Opens in Boston

Fox Marine Spectacle Plays to Dollar Admission at Majestic

WILLIAM FOX opened a Boston run of his new Annette Kellermann film, "A Daughter of the Gods," Monday evening, January 15, at the Majestic Theatre. Two performances daily will be given during the run. Night prices are one dollar to twenty-five cents, with box seats two dollars and one dollar and fifty cents; lower prices for matinees. Following his custom, Mr. Fox has not sold state or New England rights, but is presenting the film under his own direction, under management of the New York office, with C. A. Kingston as the Boston manager. W. R. Sheehan and a party from the home office were in Boston for the opening, for which there was a heavy sale. Joe DiPesa is doing the Boston publicity.

Samuel Grant, New England manager of "The Battle Cry of Peace," is managing the lecture tour of Capt. John A. Cook, the whaling master, beginning at Tremont Temple, Boston, the entire week of January 15, with two performances daily. Capt. Cook relates experiences of twenty years in the Arctic, and shows for the first time on any screen his motion pictures, "Hunting the Sperm Whale."

Joliet Newspaper Urges Clean Pictures

The Joliet, Ill., Evening Herald-News is one of the many newspapers throughout the country conducting a campaign for cleaner pictures. In an editorial headed "More of Them," which appeared in their issue of January 4, the following comments are made concerning "Snow White," in which Marguerite Clark is featured:

New Year's Day and Tuesday the Princess theatre presented the cleanest, most entertaining motion picture Joliet has seen in a year. Marguerite Clark, one of the "different" type of screen actresses—different because she does not care for sex plays or other smut—appeared in "Snow White," a fairy tale. It breathed purity. It was a child's picture for grown-ups. It was a relief from contagion. Its wholesomeness was an antidote for ennui.

The screen should have more Marguerite Clarks. We would all be better for them.

If this be advertising, other theatre managers of Joliet, make the most of it.

St. Louis Association Will Not Join National League

At a meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors Association of St. Louis, the Chairman of the organization committee recommended that the time is not opportune for the St. Louis association to join the National League.

The Serial Committee reported that the Metro Film Service had waived deposits on all serials to members of the association only.

Robbins to Make One-Reel Comedies

Jess Robbins, producing manager for the Essanay-Chaplin company, who has been in the East for the past year, returned to Los Angeles last week to film one-reel comedies. He has leased a studio on Gordon Street, Hollywood, and will shortly begin production work there. He advises he has made marketing arrangements, but at this time will make no announcement.

New York Local to Hold Beefsteak Dinner

New York Local No. 1 will hold a beefsteak dinner at Healey's restaurant, in the Log Cabin room, on Wednesday night, January 17, at eight-thirty.

The dinner is to be given in honor of the outgoing officers. The newly elected officers will be presented. There will be six acts of cabaret, and the tickets are $3.25. I. Hartsell is taking care of the reservations.

Butterfield Forms State Film Company

The State Film Company has just been organized in Detroit for the purpose of buying states right pictures and booking them in the chain of Butterfield theatres in Michigan. Col. W. S. Butterfield is proprietor of the company and has appointed E. C. Beaty manager of the Detroit office, which has just opened at 221 Broadway Market Building.

Sunday Closing and State Tax to Become One Issue

New York State Legislators Plan to Merge Questions of Taxation and Sunday Closing in Effort to Bring About Fair Settlement—Motion Picture Problem Will Be Fought Hotly to a Conclusion

THE threatened direct tax on New York State motion picture theatres and the question of closing theatres throughout the State on Sunday will be considered as a single issue, if the plans of certain legislative members are carried into effect.

Both sides of both questions are being fought bitterly in the Senate and the Assembly, and a compromise is to be effected if possible.

According to dispatches from Albany, it is certain that an effort to tax the theatrical industry will lead to a fight in the Legislature, but many of the Assemblymen say that they have found sentiment among their constituents overwhelmingly in favor of such an impost.

A resolution passed last Wednesday by the Assembly that the committee that has been appointed to investigate the practicability of imposing a tax upon exhibitors, be ordered to investigate the entire theatrical business. The members of the committee are Assemblymen Heber E. Wheeler of Ontario, Henry E. H. Brereton of Warren, Robert McC. Marsh of New York, August C. Flamman of Kings, and Henry C. Schimmel of New York; Senators William A. Carson of Yates, James W. Yelverton of Schenectady, and James J. Walker of New York. Mr. Walker and Mr. Schimmel are the only Democrats.

On Thursday it was reported that the Senate had failed to concur in the amendment to the resolution appointing a committee to investigate the practicability of imposing a tax on the motion picture industry in the State, which extends the scope of the inquiry to embrace the whole threatrical business.

The amendment was offered in the Assembly by Clarence F. Welsh of Albany, and was adopted unanimously. The Senate voted to refer the matter to the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment, of which Senator Emerson is chairman.

The Senate's action does not necessarily mean that Assemblyman Welsh's amendment is lost, but it foreshadows the hard fight which the Legislature will have if the attempt is made to force the whole theatrical business to pay a State tax on its earnings.

It is the opinion of many that a friendly attitude towards the film industry will be taken by the investigating committee. Members of the committee have been quoted as saying that it is likely that regulation, instead of censorship, will be suggested, and that they will also approve of Sunday opening with certain limitations. As for the tax question, the committee is said to be in favor of "reasonable taxation."

"We do not intend to regulate or tax moving pictures to death," said Assemblyman Wheeler. "We recognize that the moving picture industry is the third or fourth greatest industry in the State, and we desire to conduct this investigation with the most friendly feelings toward the men in that business.

"We will begin our hearings right away in New York. The committee will ask moving picture men to appear before it, and an effort will be made to learn what burden of tax they are now bearing, and the recommendations for a State tax will be made accordingly."

Assemblyman Welsh said that to tax only moving picture and not other theatres was a discrimination against an amusement that reached the masses more than any other.

The New York "World" has asked two hundred people, selected from all walks of life, their opinions on Sunday closing. One hundred and sixty-two said they were in favor of Sunday pictures. Twenty-eight declined to be interviewed. Ten said they were against them.

It is expected that 3,000,000 names will be signed to the anti-closing petition which is being circulated in New York State theatres.

Horsley to Release Wilbur Series Through Mutual

Six Pictures in "Morals of Men" Series to Be Released at Rate of One Every Four Weeks— Horsley Producing Spectacle Drama in Africa

DAVID HORSLEY, in New York last week for the purpose of arranging his production plans for the future and disposing of features already produced, signed an agreement with the Mutual Company whereby his series of six Crane Wilbur subjects will be released through the Mutual organization.

Mr. Horsley, in an exclusive interview for MOTION PICTURE NEWS, stated that the name of the series is "The Morals of Men." Crane Wilbur stars in each of them. Among the subjects of this series are "The Painted Lie," "Love Everlasting," "The Single Code" and "The Eleventh Commandment." The names of the others will be announced through these columns later.

Only three of the Crane Wilbur pictures have so far been produced. Inasmuch as the series will be released at the rate of one every four weeks, it is possible for the Horsley studios to devote considerable time to the future productions, and Mr. Horsley believes that the succeeding three pictures will be even better than the first of the series.

Aside from the Crane Wilbur features, Mr. Horsley announces that he is preparing a large spectacle-drama, parts of which are now under production in the Southern part of Africa. The picture calls for African locations, and various of the scenes will be made in and about Cape Town and the Kimberley diamond mines. Other scenes are laid in London, where the Horsley company will go after the African scenes are completed.

Another of the Horsley producing plans includes a serial, concerning which Mr. Horsley does not care to give out details at present. He stated, however, that one of the objects of his visit to New York has been to secure players for this serial. Six actors and actresses have been engaged thus far, and will return to the coast with Mr. Horsley. One of these is a "discovery" who has been in an eastern studio.

Arbuckle to Act and Direct for Paramount

Heavyweight Comedian Signs Contract to Produce Two-Reel Pictures, the First to Appear in March

"FATTY" ARBUCKLE has entered into a contract with the Paramount Pictures Corporation, by which he will begin the production of two-reel comedies on or about March 1. These pictures will be distributed by Paramount.

"Fatty" Arbuckle ranks today uniquely in the field of comic productions and possesses the added faculty of directing the pictures in which he stars.

The popularity of Arbuckle is based on the world-old human trait of finding humor in excessive avoirdupois. "Fatty" Arbuckle has capitalized his huge size so successfully that he stands today acknowledged to be worth his weight in laughs. The secret of Arbuckle's popularity is the fact that he makes his audiences laugh at him as well as with him, never fearing to be made the victim of a joke himself, instead of insisting upon always being the one who plays the tricks upon others.

The fact that Arbuckle directs his own pictures is important, because he will set tasks for himself to do that no other director would have the moral courage to ask him to perform.

"One of the most important factors in screen comedy is speed," declared Arbuckle. "Keep things jumping and your audience will be with you every moment. Let the action lag and you will have to work twice as hard to get their attention back.

"When I start work on the production of a comedy, I try to keep everybody in the cast keyed up to the very highest pitch. It is the surest way of keeping your action at the top notch. If your people are allowed to loaf around the studio and get 'stale' then they do not dive into the scene as they ought to, but have to sort of get warmed up all over again, like a track athlete who has sat around on the grass all afternoon waiting for his event to be run off. By the time he is called upon all his ginger is gone."

The Arbuckle comedies will be released to all exhibitors the same as all other short reel subjects handled at the present time by Paramount Pictures Corporation without being influenced by the feature branch of the program.

Salisbury is Back with More Nature Studies

Explorer Brings Sixty Thousand Feet of Scenic, Educational and Travelogue Material

DR. E. A. SALISBURY, whose animal and nature study pictures are well known in the trade, has returned to New York after completing a hunting and exploration trip of a year and a half's duration. He has brought with him sixty thousand feet of film of scenic, educational and travelogue classification, about fifteen thousand feet of which he intends to sell in the trade through channels not yet decided upon.

Dr. Salisbury's pictures of greatest interest come from Central and South America. In the former country he has discovered things of greater interest than the Panama Canal and from the latter he has carried away scenes which have never before reached the public. It is interesting to note that on this last trip Dr. Salisbury was accompanied by Rex Beach and Mary Roberts Rinehart, both well known writers They appear in many of his pictures.

"That is something rather new, I believe," said Dr. Salisbury to a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, to have two such widely known writers starring in pictures of this character. The publicity that can be gotten from their appearance is immense. Mr. Beach is writing his impressions of this very trip for The Cosmopolitan Magazine and Mrs. Rinehart has done a series for The Saturday Evening Post.

"Getting good photography in the muggy climate of South and Central America was a difficult task. The dry season there is about ten times as wet as the wet season in Los Angeles. Indeed in the so-called dry season there it usually rains about six times a day. Others who have come back with film from these climes have found on it a peculiar growth which acts to the great disadvantage of the print. I dispelled any chance of this by keeping my film in a case that was constantly kept dry by a strong electric bulb. So good photography is assured.

"The scenes that I have obtained show some of the lesser known animals of the south. The sloth, the lizard and the armadillo have been 'shot' by the camera. But there is never any killing with a gun. I have found that audiences dislike to see wild animals in pain. I have also obtained scenics from the various places I visited and some industrials such as the coffee industry. An audience will be rather surprised, won't it, when it learns that here in the United States we get the cheapest grade of coffee grown. The best goes to Europe. It may also be surprised to learn that the natives of Central America make all their furniture from solid mahogany. I have more surprises in store for them, too."

Dr. Salisbury has not decided as yet how he will market his pictures. In all probability, however, the Strand or the Rialto theatres of New York will get them in instalments with the chance of Dr. Salisbury lecturing during their showing. On the other hand he may secure a special theatre on Broadway, although nothing definite has been done along this line.

"I think that I have a very valuable series for the trade," concluded the explorer, "Papers in every city which I have visited since my return have given me illustrated and special articles. In addition there are Mr. Beach and Mrs. Rinehart and Mr. Beach has besides promised to write the subtitles for the pictures. which will help a lot."

No Present Release of Goldwyn Pictures

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation issues an emphatic denial of rumors that it has made an arrangement with any distributing organization to handle Goldwyn productions. This denial, given out by Samuel Goldfish, its president, is as follows:

"Rumors are being spread by those connected with producing and distributing organizations that they have closed or are closing a deal with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation to distribute the Goldwyn Pictures. These rumors are utterly false.

"Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has made no arrangement or contract of any kind for its distribution. This corporation has announced specifically that no effort will be made to release its pictures until at least six, and perhaps as many as twelve, complete pictures are on its shelves. This plan will be followed."

Children Plays Wanted by Edison Script Editor

The scenario department of the Edison Company has sent out the following announcement, which will be of interest to exhibitors whose audiences contain photoplaywrights.

"The first condition of a successful child's play is that it should deal with a world of which children are not childish or 'sweet' or 'cute' or even pathetic, but heroic and triumphant.

"Send us stories in which the 'heroic and triumphant' are the dominant notes. Ideals are natural to Youth and we want them in our pictures, but not the goody-goody negative and colorless ideals which it is sometimes assumed that Youth should cherish. We want stories that are wholesome, but in which there is danger and adventure and fighting towards a goal.

"We are searching for new Stevensons who can reveal the thrilling romance in the complexity of contemporary life. We do not want costume plays unless they are so exceptional as to stand with the accepted classics. There are plenty of pirate tales and fairy stories to be picturized. Give us something of the same spirit in stories of today.

"One and two-reel subjects especially desired.

"Thomas A. Edison, Inc., 2826 Decatur Ave., Bedford Park, N. Y. C."

H. H. Van Loan Leaves for England Saturday

H. H. Van Loan, National Publicity Manager for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, will leave New York Saturday on the S. S. New York for London, where he will handle the publicity affairs of the Transatlantic Film Company.

Mr. Van Loan, as well as being a successful publicity man, has attained no little fame as a fiction writer in the past two years.

Before going with Universal, Mr. Van Loan was connected with the New York World.

He will be accompanied to his new mission by his wife and young daughter.

Van Loan is one of the promising young men of the film industry, and we are quite safe in forecasting a brilliant career in his new field.

Dramatic Moments in "The Barrier," Which Was Shown to the Trade Last Week

New York's Four New Theatres Will Seat 40,000

Three, Near the Strand, Will Be Within Stone's Throw of One Another—Fourth Will Be Largest Projection Hall in the World, Seating 25,000

IF good intentions do not go astray, New York will have the privilege before long of attending four new motion picture theatres, the combined seating capacity of which will be approximately 40,000.

The first of the four was announced through these columns several weeks ago, the name of the theatre being Triumph. At the time this announcement was made the name of S. L. Rothapfel was associated with the enterprise. Mr. Rothapfel promptly denied any connection with the proposed Triumph Theatre, although he admitted that he had previously considered the position of managing director quite seriously.

A week after the announcement was made, plans for the erection of two other theatres directly across the street from the site of the Triumph were published.

Messmore Kendall, operating under the name of the Moredall Realty Corporation, has leased the north half of the block front on the west side of Broadway and Fifty-first Streets for a term of twenty-one years at an annual rental of about $100,000 as a site for an office building and two theatres.

The theatres to be erected will be devoted to motion pictures. One will have a seating capacity of about thirty-eight hundred, and will be the largest picture theatre in the United States. This theatre will be popular priced. The other will have about the same seating capacity as the Rialto, and will be especially appointed for exhibition of special film productions of high class.

The Broadway front will be improved by a tall office building with entrances to the east of the theatres, and stores on the ground floor. Thomas W. Lamb has prepared plans for these improvements which will cost in the enighborhood of $1,000,000. Construction will begin at once.

The fourth giant motion picture theatre to be announced will be merely a part of the greatest amusement palace in the world. The projection hall will seat 25,000 people.

The statement is made on good authority that a deal has just been closed for the purchase of the old Seventh Avenue car barns and adjacent property by a corporation which is to build and conduct the new enterprise, which will provide the people of New York with almost every kind of indoor amusement under one roof.

The announcement that four gigantic new theatres will be opened to New York audiences soon is contemplated with some alarm by the neighborhood theatre owners.

Following the opening of the Strand and Rialto, many neighborhood theatre owners reported a slump in their business.

That an additional levy of 40,000 upon the ranks of New York picture theatregoers will be felt sharply by the neighborhood exhibitors seems only a natural outcome.

This effect will be counteracted to some extent by the increased interest in motion pictures generally which the new theatres will arouse.

We have often emphasized the necessity of judicious newspaper advertising by the exhibitor.

In our last week's issue we published an article, "Co-operation of Dailies with Exhibitors."

Carl H. Pierce, special representative of the Paramount Manufacturers, was so impressed by the article that he has ordered reprints to be sent to all Paramount Exchanges.

It will pay you to read that article, if you happened to pass it by.

Brooklyn Manager Fined for Barring Sailors

Henry Traub, lessee of the Olympic theatre of Brooklyn has been fined $250 by Justice McInerney for discrimination against a sailor in uniform. In this Justice Herman and O'Keefe, sitting in Special Sessions in Brooklyn, concurred.

Justice McInerney said:

"The uniform of a United States sailor must be respected. A sailor has just as much right as any civilian."

Sentence was suspended on Adolph Glattmann, an assistant in the theatre.

Traub was found guilty of refusing permission to two sailors to occupy a box in the theatre after they had purchased tickets in November. The men were told, it was testified, that it was against the rules of the theatre to permit sailors in uniform to occupy box seats.

Montreal Exhibitors Against Advance Deposit

The board of directors of the St. Denis theatre, Montreal, including the president, Mr. MacKay, and E. L. Perry, the manager, gave an informal dinner at the Reform club to the pioneer members of the newly organized Exhibitors' League.

At the meeting following the dinner various matters were discussed, and the most important motion of the evening was raised by George Rotsky, manager of the New Grand theatre, whereby all members of the organization were to refuse to pay any advance deposits on feature films.

"Star" to Show "Snow White" to 200,000

Wide-Awake Kansas City Newspaper Will Give Treat to Women and Children—Proof of What Co-operation Will Accomplish

THE Kansas City Star is going into the motion picture exhibition business on a wholesale scale. On January 27 and 28 the Star will show the Famous Players' film, "Snow White" to nearly one-quarter of a million people.

The newspaper's decision came about in an interesting way. The Paramount exchange manager for that territory suggested to his first-run exhibitor that he call at the Star office and arrange for a free showing of "Snow White" to all of the children in the nearby orphanages and charitable institutions.

The exhibitor called on the editor and offered the use of his theatre free in the mornings. The editor thought it over, and decided to give "Snow White" to the children on a much grander scale than the theatre could afford.

It has been decided to rent the Convention Hall, in Kansas City, for two days, erect a special booth in the center of the hall, and, by employing four projection machines, to throw the picture on four screens at the same time. In effect, there will be four large audiences watching "Snow White" simultaneously. Four prints of "Snow White" will be rented for the occasion.

Instead of inviting merely the orphan children, the Star has issued invitations to every woman and child in that territory. Conservative estimates put the audience for the two days at 200,000.

No sooner had the Kansas City Star began advertising their intention than the Omaha Tribune, realizing the remarkable circulation possibilities afforded, opened up a similar campaign. In both cases, the newspapers will bear the entire expense, including renting of hall, film, projection machines and hiring of operators.

The generous advertising for the Kansas and Omaha motion picture theatres which will result from this co-operation between exhibitor and newspaper is conclusive proof of the advantages which can be derived by exhibitors all over the country who realize the tremendous benefit of newspaper friendship.

The advantages to the newspaper are evident. No cheaper or more effective means of securing community popularity and home circulation could be found than free film shows offer.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be glad to hear from other exchange managers and exhibitors who undertake similar plans, and to render whatever service towards such ends that exhibitors and exchange managers request.

The Problems of State Rights Booking

By Leon J. Rubenstein

THE state right feature, in order to be a state right feature today, does not mean merely a big feature. Given a truly meritorious production, it is the easiest thing in the world to fail with it in the state rights market, because the campaign is not studied according to the requirements of the field. I mean by this, that success or failure in the state right market is a question of "handling." I am telling the readers of the NEWS nothing new when I point out, without mentioning names, instances of big productions on which territory is still open simply because the proper angle of appeal was not taken advantage of.

No stronger instance of state right requirements can be quoted than the picture which is now running through a four weeks' engagement at the Strand Theatre in New York. The title of the picture is, "Germany and Its Armies," and it is divided up for several weeks' booking in instalments.

On the face of it, it would appear to be one of the numerous "war pictures" which found their way here since hostilities broke out in Europe. On the face of the title alone, the average state right buyer might be justified in judging the picture similarly, but the man with territory who wants attractions would be very foolish if he fails to get all the information possible.

From my point of state right handling, it would be folly to play this production up as a war picture in the full sense of the word and it pleases me to discuss the pictures because I know what is being done. I have seen sketches of the lithograph display, and one great feature of it is a three sheet poster in which the passerby is invited to stop and read. There it gives exactly the human touch that he will get on viewing the picture. It tells him that what he will see is not the burning of cities, or the blowing up of trenches, but the real, human, every-day phase of a traveling army, which answers the question of every father, mother and child who has a loved one in uniform with a gun on his shoulder. A pictorial display of the paper is in keeping with this general theme and the press and advertising matter pivot around the same central idea.

In a trip throughout the country which I recently finished, I studied the state right proposition from the point of view of the public. The successful pictures had the common characteristics, which I might include under the general term of "good handling." The failures, however, brought many new phases to my attention. As a result, I can very easily enumerate within a half dozen or so the cardinal requirements of state right success; but that is not my province, however. Under this heading, I can say that many exhibitors are missing by a narrow margin very gratifying revenues from pictures which now appear on their ledgers as failures.

The exhibitor is overwhelmed with "big" productions. They are all so "big" that superlatives become weak and meaningless; he must find something that will stand out not by being "bigger," but by being more direct and unusual in its appeal.

That is the problem before the state right market today, from the manufacturer down to the exhibitor, and the state right buyer is the medium by which the two meet. There are more failures than successes and every week makes the problem more difficult.

A closer application on the part of the state right buyer to the possibilities of the picture he is handling will bring the solution, but it will have to be built upon the strictest kind of originality both in the character of the picture as well as in the method of its presentation.

Bruce on 25,000 Mile Trip for Scenics

Robert C. Bruce, scenic director of the Educational Films Corporation of America, is now on the first lap of a twenty-thousand mile trip around the United States on which he will take approximately sixty thousand feet of film. He started from New York, Sunday, January 14, headed for Philadelphia and Washington. He will proceed south from the capital, finally reaching Florida and thence westward stopping in various cities until he arrives on the Pacific coast. His route then takes him north and then eastward again.

Mr. Bruce plans to reach New York again next November, making the trip ten months in duration. At New Orleans, at San Francisco and at Seattle he will halt long enough to develop and edit his film.

National Association Has "Love Film" Nearly Ready

Practically all of the prints for the sample reel of the film, "How the Great Stars Make Love," are in the hands of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, and work on the assembly has been begun. This reel is the first of the series of at least five, which the National Association intents to issue as its "Annual Review" of the motion pictures of 1916. The films are to consist of cut-outs of the great scenes of the great pictures of the year.

Prints for the second reel, "Great Fights of the Films," are already coming in, as are those for the text, "With the Funny Stars." The subjects of the other reels will be "Daredevil Stunts" and "Great Thrills." It is possible that other reels with scenes selected for their artistic beauty, their perfection of composition and their elaborateness of setting will be included. The series will be released at weekly intervals.

Seabury, Motion Picture Counsel, in Law Firm

The law firm of Seabury, Massey and Lowe has been opened in the Equitable Building, New York City. Samuel Seabury is well known in state politics, having recently run on the Democratic ticket for Governor, and previous to that time serving as Judge of the Court of Appeals. William M. Seabury has been counsel for the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry since its inception. Albert Massey is a well-known lawyer, and John Z. Lowe, Jr., is well known as a member of the bar.

Triangle Announces New Comedy Series

A new series of one-reel comedies to take the place of the Keystone two-reel comedies has been announced by the Triangle Producing Corporation. They will be released on the Triangle program at once.

While the manufacturer's name is not mentioned, it is stated on good authority that the comedies were made in the Keystone studios. They will be called "Triangle Komedies." The twelve which are announced, with the titles and release dates on as follows:

"Love Under Cover" and "The Pipe of Discontent," January 14; "A Noble Fraud" and "Honest Thieves," January 21; "Heart Strategy" and "A Grab Bag Bride." January 28; "The Male Governess" and "The Road Agent," February 4; "Won by a Foot" and "His Deadly Undertaking," February 11; and "The Telephone Belle" and "When Hearts Collide," February 18.

Willis Wood, Kansas City, Badly Damaged by Fire

The Willis Wood Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., which had been exploited about two years ago as the finest moving picture theatre in the West, was gutted by fire recently, just two weeks before it was to return to pictures again. Recently the theatre has been the home of a stock company, but the leasing of the house by Richards and Flynn, owners of other picture houses, was generally understood to have presaged its return to films. The announcement to that effect was made just two days before the fire.

The fire started in the dressing rooms, it is understood, and quickly wrapped the entire stage section in flames. The asbestos curtain fell and the front of the house was badly damaged also. The company carried insurance of $105,000 on the building, and about $40,000 on the contents and fixtures, and interior improvements. The walls are not badly hurt and re-building will be begun soon.

Picture Civic League Formed in Jacksonville

For the purpose of working in harmony and seeing that visiting producers do not take advantage of the co-operative spirit displayed by the municipal government as well as citizens of Jacksonville, the Motion Pictures Civic League was formed last week, at a meeting of over two hundred members of the motion picture profession. J. O. Walsh, president of the U. S. Film Corporation, producers of Black Diamond comedies, was elected president of the League; Harry C. Myers, president of the Encores Pictures Corporation, was elected treasurer; Jerry Hevener, director of Amber Star pictures, was elected secretary, and Myles McCarty was elected vice-president.

Among those who addressed the meeting were C. A. (Doc) Willat, George DeCarleton, Richard Garrick, Victor Moore, Harry Jackson, Bob Ellis and Harry Jackson.

Victor Moore, starring in Klever Pictures, is one of the busiest little stars in the Jacksonville constellation.

Triangle Situation Is More Befogged Than Ever

Hodkinson Statement, Kessel and Bauman Statement and the Announcements of Coast Producers Cause a Most Confusing Situation

IN the face of the wildest rumors concerning the affairs of the Triangle Producing Corporation and the Triangle Distributing Corporation, W. W. Hodkinson has issued the following statement, which appears in the form of an advertisement elsewhere in this issue:

NOTICE TO EXHIBITORS

The Triangle Distributing Corporation through its contractual relations with the Triangle Film Corporation holds the exclusive control in the United States to the following products:

New York Motion Picture Corporation's Ince-Kay Bee 5 Reel Features, Majestic Motion Picture Company's Fine Arts 5 Reel Features, and Keystone Film Company's Mack Sennett-Keystone Comedies.

I personally guarantee to every exhibitor showing the Triangle Program a continuance of that program, composed of pictures equal in quality and box office values to the pictures he has received in the past.

Triangle Distributing Corporation,
William W. Hodkinson, President.

The advertisements from Kessel and Bauman, on their surface, contradict this statement, or, at least, confuse the situation greatly. No one in the Kessel and Bauman offices had any statements to make concerning the Triangle situation.

The advertisement which seems particularly to conflict with Mr. Hodkinson's statement is as follows:

Real Open Market Here, Says Selznick

Exhibitor Now Has Wide Selection of Big Productions Says Film Executive in Talk with News

Lewis J. Selznick is of the opinion that we now have so many "special" releases as to make the program unnecessary. In an interview last week with a MOTION PICTURE NEWS representative, Mr. Selznick did some rapid calculating and after adding up the number of productions scheduled by the companies producing for the "open market," declared that when grouped together they provided sufficient releases for the exhibitor playing one picture a week to book his theatre without the necessity of additional program service.

Though the Goldwyn Company has carefully refrained from making any statement as to releasing plans, in line with its policy of having a number of completed productions on hand before a step is taken, Mr. Selznick, in the interview, seemed to take it for granted that Goldwyn would be found on the open market. Continuing his statement, he said:

"With Goldwyn, Artcraft and Selznick Pictures already in the field," declared the noted producer, "the exhibitor is free at last. With our thirty-two or more productions a year to choose from; with Artcraft putting out twelve or more and Goldwyn coming out with an additional thirty-odd pictures, it is no longer necessary for the exhibitors to pay for service and tie themselves hand and foot to any program.

"Furthermore, the exhibitor can now force the program producers to let him select features from the program and play them as he desires.

"I have often been asked in the last few weeks what I thought of our new 'competition,' meaning the Goldwn company. A little thought on the part of my questioners would show them that Goldwyn is not my competitor but my ally. The advent of this big company into the open market is not only an insurance on the success of my proposition but means the emancipation of the exhibitor.

"Between the Goldwyn, Artcraft, my own company and the several individual companies producing special features we can already supply the entire needs of the biggest exhibitors in the nation and even keep the smaller fellow's house open for the better part of the week."

Hammons Closes Contract with Park

E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager of the Educational Film Corporation of America, reports that he has just closed a contract covering weekly releases, with Lester Park, manager of the Photoplay Exchange, 137 East Second street, Salt Lake City. He has also closed with the Photoplay Exchange, Denver, Colo.

Fairbanks Endeavors to Break Contract with Triangle

Famous Comedian Is Endeavoring to Break Triangle Contract—Says He Won't Work if He Can't Be Under Supervision of Griffith

Douglas Fairbanks has issued a statement in which he says that he has finished with Triangle, because D. W. Griffith has ceased to be active in Triangle affairs. A clause in Mr. Fairbanks' contract provides for the personal supervision of Mr. Griffith. This clause, Mr. Fairbanks declares, has been violated, and his contract automatically is broken.

It would appear from Mr. Fairbanks' statement that D. W. Griffith had withdrawn from Triangle production. Mr. Griffith was asked by a representative of Motion Picture News if he had severed connections with Triangle.

Mr. Griffith replied: "I don't want to be quoted on that now."

When he was asked to state his production plans for the future, he said: "Give me three weeks, and I'll tell you everything."

The statement sent out by Douglas Fairbanks follows:

"On account of the many inquiries that are being made of me as to whether or not I have severed my connection with the Majestic Motion Picture Company, which has been releasing motion pictures that I have appeared in through the program of the Triangle Picture Corporation, I desire to make the statement:

"In my contract with the Majestic Motion Picture Company there was inserted the following provision:

"'Said corporation agrees that the motion picture or pictures that said Mr. Fairbanks is to render services in the making shall be supervised by Mr. David Griffith, General Manager and Chief Director of said corporation, and in the event of said Mr. Griffith severing his connection with the company, or discontinuing the active management of the same, the said Mr. Fairbanks may at his option withdraw from the employ of said corporation, but said action on the part of said Mr. Fairbanks shall not prejudice his right to said compensation already earned by said Mr. Fairbanks. . . . Said corporation shall give or cause to be given the name of Douglas Fairbanks chief prominence, and by "chief prominence" is meant that his name shall appear in larger type than any other part of the subject matter in which his name appears on all positive films, and in all advertising and literature used in connection with the motion pictures in which he appears, and shall not specially feature any other person in the cast representing any motion picture in which Mr. Fairbanks' written consent first had been obtained.'

"Relative to the provision concerning Mr. Griffith, I demanded that the same be put in my contract, because I had great faith in Mr. Griffith, and desired the benefit of his superior ability and judgment as supervisor and general director in the motion picture company with which I was to be connected.

"At the time of the making of my contract, the promoters of the Triangle Film Corporation were conducting a most extensive campaign for the sale of its stock of a tremendous capitalization, based primarily upon the good will of Mr. David Griffith, who had come into great prominence in the motion picture world on account of "The Birth of a Nation," and of Thomas Ince and Mack Sennett, the title of the corporation being suggested by this triangle of names.

"It was my opinion that if Mr. Griffith devoted his entire time and attention to the manufacturing of motion picture films for this corporation, it would aid greatly in its success, and that if the corporation were over-capitalized, or if its capital were issued for a consideration other than money, and resulted in a financial failure, Mr. Griffith would no doubt cease to be active in the making of pictures, and that would enable me to withdraw from any connection with the enterprise, and prevent my pictures from being hypothecated as security for loans, and subsequently marketed so as to upset the standard of value that my pictures ought to bring.

"When Mr. Griffith ceased to be active in the studio of the company, I made every effort to ascertain the true status of Mr. Griffith with the company, but every avenue of information was closed to me.

"As regards the provision in my contract regulating the method of advertising of my pictures, the exhibitors and the public through the United States have seen the effort made by the Majestic Motion Picture Company to establish a value to the names of actresses by connecting them with mine, in violation of my contract.

"Immediately upon my becoming assured of the true situation, I elected to stand upon my legal and moral rights, and severed my connection with the company.

"I have come to no conclusion relative to my future plans in the motion picture business."

In spite of this announcement, it is said on good authority that the Majestic studios are being prepared for Mr. Fairbanks' use. It is also said that the scouts of other concerns are pursuing Douglas Fairbanks with tempting contracts.

Freuler Forms New $2,500,000 Corporation

Empire All-Star Corporation to Produce Frohman Plays—Famous Players-Frohman Co. Discontinues

A new reported corporation, known as the Empire All-Star Corporation, has been formed by John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Company, and Alf Hayman, president of the Frohman Company, and capitalized at $2,500,000.

All of the plays produced by the Charles Frohman Company will be filmed by the new concern.

The main offices of the corporation will be in New York, with branches in Chicago and London. The new company is the result of a contract entered into by Alf Hayman, President of the Frohman Company, and John R. Freuler, President of the Mutual Film Corporation, through which the product of the new concern will be distributed.

Studios will be maintained in New York, Chicago, and in Southern California. The directors will be chosen from those of both America and Europe, and an effort will be made to give the plays the same dignified presentation on the screen that has always characterized their stage presentation under the Frohman direction.

Augustus Thomas will be in charge of the bureau for the selection of plays and scenarios, and will supervise the production of films.

Some of the Frohman stars have been put under contract to appear in the film versions of the plays in which they have acted. Other members of original casts will be engaged when possible for their roles.

In regard to royalties the new corporation will adopt for the first time in the film business the policy of a sliding scale, introduced by the late Charles Frohman in the theatrical business.

It is promised that authors will receive weekly statements and will be paid with the same regularity and promptness as are writers for the stage.

Work on the first film will be begun early next month.

Famous Players-Charles Frohman Company Discontinues

The Famous Players-Charles Frohman Company has been discontinued, according to an announcement made yesterday by Mr. Adolf Zukor.

The company was formed three years ago and several of the better known Frohman plays were produced by Famous Players and released through Paramount, including "Bella Donna" with Pauline Frederick, "Morals of Marcus," with Marie Doro.

Since Charles Frohman's tragic death on the Lusitania robbed the company of his co-operation, Mr. Zukor and his associates in the Famous Players decided to discontinue the organization, Mr. Zukor's complete statement will be published in the next issue of Motion Picture News.

"Pride of the Clan" Plays to Capacity

"The Pride of the Clan," with Mary Pickford in the leading role, filled a week's engagement at Loew's Columbia on the occasion of the initial appearance of that film in the Capital City. There were capacity houses with a lobby over-flow every day, in fact, Manager Beatus wished he had a bigger house to accommodate his patronage.

WITH THE EXHIBITOR

Says Small Town Can't Pay Big Town Price

Exhibitor from Illinois Seeks Light on Problem of Big Importance to Small Town Showmen

THE following letter touches on a condition in the film market which we take the greatest of pleasure in "tackling" as suggested by the brother exhibitor. First read the letter:

To the Editor of "With the Exhibitor" page:

"As you are the man that takes a delight (I know) in solving the knotty problems of the exhibitor in general, I am asking you to tackle this one.

"Why is an exhibitor in a small town (say 2,500 population) compelled to pay the same price for a feature that an exhibitor in a large city pays? There is a two-reel comedy (and one comes out every month) that has a certain price to book it, and say the price is $15 for a two-reel feature—a little fellow in the country can't pay this and charge only five and ten cents but a big fellow in the city can. So please tell me through your valuable With the Exhibitor columns why there is no distinction made between the country towns and large cities in booking features. As it is, you must pay the price or do without. Age of film doesn't count here.

"Respectfully,
"JULIUS W. SCHMIDT,
"Grand theatre, Breese, Ill."

Brother Schmidt is bothered by the artificial "minimum" set on pictures by the official heads of exchanges, sitting in solemn council in New York or elsewhere, and some of the strange rules and laws they promulgate. Right, Brother Schmidt, they are indeed strange, sometimes, and they seem not always to consider the small exhibitor who is the backbone of the industry.

We know that one of the largest and best managed exchanges of them all, has only recently set a "minimum" scale for their pictures which places a price "per day" on every reel, regardless of how many days they are run. And all these years we have been preaching for longer runs and a chance for the exhibitor who holds over a picture to make good this policy against using a new picture every day!

But to get back to your case. In general, reels are sold by "age"; that is to say a high price is placed upon the first run, second run, etc., run nowadays rather denoting a week than the old single day scale. There was a time when reels grew cheaper every day. Now the price is maintained for the first week, or month, or in some cases several months.

The big towns most assuredly do pay more than your fifteen dollar scale for the pictures you mention. Your complaint is against the length of time which it takes for the reels to reach a price you can afford. They will cost less, in time, assuredly, as such a price is obviously impossible for you to pay. But you would like them now, and if the head office in New York or elsewhere, felt they could trust their own branch managers to sell their pictures at a fair profit, you would get your reels. Until this happy day comes, you will have to go without, and the exchange will lose your rental.

The head office doubtless goes on the assumption that if their branch manager is forced to charge a high price, he will get it—somehow. They may be right, but it is not according to general business principles, of course, for at a fair rental you could run these pictures not once but several times, and the income from you and a lot of others in your same situation would pay the office rent of every film branch in the country. Some day, perhaps, unless this is realized by the powers that be, some of the branch offices will find it impossible to pay their rent without the help of the little towns. On the whole, you are getting film service for very much less than you would, however, if the heads got together and "maintained" a price. The "independent" policy of governing from the big center without studying local conditions is not entirely to your detriment.

SERVICE BY ONE WHO KNOWS

Are you "turning them away every night," or is something the matter?

Do you know what is wrong?

We know you have problems, and an expert exhibitor who is a member of our editorial staff wants to help you solve them.

His service won't cost you a cent.

Address your letter "Exhibitors' Department."

Knocked Dead, But Fully Recovered

Manager Moore, the Paramount exhibitor of the Colonial, Tacoma, Wash., pulled off a stunt recently from which he hasn't yet fully recovered.

He joined the brotherhood of the order of the "potato matinee"—one tuber for admission and all to go to charity for those who had been unfortunate in the past year. He wasn't sure how sure he was himself, and some one had told him Tacoma people were not generous—that they were cold, indifferent and selfish. So he had ten sacks, which he thought ample, to hold his box office receipts.

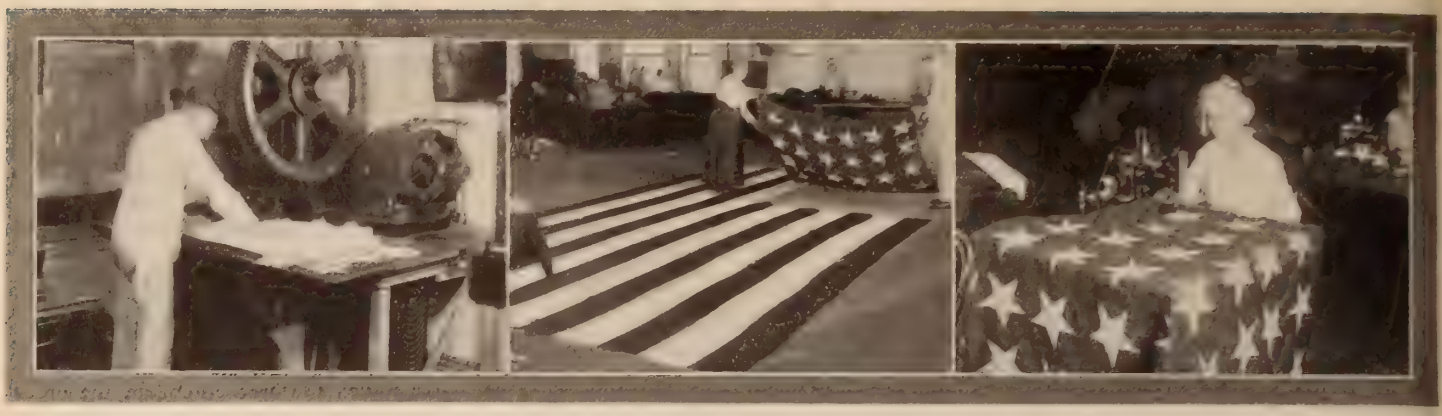
Everything was primed and ready. The doors were thrown open. The organist was soulfully playing "My Boyhood Days Down on the Farm" while Moore was in the office lulled into a delightful reverie when he heard a commotion below likened to a disturbance, that might have resulted from a patron with a big potato, who wanted change in smaller ones or some such transaction.

Rushing down he found a surging crowd in front with a line a block long and potatoes coming in by singles, doubles, trios, pecks, bushels and wholesale.

The ten sacks were filled, the big closet under the stairway leading to the balcony was opened. In ten minutes the door couldn't be shut and the big white tubers were piled upon the soft brown Wilton in the foyer.

When the matinee was over just thirty-one hundred pounds of big, luscious Burbanks were eying their new quarters.

That evening and the next morning Moore's name was smeared all over the front pages of all the dailies with column after column of the best kind of publicity any showman ever hankered after, and a hundred needy families gave thanks unto the Paramount man with the big idea.



Hints to the Manager

It takes only one careless oversight to lose a score of patrons. It may take a score of carefully planned acts to get back one.

At ten cents a day, the loss of one patron daily will buy you a pretty fair suit of clothes. Would you want to bet a suit that your organization is so perfect there doesn't a single patron get by you every day. Yet, if this isn't a good bet, you lose anyway.

You may think it hard to please everybody all the time, but it's not a bit more than should be expected of you to avoid displeasing a single patron, at any time. Have you passed this thought on to your employes today? Once a day is not too often to preach this doctrine around the house.

Have you a thermometer in your house? This little mechanical device doesn't lie about whether it's comfortable or not. Sixty-five is about the right temperature.

Death of James Delves Great Bereavement to Pennsylvania Exhibitors

Among those whose work for his fellow men left a broad trail of good deeds was James Delves, late Secretary of the Pennsylvania Exhibitors' League, whose work as local and state secretary, and recently as national secretary, was filled with a conscientiousness which made him beloved of all his fellow members.

The following resolution was unanimously passed at the last meeting of the League, expressing the deep sorrow of the members and their realization of their great loss:

RESOLUTION.

Whereas, Almighty God in his infinite wisdom has taken from our midst our devoted brother and secretary, James Delves, and

Whereas, We have lost and will miss his good advice and counsel, wherefore his name shall live and be revered to our memories in the future, for the good service he has performed in the past; and

Whereas, His bereaved wife has lost a devoted husband and companion, therefore be it

Resolved, That we extend to his widow in her bereavement our heartfelt sympathy and condolence; be it further

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to his widow; also to the trade papers, and they be spread upon our minutes, and that our state charter shall be draped for a period of thirty days.

MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Resolution Committee:

(Signed) I. W. SHEARER
G. W. SAHNER
F. J. HERRINGTON.

At the regular meeting G. W. Sahner was elected to fill the unexpired term and H. C. Kliehm was elected treasurer.

Montreal Association Elects Officers

A meeting of the Montreal Moving Picture Exhibitors and Exchangemen was held Monday night, December 11, in the green room of the Hotel Bouillon. W. R. Herring, manager of Mount Royal theatre, was chairman of the meeting. Mr. Herring in his remarks, said that the principal reason for the failure of former attempts at organization was due to the fact that it was only when a storm appeared on their business horizon that the average exhibitor realized the value of co-operation.

He also touched on the proposed Bill to increase the Charity Tax from one cent to five cents.

Following him, Mr. Ouimet, general manager of the Specialty Import Film Company, spoke at considerable length on the industry and its problems. Mr. Ouimet's motto was "Preparedness" and he thought it was a mistake to consider an Exchange Exhibitor Association and felt that an Association of Exhibitors should come first.

The following officers were elected finally, from the motion introduced by Gerald Barrie, President of the Windsor Amusement Company: President, W. R. Herring, Mount Royal theatre; Treasurer, K. Sperdakos, Maryland theatre; Secretary, Mr. McMann, Independent Amusement Company; Visory Committee, G. Barrie, Mr. Perry and Mr. Robideau.

The remainder of the meeting was very lively in many respects and much discussion was in order. However, the big thing was that the theatre men in Montreal have gotten together and succeeded in forming an Association, which it is hoped, will continue to prosper.

Brooklyn Carnival and Ball Set for February 21

THE Carnival and Ball to be held under the auspices of the Associated Motion Picture Exhibitors of Brooklyn and Long Island on February 21 at Stauch's Palace, Coney Island, promises to be a big affair. All branches of the industry will be represented.

Beginning February 1, The Brooklyn Daily Eagle will conduct a voting contest to elect the most popular actor and actress to be crowned king and queen of the carnival.

The Brooklyn organization is today the largest local of the National League, comprising 110 theatre owners in Brooklyn and Long Island. It has in addition enlisted the active support of 190 more exhibitors who are not as yet members of the league, but who have vouchsafed enthusiastic co-operation to make the Grand Carnival and Ball the affair of the season.

The proceeds of the entertainment will be used in a fund to fight the pending Sunday closing law, also the proposed screen tax legislation. One of the meritorious features decided on by the entertainment committee is the fact that an advertising program will not be issued. In doing this the Brooklyn organization is shattering all precedents as it has been the past custom to issue programs and then solicit advertising from film manufacturers and others in the trade. "Eat, Dance and be Merry" has been adopted as the slogan and all efforts of the organization are concentrated to make this slogan a reality.

EXHIBITOR PERSONALS

GEORGIA.—Newnan: Adolph Samuels, owner of a string of picture theatres in various southern cities, has added another house to his circuit.

He has just completed a ten thousand dollar ($10,000.00) picture theatre in Newnan, Ga., and the house will run the Triangle, Paramount, Metro service, as well as other special features.

The theatre has a seating capacity of three hundred (300) and is equipped with two Power 6-B machines and a Seeburg piano.

IOWA.—Shellrock: Charles L. Witt, former manager of the Orpheum theatre, was recently appointed secretary to Governor Harding of the State of Iowa.

Pisgah: The Kerr theatre, an exclusive Paramount picture house, was burned down during the progress of the performance on Dec. 28. No casualties are reported. Mr. H. W. Kerr, the manager of the theatre, is also manager of the Kerr theatre at Little Sioux, Ia., and editor of "The Hustler" and "The Pisgah News." A new theatre will be erected shortly on the site of the old Kerr theatre.

Independence: Harold Kelly has assumed the managerial duties of the Paramount theatre at Independence, which was formerly owned by E. C. Klatt. Paramount pictures will be continued, but the theatre in future will be known as the Allerton.

MISSISSIPPI.—Aberdeen: Irvin B. Mins, exhibitor of the Temple theatre, Aberdeen, was married recently to Miss Mary Murphy, also of Aberdeen.

MISSOURI.—Boonville: Walter S. Merrill took possession of the Stevens opera house on Jan. 1 and changed its name to the Lyric, and henceforth proceeded to inaugurate a publicity and advertising campaign for his house, in which he will show Paramount pictures exclusively.

NEBRASKA.—Plattsmouth: Charles Parker, of Plattsmouth, has bought the Ideal, 2210 South Sixteenth street, Omaha, from J. C Comfort. Mr. Comfort had the theatre for two years.

OHIO.—Cleveland: The Corona theatre, Prospect avenue and East Eighth street, Cleveland, suffered a $5,000 loss a week ago, when a fire, caused by crossed wires, broke out. A score of patrons escaped through the smoke to the street uninjured. Mr. Aubrey Hess, 9002 Miles Park street, owner of the theatre, expects to have the house open for business again in about two weeks.

Mr. Joseph Grossman, manager of the Standard theatre, left Wednesday for New York, where he will be the remainder of the week. While East, Mr. Grossman makes his headquarters at the Hotel Astor.

Sievers Gives Local Color to Advertising

William Sievers of St. Louis Follows Up the Big Advertising Campaign with Every Possible Sort of Local Color

THIS theatre opened with "The Crisis" on December 24, and since then Mr. Sievers has pulled off various characteristic touches of side line publicity. For example, the following clipping from the files of a local paper, April 3, 1849, mystified readers of the classified columns:

"For Sale—A stout, likely negro boy, 13 years old; perfectly sound and healthy; an excellent house servant, and offered for no fault. None need apply except those living in the city—Apply to James T. Johnson, 40 Green St."

Captain Stanley Lewis, an ex-army officer, is seen daily riding around town in an automobile with a machine gun mounted on the side. Capt. Lewis gives lectures before clubs, societies and in the schools, and at stated periods he gives lectures in the book sections of the big department stores on the historical value of the film. The captain is a clever free-hand artist, as well as a speaker, and illustrates his talks with drawings of Lincoln, Grant and other prominent characters in the photoplay.

A "criticism," signed by "Observer," was printed in the "Letters from the people" column of a Sunday paper. In this, Observer severely criticizes the producers of "The Crisis" because, he says, none of the players who took part in the picture resembled in the least the original characters in the book—that is, the people whom the characters in the book were supposed to represent. That the "criticism" was widely read was proved by having no less than five persons mention the fact not three hours after the newspapers were delivered. This was excellent free publicity "extemporaneous" in character.

The picture is booked for an indefinite run with capacity business.

Four Gaumonts Recommended for Children

In considering the child in relation to motion pictures the Better Films Committee of the Illinois Congress of Mothers and Parents-Teachers Associations has made a recommendation highly satisfactory to the Gaumont company. This was the mention of the four Gaumont single-reels, issued weekly, as suitable for children's programs.

"Reel Life," "See America First," "The Mutual Weekly" and "Tours Around the World" are edited in such fashion that they maintain an educational trend without making the children feel that they are having learning "forced down their throat." This was brought out by the committee, and will be pleasing confirmation of the views of enterprising exhibitors who have been featuring these pictures.

Painstaking and Effective Christmas "Ad"

The Orpheum theatre, Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, published a Christmas "ad" which we show in an accompanying cut, a "prize winner" in neatness of design and telling a whole story in small space. The advertisement occupied four columns, about ten inches deep, in the local newspapers and contains all in very conspicuous display, headlines about the attraction and the star, a "Christmas Greeting," a schedule of performances so Christmas patrons could plan the time of their coming, and a brief notice of the plot of the play and some extra attractions with it to make a bill extraordinary.

This whole advertisement was especially designed and drawn by J. Albert Hoover, from Christmas wreath to the outside border. That it drew business goes without saying, as nobody reading any of the local papers could fail to stop and look at it. It dominated the whole "movie" page.

Majestic, Jackson, Miss., Issues Cards to Visitors

Adapting a well recognized courtesy of many lines of business to the motion picture theatre's needs, the Majestic theatre, at Jackson, Miss., issues engraved invitations to visiting debutantes and others whose names appear in the local "Society Column" as being locally entertained. It is a Southern custom, even in the larger cities, for the local papers to carry in detail all the doings of the "four hundred," and by extending this thoughtful courtesy to the visiting friends of its patrons, the Majestic is undoubtedly repaid many fold for the few cents each invitation costs.

It is easy to imagine the amount of word of mouth advertising given as the visitor in town finds herself the recipient of this mark of attention at the hands of the local theatre management. The card reads:

> The Management of > The Majestic Theatre > requests > the honor of a visit from > Miss Mary Blank
> during her stay in Jackson
> Present this for admission.

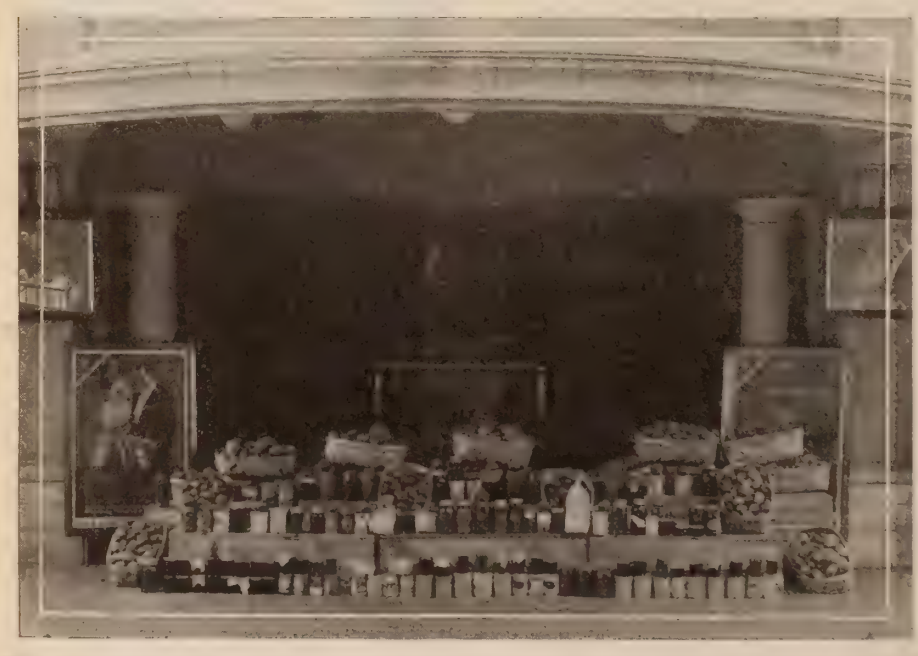
Winning Good Will Paid This Exhibitor

A GREAT Muncie (Ind.) manufacturing plant was totally destroyed by fire; nearly five hundred men were thrown out of employment, temporarily at least. The city's other industrial concerns were running full force, but wages were only nominal and insufficient, in most cases, to meet the advanced cost of living.

Realizing fully the significance of the situation—that worthy poor were crying for need and that Christmas was to dawn a day of sadness for forgotten children—the heart of greater Muncie responded. Charitable organizations concentrated their efforts; new ones were formed and the shuttle of charity wove a web about the city.

In the activity that followed organizations and individuals alike strove to do their parts—and more. Then it was that Arthur Bennett, the manager of the popular Strand theatre, conceived the plan described herein. Its success was marvelous; and by the end of a week Mr. Bennett had acquired a veritable grocery store, comprising almost every conceivable substantial edible on the market.

Mr. Bennett did not solicit the assistance of adults; he depended upon the kiddies of the city who were under twelve years of age. His plan was this: Every afternoon for one week he gave a special matinee for the children, fixing the admission price at three vegetables or pieces of fruit, canned and preserved goods, and, in fact, anything in the "eating" line. But Mr. Bennett's letter, which he furnished on request, will tell the whole story of a big thing:



"In reply to your request for information concerning my special charity week plan, I am more than glad to furnish the details of the plan and its outcome, so that other exhibitors who care to try it may enjoy the same pleasure I have had. For a pleasure it was indeed. If you can picture two hundred or more boys and girls coming into the theatre every afternoon for a week, after school, laden with all the things that would gladden the hearts of the poor and unfortunate, then you have some conception. It would have brought tears of genuine happiness to your eyes, the charity of these kids.

"These children did not have in mind the selfish motive of just wanting to see the show for the admission price of what one would imagine they would place no value upon. The whole-heartedness of their giving was demonstrated repeatedly by such inquiry as this, 'Mr. Bennett, do you think what I have brought will be all right for the poor people?'

"Before I give you a list of the articles I received I want to tell you in a slight way, for words can hardly describe, the appreciation of the audiences these children constituted.

"I had previously arranged a special program that I thought would appeal to the kiddies, as well as to grown-ups, and it certainly did. Any one who has never seen an audience composed chiefly of children can't possibly imagine the interest these youngsters displayed. Now here's the secret: these young 'uns were simply tickled to death, and of course when they went home the principal topic of their conversation was the show at the Strand theatre. They described it in glowing terms. The result was that the papas, mamas, sisters, big brothers and all, couldn't see how they could afford to miss such a fine picture. I know this to be a fact, because I was right on the job to see if it was going to be that way. 'Our little boy, or our little girl, saw your show this afternoon and they said it was so good we just had to come.'

"I selected 'A Heart of a Hero,' which is the story of Nathan Hale, produced by the World Film, for Monday and Tuesday. For Wednesday and Thursday I secured Bessie Barriscale in 'A Corner in Colleens,' a Triangle feature, which was certainly a riot. Friday and Saturday I had 'The Unwelcome Mother,' a William Fox feature.

With Five Hundred Men Thrown Out of Employment by a Fire, Manager Bennett of the Colonial, Muncie, Came to the Fore with a Lobby Display to Distribute

Joan of Arc, on Fifth Avenue, New York

"Now for my surprise which I promised the children who attended. I am going to provide an entertainment on Tuesday and Wednesday after Christmas, the nature of which is as follows: I have secured, through the kindness of C. C. Hide, manager of the Triangle Film Corporation, 'The Little Schoolma'am,' featuring Dorothy Gish, which he agreed to furnish at no cost whatever for this charitable association. Then Dr. Rollin H. Bunch, the mayor of Muncie, from the goodness of his heart agreed to furnish a box of candy to every child who attends. I had originally intended to have only the boys and girls who had contributed toward this charity fund included in this party, but have changed my mind and am going to invite every boy and girl in the city under twelve years of age to be a guest on these two mornings.

"In conclusion I will enumerate the list of articles I received from Monday to Friday, exclusive, as may be seen, of the last and perhaps the biggest day, Saturday: Cans of canned goods—tomatoes, 57; peas, 16; sauerkraut, 2; carnation milk, 3; hominy, 1; beans, 10; soup, 7; succotash, 5; corn, 19; pears, 12; peaches, 21; beets, 4; preserves of different kinds (quart jars), 64; oranges, 6 dozen; apples, 5 bushels; onions, 2 bushels; turnips, 1 peck; Irish potatoes, 9 bushels; sweet potatoes, 1 bushel; jellies, 75 glasses; eggs, 38; canned cherries, 7 cans; canned strawberries, 4 cans.

"This charity plan has been a big success for all parties concerned—the kids, the Winter Relief Association and the Strand theatre—in fact, far beyond the anticipations of the most optimistic and imaginative. I would not hesitate to advise any exhibitor to try my plan. With best wishes for continued success, I am

"Very truly yours,

"A. E. BENNETT.

War Veterans Aid Pathe Publicity

One of the most unusual stunts suggested by W. W. Kofeldt, cashier of Pathe's Portland office, in connection with the opening of "Pearl of the Army," at the Hippodrome theatre there, was a parade of the Spanish-American War Veterans' Sons' Drum and Bugle Corps.

THE EASTERN STUDIOS

AT Bluebird's studio, in Leonia, N. J., Director Manager Edwin Stevens is preparing a five-reel screen version of Kate Jordan's work, "Susan's Gentleman," which will be his third Violet Mersereau production for Bluebird's program. "The Boy Girl," to be released March 5, and "The Honor of Mary Blake," a recent Bluebird, were both the work of John C. Brownell, who is assisting Mr. Stevens at Leonia.

WHILE working in an O. Henry story, which is being directed by Thomas R. Mills at the Greater Vitagraph studios, Mildred Manning and Mrs. Nellie Anderson experienced an unexpected thrill.

The scene was being taken on a circular iron stairway, which Miss Manning, followed by Mrs. Anderson, was descending.

Mrs. Anderson's foot slipped. As she started to fall she shrieked. Her head landed in Miss Manning's lap.

EDWARD ELKAS, character actor and player of heavy types, has returned to the Greater Vitagraph studios. He will be seen in a new play, as yet unnamed, in which Dorothy Kelly, starred with Charles Richman in "The Secret Kingdom," is being featured, under the direction of John Robertson.

Mr. Elkas will be recalled for his work in "The Dollar and the Law," "The Scarlet Runner," "The Enemy" and "The Man Behind the Curtain."

THERE seems to have been a French invasion of the Famous Players studio. Marguerite Clark is playing a French girl of the Empire, and Pauline Frederick is another French girl of a much later date.

FRANK LOSEE, the escaped convict in the Famous Players adaptation of Dickens' "Great Expectations," is now appearing in the role of an old French roué, in support of Pauline Frederick.

THERE are no end of indignities being heaped upon Tom Meighan since he left the Lasky studio to join the Famous Players in the East. First he was hustled off to Cuba, and when he got back he was told he would next appear as a Frenchman.

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the Universal Film Manufacturing Company that Zoe Rae, the child actress, will be featured in a series of one act photoplays. Demand by the exhibitors for more releases in which little Zoe appeared has been so great that it was decided that the only way to accede to this demand was to put out a series in which the talented child played the leading role. The stories will be particularly adapted for women and children and a strong cast will support Zoe.

Edna Whistler (Management William A. Sheer). The First Release Will be "Dollars and a Heart"

EDWARD CONNELLY, who plays the role of the crafty and sinister Dr. Zulph, in Metro's great new serial "The Great Secret," is an actor of much experience. For more than fifteen years Mr. Connelly was known and popularly accepted as one of Broadway's best light eccentric comedians. He was featured in nearly all of the famous New York Casino successes, and was always considered a laugh producer. For some time now, he has cast aside the masque of jester and intends devoting his future to serious dramatic roles.

GLADYS HULETTE, Thanhouser star, will be seen in "Pots-and-Pans Peggie" following "'Her' New York" released through Pathe exchanges on January 7. As Peggie, Miss Hulette does a very modern bit of burglary. She recovers some stolen plans from a locked room by slipping a vacuum cleaner through a narrow transom and "inhaling" the precious blue prints. Miss Hulette's play is again by Miss Agnes C. Johnston.

IN "Mary Lawson's Secret," an approaching Thanhouser Pathe release, Arthur Bauer is a saucy villain—and yet all that sauciness that appears on the screen is maintained in spite of the fact that Charlotte Walker slapped him 17 times and he was knocked down 12 times before the cameraman began to turn the crank.

THE well-known illustrator, Francis Leyendecker, insisted on lending his friend, Francis X. Bushman, the artist's smock which the screen star wears in his studio scenes in his forthcoming Metro serial, "The Great Secret."

ROBERT CARSON, who is seen as a Chief of Detectives in the last eight chapters of "The Great Secret," has the distinction of being one of the principals in the first motion picture that was ever made in Boston. That was more than five years ago; the picture was "Denver Dan" and the company was the Dadmun Picture Company.

Director John Noble Discussing "Egypt the Egyptian" with Ethel Barrymore—Her Next Metro

IN AND OUT OF WEST COAST STUDIOS

By J. C. JESSEN

FRED J. BALSHOFER, Harold Lockwood and fifteen members of the Yorke-Metro Company are home from a stay of two weeks at Willats and Fort Brag in the extreme Northern part of California, and are working at the studio making the final interior scenes for "The Promise." Photographs brought back of the snow-covered cabins, served the technical department in reproducing scenes at the studio, and now one stage has the appearance of a northern land. The setting is most artistically done, and so accurate that from photographs it is impossible to tell which were taken in the north and which at the studio.

Director Oscar C. Apfel, recently engaged by Mr. Balshofer, has already begun the filming of "The Hidden Children." This will also have Mr. Lockwood and Miss Allison as stars, but until they finish their work in "The Promise," Mr. Apfel is making all scenes in which the leads do not appear.

The scenario for this is adapted from the Robert Chambers book which is spoken of as the best delineation of Indian character since the Leather Stocking Tales by J. Fenimore Cooper. Director Apfel with a large number of players will go to Northern California where, in a secluded valley in the mountains scarcely ever visited by people, the big battle and fort-storming scenes, together with many of the exteriors will be filmed. Manager Balshofer expects to make this a very spectacular subject, as the book offers a world of action situations.

DIRECTOR EDDIE DILLON is filming the Fine Arts comedy drama, "The Doll Shop," with Bessie Love as star, Roy Stewart, leading man, and a cast which includes Carmel Meyers, Carl Stockdale and Max Davidson. Dillon, by his wide experience as a comedy director, is particularly well suited for the filming of a subject of this character, which is said to offer Miss Love a much better part than the role taken in "The Heiress of Coffee Dan's."

Chester Withey, director, Robert Harron, star, Mildred Harris, who is playing the opposite lead, together with other members of the cast for "The Bad Boy," were turned loose in a Los Angeles bank Sunday to make a bank robbery scene. All day they worked under the lights, carrying bags of coin and bundles of bills, and for once in heir life, at least, became fatigued in the handling of coin of the realm.

SCENES made by the Paul Powell Fine Arts Company for "The Girl of the Timberclaims," which stars Constance Talmadge in the Santa Cruz Mountains, contain some new photographic effects. A very beautiful scene is that of the burning of a log cabin colony. An entire village was built prior to the company going to the lumber country, and the last scene made there was the burning of the place. The part in this play for Miss Talmadge is very similar to that taken by her in "Intolerance," the mountain girl, but being a present day character portrayal, gives her even greater opportunity to display her individuality.

The annual tournament of roses at Pasadena, New Year's Day, served as a setting for a one-reel comedy completed by L-Ko Director General J. G. Blystone in eight hours. The leading players were Fatty Voss, Lou Bolton, Dick Smith and Robert McKinsey. About half of the scenes were taken during the parade, and the others at the Oregon-Pennsylvania football game in the afternoon.

Fatty Voss, in leaving the grand stand, fell and slid the full length of the thirty-five-foot stairs, adding an accidental slapstick thrill of material value to the comedy, but very painful to Voss. In the fall a vertebra was dislocated.

SCENES of feverish activity now exist at the Kalem studios where preparations are now under way for the removal to Glendale.

SOCIETY FUNCTIONS

The farewell reception to 1916 and the welcome tendered the New Year by filmsters was a rousing one. The Screamers and two hundred of their friends gave a wonderful party at the Town and Country Club. Elizabeth and Kenneth McGaffey, controlling contributors of The Photoplay Magazine, caused us to remark, "A good time was had by all." Dorothy Davenport and Wallace Reid were aiders and abetters to make the welkin ring for the New Year by an old-fashioned watch-meeting at their Hollywood home. Hank Mann permitted Castle de Slapstick, his Hollywood abode, to become scenes of revelry by night and early morning.

Director J. Pep McGowan and Helen Holmes will joy-ride on a gasoline tractor during their week's vacation at Miss Holmes' ranch in Utah. Miss Holmes having purchased this piece of rolling stock this week.

On the evening that Director L. Ingraham was held up and robbed, it has since been learned he was on his way home with nine dollars winnings from a pasteboard shuffling party at the home of Thomas G. Lingham, that villainous heavy of the Signal organization. Our city detectives learning of this, sought to blacken the name of Lingham by causing his arrest on purely circumstantial evidence. This was prevented, as the facts showed the highwayman to be of very small stature, while our honorable citizen Lingham towers six feet in height. No third degree methods were used.

Harold Lockwood is in training for a big fight and "The Promise" is a knockdown and drag out. Queensbury rules will not be followed. Fred J. Balshofer is referee, Lester Cuneo the opponent, and battling Kid Mason, local professional, is trainer. (Reserve a seat on the side line.)

A letter addressed to "The Moving Picture Company," Los Angeles, Cal., was this week delivered to the Fine Arts studio, and now every one about there is more or less chesty because of this flattery.

Ezra Meeker, who got into the habit prairie-schoonering to California in '49, and is still afflicted, although eighty-five years of ago, paid our town and U City a visit last week while on his way east in his "schoonermobile." Ezra was given the key to U City by Harry Davis, the G. M., and before he left he confided to the girls he hadn't had so much fun in years. Ez said he'd shave off his white whiskers to come out and play juvenile lead if they wanted one.

Fred Kelsey, Harry Carey, Harry Gant and all the buckeroos of this western Universal company, started the New Year by trimming the high cost of living through the medium of a chuck wagon dinner, such as the boys on the range get each day. The menu included porterhouse steaks, beans, boiled spuds, Gant made biscuits, coffee and that forty cent a pound delicacy, prunes. A Dutch oven was used by Chef de Gant, and the dinner was served similar to the one he hashed up for Theodore Roosevelt and six hundred others at Denver several years ago. The boys had several guests for dinner, and afterwards cut up with the lariat and a few muley steers.

U leading men and juveniles passed into the discard for one day this week when the film town was invaded by members of the Pennsylvania and Oregon football teams.

Charles Swickard, director, and Jack Cunningham, scenario writer, have recently been discovered as musicians and both scrape the cello.

A man who is looking for trouble was found in the person of O. L. Sellers, Universal manager of production. He has had signs bearing "tell your troubles to the production office" put all over the big lot so that he can keep in tune with the knockers.

Al Holubar claims the dove should not be the symbol of peace. He petted, and coaxed—yes, he cursed—one the other day when he needed two feet showing it flying away, and exposed four hundred.

Bright and fair all week.

Francelia Billington's Siberian wolfhound has the rheumatiz, and the American leading woman has been woefully wasting her income in telephoning from Santa Barbara to a Los Angeles veterinary.

Al Santell, who writes scenarios and directs at the American, has been made a member of the Temple Club of the inmates of the Los Angeles County jail. Charter members of the organization are Matthew Schmidt and David Caplin, who recently were found guilty of dynamiting charges. Al as at twhe jail getting atmosphere, and the prisoners, thinking he was one of them, honored him by membership.

The business of the Consolidated Tonsorial Crepe Hair Corporation has suffered a setback. Lester Cuneo has gone in for realism and grown his own beard. He feared the right and left punches H. Lockwood is to give him in an early fight would be of more power than the resistance spirit gun would stand. He did not want to lose his beard during the big fight soon to be fought for "The Promise," and therefore gave our new industry a solar plexus punch. Lester loves his art. White hair is plentiful for Tom Guise (not named after Tom Ince, though he works for him) sacrificed his Robinson Crusoe curls so he could wear brass buttons and be a French commander.

William Fox is soon to pay a visit to our town.

Jess Robbins returned to the greatest film producing centre last week with four Bell and Howell gats and an accumulation of comedy ideas and the necessaries for making them.

W. Shakespeare unconsciously contributed to the Lehrman Fox comedy scenario. The first subtitle of this three-reel super-feature is "Hark! Hark! the Lark! etc."

Theodore Roberts walked into the publicity office at the Lasky studio last week and there learned from the press clipping file that he was in Washington, D. C., working night and day so that he could finish scenes for "The American Consul" and return to Los Angeles in time to see "Joan the Woman." Making this discovery, Mr. Roberts immediately sought his dressing room and donned a tile.

Hula hula dancers wearing grass skirts, goose flesh and Hawaiian smiles, zephyred before the Lasky camera and the whispering voice of George Melford for scenes in an early Lasky release which will star Fannie Ward.

Dorothy Phillips Creating Real Atmosphere from Top of Piano in Universal's "The Wrong Side of Paradise"

"THE Gallant Ghost Hounds" being filmed by the Ham Comedy Company, caused a loss to the Kalem Company when a cottage near Kalabasa, California, was set on fire by the flares used for night photography. The plot provides that Ham and Bud, to escape a jail sentence, live in a supposed haunted house which has slippery-day stairs and other trick equipment. They not only win their freedom, but aid the law in bringing about the arrest of a band of counterfeiters.

KENNETH D. HARLAN, who has been engaged to play juvenile leads in Fine Arts Productions opposite Bessie Love, Seena Owen or Colleen Moore, is expected to arrive at the Fine Arts studio within the next few days. Harlan is a former Biograph Company player and worked under the direction of Mr. Griffith. In recent years, however, he has been on the legitimate stage, and has just closed a very successful season with Gertrude Hoffman in "Sumurun."

It also has become known that Seena Owen is to return to Fine Arts productions after an absence of several months. A special story is now being written by Roy Somerville which will star the beautiful young woman who appeared as Princess Atterea in the Babylon period scenes of Mr. Griffith's "Intolerance."

EXHIBITORS may expect some very unusual settings in the later releases of the Francis Ford-Grace Cunard serial, "The Purple Mask." They are of the futurist design, and will be used in the twelfth and later episodes.

Bell and Howell cameras are shortly to be used exclusively at Universal City. Recently an order for thirty was placed, and this number being found insufficient, additional ten are shortly expected by John M. Nicholaus, superintendent of photography, and Edward Ullman, chief cameraman. On receipt of these, all other cameras at the plant will be disposed of.

This week will see the filming of the last scenes and subtitles for the Signal serial, "A Lass of the Lumberlands." Then, after a week's vacation for all members of the organization, the production of another serial of a railroad mystery type will be commenced.

THE logging camp set which has occupied a greater portion of the Signal studio grounds for the past twelve weeks, has been torn down to make room for the settings for the next Helen Holmes serial.

Director General Cecil B. De Mille, of Lasky Company; Jeanie MacPherson, author of "Joan the Woman"; Alvin Wyckoff, director of photography, and Howard Ewing, electrical engineer, returned during the past week from attending the New York premiere of Mr. De Mille's production, and will personally aid in the presentation of the film at the Majestic Theatre, Los Angeles, and at the San Francisco opening. Mr. De Mille was accompanied by Samuel Claggett, his former manager when he was producing for the spoken drama. Mr. Claggett will spend a brief vacation at the Lasky studio.

MAX FISCHER, violinist, who has become well known because of his directorship of music at Sunset Inn, has been engaged by the Jesse L. Lasky Company to play the musical accompaniment for the filming of scenes.

E. Mason Hopper, Morosco director, and Myrtle Stedman have been transferred to the Lasky studio for the filming of a subject, which will offer Wallace Reid and Miss Stedman as co-stars.

Louise Huff, Famous Players star, is expected on the Coast shortly to appear in a production with House Peters at the Morosco studio. Edward J. Le Saint, Lasky director, will be in charge of filming this subject.

A NEW YORK boarding-house occupies a large portion of one of the Morosco studio stages, and was built for the George Beban subject, now nearing completion. The set includes a parlor, dining-room, and several bedrooms immediately adjoining, and so constructed that interiors may be taken to show action in the several rooms at the same time.

THE most frequently mentioned news at the Ince Culver City studio is the statement that Charles Ray has been re-engaged under a two-year contract by Mr. Ince, which provides that he will be starred in Kay-Bee productions. Mr. Ray has been with the Ince organization for four years. He took up work there after four years' professional experience. His first biggest work was in the fall of 1915, when he made his debut as a Triangle leading man in "The Coward."

Since that time he has had a number of star parts in Kay-Bee productions, including "The Dividend," "Honor Thy Name," "Home," "The Honorable Algy," and "The Weaker Sex." Ray is popular with every one about the studio, and the news of his re-engagement there was greeted with scores of congratulations. The news certainly will be received in a similar manner on the part of exhibitors.

WILLIAM S. HART has the advantage of having a college trained mining man, who has had a number of years of practical experience, aiding him in the filming of mining camp scenes, in the person of Joe August, his camera operator. Hart is now engaged in filming a story by Martin Brown, adapted for the screen by Lambert Hillyer, and has Margery Wilson as his leading woman. Several mine shafts are in evidence at the by-the-ocean studio, and a mining town has been built.

Director Charles Miller has Dorothy Dalton as his star for a photoplay being produced from scenario by John Lynch. In this the erstwhile "Vamp" of the screen appears in the role of an English society girl, with a supporting cast which includes Jack Livingston, Jack Gilbert, Dorcas Matthews and Henry Belmar.

The atack and capture of Selkirk Hall by John Paul Jones during the Revolutionary War forms an important part in the plot of the Ince Kay-Bee subject being filmed under the direction of Raymond B. West. For these scenes the interior of the building, located on the Isle of St. Mary, off the coast of Scotland was needed, and it required but a half-day's time on the part of Art Director Robert Brunton to prepare working plans and put the historical setting into the making. It was completed in short order, and from old drawing is found to be correct as to detail. Arthur Maude, as Darby O'Donovan, lieutenant of the frigate Ranger, plays in most of the scenes in which the setting is used.

A CASTLE in the Balkans is the name of another setting erected for use this week. It is being used by Walter Edwards who is engaged in filming a semi-war and semi-adventure story, centered about the correspondent of a London newspaper, which role is played by William Desmond.

Emphatic denial that Louise Glaum is to leave the Thomas H. Ince organization was sent out from the studio last week following a published report in several periodicals. It is stated that she has a long term contract with Mr. Ince. Miss Glaum's rise has been extremely rapid. She is known as one of the foremost portrayers of vampire types. At the present time she is playing the role of a daring French woman who seeks adventure along the battle-front of France. Director Reginald Barker is this week filming the trench warfare scenes for this picture at the Inceville plant. Supporting Miss Glaum are Charles Gunn, Roy Laidlaw, Milton Ross, J. P. Lockney, Will Bray, Thomas Guise and Lydia Knott.

Edward Ullmann, Chief of the Sixty Cameramen at Universal City

AL. E. CHRISTIE has titled the Hindoo Swami story "Sauce for the Gander" and completed the production work. Betty Compson impersonates the the young wife who becomes infatuated with the Hindoo, and Neal Burns, the husband finding the cult obnoxious, appoints himself high gazaboo of a little religion of his own, in which a bevy of chorus girls aid to make it worth while. Fortunately there is a happy ending made possible by the Swami being found to be a fraud. Eddie Barry appears as the oriental and has floated about the studio for the past two weeks in a flowing robe of an East Indian atmosphere.

Exteriors for the next Christie comedy were secured during the holiday auto races in Los Angeles. Mr. Christie had in mind the turning over of a racing auto as the thrill for the subject, and fortunately his cameraman happened to be stationed at the Ascot speedway cranking away when Wilbur D'Alene's car, number thirteen, turned completely over immediately in front of the lens. The fortunate location of the cameraman does away with the making of "prop" wreck scenes. Harry Ham, former professional auto racer, now leading man for the Christie company, with Betty Compson, is featured in this picture, as yet unnamed.

A NEW Vitagraph multiple reel production was started this week by Director William Wolbert, who will have Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno as stars in an adaptation from the Hamlin Garland Indian story, "The Captain of the Gray Horse Troop." Miss Storey will appear in most of the scenes in smart frocks, for she takes the role of the daughter of a U. S. senator. Mr. Wolbert has the scenario ready for production, and promises a film in which the American Indian is portrayed as a human being, he having gone to a great deal of trouble in research work to secure the needed facts.

The title for the next William Russell American subject has been changed from "A Son of Battle," to "My Fighting Gentleman." This picture is nearing completion under the direction of Edward Sloman, and will offer Francelia Billington in the leading feminine role opposite Mr. Russell. Harry Edmundson, a member of the cast, last week accidentally fell in a scene just as Mr. Russell fired a blank revolver shot. The paper wad inflicted a painful wound, and the actor was burned by the powder.

The coming Mary Miles Minter production is "The Gentle Intruder" which James Kirkwood is now directing. Miss Minter appears as a girl who has been defrauded of an inheritance by her uncle's lawyer. The girl later becomes the companion for an elderly woman in the lawyer's home, and by close association brings the social-climbing members of the family to realize the fraud. George Fisher is playing the juvenile lead opposite Miss Minter, the role being one of a good-hearted son of a socially ambitious family.

DIRECTOR EDWARD SLOMAN recently filmed a story adapted from one written by a convict of the Sing Sing prison with William Russell as star. As a Christmas gift the players forwarded the author a complete set of stills taken during production. The play is titled "The Twinkler" and is of an underworld type.

President S. S. Hutchinson is expected to reach the coast about the middle of the month, when plans will be ecompleted for materially increasing the producing staff. There will be at least three more producing companies added.

The Fox studio technical department has no respect for geographical facts, as is shown in the building of sets for the William Farnum production Frank Lloyd is now filming. London and Paris are built together. That is, one may stand at a corner of the mammoth setting with one foot in London, and the other in Paris. The Paris street is perhaps the longest, and ends at the Bastile which is doomed to be captured on Friday of this week. The other street leads to "the old Bailey," a prison which served in the time of the story.

A SHORT distance from this is Tellson's bank, St. Cuthbert's Lodge, and The Nag's Head. In the settings for the two streets, there are more than sixty buildings, both sides of the thoroughfare being utilized. The streets are paved with cobblestones, and everything has been added that could be found in drawings of the period. George Grenier, head of the technical department, is responsible for this classic, and has received compliments from many of the professionals whose globe-trotting took them to the scenes rebuilt for the photoplay. All of this was built for exclusive use in the filming of "The Tale of Two Cities."

Director William D. Taylor with Dustin Farnum, Winifred Kingston, Jode Mullally, Frank Lanning, and others of the Fox organization are on a trip to El Portal near the Yosemite Valley where exteriors for the first Dustin Farnum picture are being shot. They will be absent from the studio more than a week. Others in the cast for this production are William Conklin, Edward Alexander, Rex Downs, and others.

HANK MANN is at work on the first Fox comedy to be made under his direction. Edith Hoskins, who has appeared in a number of Fox comedies, has been selected to play lead opposite the comedian-director. She formerly played with the Lubin Company, and since has been in vaudeville and musical comedy. George Fields, for more than four years, heavy for the American, Lee Morris, the human telephone pole, Charles Mack and Sid Degray make up the cast.

The Keystone Cops' Band Helping Douglas Fairbanks Out of Town

OTIS TURNER, pioneer director, can now boast of a train robbery. He leased the Santa Fe Overland Express and directed the filming of the hold-up near Inglewood last Saturday night. George Walsh and the players worked until five o'clock in the morning to get the required scenes.

The first Lehrman-made Fox comedy has been given the final title "The House of Terrible Scandals," and is now on the way to New York for release January 22. The studio employes laugh every time they think of it, for it offers Billie Ritchie as the groom, Henry Lehrman the best man, Gertrude Selby the bride, and Dot Farley the mistress of ceremonies. A greater portion of the film shows the nightmares of the wedding party following a pre-nuptial celebration. The Lehrman Company is now organizing two producing units. One will be under the direction of Mr. Lehrman himself, and the other will have David Kirkland as director.

William Fox has made overtures to Henry Lehrman to take charge of the production of all Fox comedies, and the head of the Fox corporation is now on his way to the coast to personally take up this matter with Mr. Lehrman.

THE latest invader of the production end of the picture game is Maude Lillian Berri, the former comic opera star, who since her retirement from the stage has formed her own company and is now producing features in California. Her first production "Glory" in which Juanita Hansen and Kolb and Dill are featured will be released by the Unity Sales Corporation, January 15.

Miss Berri does not claim that her pictures are going to be the best in the land, but she does claim that in all her productions she will insist upon the plays being clean and wholesome, which is an excellent foundation to start on.

ADVANCE OFFERINGS OF THE PROGRAMS

"Heart Strings" Is Red Feather for 22nd

Other Releases from Universal Include "A Macaroni Sleuth," "Souls United," and "The Honeymoon Surprise"

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company offers a varied and interesting program of releases for the week of January 22.

The Red Feather five-act feature drama, "Heart Strings," heads the list. The story was written by E. M. Ingleton, scenarioized by Fred Myton, and produced under the direction of Allen Holubar. Allen Holubar, Maude George and Francelia Billington have the leading roles, and in the supporting cast are: Paul Byron, Irene Hunt, Virginia Corbin, Mrs. Witting and Charles Cummings.

"Heart Strings" will be released Monday, January 22, on which date will also appear the Nestor comedy, "A Macaroni Sleuth," written by Bess Meredyth, and produced by L. W. Chaudet, with Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts as the principal funmakers.

"Souls United," a three-act drama of South Africa, featuring Violet Mersereau, is the leading offering on Tuesday, January 23. This feature will appear under the Gold Seal brand. In the support of Miss Mersereau are: Harry Benham, Fred Hearn and others. The Victor comedy, "The Honeymoon Surprise," written and produced by Capt. Leslie T. Peacocke, with Fred Church, Eileen Sedgwick and Calrie Du Brey is the other Tuesday release.

The Universal Animated Weekly, No. 56, with the latest pictorial happenings in all parts of the country, makes its regular appearance on Wednesday, January 24. On the same day will be released the L-Ko two-act comedy, "The Battle of Let's Go," in which Dan Russell is guaranteed to cure the worst case of blues on record. This is an exceedingly funny L-Ko. The other release of this date is the Big U one-act Indian drama, "The Red Goddess," with Mona Darkfeather in the principal role.

"A Wife's Folly," a two-act drama under the Big U brand will be released Thursday, January 25. This is a story of the sea written by James R. Garey and produced by Ben Wilson, who also plays the leading role opposite Edna Hunter. In the cast are: Violet Axtell, Thomas Lehman, Jeanette Rutland and Charles Ogle. "Black Evidence," an Imp drama, written and produced by John McDermott, with Lois Wilson and Kingsley Benedict in the leading roles, and the Victor comedy, "The Black Nine," featuring Billy Mason, are other releases of this date.

On Friday, January 26, the two-act Imp drama, "The Fugitive," will be released. This is a photoplay of the underworld from the pen of E. Magnus Ingleton, and was directed by Fred A. Kelsey. Louise Lovely heads a well-balanced cast, which includes Roy Stewart, Harry Carter, T. D. Crittenden and Vesta Pegg. Pat Rooney will appear in the Victor comedy, "Held by the Enemy," on the same day.

Four reels will be released Saturday, January 27. The leading release will be "The Daring Chance," a two-act Bison drama of the West written by Harvey Gates and produced by William V. Mong. Nellie Allen and William V. Mong head the cast. The Joker comedy, "Love Me, Love My Biscuits," featuring Gale Henry and William Franey, and the Laemmle drama, "The Blood-Stained Hand," with Matt Moore and Jane Gail are the other releases.

The Big U two-act animal drama, "A Jungle Tragedy," featuring Marie Walcamp, is the leading release of Sunday, January 28. Other releases of the date are the Rex drama, "The Old Toymaker," with Allen Holubar and Leah Baird, and the Powers' split-reel, "Boomer Bill's Awakening," a comedy cartoon and a Dr. Dorsey educational.

The fifth episode of the Grace Cunard and Francis Ford serial, "The Purple Mask," entitled "Ablaze in Mid-Air," will be released during the week.

"Jinks" Series to March 12

The "Captain Jinks" series of Greater Vitagraph comedies, starring Frank Daniels, is definitely assured at least until March 12, through Vitagraph V-L-S-E exchanges. The following are the titles from February 5 to March 12:

February 5, "Captain Jinks' Wife's Husband"; February 12, "Captain Jinks' Love Letters"; February 19, "Captain Jinks' Cure"; February 26, "Captain Jinks' Explosive Temper"; March 5, "Captain Jinks' Kids"; and March 12, "Captain Jinks' Alibi."

"V" Makes Changes in Release Dates

There has been a slight change in the order of Blue Ribbon releases in the Vitagraph V-L-S-E program for late January and early February. These changes are necessitated by the failure of the posters on "The Glory of Yolanda" to reach that standard of quality demanded by Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Vitagraph V-L-S-E, on all paper issued by that company.

The picture will not be released until January 29. "Blind Justice" has been substituted for "The Glory of Yolanda" on January 15.

The place in the Blue Ribbon program thus made vacant by moving "Blind Justice" up a week has been filled by putting in "Her Right to Live." It will be released on January 22.

"Money Magic," starring Edith Storey and Antonio Moreno in the first of their Western pictures, is now scheduled for release as a Blue Ribbon feature on February 5.

"Snow White" Is Planned for Bluebird

Having successfully handled "The Eagle's Wings" as a feature apart from its regular program, General Manager M. H. Hoffman has arranged to present a three-reel version of "Snow White" with Elsie Albert as the heroine. Bluebird has purchased the feature from Universal, to supply a demand that exists for that style of picture.

Bluebird has previously announced that its business policy would not of necessity confine its distributions strictly to the program, and "The Eagle's Wings" and "Snow White" are subjects that come under Bluebird's system of expansion. Some time ago the announcement was made that Bluebird might possibly distribute a serial, and that educationals or any other type of subject that met Bluebird requirements (as the prime essential) might be circulated among exhibitors independent of the program.

Canadian Cities Shown by Holmes

One of the most interesting of the trips that Burton Holmes has conducted in the land of Evangeline, Canada, is that where he takes his fellow travelers to Ottawa and Toronto. This is the 51st of the series of "weekly trips" that Mr. Holmes has been conducting for Paramount theatregoers around the world. Niagara Falls are also shown in this number.

"Great Secret" Postponed

The release date of the first chapter of "The Great Secret" has been postponed to January 8. The succeeding chapters will appear weekly thereafter.

Interesting Scenes Showing Antonio Moreno, Peggy Hyland and Vitagraph Children in "Her Right to Live," Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Release

Release Dates of "Philippa" in East and West

"The Girl Philippa," Vitagraph, will be released in the East on January 21 and in the West on January 28.

The cities which will release this eight-reel picture, in which Anita Stewart is presented on January 21 are: New York, Atlanta, Boston, Washington, Philadelphia, Syracuse, Toronto, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, Kansas City, Omaha and Pittsburgh.

"The Girl Philippa" will be released on January 28 in the following western Vitagraph V-L-S-E. branches: Dallas, Denver, Los Angeles, Minneapolis, San Francisco and Seattle.

Samuel L. Rothapfel, managing director of the Rialto, New York, wrote on January 3, four days after "The Girl Philippa" opened its run, to Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Vitagraph V-L-S-E., as follows:

"Our financial statement for yesterday (the day after New Year's) showed receipts larger by several hundred dollars than those of Election Day, which was the best previous business on our books up to that time.

"We are opening the doors here at 10 o'clock every morning in order to accommodate the crowds, and from present indications the week's total business should establish a new record in returns from the presentation of any motion picture."

"Hungry Heart" in February

Alice Brady, in "A Hungry Heart," will be the first Brady-made release from the World Film Corporation during the month of February. This play, derived from the French stage, was directed by Emile Chautard, and the production is said to be unusually elaborate. Miss Brady's costumes include a number of the latest creations of Lucile, Ltd., and the role she plays is described as exceptionally affecting.

"Web of Desire" from World

Ethel Clayton's next release by the World-Brady interests is called "The Web of Desire," with Rockliffe Fellowes featured. Others in the cast are: John Hines, Edward Kimball, Richard Turner, William Williams and little Madge Evans.

Paramount Offers Three Stars Week of 22nd

Marie Doro Will Appear in "Lost and Won" and Anita King and Wallace Reid in "Golden Fetter"

MARIE DORO in the Lasky production of "Lost and Won," and Wallace Reid and Anita King in the Lasky production of "The Golden Fetter," will be the two big features on the Paramount Program for the week of January 22. Surrounding the program, will be three short reel features; the 50th edition of the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen; the 51st of the series of "weekly trips around the world," personally conducted by Burton Holmes in which he takes the travelers to Ottawa and Toronto; and a Black Diamond comedy, entitled "He Did It Himself."

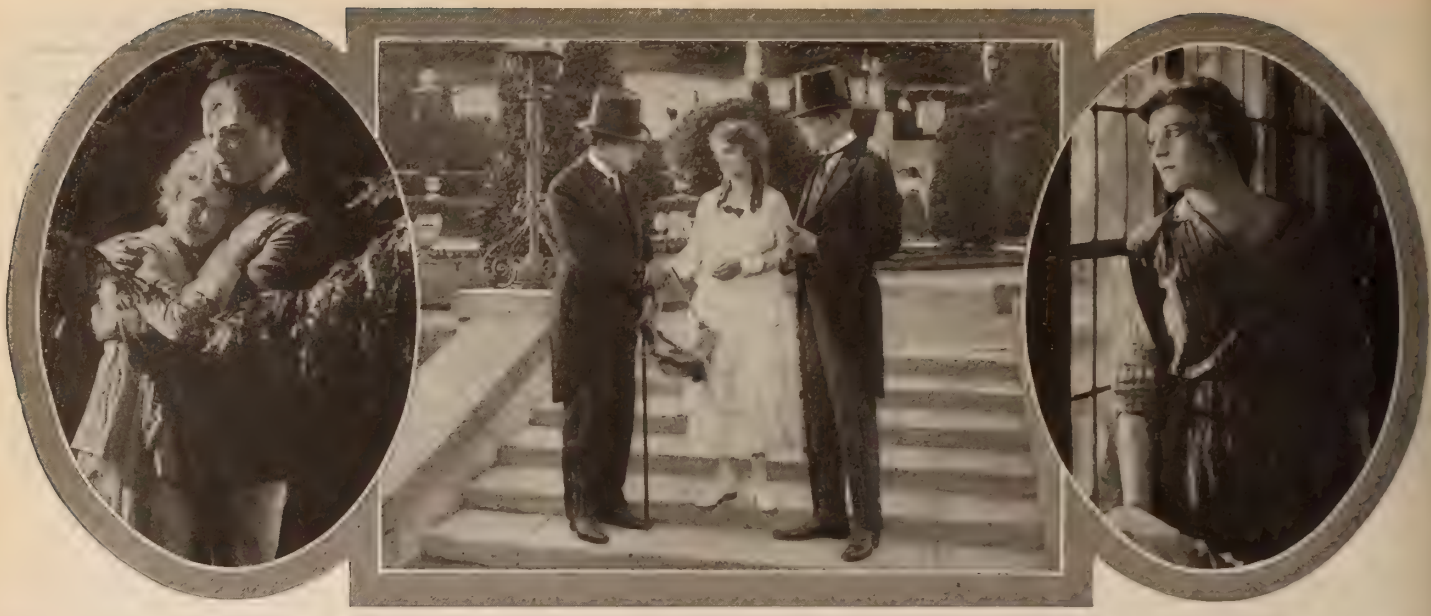
Marie Doro's appearance this week is the first since her success in the screen production of Dickens' "Oliver Twist." "Lost and Won" was written specially for Miss Doro by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf, two of the most successful playwrights and authors in the country. Playing opposite her in this picture, is Elliott Dexter, her husband, it being the first time they have co-starred since their Famous Players adaptation of "Diplomacy."

In the production, Miss Doro plays the role of a newsie, one of the most romantic little figures in city life. The story tells of how a little news-girl, who won a bet, is made the ward of a wealthy stock broker, who wagers he can make a news-girl over into a society belle within the year. The girl becomes a reporter on the paper, editions of which she formerly sold. When her benefactor is about to win the wager, he loses his money and is arrested for theft, and the former news-girl and reporter, by her cleverness, discovers the identity of the real thief and succeeds in freeing the man she loves, and who has learned to love her.

In the cast supporting Miss Doro and Mr. Dexter, are Carl Stockdale, May Kelso, Robert Gray, C. H. Geldert, Sydney Dean and a number of other well-known Lasky players.

"The Golden Fetter" is from the pen of Charles Kenney Jackson, and is based on the author's short story, which appeared in Collier's some years ago.

This will be Wallace Reid's first appearance on the screen since his success in Cecil B. De Mille's spectacle "Joan the Woman."



The story deals with a young New England school teacher who has been cheated into purchasing stock in a mine in Alaska, and who, to prove to her own satisfaction that she has not been swindled, goes to see the "wonderful mine" and finds that it is nothing but a barren hill. She runs into a gang of unscrupulous miners and opens a school, the attendance of which consists of but one person with whom she soon falls in love.

The 50th edition of the Paramount Pictographs, the magazine-on-the-screen, contains four subjects. The leading subject is that of the dangerous and thrilling winter sport of ice-boating which is enjoying a tremendous vogue throughout the Northern part of the country. The pictures show conclusively, that the ice boat can sail faster than the wind, some boats gaining a momentum of over one hundred miles an hour.

In this edition also there is shown how industrial diamonds, "carborundum," are made, this material being second in hardness only to the diamond, and which is composed of nothing less than sand, salt and sawdust. Another very interesting subject in this release, is that of the remarkable advance that has been made in landscape gardening by experts, in their successful transplantation of big trees, some of which have already attained an age greater than one hundred years. A unique piece of comedy plastique, is also contributed in this edition by Ashley Miller, in which he shows how the high cost of living has been brought about.

"White Raven" at Rialto

Ethel Barrymore's Metro-Rolfe production, "The White Raven," will be the feature attraction at the Rialto theatre, New York, for the week beginning January 14. This is her first film since announcing her decision to play solely on the screen.

Will See Three Attractive Bluebird Stars

Mary MacLaren, Ruth Stonehouse and Violet Mersereau Will Be Seen in Forthcoming Releases

THREE of Bluebird's most attractive stars—Mary MacLaren, Ruth Stonehouse and Violet Mersereau—are scheduled for appearances in forthcoming releases. There will be a new leading man advertised in large type, and Franklyn Farnum will make another Bluebird appearance in light comedy. With the February issues, Bluebird will be well away upon its second year, promising to maintain the splendid average that has marked these releases for some time past.

Mary MacLaren is returning to the Bluebird program in another Lois Weber production—"The Mysterious Mrs. M.," to be released on February 5. Harrison Ford will be her leading man, and Evelyn Selbie appearing in the title role; Willis Marks, Frank Brownlee, Charles Mailes and Bertram Grassby will be in the supporting company.

Mary MacLaren has been out of Bluebirds since October 2, when she appeared in "Wanted—A Home." Her return was considerably delayed by the necessity of making over again most of the scenes in "The Mysterious Mrs. M.," when J. Warren Kerrigan left Bluebird's employ, and Harrison Ford was substituted in the male lead.

"The Reward of the Faithless" will be the February 12 attraction—a Rex Ingram production made along the attractive lines that marked "Black Orchids," "The Chalice of Sorrow" and other recent Ingrams in the Bluebird series. Wedgewood Nowell gets his name in big type for the first time in this feature, with Betty Schade and Claire Du Bray sharing honors. Mr. Nowell has been leading man in all of Mr. Ingram's Bluebirds and has won his spurs as a featured actor. Magnus Ingleton's story has been used as the basis of the play.

Franklyn Farnum comes back as a Bluebird star, February 19, in "The Man Who Took a Chance," with Agnes Vernon again appearing as his leading lady. In his current Bluebird, "The Devil's Pay Day, released on January 29, Mr. Farnum plays an intensely dramatic role but in "The Man Who Took a Chance" he has a light comedy part. Lloyd Whitlock, Arthur Hoyt, Charles Perley, Mark Fenton and Countess Du Cello will be in the support.

Ruth Stonehouse will be the star of "The Saintly Sinner," released on February 26, with Jack Mulhall as her leading man. L. H. Hutton's story provided the basis for the Eugene Lewis scenario and Raymond Wells directed the production. This is a sensational feature to give diversity to the program. Henry Devries, Raymond Whittaker, Frederick Montague, Alida Hayman, Dorothy Drake and Adele Farrington will be members of the large supporting company.

On March 6 Violet Mersereau will make her second appearance in an Edwin Stevens production, "The Boy Girl," by John C. Brownell. In this piece Miss Mersereau plays the role of a girl who was raised as a boy, and it is not until the last half of the picture that she dons skirts and becomes her own pretty self. "The Honor of Mary Blake," lately presented by Miss Mersereau in Bluebirds, was also directed by Mr. Stevens.

Ray Signs Two-Year Contract with Ince

Triangle patrons will be glad to learn that Charles Ray has just signed a new contract with Thomas H. Ince to appear in Kay Bee features for the next two years. Ray is one of the very few film favorites who has acted under the same management since his entry into the pictures. It was in December, 1912, that he made his first appearance at the Inceville studios in a Civil War drama entitled, "The Favorite Son."

"Honeyless Honeymoon" on 29th

A single-reel Victor Moore comedy, entitled "The Honeyless Honeymoon," will be released by Paramount on January 29.

The story tells how Victor Moore starts off as a young jewelry salesman, who has just married and is leaving on a Clyde steamer on his honeymoon. Bill Manton and Bert Scott, two friends of his, are practical jokers and determine to play a joke on him. They read in the paper that Mrs. Holstein of West Seventy-second street has been robbed of $75,000 worth of jewelry, and that a former maid and butler are suspected. They write a note to the chief of detectives and inform him that the maid and butler are making a getaway on the Clyde line steamer sailing that day, posing as a young married couple. They send the letter chuckling at the prospect of Vic's coming troubles.

By a singular coincidence the real crooks wanted for the robbery are employed on this steamer as stewardess and steward.

Well-Known Stars in "Infidelity"

Anna Q. Nilsson, who plays the leading female part, is known to the public through her work in numerous other photo dramas. She was recently featured in Pathe's serial "Who Pays?" and received a great deal of publicity through the national campaign that was carried on to exploit that production. Eugene Strong, Miss Nilsson's co-star, is also well known throughout the country as the leading man in many productions. Mr. Miller is a widely known director and has written and produced many successful features. "Infidelity?" is the first production made by Erbograph since the release of "The Crimson Stain Mystery."

Brockwell Picture on the 29th

A change in William Fox's releases results in the substitution of Gladys Brockwell's recently completed film for the Suratt picture scheduled for January 29.

Jack Standing is chief in support of Miss Brockwell.

Tense Situations in Big Clune Production "The Eyes of the World"

Hughie Mack Comedies, Made in West, Scheduled Far Ahead

The Hughie Mack comedies, distributed through the Vitagraph V-L-S-E exchanges, will hereafter be made at Vitagraph's western studios. Hughie Mack's company left Flatbush for Los Angeles last Sunday and picture-making will begin immediately upon their arrival, where preparations have been completed for this work in advance of their coming.

The "Big V" comedies, from February 5 to April 9, are as follows: February 5, "Rips and Rushes"; February 12, "He Never Touched Me"; February 19, "Cops and Cussedness"; February 26, "Dubs and Drygoods"; March 5, "Masks and Mishaps"; March 12, "Footlights and Fakers"; March 19, "Bombs and Blunders"; March 26, "Turks and Troubles"; "April 2, "Pasts and Promises"; and "Guff and Gunplay."

For the stories of many of these pictures Hughie Mack is himself largely responsible.

Seven of the Vitagraph V-L-S-E exchanges have doubled their comedy one-reel bookings with the Hughie Mack and the Frank Daniels series in the last three months, it is announced.

Warwick in "Girl's Folly" from World

The next Brady-made World picture, with Robert Warwick, is "A Girl's Folly," substituted for "A Movie Romance," and its principal male character is a well-known motion picture star.

The story is laid in the studio and "on location," and it shows pretty much everything about the manner in which a picture play is carried to completion, from the make-up of the star to the release.

It is distinctly a behind-the-scenes comedy which does not even overlook the lunch room where the movie actors take their hurried repasts between calls to the stage.

Doris Kenyon plays opposite Mr. Warwick. The authors of this comedy are Frances Marion and Maurice Tourneur.

"A Place in the Sun" Expresses World's Heart-throbs

From the pen of Charles R. Macauley, an ardent peace advocate and cartoonist on "Puck" will shortly come a drama to be entitled "A Place in the Sun," which has for its motif the rights of man, of whatever nativity, to life, liberty and the pursuit of happinees and which is said will be an exact expression of the heart-throbs of the world to-day.

Andrew Carnegie once declared that Macauley, through the medium of his cartoons had done more toward the visualization of the cause of universal peace than all other cartoonists combined, and the announcement of the near completion of the drama at this time is the result of a happy combination of circumstances in which the Yuletide season, the developments in Europe and the attention of the whole world on matters he pictorially depicts, all play a part.

Details of the presentation plans will be formally announced in a few days and his friends will not be surprised at this preliminary statement, knowing how long and how keen has been his active interest in Peace. Some surprises are promised when the details are announced soon.

"A Modern Monte Cristo" from Pathe on February 4

Vincent Serrano will be seen February 4 in the Thanhouser-Pathe Gold Rooster Play, "A Modern Monte Cristo." "A Modern Monte Cristo" was written by Lloyd Lonergan and directed by W. Eugene Moore.

Alice Brady and Alexis Kosloff, a Member of the Russian Ballet in a Scene from "The Snowbird," a Brady-Made World Release

Mr. Serrano is supported in "A Modern Monte Cristo" by Thomas A. Curran, Boyd Marshall, Gladys Dore and Helen Badgley. The story was filmed at Jacksonville, Fla., and Block Island, N. Y., with some locations near New Rochelle.

Carnahan Signs for Juvenile Picture, Edison Release

Thomas Benton Carnahan, boy actor, will be among the players who will appear in the forthcoming Edison Conquest Pictures. Carnahan, who is only thirteen years of age, will play juvenile roles and his first picture will be a dramatization of "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp," a three-reel production based on the story by Albert Stearns. This picture is completed. He plays the part of Chris, a modern boy who discovers the lamp that was used so effectively by Aladdin in old Arabia.

Young Carnahan appeared in the role of Grumpy, a part made famous by Cyril Maude, in a juvenile performance of the English comedy of the same name.

At the age of four years he was a member of the Poli Stock Company of Waterbury, Conn., playing child parts and appearing in singing and dancing specialties between acts in which he did not have a part. A year later he went on tour with Mary Emerson.

HOW PICTURES ARE BOOKING

Latest Pickford in 100 First-Run Houses

Artcraft Receives Many Requests for "Pride of the Clan" Bookings

FOLLOWING the trade showings given the second Mary Pickford-Artcraft release, "The Pride of the Clan" in New York and other cities throughout the country, hundreds of telegrams and letters of congratulations and requests for bookings have been received at the Artcraft headquarters.

When the initial Pickford-Artcraft picture, "Less Than the Dust" was released it appeared in eighty-one first run theatres throughout the country for runs of from one to three weeks. Last week Artcraft announced that eight days before release date, one hundred bookings for first run showings of the second Pickford picture had been closed. According to an official of the company it is readily felt by exhibitors and others who have seen advance prints of "The Pride of the Clan" that this subject not only offers the greatest work of the famous star but is in every respect the most artistic vehicle ever afforded her. Maurice Tourneur staged it.

Communications requesting bookings are not confined to exhibitors of the large cities and many letters are being received from small town theatres. The merit of Miss Pickford's second Artcraft offering as indicated by G. W. McLaughlin, manager of the Lyric theatre, Rice Lake, Wis., is a sample of the endorsements received in connection with this release. Mr. McLaughlin writes: "If not too late, I wish to withdraw my cancellation notice submitted under date of November 23, or you can make out a new set of contracts and I will be glad to sign it. Incidentally I wish to say that if any screen star can beat Little Mary for real work before the camera as she appears in her second picture I'd gladly sign a life time contract for their productions. 'The Pride of the Clan' is a wonderful picture and would be a great drawing card even without Miss Pickford featured."

First Run for Ivans in New England

F. J. Willis, manager of the Ivan Film exchange, 23 Piedmont street, Boston, Mass., the distributor of Ivan photoplays in the New England States, has completed arrangements for the first run of Ivan plays in the leading theatres of the largest cities. Every Ivan film secures a first run of not less than one week in Boston at the Modern theatre, and the largest theatres of Providence, New Haven, Portland, Manchester, Springfield and Worcester.

B. J. Abrams Reports Demand for "Shorts"

B. J. Abrams, special representative of the Melies Manufacturing Company, is back in New York, after an eleven months' trip in the interest of the Knickerbocker Star features and Vim comedies.

Mr. Abrams, who had been covering the South and Middle West, reports a strong demand for the short-reel program and the shorter features.

Serials Are Popular in Michigan

Judging from the bookings reported by Michigan exchanges handling serials, this form of pictures is coming back strong in Michigan. There are many theatres booking serials which formerly would not even consider them; other houses are showing them two and three nights a week, and one theatre, the Ferry Park, is experimenting with two serials every night in the week. Large and small exhibitors seem to want them, and there isn't a single serial that has not plenty of bookings.

"Eagle's Wing" Draws 35,000 in Cleveland

Bluebird's industrial preparedness feature, "The Eagle's Wings," was shown at B. F. Keith's Hippodrome, Cleveland, O., during the recent all-American vaudeville week at that theatre—the first time a five-reel picture has been placed in a B. F. Keith theatre during the regular season. Manager John F. Royal, of the Hippodrome, wrote a letter commending Joseph B. Diener, Bluebird's Cleveland branch manager.

Mary Pickford Inspecting the Camera

"20,000 Leagues Under the Sea" Plays to $21,379

An official of the Universal reports a great demand for its feature, "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," and declares this demand evidences the public's desire for a film production that presents a distinct novelty and stimulates the imagination by a vivid story of adventure. The management further reports the Broadway theatre, New York, sold out at every performance, and during the first two weeks no less than 41,986 persons paid admission, the gross receipts for this period being $21,379.

"The longer the picture runs, the greater seems to be the interest displayed, and in Chicago at the Studebaker theatre and at the new Broadway theatre in Portland, Ore., the same conditions obtain, and the picture bids fair to make history in film productions," continued this official.

"Pride of the Clan" Goes Well in New England

The new Pickford film, "The Pride of the Clan," was shown to the trade a week before release at the Exeter Street theatre, Boston. This film is proving a specially good attraction around New England, because of the use of Marblehead, Mass., ledges for the backgrounds.

"Patria" is another film that is being shown at invited gatherings prior to release in New England. At the Empire theatre, Portland, Me., January 7, Manager A. L. Boucher gave 300 of Portland's elite fans a preliminary view of several of the episodes. The first instalment is to be shown at the Empire January 26-27. The audience was enthusiastic over the work of Mrs. Vernon Castle, and took a special interest in the acting of Allen Murnane, formerly a local stock favorite.

Shifts in Bookings at Boston Theatres

As a result of shifts in bookings, and new terms of release, the Globe, Boston, has for the time dropped its first run policy, followed in the case of "Less Than the Dust," "War Brides," "War's Women" and "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," and is giving an early Pickford, "Heart's Adrift," and other attractions.

The Modern, Boston, which formerly ran the first Fox releases, presented "The Pride of the Clan" for the first run, and the new Farnum film went on at the Boston.

Will Rebook "Liberty"

R. F. Barrett, manager of the Idle Hour theatre at Springfield, Mo., has just completed running the serial "Liberty," and has been showing it to such large crowds that he has booked it for an immediate return date.

Charles Chaplin Draws 'Em to Box Office

That Charles Chaplin is proving fully worth his fabulous contract with Mutual as being proved in every nook and corner of the country day by day, the company reports. Not only have the box office receipts pointed straight at financial success from the very start but the critics of the daily press, ordinarily a hard lot when it comes to judging pictures, have heaped praise on the comedian's derbied head with each successive picture.

With respect to his latest comedy, "The Rink," such well-known critics as Guy Price of The Los Angeles Herold, Heywood Broun of The New York Tribune, Mae Tinee of The Chicago Tribune, W. K. Hollander of The Chicago Daily News, John DeKoven of The Cleveland Leader and Melvin Winstock in The Seattle Spectator, rose to superlatives and unusually enthusiastic phrases in its description.

But while his latest Mutual is absorbing the greater part of the Chaplin limelight at the present time, all six of the previous releases since the signing of the contract, namely "The Floor Walker," "The Fireman," "The Vagabond," "One A. M.," "The Count" and "Behind the Screen" have been doing record-breaking business and exciting favorable comment whether they are shown for the first time or for repeat exhibitions.

Comments of praise on these releases have been manifold. "The Pawnshop" is described as being "a riot" and containing "one continuous roar." "Behind the Screen" is called the best studio burlesque ever produced. Almost everyone of them has been heralded as "the best yet," while the reviewers poke fun at themselves with every new release for calling the last one the best. Most of the critics from the east coast to the west and from Canada to Mexico unite, it is said, in the declaration that "Today one hundred million people will agree that Charlie Chaplin as he appears in the Mutuals is the greatest of laugh-makers."

Max Linder and a Beauty Not Named on the Still in a Scene from the Frenchman's First Essanay Comedy

Vitagraph's Secret Kingdom Has Plenty of Punch

Pantages Books "Kingdom" for First Run

Vitagraph Serial Will Be Shown a Week in Principal West Coast Cities

PANTAGES' Circuit of theatres, corresponding in the West to the Marcus Loew chain of theatres in the East, has booked "The Secret Kingdom," Greater Vitagraph's new fifteen-episode adventure serial in which Charles Richman and Dorothy Kelly are starred, in all the houses in the Pantages' group as a first-run feature.

"The Secret Kingdom" will be shown for a full week for each episode in the Pantages' theatres in San Francisco, Seattle, Spokane, Tacoma, Portland, Salt Lake City, Oakland, and Los Angeles.

Marcus Loew booked "The Secret Kingdom" in all his twenty-four theatres after he himself had seen it on the screen. Mr. Pantages also examined "The Secret Kingdom" personally and, after seeing the first four episodes, closed with G. A. Faris, branch manager of Vitagraph V-L-S-E Exchange in Seattle.

Mr. Faris reports to Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Vitagraph V-L-S-E, that he has secured the highest rental price ever paid in the West for a photoplay serial.

The booking of "The Secret Kingdom" by the Pantages Circuit was contemporary with Marcus Loew's contracting for this Vitagraph serial in New York.

While a telegram from Mr. Irwin was on its way to the Seattle Exchange of Vitagraph V-L-S-E, telling Mr. Faris that George Baldson, manager of the New York Exchange, had closed a big contract for "The Secret Kingdom" with the Loew houses, a message was in transit from Mr. Faris to Mr. Irwin telling the latter of the big booking taken by Pantages.

Mr. Faris, who is, perhaps, not unnaturally elated over his excellent deal, has wired further particulars to Mr. Irwin:

"Seattle, Wash., January 9.

"Walter W. Irwin, General Manager,
Vitagraph V-L-S-E, Inc.,
1600 Broadway, New York.

"Pantages book 'The Secret Kingdom' after open-screen examination in competition with all other serials now on the market, says: 'Secret Kingdom' is biggest money getter ever seen in serials. Playing it strong with big local advertising campaigns. Each episode runs full week at all Pantages' houses.

"(Signed) G. A. FARIS."

In reply to this telegram, Mr. Irwin wired Mr. Faris:

"You and George Balsdon have closed biggest individual contracts so far on 'Secret Kingdom.' Marcus Loew booking here and Pantages in West starts serial splendidly on two coasts. Central division reports equally promising returns. Congratulations."

Mr. Irwin said:

"I predict that 'The Secret Kingdom' will surpass all serial photoplay receipts to date. I firmly believe 'The Secret Kingdom' is the biggest money-making proposition ever offered to exhibitors in serial form. Mr. Naugle, our Western division manager, seems correct in saying that 'The Secret Kingdom' is better than a million-dollar serial and will probably result in the largest quarterly bonus payments ever made in the history of Vitagraph."

It may not be generally known that, under the personal supervision of Walter W. Irwin, general manager of Vitagraph V-L-S-E, a profit-sharing plan was adopted and has been carried on with great success for the last eighteen months.

"The Secret Kingdom" was released on December 25. It had been ready, of course, for much longer than that, for Albert E. Smith, president of Greater Vitagraph, under whose personal supervision "The Secret Kingdom" was produced, and Mr. Irwin saw to it that the whole serial was complete before the first episode was even sent to the exchanges.

The three Sothern pictures, "The Chattel," "An Enemy to the King" and "The Man of Mystery," also have proved popular. An exhibitor recently wrote to Mr. Irwin: "To show one of these Sothern features is to make a record-breaking bank deposit."

Marjorie Rambeau Begins Work in Her Second Mutual

Marjorie Rambeau's second Mutual production will be a picturization of "Motherhood," a play by the well-known author and playwright, Frederick Arnold Kummer. Miss Rambeau has already commenced work on this production at the studio of the Frank Powell Producing Company under the direction of Frank Powell.

LIVE NEWS FROM THE PRODUCERS

Mary Fuller to Appear with Lou-Tellegen

Lasky Engages Former Universal Star to Support Lou-Tellegen in "The Long Trail"—Howell Hansel to Direct

MARY FULLER has been engaged by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company to appear in support of Lou-Tellegen in "The Long Trail," the director of which will be Howell Hansel, newly engaged by Lasky to direct productions for the Paramount Program.

The name of Mary Fuller is identified with the old Biograph, when she appeared in the productions of that concern at the time that Mary Pickford, Owen Moore and many of the old stars of the present day were all beginning their careers. Like so many of the youthful players of that time, Miss Fuller had had only a brief stage experience, but by persistent effort and the cultivation of her natural ability she rapidly developed into a great favorite.

Joining the Edison company, Miss Fuller quickly became its principal star, and has the distinction of appearing in the first big motion picture serial success ever screened—the famous "What Happened to Mary?" pictures. These were followed by "Who Will Marry Mary?" another successful serial, some of the episodes of which were staged in London.

Miss Fuller was likewise the star of the first multiple reel productions issued by Edison.

When Universal began to produce five-reel features, Miss Fuller was one of its first stars.

Howell Hansel, who has been engaged to direct "The Long Trail," has a long record of stage and screen achievement behind him. Mr. Hansel's latest screen achievement is the direction of "The Deemster," which introduced Derwent Hall Caine, son of the distinguished British author, to the motion picture public, and which will soon be released.

Alan Dwan Is Signed to Direct Goldwyn Pictures

GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION has signed Alan Dwan, who has just completed the first Norma Talmadge picture for the company bearing the star's name.

Dwan is perhaps best known as the director who made the Douglas Fairbanks pictures, "The Habit of Happiness," "Manhattan Madness" and "The Half Breed."

Dwan is a graduate of Notre Dame University, Indiana. He is an electrical engineer, and after graduation taught electrical engineering at Notre Dame.

This precise, skilled training shows in all of the work he has ever done as a motion picture director, and he adds to this equipment his earlier experience as scenario editor both for the Essanay and the American Film companies. While with the latter organization there was a sudden call for a director and Dwan received the opportunity to make his first picture. It has been said of Dwan that he handles his actors much as the Carlisle Indians used to play football—that he hurls them into their work with the energy of a football squad or a track team at an intercollegiate meet.

This zest for work is responsible for two records in the industry now held by Dwan—the completion of one five-reel feature film in eight days and another five-reel feature in two weeks.

Some of the best known Dwan pictures are: "Wild Flower," with Marguerite Clark; "David Harum," with William H. Crane; "The Girl of Yesterday," with Mary Pickford; "The County Chairman," with Maclyn Arbuckle, and "Panthea," with Norma Talmadge.

"Day at West Point" Shown at Strand

"A Day At West Point," one reel, was shown at the Strand theatre, New York, during the week of December 17. The various phases of cadet life and training, from the time of entrance to graduation, are portrayed.

President Wilson is shown presenting diplomas to the graduates, and Mrs. Wilson also appears prominently in the events of the Graduation Day exercises.

The picture is being handled by Ultra Films, Inc., 729 Seventh avenue, New York, and is offered to independent exchanges.

Clune at Work on Wright Picture

W. H. Clune and manager of production Lloyd Brown of the Clune Film Producing Company, whose "The Eyes of the World" is being presented at its first national premier at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, and other members of the staff are giving their undivided attention to the preparation for filming an adaptation from Harold Bell Wright's book "The Shepherd of the Hills."

Mr. Wright, at his mountain home at Oracle, Ariz., is busy with the preparation of the scenario, and at the studio needed sets are being prepared. The cast is being selected, and shortly, the producers hope, the first scenes will be made. It is planned for the entire producing company to go to the Ozark mountains in Arkansas, the locale of the story, for the filming of many exterior scenes.

Triangle Buys "Orpheus" for Lucas

Scenario rights to "Orpheus," a story by Samuel Hopkins Adams, recently published in Collier's Weekly, have been purchased by the Triangle-Fine Arts studio for picturization under the direction of Wilfred Lucas and Tod Browning. Lucas will play the star role. It is probable that Carmel Myers will support the star.

"Envy" for the 29th

McClure Pictures announce this week that "Greed" will be the fourth of "The Seven Deadly Sins," the first of which, Ann Murdock in "Envy," will be released on January 29. The others will follow at weekly intervals. Nance O'Neil is starred in "Greed," with Shirley Mason and George Le Guere in the cast.

Tom Forman and Mary Fuller—Lasky Players

Gladys Brockwell, New Fox Star, and Scenes from "One Touch of Sin"

"Fortunes of Fifi" Picked by Famous for Marguerite Clark

Marguerite Clark is at work in the Famous Players studio under the direction of Robert G. Vignola, on an adaptation of Molly Elliott Sewell's play, "The Fortunes of Fifi," which will be released on the Paramount Program in February.

As Fifi, Miss Clark will undertake a new role for her—the part of an actress on the French stage. Though this is not the first French girl that Miss Clark has played on the screen—"Silks and Satins" found her in Mediaeval France—she has never played the extremely difficult role of an actress before.

Fifi is a capricious little soul who, though reared in poverty, is exceedingly precocious and is absolutely captivating. Though very youthful, she has learned dancing, and is discovered as Pierrot in a little traveling French show. The company dies of popular neglect and poor little Fifi starts for Paris filled with ambition, but very little food.

Williams for Lead in "Apartment 29"

Earle Williams has been chosen to play the leading role in "Apartment 29," an original story by Edward J. Montagne. Paul Scardon will direct this Blue Ribbon feature. Ethel Grey Terry will play opposite Mr. Williams. In the supporting cast are Billie Billings, Denton Vane, L. Johnston, V. Stuart, Bernard Seigle, Frank Mason, and Tommy Brett.

The picture is scheduled for release through Vitagraph V-L-S-E exchanges on April 16.

"Parasites" Now "Square Deal"

The new Brady-made World picture, "A Square Deal," was formerly called "The Parasites." Carlyle Blackwell is the star, and the leaders of the cast are June Elvidge, Muriel Ostriche and Henry Hull.

Two Fox Films on 22nd

William Fox will release two productions for the week of January 22: Theda Bara in "The Darling of Paris," an adaptation of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," and Gladys Coburn in "The Primitive Call."

Fox Celebrates Completion of First Year on West Coast

IN the last month of 1916, the Fox Film Corporation celebrated the completion of its first year in California. Within the past twelve months, the corporation has grown in the West from an organization covering less than an acre of ground, and employing about thirty persons, to one using thirty acres and paying salaries to more than five hundred persons.

As late as last June, only two delegations of Fox photoplayers were working on the Pacific Coast. William Farnum was the star of one; George Walsh and Gladys Brockwell, the stars of the other. Today, in addition to the six comedy companies, there are also five dramatic companies acting in the Fox Western studios. with authentic rumors of the engagement of several more.

The directors are: R. A. Walsh, Otis Turner, Frank Lloyd, William D. Taylor and Richard Stanton. The directors of the comedy subjects are Charles Parrott, Ed. Frazee, Walter Reed, Harry Edwards, Hank Mann, Tom Mix and Henry Lehrman.

It was in December, 1915, that William Farnum and his company was sent to Los Angeles by William Fox. The little group made arrangements for a year's lease on the old Selig studio in Edendale, a plot of ground about three-quarters of an acre large, with one outdoor stage and one glass platform, small laboratories and a few offices. When Mr. Walsh's company arrived from the East a few months later, they also worked in the Edendale plant.

With the addition of other companies to the Fox roster, it was necessary to lease the grounds of the National Drama Corporation in Hollywood.

The quarters occupied by Fox Film Corporation on January 1, 1917, included five acres at Hollywood, fifteen acres on Western avenue, and ten acres in locations at Silver Lake, Fernando Valley and Chatsworth.

Where there were originally only two stages, the company now keeps eight stages working constantly, and will soon have to build several more if the present expansion continues.

Miss La Badie Said to Have Excellent Support

Few motion picture stars have had the support that is given Florence La Badie, Thanhouser star, in the newest Thanhouser-Pathe Gold Rooster Play now being taken, "The Lonely Heart." Miss La Badie's "The Girl Who Wanted to Live" is to be released through Pathe exchanges on February 18, according to a late announcement.

"The Lonely Heart," by Agnes C. Johnston, is directed by Frederic Sullivan. In the story Miss La Badie as an artist loses her sight, then regains it only to see her lover in a compromising situation. There is a great house party scene, the guests being later aroused at midnight and making their appearance in the dancing hall in pajamas and negligees.

Supporting Miss La Badie are Boyd Marshall; Ida Darling, Ethyle Cooke, Gladys Leslie, Harris Gordon, Walter (Fatty) Hiers, Arthur LeVien, Clay Carroll, a "discovery" of Mr. Sullivan's; Sam Niblack, Thomas A. Curran, Inda Palmer and Helen Badgley.

Board of Review Praises Bara Subject

Although the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures sees hundreds of photoplays and more than a million feet of film every week in the year, this board immediately sent Fox Film Corporation a special report of laudation after viewing "The Darling of Paris." This production is Theda Bara's premier under the new Fox policy of 1917, under which she will appear only in special plays.

Life of "Buffalo Bill" in an Essanay

Film Autobiography of America's Most Picturesque Figure Will Be Released Through K-E-S-E

"BUFFALO BILL," whose death in Denver occurred last week, was a warm friend of George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company, Chicago, and through him arranged to leave his autobiography in film to posterity. It is probably the first instance of the film being used for this purpose.

"The Life of Buffalo Bill" and the Indian wars was produced under the auspices of the United States Government as a historical record of the forming of the West. William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill), the greatest plainsman of them all and the most romantic figure in the building of the nation is shown throughout his life and battles. "Buffalo Bill" himself plays the leading role.

This picture, which is to be distributed throughout the United States by the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay Service, shows myriads of Indians, regiments of United States soldiers and scores of picturesque scouts, many of them boon companions of "Buffalo Bill," each in some thrilling feature. Most of the veteran scouts of the West were asked by "Buffalo Bill" to contribute something to his film autobiography, and the result is said to be decidedly interesting.

As it stands and will be shown on the screens throughout the United States, "The Life of Buffalo Bill" is an hour and ten minutes of thrilling action. It is said to show terrifying Indian battles and prairie skirmishes, and exciting moments contrasting with acute pathos.

The home life of the picturesque Cody, from the murder of his father when he was a small boy to the glory of his old age is pictured. It shows him as the adventurous boy in Missouri before the Civil War, compelled to take up scouting as a competitor of full-grown men to provide for the family. It shows him as a pony express rider—the most dangerous work in the West—before he had reached his majority.

His part under General Phil Sheridan and other famous Indian fighters is said to be pictured true to type and historically accurate. His skill at killing buffalo, which won for him the title of "Buffalo Bill," is also exhibited in the autobiography film.

In this film production, "The Life of Buffalo Bill," the American people have a legacy in which they may well take pride. The younger generation especially will be vitally interested in it. Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay are now arranging for its distribution, and it will be seen at leading motion picture theatres shortly.

Forman Remains with Lasky

Tom Forman, popular juvenile and leading man, has renewed his contract with the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company in the productions of which he has been appearing for some time. Mr. Forman's new contract will insure his appearance on the Paramount Program for a long time to come.

With Ina Claire, Mr. Forman played in "The Puppet Crown" and "The Wild Goose Chase." He appeared in "To Have and to Hold" and "Sweet Kitty Bellairs" with Mae Murray. With Fannie Ward he played in "The Marriage of Kitty." Other productions in which Mr. Forman has appeared are "The Explorer," "The Fighting Hope," "A Gentleman of Leisure," "The Governor's Lady" and "Kindling." He will shortly be seen with Theodore Roberts and Maude Fealy in "The American Consul."

One of the sources of Mr. Forman's popularity is the fact that he is one of the few real young men who have devoted themselves to juvenile roles instead of playing character parts, as many actors of his age are now doing.

Terwilliger at Work on "Her Good Name"

George Terwilliger is producing "Her Good Name," in which Jean Sothern will be starred at the Van Dyke studios. This production is to be an Art Drama release.

The story of "Her Good Name" was written by Horace Hazeltine, and scenarioized by Elfrid A. Bingham. It tells a rather pathetic story of a country girl whose innocence leads her to commit certain indiscretions, which her father misinterprets. He kills a man who he thinks had debauched his daughter. She adopts the only way to save him from the gallows, and admits that the murder was justifiable under the unwritten law. During a particularly dramatic trial scene, however, the truth is discovered, and the girl's reputation remains unsmirched.

Supporting Miss Sothern in this production are Earl Metcalfe, who plays the leading part opposite her, William H. Turner, the well-known character actor, who plays the part of the father, and Arthur Housman, who is remembered for his particularly fine work as the heavy in the first Art Drama, "The Lash of Destiny," Barbara Castleton and Mrs. Parker Spaulding have the other two important parts in the production.

Humphrey Goes to Ivan

William Humphrey, who for the past seven years has been a leading player and director in the Vitagraph organization, has been engaged by the Ivan Film Productions to direct several of its forthcoming photoplays.

Mr. Humphrey has selected as his initial offering a drama purchased by the Ivan Film Productions from Willard Mack.

Violet Radcliffe with Fox

Violet Radcliffe, who made her first stage appearance at the age of eleven days, is now with the William Fox forces. Miss Radcliffe is only eight years old, but she has been around the world already. Her earliest impersonation was in "Quo Vadis."
